Fall Sports Gearing Up for Best Seasons Ever

Football's Rene (left) Ingoglia looks to become the best RB in the East. Field hockey hopes to continue its success in 1994. (Sports section, inside)

Table of Contents

Ed/Op.....4
Obituaries.....19
Comics.....23
Arts and Living.....Inside
Sports.....Inside

From a Sassy Summer to a Funkadelic Fall

The summer was entertaining, but wait until you see what the fall has in store for the world of arts and living. (Arts and Living section, inside).

Extended Forecast

Increasing high clouds, fair and warm weather is expected for today. Wednesday should be partly cloudy, with highs in the mid-70s. Expect fair weather Thursday, highs in low-70s.

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 72 LOW: 51	HIGH: 75 LOW: 49	HIGH: 72 LOW: 48

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 1 · New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 · Tuesday, September 13, 1994

Students win fight to freeze tuition, fees

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

For the first time in 29 years, tuition and fees will hold steady at last year's levels — thanks to the cooperative efforts of University of Massachusetts students, faculty and administrators.

After an eight-month long battle with Chancellor David K. Scott, President Michael K. Hooker, the state legislation and even Gov. William Weld, the Student Government Association and the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy succeeded in freezing tuition and fees.

On Aug. 10, the Board of Trustees voted not to institute a $107 fee increase after UMass received a $15 million increase in state funding.

Nearly $164 million in funds was allocated to the UMass campus, approximately $10 million more than the University received the previous year.

Check is in the mail

SGA was pleased with the Trustees' decision to freeze tuition and fees at the University for the first time in 29 years, said SGA President Mirran Raphaely.

"We are the only state college to keep tuition and fees for the upcoming year," she said.

Despite the freeze on tuition and fees at UMass, undergraduates still saw a $107 increase in their bill mailed out during the summer. The bills were based on Weld's original budget, according to Budget Director Joyce Hatch, which called for only a $4 million increase for the University for the fiscal year 1996.

Students will receive credit or a check in the mail to negate the $107 increase in their bill, Raphaely said. Tuition and fees currently cost undergraduate students who live in- state $5,467 a year.

Raphaely attributes the tuition and fee freeze to a major lobbying effort by students, parents and school officials.

The student government launched a "Phone Bank" campaign in April to try to gain support from the parents of UMass students in lobbying the state legislature for a $21.8 million increase in appropriations.

The campaign contacted the families of students who live in districts of key members of the state Legislature and asked them to call their representatives and senators in support of the UMass budget request.

The Phone Bank received promises from 3,602 parents who agreed to make the call, according to SCERA's report. This represents approximately 95 percent of the parents who were reached.

Students to pay fair share?

With the success of the campaign to stop rising tuition and fees and to lobby for increased state funding, some legislators are trying to pass a separate piece of legislation concerning public university costs.

A state-created task force dealing with the rising costs of attending public schools in the Massachusetts has developed a plan called Fair Share Funding.

Turn to TUITION FREEZE, page 2

Lobbying campaign may mean cash refund

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

After an eight-month battle, the Student Government Association and the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy will soon see the results of their work.

Due to a successful campaign to freeze tuition and fees at UMass, students will receive a check or credit this fall as compensation for the $107 billed increase in tuition and fees, according to SGA President Mirran Raphaely.

"The whole point of a tuition and fees rollback is so that students who are struggling with the costs of attending the University will not have to pay even more money this year," said Lynn Robitaille, a student coordinator for SCERA.

"We want the checks to be sent out right away so that students can get the money they need to come back," Raphaely said.

It is the first time in 29 years that UMass students have not seen their tuition and fees rise.

According to Raphaely, the University is the only state school to not see an increase in the tuition or mandatory

Turn to LOBBY, page 14

Two top administrators asked to return $15K in early consulting fees

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO
Chancellor David K. Scott

By Geri Sahn
Collegian Staff

In July, two top University of Massachusetts administrators had to return $15,000 given to them by Chancellor David K. Scott for consulting jobs they performed before coming to work full-time.

Scott asked Marcellette and Keith Williams to return $7,500 each after he originally approved the money as consulting fees.

The refunds came after the Union-News of Springfield obtained copies of the Williams' consulting contracts.

Deputy Chancellor Marcellette Williams earns $110,000 a year. Keith Williams, the associate vice chancellor in charge of community relations and special projects, earns $75,000.

The couple was paid to attend meetings, dinners, cocktail parties and lunches with top campus officials

Turn to WILLIAMSES, page 14

UMass claims Globe twisted reports on 'luxuries'

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

Inaccurate and misleading reporting about the University of Massachusetts on the part of local news sources was deliberate, according to University officials.

According to Bill Wright, a spokesman for University President Michael K. Hooker, a story which recently appeared in the Boston Globe wrongly accused the University President's Office of spending over $14,000 to lease space in parking garages located in downtown Boston.

Wright accused the Globe of trying to slander the University's office.

"The point of the article was obvious," Wright said. "I gave [the Globe] the correct information about the lease; they chose not to use it."

Wright said he sent the Globe a letter from Hooker containing information about the lease for the president's office. A Globe reporter also contacted Wright several times in reference to the office building and the University's parking accommodations.

The Daily Collegian also received information on the University parking agreement. The documents state both that "The reserved [parking] spaces are included in the rent," and that "The reserved parking spaces are included in the base rate."

Wright feels the misrepresentation of the information, which he provided to the Globe, was not accidental.

"There was a deliberate omission of information, and a serious misrepresentation of fact," Wright said. "It was not an accident."

The story, which appeared in the Globe on September 1, reported that the UMass president's office is paying $14,160 a year to lease four spaces at "high-priced downtown Boston parking garages."

The Globe reported that, according to Wright, the UMass office is "paying a total of $885 a month to garage vehicles used by the staff at 75 State St."

According to Wright, not only is the information misleading, it is also incorrect.

In 1992, according to documents provided by the president's office, the UMass president's office agreed to a proposal presented by the Flatley Co., for office space at 78 Tremont St. The contract included reserved parking spaces at the base rate, according to a memo sent to Hooker in August of 1992 by Elizabeth Tuthill, former assistant to the president, and Valerie Uber, former assistant to the budget director.

Turn to ACCUSATIONS, page 14

$3 million renovation may stop leaks in FAC

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN
Roofer Steve Jette solders seams on the roof of the Fine Arts Center. Severe water leakage has spurred a $3 million effort to repair the building.

By Ben Geman
Collegian Staff

The Fine Arts Center, home of the University of Massachusetts' music, art and theater departments, is undergoing a $3 million face lift aimed at stopping the water leaks plaguing the building since its 1975 opening.

Workers are rebuilding the deck of the center to allow installation of a new waterproofing system. The original waterproof membrane had been damaged by shifts in the building's structure during seasonal freezing and thawing.

The repairs, performed by the Holyoke-based A.R. Green and Son contracting, began last May and completion is expected in November.

Jim Cahill, the Physical Plant's director of facilities planning, said the building design was solid but inappropriate for an area with cold winter months.

"This facility would probably work great in India or Arizona," Cahill said.

The new waterproofing is made from a plastic-based adhesive compound called Bituthene. Bituthene is more flexible than the tar waterproofing originally in place, according to Dick Maheux, foreman with Superior Caulking and Waterproofing, Inc., sub-contracted by A.R. Green and Son to apply the new membrane.

"It's like a big Band-Aid. It comes in 100-foot rolls, you peel it off, prime the deck and it sticks down," said Maheux.

Renovations for the building had been in the planning stages for several years before construction began last spring.

Turn to FAC, page 14

Former student awaiting trial date in stabbing attack

By Gina Larson and Kelly Spang
Collegian Staff

A former University of Massachusetts nursing student is awaiting trial after allegedly trying to kill his wife and himself on campus last May.

Christopher J. Luck, 38, of Conway was arrested for assault and battery with a dangerous weapon — a knife — and assault with intent to murder for the stabbing of his wife, Patricia Lynch, 37, also of Conway.

Police report both were taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital and treated for multiple stab wounds. Luck was later transferred to Baystate Medical Center in Springfield, where he was arraigned in his hospital bed in the intensive care unit because of the severity of his wounds.

He pleaded innocent to all charges.

The stabbing occurred when Luck allegedly was on campus with his wife for the nursing program graduation ceremony.

Reports from the arraignment indicate Luck deceived his wife for more than nine months into thinking he was enrolled in the nursing program at the University.

However, UMass officials said Luck withdrew from the program about a year prior to the incident.

Police said the incident took place on Commonwealth Avenue near Campus Center Way, across from the Mullins Center.

Judge Thomas Merrigan order a 20-day psychological evaluation of Luck at Worcester State Hospital. Assistant Northwestern District Attorney David Ross said he was found competent to stand trial.

In June, Luck was indicted by a grand jury and arraigned in Hampshire County Superior Court.

Judge John Murphy ordered an evaluation of whether or not Luck was criminally responsible. Ross said the findings of the evaluation were not made public.

Ross said Luck is presently being held on $100,000 bail in the Hampshire County House of Corrections in Northampton pending trial. He said no trial date has been set yet.

Several local news sources contributed to this article.

UHS budget deficit leads to layoffs; quality of service shouldn't diminish

By Heather Redfern
Collegian Staff

Ten University Health Services (UHS) employees were laid off recently as a result of a $1.5 million deficit in the health center's budget.

Pink slips were given to six clerical workers and four professionals in early July in an effort to curtail the center's debt.

The health center does not receive financial assistance from the University or the state.

Employees of the health center are dependent upon funding from student health fees and faculty members using the Kaiser Permanente insurance plan.

> "The layoffs are a last resort, something we all try to avoid."
> – Danny Chun, University spokesperson

"The layoffs are a last resort, something we all try to avoid," said University spokesperson Danny Chun.

Chun said the difficulty of craving the center's debt is a direct result of continually rising medical costs.

Efforts such as a strict hiring freeze and task restructuring among the current 210 employees at the center are now in effect to tackle the deficit, Bernette Melby, the newly appointed director of UHS.

Melby was appointed to fill the position of director in July after serving as interim director for the past year.

She replaced Dr. David Kraft, who has been leave for the past year.

Melby said the staff at the health center has been outstanding in working to fill vacant positions.

"If we have a vacancy, we evaluate if staff can be used in that area," said Melby.

Pharmacy Director Joe Pelis said the center will begin using new computer programs this fall to help deal with the staff shortage.

"We are going into a new computer system which is going to be quality," he said.

Melby said the layoffs would not result in decreased quality of service at the health center.

"We are not looking to double up the patients," she said.

Marching to a different beat

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN
Percussionists from the UMass Minuteman Marching Band — "The Power and Class of New England" — practice during band camp in lower Boyden fields.

Daily Collegian • Back to School

The Largest College Daily in New England • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967

Layout & Design
Andrew Davidson

Night Editors
Darienne J. Hosley and Emily Marino

Copy Editors
Geri Sahn and Caleb Cochran

Production
Marni Helfner, Greg Iafrate, and Michele Bakis

Advertising Production
James P. Ganley and Jim Bruneau

Advertising Staff
Lisa Tannenbaum and Michael McRae

Special Thanks to Bloke Phillips, Maureen Majerowski, Arthur C. Stapleton Jr., Bob Morley, Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour, Candice Flemming, Jack Mead and Turley Publications, Tracy Monahan, Kelly Spang, Nathan Martin, Elisa Thomas, Ethan Bloomfield, Jon Lupo, and the entire Collegian Newsroom & Business Dept.

UMass gets 10,000 phone numbers

NYNEX hooks up UMass with administration and TAU

By Heather Redfern
Collegian Staff

Ten thousand new telephone numbers will be activated at the University with the purchase of a new 577 telephone exchange at the start of this semester.

With a shortage of administrative telephone numbers, these new numbers will be made accessible for University staff and faculty.

"The administrative side of campus was running out of telephone numbers," said Randy Sailer, director of telecommunications.

Sailer said the additional numbers will cost the University $600 a year for rental charges from NYNEX.

In addition to the new 577 exchange, a 573 exchange for computer terminal adapter units in the residence halls will also be installed.

After the Housing Office fielded several requests from students wishing to have personal TAU numbers, the Telecommunications Office was able to assist students in purchasing a new 573 number from NYNEX for the same rental fee as the 577 exchange.

The new 573 exchange will allow students to make direct calls to their computer terminals from off campus, according to Phil Pelletier, customer service manager of telecommunications.

Sailer said students will now be able to maintain one-to- one correspondence with their numbers in the residence halls and their personal TAU numbers.

Students will use the same last four digits of their residence hall numbers after using the 573 exchange in order to make direct calls to their terminals, Sailer said.

"This is a big advantage for students," said Pelletier.

Pelletier said the new exchange will give students the opportunity to run bulletin boards for several areas.

Sailer said the new telephone exchanges enable the University to have more control over its own phone numbers.

Both exchanges have be assigned only for new services and will not replace 546 or 545 numbers currently being used on campus.

■ tuition freeze

Continued from page 1

The Proposal for Fair Share Funding for Higher Education is headed for the Higher Education Coordinating Council for approval, according to state Sen. Stanley Rosenberg (D- Amherst), who worked on the task force.

The Fair Share Funding proposal is designed to help students pay for their education. The proposal has produced a formula and set of guidelines for providing money for higher education.

If the proposal passes, students will pay 35 percent of their educational costs and the state will pay 65 percent.

The proposal would also assure that students wouldn't have to fight state officials to keep tuition and fee increases at a minimum and make state appropriations increase.

SGA leaders said they support the task force's conclusion that more money is needed from the state Legislature to fund public higher education. However, they oppose the group's recommendation that students should pay $1,096 more by 1999 than the $9,602 paid this year.

"As it is, UMass already has the second highest public education tuition and fees in the country," Raphaely said in a press statement.

The proposal may sit for more than a year before it makes it to the Statehouse, but according to Rosenberg, the proposal needs the approval of the UMass community.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

SGA President Mirran Raphaely

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Tuesday, Sept. 13

Poster sale — Sponsored by WMUA, Student Union Ballroom, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Book-buying — The Textbook Annex is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Library tours — University Library, 10:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Information: 545-0150.

Auditions — Five College Early Music Program Painless Auditions, Fine Arts Center Room 152, 11:15 a.m. to 12:30 a.m.

Gallery talk — "Geology and Tourism: John Frederick Kensett's Fawn's Leap," by Rebecca Bedell, Amherst College Mead Art Museum, 12:15 p.m.

Language placement exams — French, Spanish, Latin and German placement tests for new first-year and transfer students, Campus Center Room 168C, 1 p.m. and 2:30 p.m.

Health care dinner/panel — "Healthy, Wealthy and Wise? Health Care in the '90s," Health Care Careers dinner with alumni panel, Hampshire College Faculty Lounge, 5 p.m.

Film — "Not at the Mall: A Series of Film Experiences You Won't Find Anywhere Else," free, Bowker Auditorium. The Kirghiz of Afghanistan, 7 p.m.; Out of the Past: New Worlds, 8 p.m.; Riff Raff, 9 p.m.

Auditions — For Mask Dance: Journey Within, theater department, Fine Arts Center, 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Auditions — For Sheila's Dance, Fine Arts Center room 204, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Auditions — For The Bitter Tears of Petra Von Kant, Smith College Theatre T109, 7:30 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Faculty panel — "Clinton and Foreign Policy: Can He Do Anything Right?" PAWSS, Holyoke College Main Lecture Hall, 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. Information: 582-5519.

World music showcase — Hosted by WMUA deejays, $2, Student Union Ballroom, 8 p.m. to 12 p.m.

Wednesday, Sept. 14

Poster sale — Sponsored by WMUA, Student Union Ballroom, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Book-buying — The Textbook Annex is open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Library tours —University Library, 10:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Information: 545-0150.

Services — Eve of Yom Kippur, Chabad House, 3 p.m. For early morning "Kapparot" service call 549-4094.

Pre-Yom Kippur meal — Hillel House, $6.50, $2.50 with Hillel activity card, 5 p.m. Reservations required: 549-1710.

Services — Candle lighting and Kol Nidre, Chabad House, 6:42 p.m. Information: 549-4094.

Services — Kol Nidrei-Yom Kippur, free, Student Union Ballroom, 7 p.m. Information: 549-1710.

Film — Maverick, $2, Campus Center Auditorium, 7 p.m., 9 p.m. and 11 p.m.

Auditions — For Mask Dance: Journey Within, Mount Holyoke College Lab Theatre, 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Auditions — For Escape From Happiness, sign-up outside Fine Arts Center room 112, auditions in FAC Curtain Theater, 7 p.m. to 11 p.m.

Auditions — For Sheila's Day, open call, Smith College Theater Building T109, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Auditions — For The Bitter Tears of Petra Von Kant, Mount Holyoke College Lab Theatre, 7:30 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Evening Service — Chabad House, 7:45 p.m. Information: 549-4094.

Thursday, Sept. 15

Poster sale — Sponsored by WMUA, Student Union Ballroom, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Book-buying — The Textbook Annex is open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Yom Kippur services — Followed by Break-the-Fast meal in Commonwealth Room, free, Student Union Ballroom, 10 a.m. Reservations required: 549-1710.

Closed road snarls traffic

The closing of Amherst Road in Pelham forced to find westbound UMass students to find alternative ways to return to campus this month.

The replacement of a culvert near the Hawley Reservoir requires traffic to use of two detours to Amherst: Route 202 south to Route 9, and Route 2 west to Route 63 South in Millers Falls.

Amherst students are likely to encounter traffic tie-ups on the alternative routes until the end of this month, when the construction is expected to be completed, according to Pelham officials.

Amherst Road runs from the traffic light at North East Street to Route 202. Pelham officials said the whole length of the road is closed at the present time.

Late start but same class time

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

Perhaps you didn't notice it during all your preparations for returning to the University of Massachusetts, but most of your friends from other colleges have been at school for a week or two while you are just getting started.

According to a memo from Provost Patricia Crosson, classes are starting late because the faculty senate voted in 1991 to delay classes one week so Registration Day would not coincide with Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year, on Sept. 6.

Registration Day this year was held yesterday, five days later than it was last year. The final day of the semester is Dec. 24, one day later than in 1993. At first glance it seems as if students are losing four days although they are paying the same amount of money.

However, appearances can be deceiving. Classes begin today and end Dec. 16. Last year, the first day was Sept. 8, 1993, and the semester ended Dec. 13.

Although it seem we're short two days this fall, these two days were the extra weekends before the last day of classes last December.

Just like last year, there will be thirteen weeks of classes.

The other two days that are missing,will be during finals, which are scheduled to take place from Dec. 19 to Dec. 23. Last year they took place from Dec. 16 to Dec. 22.

Melley was vice chancellor of University relations and advancement on an interim basis for four years, and Gordon held the post of provost for three years.

So while all your friends may have a couple more weekends to spend at school, you had an extra week of summer vacation and all the school you paid for.

Rep. Story sets office hours

State Rep. Ellen Story (D-Amherst) has announced her district office hours for September.

On Sept. 16, she will be at the Bangs Community Center's Alice Down Lounge in Amherst from 9:30 a.m. to 10:30 a.m. That same day, she will be at the Rhodes Building in Pelham from 11 a.m. to noon.

These hours are set aside for people to talk about ideas or concerns regarding state government programs or legislative issues. No appointments are necessary.

Story represents the Third Hampshire District and can be reached by phone at 256-6300.

Wipe Out Your Hunger
With the WHOPPER®
for Only 99¢

It's just one part of the new Everyday Value Menu with delicious food everyday for just

99¢ flame-broiled burgers
$1.99 CROISSAN'WICH, hash browns, and coffee
$2.99 WHOPPER sandwich, fries, and soft drink

EVERYDAY VALUE Menu ONLY AT BURGER KING

AUDITIONS!

(Open to all students)

★ Vocal Jazz Ensemble ★

This 12 member ensemble performs w/ rhythm section & a cappella.
Styles range from traditional jazz standards to contemporary pop/jazz (New York Voices, etc.).
Now auditioning for sopranos, altos, tenors & basses.

Auditions will be held in the Fine Arts Center
Tuesday, Sept. 13, 3:30-6:00 pm (rm. 150)
Thursday, Sept. 15, 2:30-6:00 pm (rm. 152)

(Sign up for a time outside the Music Office)

CALL: 549-1782 for more information

★ the A Cafellas ★

Six-man, professional, student-run, a cappella group.
This award-winning ensemble sings everything from pop and jazz (Take 6) to classical and barbershop!

Auditions will be held:
Wednesday, Sept. 14,
Thursday, Sept. 15,
7:00-9:00 pm

CALL: 549-1782
for more information or to set up an audition time

Scott names top administrators

By Kelly Spang
Collegian Staff

The top two administrative positions left vacant after Chancellor David K. Scott's controversial decision to replace the veteran office holders were filled during the summer.

Scott named Patricia Crosson of the School of Education to the provost position and appointed Fred Byron, a member of the physics faculty, as vice chancellor for research, graduate education and economic development.

Last spring, Scott appointed former history professor Ronald Story as vice chancellor of University relations and advancement.

Both Crosson and Byron will hold their positions on an interim basis for up to two years.

Scott said the appointees have the experience and commitment to work across boundaries as the campus strives to define itself as a premiere and accessible land-grant institution of teaching, research and public services for the next century.

The replacements came after Scott asked then-Provost Glen Gordon, Samuel Conti and Daniel Melley to step down from their positions last April in what faculty critics called a staff "massacre."

Conti had been vice chancellor for research, graduate education and economic development for 10 years. husband of state Rep. Ellen Story (D-Amherst), he will succeed Melley on an interim basis.

Story said he believes he brings a solid understanding of the campus to his new position and is optimistic about the future of the University. He said he believes he understands how the campus works and the needs of the different segments on campus and hopes to bring closer together the academic departments with his office.

In addition, Story said he hopes to target the needs of the alumni and attempt to gain strength in the Statehouse to work for more appropriations for the University.

Before his appointment, Byron was the dean of the College of Natural Sciences and Mathematics, a position he held for 14 years. He has also been a member of the physics faculty since 1974.

"I hope to move the University agenda forward," Byron said. "These are challenging times for the University with a new economic life and new concerns which impact the University."

'Spirit of cooperation'

Byron said that as dean he dealt with research and economic development, two of the primary concerns of his new position. He said through his deanship there was considerable interaction with the private sector.

"I intend to work with various councils on campus to think of what we can do in the University's fiscally strained environment," Byron said. He said he hopes to find ways to strengthen the economic foundation of the University.

He also anticipates not only working throughout the campus to help evolve the strategic planning and economic future of the University, but also focusing on how the University can move outside of the campus and work with the community.

"The question is how to turn the talent and creativity of the University and move them effectively to the larger local community," he said.

Byron said he can envision a science park in the area in the future and also believes several spin-off companies can take root from the talent at the University.

Since taking office Aug. 1, Byron said he has felt a "spirit of cooperation in the Valley" to work toward economic development of the entire area.

Problem-solving a focus for Crosson

Crosson has been a member of the faculty of the School of Education since 1985 and was deputy provost from 1989 to 1991. Before she took the provost position, she chaired the department of educational policy, research and administration in the School of Education.

She believes that through the insight she has gained through studying and teaching issues surrounding higher education, she understands the problems and challenges facing not only the University but institution throughout the country.

"But the down side is that knowing the problems does not mean knowing the solution," she said.

However, Crosson said she is committed to working with the campus community to address the challenges, problems and issues the University may face.

Aside from her daily duties as provost, Crosson said she has four additional areas she would like to address throughout the year including improving the quality of undergraduate education, working on strategic planning for the University, and addressing the issues of resources and resource allocation.

Crosson said she also wants to work closely with the provosts from the other four University of Massachusetts campuses as well as the vice president for academic affairs in the University president's office.

Fred Byron
Vice-Chancellor for Research, Graduate Education, and Economic Development

- Has been a faculty member of the physics dept. since 1974
- Served as dean of the College of Natural Sciences and Mathematics from 1979 to 1993

Ron Story
Vice-Chancellor for University Relations and Advancement

- A history professor since 1972
- Served as interim vice president for Academic Affairs at the University president's office in Boston

Pat Crossan
Provost

- Has taught in the School of Education since 1985
- Served as Ukkas deputy provost from 1989 to 1991
- Chaired the dept. of educational policy, research, and administration in the School of Education

Other Appointments

- Bailey W. Jackson was named permanent dean of the School of Education.

He has served as interim dean since 1990 and has been a member of the School of Education faculty since 1976. Before becoming interim dean, Jackson served as director of teacher education and associate dean for academic affairs.

Jackson has also worked with the University President's Office to develop a curriculum model for training social service workers.

- Charlene Seymour recently took the newly created position of dean of graduate education. The position was created as the result of an academic restructuring plan developed by ex-Provost Glen Gordon in 1993.

Seymour has been a member of the communications disorders faculty since 1971.

She served as director of the Communication Disorders Clinic as well as director of the department and later served as its chair.

- M. Ricardo "Ric" Townes was named interim assistant vice chancellor for campus activities, which is a newly created position.

Townes will be in charge of the Center for Organization Advising and Programming, a new group for student activities on campus that will work with registered student organizations and student businesses.

Townes has been on the UMass staff since 1976. Most recently, he served as associate dean of academic support services.

- Javier Cevallos will be faculty advisor to the provost. Cevallos, a member of the Spanish and Portuguese department, will resign from his teaching position and as secretary of the faculty senate secretary.

- Karen Lee Shelley became the new bursar in July. She had been assistant director for finance in Housing Services, holding since 1985.

The bursar is responsible for overseeing the billing, collecting, depositing and refund of all Amherst campus receipts, including student tuition and fees.

- Bernette Melby will be permanent director of University Health Services after serving as interim director for one year.

November opening planned for Conte center

By Tracy Monahan
Collegian Staff

The Silvio O. Conte National Center for Polymer Research located on Governors Drive will hopefully is scheduled to open this fall, according to a University project manager.

"We anticipate moving into the building in the beginning of November," said John Robinson in the Office of Planning and Facilities Development. The center has been under construction for three years.

The building is nearly finished but the commission process, which tests the mechanical workings, is still under way.

"We are testing every system to make sure they are fully functional," he said.

The delays on the project were not unforeseen, Robinson said.

"Buildings like this take longer than more typical buildings because of the complicated mechanical workings in them," he said. "It is not unusual for them to take longer than the contractors originally anticipates.

"The center is like a space shuttle. By comparison, the other buildings on campus are Fords and Chevys. It often takes longer than people think or would like [to finish projects like this]."

According to Jim Cahill, director of Planning and Facilities Development, the construction firm of R.W. Granger is building the center. The contract specifies June 1994 as the projected completion date.

The fund-raising drive will have no bearing on the building's actual opening. The expected $8 million goal has yet to be reached, but campaigning will continue throughout the year.

"Hopefully construction has an endpoint and the fund-raising is ongoing into the future," he said. "They are two separate things — one's long term and the other has a finite end."

Robinson said he hopes to start moving people into the building by mid-October. The move-in process will begin on the top floors and go down, possibly taking two weeks to do each floor.

"These things don't happen instantaneously," Robinson said. "It will take a couple of months to get things back in operation."

The building is named for the late Rep. Silvio O. Conte, a local legislator who was instrumental in lobbying the state for the money to build the center.

The ground on which the building stands was dedicated by Gov. William F. Weld in a ceremony in July 1991. The event was also attended by Corinne Conte, the late legislator's widow, and various local politicians.

Of the building's $56 million price tag, the state is contributing $36 million and the federal government is paying the remaining $20 million.

The center will be the new home of the polymer science research department. The department is presently scattered throughout Goessman Laboratory, Lederle Graduate Research Tower and other locations across the campus.

The polymer science research department is primarily composed of graduate and post-doctoral students.

The building consists of two wings. One holds offices for faculty and researchers in the department and the other is the laboratory wing.

Instrument, chemical, wet bench and physics labs will all be included in the laboratory support wing. There will also be two teaching labs. Cahill said he thinks the department will schedule the classes to be held in those labs.

The U.S. Department of Defense granted the money to fund the center's construction, but Cahill said the research conducted in the building will all be public record.

The arch in front of the building is a strictly architectural feature. It is an arcade with a sidewalk underneath and it will be lighted.

"That's a little architectural delight," Cahill said.

The architectural firms involved in the planning of the building are Ellen Zweig Associates of Cambridge and Whitney Atwood Norcross of Boston.

Robinson said he is not aware yet of any plans involving an opening ceremony for the building.

Union-News
Sunday Republican

SPECIAL 50% UMASS STUDENT DISCOUNT OFFER
13-WEEK SUBSCRIPTION

Select one
___ Union-News • $13.65
___ Sunday Republican • $8.13
___ Union-News and Sunday Republican • $21.78

Name _____
Local Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
Daytime phone _____
Enclosed is my check for $ _____
Please charge to ___Visa ___MasterCard ___Discover Acct. # _____ Exp. date _____
Mail to:
UMass Offer, Union-News, 1860 Main St., Springfield, MA 01101

There are so many things you want for your dorm or apartment.
Where to find them?
And it's very important to know where to get the best pizza.
DELIVERED, DEFINITELY.
On those rare occasions when you're not in the mood for pizza,
you need to know where to get good take-out,
or where you can sit down and hang out, listen to music, get munchies.
Comics are sometimes true to life.
YOUR LIFE.
Cut them out, put them on the refrigerator, on your bulletin board.
Give copies to your friends.
Your horoscope.
Sometimes it's true to life, too.
Even when it's not, you read it.
Like when yours tells you it's a good day to make a major purchase.
Yeah, right. If you had any money.
You could look in the help wanted section of the newspaper for a part-time job.
Or you could look for coupons and special discounts, so you could keep more of the money you do have in your pocket.
BECAUSE THERE'S SO MUCH TO SPEND YOUR MONEY ON.
Concerts. UMass basketball games. Movies,
New clothes. Vacations. Gas for the car. For your friends' cars.
THE WEEKEND.
NEXT WEEKEND.
The newspaper.
The Union-News and Sunday Republican, to be specific.
The Union-News and Sunday Republican understand that when you're in college, you don't necessarily have a lot of money.
But you will, someday.
But for now, we're giving you a special
50% DISCOUNT.
Because there's so much to spend your money on.
And we cover all of it in Western Massachusetts.
And beyond.
GO AHEAD. Subscribe today. And get more than pizza delivered.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Daneene J. Hosley Editor in Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Ganley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Position vacant Black Affairs Editor Position vacant Women's Issues Editor
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor John Khachaduorian Forum Manager
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Tim Roode Circulation Manager
Stephen C. Campbell Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Lia Abenante Subscriptions Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Maureen Marcewski Senior Bookkeeper
Evelyn A. Delerme Multicultural Affairs Editor Mary Pappas Classified Advertising
Kelly Spang News Editor Marni I. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Nathan K. Martin Photography Editor Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Take back your University

When teen-agers and young adults are being written off as apathetic, lazy and unfocused, it is gratifying to see the success achieved by University of Massachusetts students' effort to make this state university accessible to the public.

The Student Government Association in particular deserves the credit for mixing direct action — last February's admissions building takeover — and good planning to keep our tuition and fees at 1993–1994 levels.

The freeze is the first for this school in 29 years, and student leaders hope to follow this victory with a rollback in tuition for the next school year.

Rather than grabbing a bullhorn and shouting ultimatums from the Student Union steps, they took a coalitional approach combining the the work of students, their parents and state and university officials.

When the students demanded a zero percent increase in tuition and fees for the 1994–1995 school year, the administration made a reasonable offer: tuition and fees would be held level if an increase in state aid would accommodate at least the rise in the cost of living.

And the SGA took steps to make that happen: a $6.3 million increase in state aid was needed, but calls from 4,000 parents to their government representatives earned $15.3 million for the university system. The Amherst campus will receive $7.5 million of that.

Maturity, dedication and planning on the part of the SGA will hopefully bring student and administration relations to a new level of mutual respect. This should be a first win for the students, not just a one-time effort.

The SGA has taken the first step for UMass students, but they can't keep going on their own. Students on this campus have the opportunity to make the University theirs, and it shouldn't be wasted.

Vice chancellor welcomes students

Welcome back to campus for the fall semester! I hope you have had a good summer and are ready for the new academic year.

During the summer I reorganized Student Affairs to encourage staff to work together more freely and effectively in their efforts to provide the best possible services to students. Before embarking on the changes, I consulted with student leaders and staff and received endorsement of my plans.

The new organization is based on clusters of programs that share an affinity in programming and goals. There are four clusters: Campus Activities Cluster, Student Activities Cluster, Enrollment Services Cluster, and Vice Chancellor's Cluster.

An additional component of these changes is the creation of the Center for Organization Advising and Programming as the umbrella entity for student activities on the campus. After an internal search, the director of this center should be in place early in the semester. It will probably be a full year before the entire reorganization process is complete.

As you settle into your residence hall, fraternity, sorority or apartment and start classroom and non-classroom activities, please remember that the Dean of Students Office is available to help you sort out any snags you may encounter. Located near the top of the ramp in Whitmore Administration Building, the office and many others are open extended hours during this first week.

I look forward to seeing you at lectures, workshops and sports events and wish all of you a wonderful and successful semester.

Thomas B. Robinson is the vice chancellor for Student Affairs.

The small gestures leave lasting impressions

Every September, for as long as I can remember, I have had mixed feelings about the arrival of fall. Whether you look at it as the beginning of a new school year or as the end of summer, this is a time of change.

Though we greet the fall with hopeful excitement, many of us cannot help but wave the sun-filled days of summer goodbye with remorse.

Emily Marino

This year my salute to summer is especially difficult — not due to the weekends I spent on Cape Cod, nor to the various trips that took me as far away as Alberta, Canada. This year I bid summer a teary-eyed farewell because of 60 teenagers typically labeled "economically disadvantaged" or "special needs."

This was my third summer at Metro South/West Employment and Training in Norwood. This federally and state funded agency provides skills training and employment to kids between the ages of 14 and 21 whose families fall within certain state income guidelines, or who are considered to be emotionally, mentally or physically handicapped.

The kids applied to programs in their cities or towns which offer academic remediation (basic math and reading) and then career/vocational skills training. Participants were held accountable for their adherence to rules, attention to directions, productivity, promptness, work ethic and overall effort.

Their supervisors made sure that the kids were busy and challenged and above all, they were encouraged to do their best and were treated with respect.

My job as a summer counselor was to visit the work sites of three programs at least twice a week and make sure that things were running smoothly. As the summer progressed I got to know my kids well. Each had his or her own story, and as they shed their protective layers of secretive defense, their stories revealed a loss of optimistic innocence that youth has to deal with growing up in our society.

I met one boy whose parents had sent him to his uncle's house in California for six months because they had given up on trying to discipline him. He had been hanging out with the wrong crowd, the kinds of kids who robbed liquor stores and stayed out all night.

It seemed that a little time in a California jail did him some good, as he told me that his one priority was never again to see the inside of a cell. As a result he got himself home at a reasonable hour and avoided his old friends.

His story was encouraging and I felt that his progress in the program would surely be good, In light of his positive revelation to me. The afternoon that he told me his story, however, was the last time I saw him.

Some of my kids failed to complete the program successfully, either breaking our rules or by just ceasing to show up. Aside from these kids, there were many who taught me more about human will than I could ever teach them about time management.

One boy with muscular dystrophy worked afternoons at his town's pool. His passion was fire fighting, and he kept a portable CB radio with him at all times. His supervisor at the pool and staff members pitched in to buy him a T-shirt commemorating the career of Boston Fire Lieutenant Stephen Minehan, who died in the line of duty this summer.

This boy wrote the most eloquent, sincere thank-you letter to his supervisor that I had ever read. While his boss perceived his own gesture as minimal, the boy's letter made him realize how much his simple display of affection was appreciated.

Likewise, I acknowledged how influential I was to my kids throughout the summer, as they would repeat little things I would say from time to time. I realized that you never know how you are going to affect others, how the most seemingly insignificant compliment or joke could boost the self esteem of a kid who might otherwise be surrounded constantly by negativity.

So as I look forward to my senior year at UMass, to applying to graduate school, to my honors thesis, to finally being 21 years old, to my friends and work at the Collegian, I cannot help but think of my kids.

In a way, I am leaving them behind, just as so many others have left them behind. Surrounded by the world of academia, I do not cease to wonder and sometimes worry about my kids. Some will likely be in programs like this one for the rest of their lives. Once you know that their struggle exists, you learn that it may never end.

Emily Marino is a Collegian staff member.

Hometown tragedy gives taste of reality

You don't know how much power the punch packs unless it lands upside your head.

My hometown is pretty small — one square mile, to be exact. Rochelle Park is a place you leave your car unlocked at night before you go to bed. To say R.P. is boring is an understatement.

There's not much to do in the summer besides having neighborly barbecues, and it was at one of these shindigs that my family and I came face-to-face with a tragedy.

Arthur Stapleton Jr.

The Wilsons invited my parents over for dinner one Saturday and I tagged along. We were joined by the Galfos, and right from the get-go I recognized Wayne as the father of a young girl named Tarah from the day camp I worked at in ninth grade. She had to be about 17 years old now.

Four days after the barbecue, Tarah was reported missing to the Rochelle Park Police. Her mother said she would never have run away without her pets. Speculation began to surface as soon as flyers with Tarah's picture started to appear all over town. I couldn't believe the odd coincidence. Then again, it was just the beginning.

Tarah's 20-year-old boyfriend, Jimmy, volunteered to help the Galfos search for their daughter since he was the last person to see her. From the outset, Jimmy was acting strange and the police were suspicious. They asked him to pass a lie detector test; hours later he was leading them to Tarah's body.

He brought the cops to a railroad tressel in town and the four-foot ditch where he allegedly buried Tarah's body. It took another day for the media to get hold of the story. When they did, Rochelle Park and the involved families became the lead stories. Police said they believe Jimmy and Tarah were arguing about something when he put her in a headlock, breaking her neck and somehow fracturing her skull.

This event wasn't hard to believe after seeing Jimmy: he is 6-foot-5-inches tall, 250 pounds compared to Tarah's 5-foot-5-inch, 110-pound frame.

County officials speculated that the argument was over Tarah's pregnancy, which was neatly hidden from everyone, including her family. Tarah was nine months pregnant and no one knew it — not co-workers, friends or even my parents who saw her at the barbecue.

One week after the barbecue, Tarah was dead and her family wasn't the only one suffering a great loss. Jimmy's father, an ex-cop in Rochelle Park, now had to deal with the possibility of losing his son to prison. Jimmy went before a judge and pleaded not guilty to first-degree murder, two days after leading the police to Tarah's body.

Now, the aftermath is this: the town is still reeling from all that has transpired. People are shaking their heads in disbelief — how can something like this happen? How will Tarah's two younger sisters and younger brother, along with their mother and father, cope with the loss? With such a small school system in the area, how can they live "normally?"

What about Jimmy's family, the Stuarts? How can his father continue his landscaping business in Rochelle Park without having to field questions about his son?

This isn't a soap opera and these questions will not be answered on next week's show. For those who shook their heads in disbelief about how this could happen in such a peaceful neighborhood, I have a suggestion: stop turning the pages or the channels on reality.

Tragedy has time didn't happen in Los Angeles, Boston or New York as a teen was murdered in my hometown.

This happens every day in America. That's where we live. That's where I live.

Arthur Stapleton Jr. is a Collegian columnist.

Polymer center funding drive nears midway

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

The $56 million Silvio O. Conte National Center for Polymer Research may open this November, housing faculty offices and student laboratories.

By Tracy Monahan
Collegian Staff

A funding drive to equip the polymer research center is nearly halfway to completion, according to officials in the development office.

John W. Raimo, a director in the development office, said the targeted goal of $8 million will be used to endow faculty chairs, buy equipment for the building, and provide scholarships.

"We consider this to be a successful campaign," Raimo said. "We are using the opening of the building as an opportunity to raise money for things departments like to have."

Raimo said the development office has already received $3.4 million in cash and pledges and plans to extend the fund-raising drive through the fall of 1995.

The building itself has been funded through state and federal grants and the campaign has been directed at private Massachusetts corporations that could benefit from polymer research.

These companies have been slow to promise money because of a business slowdown in recent years, Raimo said.

He also said $2 million in proposals is outstanding and a $600,000 gift will soon be made public.

A private donation of $1 million was given by the late Wilmer D. Barrett, a class of 1934 alumnus. Barrett earmarked the money in his will to be used to establish a chair in the polymer science department.

"That's the only substantial non-corporate gift," Raimo said.

The actual cost of an endowed faculty chair is closer to $2.5 million, according to Raimo.

In Massachusetts, donations to the University from polymer-related companies include $260,000 from Instron, Inc.; $133,000 from Millipore, Inc.; and $105,000 from General Electric Foundation.

Synthetic polymers include nylon, plastics, polyester and Plexiglas.

Raimo said the fund-raising has three goals: $3 million for research and new faculty members; $3 million for faculty chairs, visiting lectureships and graduate scholarships and fellowships; and $2 million for physical plant and equipment cost.

The fund-raising effort has generated $1.5 million in cash and pledges towards research and training. For the endowment chairs, $1.6 million of the expected $3 million has been raised.

Raimo said only $350,000 of the expected $2 million has been raised for the physical plant and equipment costs.

The actual construction of the building is nearly finished and the center is expected to be opened in early November, according to John Robinson, the project manager.

The fund-raising drive will continue and will not affect the scheduled opening of the building.

Harassment is difficult to define

In an office, or any kind of work atmosphere, sexual harassment is something that has always existed and will always exist. It is an endless cycle of those with power abusing those without power.

Geri Sahn

Today, both men and women are being sexually harassed. People are being accused of and sued for sexually harassing someone.

Jurors and judges are trying to define what is and what is not sexual harassment.

Then there is me, a woman who entered the work force in fear of being sexually harassed. Fear of not knowing whether it is actually happening to me. Fear of not knowing if I am harassing someone else.

One day, my boss walked up to me and complimented me on the dress I was wearing.

"That is a very nice dress you are wearing, Geri. It is very pretty," he said.

"Thank you," I replied.

And he kept walking, going about on his merry way.

I, on the other hand, did not return back to work but sat and analyzed what had just happened. For some reason all I kept thinking about was whether or not I should be offended.

My boss gave me a simple compliment and there I was flustering over it. I couldn't decide whether he should have complimented me or not. Then later that day, a women in the office said the same thing to me and I didn't think twice about it.

After awhile, I realized how ridiculous I was for feeling the way I did. There is absolutely nothing wrong with a few nice words from a person you work with in the office. I felt uncomfortable because I was unsure about what is considered sexual harassment in the workplace.

Sexual harassment should be taken seriously, but it should not interfere with normal relationships in an office. Before I began working in an office, I used to believe that a professional workplace should not have heavy flirtatious actions occurring and that mutual relationships should be kept behind closed doors. Yet after working at several offices, and especially in a magazine office in New York City, I have realized that it is inevitable for workers to form relationships. An office is where a majority of a person's life is spent. The people you work with are bound to know and become involved in your personal life, no matter how professional an office is.

What people need to understand is that there is no solid definition to sexual harassment. There cannot be certain limitations set on what can or can't go on in an office. Feeling uncomfortable in a certain situation varies for each person, and each individual should follow their own feelings of what they believe is sexual harassment. Guidelines set on what can and cannot occur in an office should not define how we think and feel.

Sexual harassment exists everywhere, and it could easily happen to me. But I know that I don't have to be scared of every person who talks to me or is friendly to me in the office. As long as the person does not use their power to belittle me, I don't have to analyze everything they say.

Geri Sahn is a Collegian staff member.

A complete guide to your tuition and fees

Your tuition bill just arrived in the mail. Another semester, another large chunk of cash you find yourself waving goodbye to. Why does it seem like you pay the same fee repeatedly, but under different names?

Tracy Monahan

Tuition — This is the grandaddy of them all: $1,110, in state. Tuition has risen greatly since I started coming here. The Student Government Association recently scored a victory by holding the Board of Trustees to last year's prices on this semester's bill. Hopefully they can keep it down for next semester.

Authority Fee — The Authority fee covers all bond issue debt service obligations of the University of Massachusetts Building Authority for Amherst campus facilities and projects undertaken by the Building Authority: $203. Every time you walk by the William D. Mullins Center or the Silvio O. Conte Polymer Research Center, stop in. Why not? I mean, after all, you are a partial owner of those buildings. Bring the whole family by.

Student Activities Fee — This fee supports undergraduate student government, various agencies providing services and activities for students, and over two hundred existing Registered Student Organization (RSOs) as well as any new RSOs which students may create: $42. It seems that even though there is the Student Activities Trust Fund, most RSOs still have to fight for supplies and equipment. By my calculations, this fee collects nearly $50,000 a semester. Who's in charge of it all? It seems a little fishy to me.

Health Fee (Basic) — The Basic Health fee is mandatory for all students with the exception of Kaiser Permanente members who may have their health fee paid by Kaiser: $229.50. What this all means, however, is that if you stop by University Health Services at four in the morning with a bone-jarring earache, they are still going to charge you $10. And they'll haunt you until you pay it.

Athletic Fee — Funds received from this charge are used to support comprehensive men's and women's intercollegiate programs: $101.50. Go Minutemen!

Arts Fee — Funds received from this fee are used to support a varied and comprehensive program of Fine Arts Council events for the cultural enrichment and enjoyment of the student body. A portion of this fee provides substantial student ticket discounts for Fine Arts Center events, and partially subsidizes arts events sponsored by the student organizations on campus: $32. Cultural enrichment? I give the University my hard-earned cash and they still got rid of the burnt french fry statue on the FAC steps. I want a refund.

Career Services Fee — Funds received from this fee are used to support the computerized job-employee matching system: $20. I'm thinking, is $20 really worth it for a career in the burger industry? Admission standards are so low that kindergarten students (who haven't passed free play) are getting into the University, but the career center wants money to send my resume to McDonald's. I'll just drop it off myself when I go through the drive-thru.

Commencement Fee — Students are assessed a commencement fee in September of their senior year, as commencement exercises and events are intended to be self-supporting: $39. Hey, it's a see-through black nylon cap and gown and absolutely no say in the choice of commencement speaker, all for a low bargain price. Now if we could only get free munchies for the ceremony, we'd be all set.

Curriculum Support Fee — The Curriculum Support Fee helps to offset several years of permanent reductions in state appropriations funding by providing financial resources to support the educational and general mission of the campus, including both academic and institutional support activities: $1,069. Lay off, of course the administration needs more money to create and pay for new positions. Don't you think we need a vice chancellor in charge of cheese curls and orange soda?

Fees not on my bill, but included in the Bursar's Notes:

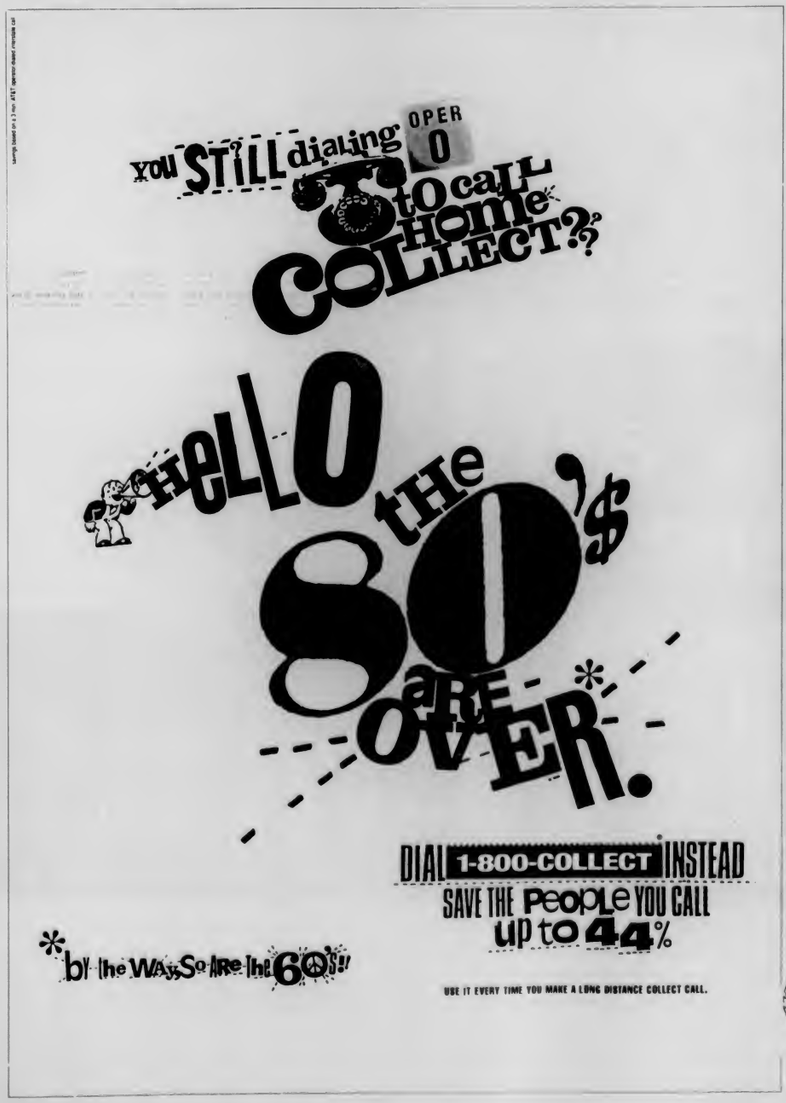
I.D. Fee — This is a one-time charge for an Identification Card. Take it from me, I'm on my fourth I.D. and they charge you $7 for each new one. I don't know where this "one-time" nonsense comes in. At least be honest and say, "This is the charge for your first I.D. Each additional one will cause your parents to have to remortgage their home."

Recreation Fee — Income from this fee is used to support intramural, athletic, general recreation, and free play activities. Free play activities? The last time I had free play was kindergarten and now I'm in college and people are being charged for free play. They must not have passed that part of kindergarten yet. When's nap time and how much does that cost?

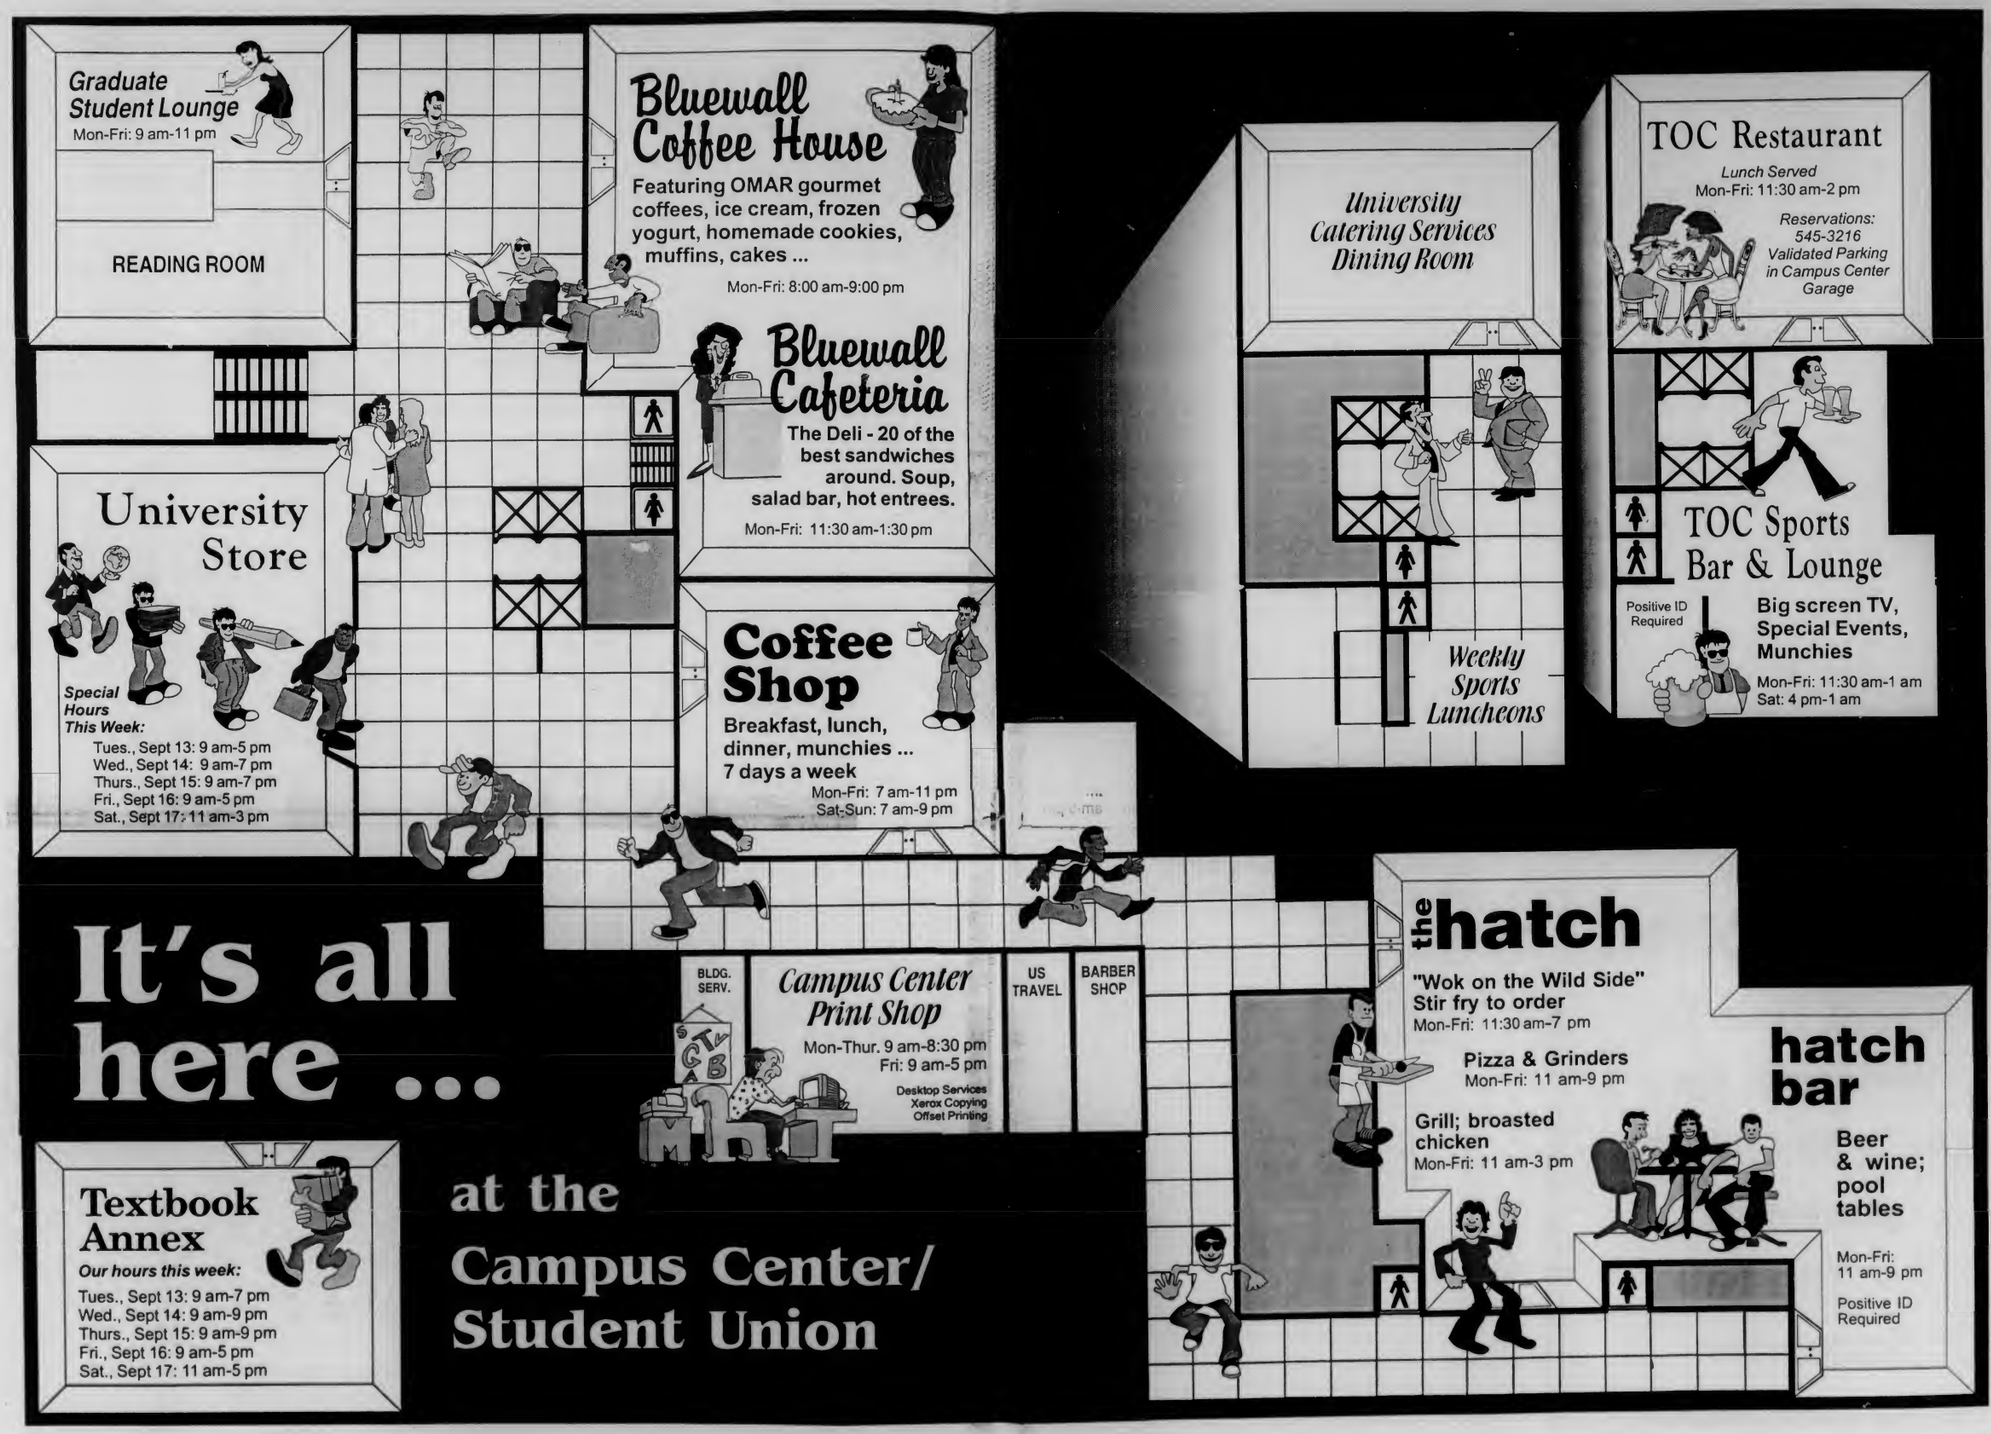
Registrar's Services Fee — The Registrar's Office charges a fee to all new students who enter the University Undergraduate degree programs. This fee will only be charged once, upon a student's entry to the University. Funds from this are used to support the service providing students with copies of official Undergraduate transcripts as requested. By the way, they charge you for official transcripts anyway. So this fee is paid for the privilege of paying for your transcript later.

Don't forget the fee for living in the dorms, eating at the D.C., the charge for the phones. . .

Tracy Monahan is a Collegian staff member.



You STILL dialing 0 to call Home COLLECT??
HELLO the 80's ARE OVER.
DIAL 1-800-COLLECT INSTEAD
SAVE THE People YOU CALL up to 44%
*by the Way, So Are the 60's!!
USE IT EVERY TIME YOU MAKE A LONG DISTANCE COLLECT CALL.



Graduate Student Lounge
Mon-Fri: 9 am-11 pm
READING ROOM
Bluewall Coffee House
Featuring OMAR gourmet coffees, ice cream, frozen yogurt, homemade cookies, muffins, cakes ...
Mon-Fri: 8:00 am-9:00 pm
Bluewall Cafeteria
The Deli - 20 of the best sandwiches around. Soup, salad bar, hot entrees.
Mon-Fri: 11:30 am-1:30 pm
University Store
Special Hours This Week:
Tues., Sept 13: 9 am-5 pm
Wed., Sept 14: 9 am-7 pm
Thurs., Sept 15: 9 am-7 pm
Fri., Sept 16: 9 am-5 pm
Sat., Sept 17: 11 am-3 pm
Coffee Shop
Breakfast, lunch, dinner, munchies ... 7 days a week
Mon-Fri: 7 am-11 pm
Sat-Sun: 7 am-9 pm
University Catering Services Dining Room
Weekly Sports Luncheons
TOC Restaurant
Lunch Served
Mon-Fri: 11:30 am-2 pm
Reservations: 545-3216
Validated Parking in Campus Center Garage
TOC Sports Bar & Lounge
Positive ID Required
Big screen TV, Special Events, Munchies
Mon-Fri: 11:30 am-1 am
Sat: 4 pm-1 am
BLDG. SERV.
Campus Center Print Shop
Mon-Thur. 9 am-8:30 pm
Fri: 9 am-5 pm
Desktop Services
Xerox Copying
Offset Printing
US TRAVEL
BARBER SHOP
the hatch
"Wok on the Wild Side"
Stir fry to order
Mon-Fri: 11:30 am-7 pm
Pizza & Grinders
Mon-Fri: 11 am-9 pm
Grill; broasted chicken
Mon-Fri: 11 am-3 pm
hatch bar
Beer & wine; pool tables
Mon-Fri: 11 am-9 pm
Positive ID Required
It's all here ...
Textbook Annex
Our hours this week:
Tues., Sept 13: 9 am-7 pm
Wed., Sept 14: 9 am-9 pm
Thurs., Sept 15: 9 am-9 pm
Fri., Sept 16: 9 am-5 pm
Sat., Sept 17: 11 am-5 pm
at the Campus Center/ Student Union

First free public bus system celebrates 25 years

By Emily Marino
Collegian Staff

For the 3 million people this year who will take advantage of the services of the Pioneer Valley Transit Authority (PVTA), 25 years of experience are behind every bus ride.

This year marks the quarter-century anniversary of the University of Massachusetts Transit Service, the first no-fare public transit system in the country. In 25 years, the system has evolved from a three-bus, two route, student-run operation serving UMass dormitories to a fleet of 39 buses running 14 routes throughout the Valley.

"We are unique in that we are open to the general public," said Allan Byam, Transit Service manager. In addition to two on-campus routes, the transit service offers 12 routes throughout the towns of Amherst, Belchertown, Sunderland, South Deerfield, Granby, Hadley, South Hadley and the city of Northampton.

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

With 39 buses handling 20,000 people daily, the Pioneer Valley Transit Authority enters its 25th year of service.

Students help foot bill

Federal, state and local funding contribute to the $2.2 million annual operating costs. The PVTA, the primary funding source for the Transit Service, applies yearly for grants for operating subsidies from the federal Department of Transportation and the state Transit Authorities.

Local funding, or a "local share," is comprised of a $15 student fee, money from the Student Activities Trust Fund, and funds collected via a student parking fee.

In addition, Five Colleges Incorporated funds the buses operating between Amherst College, Hampshire College, Mount Holyoke College, Smith College and UMass.

Additional revenue is obtained from private businesses that may pay in the neighborhood of $5,000 to have an advertisement painted on a bus in addition to a monthly fee of $2,000. Bus advertisement contracts are usually for 12 months, and memorable ads include ones for Dunkin' Donuts and WHMP-FM.

"We have a lot more demands out there than we can meet," said Byam, adding that despite the funding that is received annually, the system is "maxed out budget-wise."

The current staff of approximately 180 drivers, mechanics, trainers, utility crews, clerks and professional staffers maintain and operate the 30-foot, 35-foot and 40-foot buses, bus lifts, administration and dispatching offices.

Drivers tackle obstacle course

Student drivers undergo a two-month training period to obtain a commercial driver's license.

"After that we tell them to forget everything and teach them how to drive a bus," Byam said.

Adam Jenkins, a student driver and senior at UMass, said that the training period is not difficult, especially in light of the fact that drivers are paid for training.

Drivers practice operating the buses on obstacle courses in parking lots and are trained to avoid "off-tracking," which is responsible for almost 95 percent of the 60 accidents per average year involving PVTA buses.

"Off-tracking" occurs when a driver runs over a curb with the back wheels of the bus during a turn after successfully turning the front wheels to avoid the curb.

In addition to learning how to maneuver buses, drivers must learn each of the bus routes and how to operate the wheelchair lifts and open and close the doors.

Peak service hours are between 7 and 9:30 a.m. and 2:30 to 6 p.m. During these times more buses are in operation than during the slower mid-day and evening periods.

"We feel anybody has the potential to drive a bus," said Byam, who said that about 100 students are trained by the Transit Service per year. Drivers must sign a 1 1/2 year contract and be committed to the job.

"It's a pretty independent job," Jenkins said. "You just get on the bus and drive it." He said that drivers must work ten hours per week though there are always extra hours available, and some drivers put in up to 30 hours each week.

Student drivers make between $5.50 and $7 per hour and receive a raise every semester. Benefits of driving a PVTA bus include flexible hours, post-graduate opportunities in the transportation field, and a social network that "makes the campus less intimidating," according to Byam.

"They [UMass Transit Services] are very accommodating," said Jenkins, who has been driving PVTA buses for almost five semesters. Jenkins noted that there is a social scene shared by drivers and added that job enjoyment is not contingent upon social involvement.

Byam, who started his career at the UMass Transit Service 20 years ago as a student driver, said that from the beginning the service was a "nice, close-knit place to be." With a bus fleet consisting of three 1963 to 1966 school buses and two 1956 transit coaches, the student-run organization was a place where "everyone knew each other," according to Byam.

First free system in U.S.

In the early 1970s, the transit system expanded and included several used transit buses from the city of New York which recorded over a million miles each. The first new vehicle purchased by the Transit Service, a 30-foot mini-bus bought in 1972 and fondly referred to as "Old '47," is still in service.

In 1973, the Transit Service won an Urban Mass Transportation Administration (UMTA) research and demonstration grant from the U.S. Department of Transportation. The grant was allocated to study the impact on traffic and commuter habits if a free bus service were offered while parking restrictions were enforced on campus.

Engineering professors William Goss and Paul Shuldiner wrote the grant application, which eventually netted ten new buses handling eight routes and service to 12,000 riders.

UMass Transit contracted with the newly-formed PVTA in 1976 to become the first no-fare public transit system in the country. Two years later, they worked with student groups to establish a five-year funding plan using local funds collected to match operating subsidies from the PVTA's state and federal operating grants.

In 1979 the transit service purchased 26 new 35-foot buses and a 32,000-square-foot maintenance and storage facility. One year later the service picked up three bus routes in Amherst.

Service to the Five College community began in 1982, opening bus routes in four additional communities in the northern Pioneer Valley. Since then, the service has run seven days a week on 14 routes, transporting 20,000 people daily. A full bus holds approximately 80 people.

One major benefit of the bus system, Byam said, is that it "gets a heck of a lot of cars off the road."

Byam also said that the public transportation alleviates parking problems, provides mobility for those without cars and is a significant environmental help regarding traffic congestion and the release of harmful hydrocarbons emitted by cars which pollute the environment.

The transit system is currently working to educate local senior citizens about services offered which may offer them more mobility and the opportunity to become more involved in the community.

The UMass Transit fleet is 65 percent handicapped accessible and has a schedule adherence record of 98 percent.

Buses operate Monday through Thursday from 5:30 a.m. to 1 a.m., Friday and Saturday from 5:30 a.m. to 3 a.m., and Sunday from 8 a.m. to midnight. Schedules are available in the UMass Campus Center and on PVTA buses.

New semester, new year for UM Jewish students

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

For Jewish students, it is not just the semester that is beginning but the new year. Less than a week ago, Jews celebrated Rosh Hashanah, the beginning of the year 5755.

Rosh Hashanah, which occurred six days before the start of the school year, is followed by another major holiday. Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, begins at sundown on Wednesday and continues through Thursday. Halacha, Jewish Law, tells Jews to fast on Yom Kippur to remind them of their sins.

There are many options for Jewish students at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. Hillel House, Chabad House and the Jewish Community of Amherst (JCA) all have planned various events for the return of students and for the High Holidays.

University policy, in accordance with Chapter 151C of the Massachusetts General Laws, states that "any student who is unable to participate in any examination, study or work requirement because of religious observance is to be provided with an opportunity to make up the said examination, study or work requirement."

Students should notify professors as soon as possible if they will be missing classes. According to Kyle Hoffman, assistant to the deputy provost, students who have any difficulties should report them to department chairs.

Chabad House will be holding Kol Nidrei evening services at 6:45 p.m. at the start of Yom Kippur. Services will be held the following day at 10 a.m. and then at 5:45 p.m. After the evening services, a free "break the fast" meal will be served.

Chabad will also hold their first Shabat service on Friday at 7 p.m., and Saturday services will take place at 10 a.m. Both services will be followed by meals. The services are free but optional donations are accepted, according to Rabbi Chaim Adelman.

Hillel House also has planned activities for the start of the semester. There will be an informal get-together for new students Sept. 18. Hillel's officers and committee chairs will be present to meet new students and discuss upcoming events.

According to Hillel President Nurit Ben-Harav, the meeting is an "opportunity to get involved with Hillel, see what Hillel has to offer, and to buy activity cards." Card holders will get discounts for many Hillel events, and cards cost $10 for the year.

Hillel will also be holding services for Yom Kippur. There will be a "Pre-Yom Kippur meal" at Hillel House on Wednesday at 5 p.m. followed by Kol Nidrei services in the Student Union Ballroom at 7 p.m. The meal costs $6.50 or $2 for card holders. The services are free.

Services on Thursday will be held in the Student Union Ballroom at 10 a.m. and will continue throughout the day with readings and discussion of the Book of Jonah, T'shuvah exercises, and closing services at 5:30 p.m.

After services there will be a break-the-fast meal. The meal is free for those on the University meal plan and costs $5.25 for those who are not on the plan. Sign-up for the meal is in the Hillel House Office, and all interested must sign up by today at noon.

JCA will hold Yom Kippur services for its members on Thursday; non-members are welcome later that evening, from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Students interested in a membership can call Judy Glaser at 253-9607 for information.

JCA will also hold Shabat services every week at 8 p.m. Fridays and 10 a.m. Saturdays. These services are open to the public.

That's me, Mr. Shiny Shoes. Thanks to the Mass Daily Collegian I'm a new man. I shine my own shoes now. They're the shiniest you've ever seen. Careful, if you stare too long they could blind you.

Campus pond beautification project scheduled

By Kelly Spang
Collegian Staff

Armed with rubber boots and rakes, members of the campus and local communities will be drudging through the mud of the campus pond and its outer banks to "beautify" the area.

The clean-up, which will take place Sept. 27 and 28, will be what organizers hope is one in a series of clean-up events to enhance the campus community.

"We hope to build more pride into the campus so it looks nice and people feel good about it," said University spokesman Danny Chun.

For two days, volunteers will be needed to clean the bottom of the pond and the walkways around the pond. They will also be asked to prune the plant life at the edges of the pond.

Physical Plan Director Peter Wozniak said volunteers will also be needed to rebuild the eroded edges of the pond, hand-shoveling silt from the bottom of the pond up to the sides of the pond. He said the end of the pond near the Fine Arts Center will require the most work.

Project begun by wife of chancellor

Karen Drumm, assistant director of alumni relations, said at least 110 volunteers will be needed each day to successfully complete the clean-up. She said the project is dependent on members of the campus and the local community volunteering their time.

"We are inviting the campus and the community to chip in," she said.

Kathleen Scott, wife of Chancellor David K. Scott, was the originator of the larger idea of an overall campus clean- up. Scott said the Campus Beautification Committee was formed by working with the Alumni Relations Office and Mike Morris, president of the Alumni Association, a non- profit, independent program for University alumni.

The committee consists of students, faculty and staff, and has drawn interest from the athletic department. Scott said University of Massachusetts football Coach Mike Hodges and men's basketball Coach John Calipari expressed an interest in the program.

"I am personally impressed this idea struck across a great range throughout the campus," she said.

Pond originally a brook

The campus pond clean-up is what Scott hopes to be the beginning of many other similar projects under consideration by the Campus Beautification Committee.

Scott said the campus pond was chosen as the first task because it is the focal point of campus.

"Let's start with the core of campus and see where we can go from there," she said.

The campus pond actually began not as a pond but as a brook. Then in 1892, two students dammed the brook, which ran through a cow pasture between North College and what is the present site of the Morrill Science Center. About two years after the creation of the campus pond, native trees, shrubs and herbs were planted.

Since the pond was created, Drumm said there has been a buildup of silt. She said the September clean-up is one of a two-part plan to improve the quality of the pond. Phase one, the cleaning, is the necessary step to get the pond ready for phase two, according to Drumm.

Phase two, she said, will involve dredging the pond within the next year to reduce the silt build-up that has accumulated over the past 102 years.

"This will help the pond in its overall survival," she said.

Water will be drained from the pond about two days before the clean-up begins, Wozniak said, so that people who go into the pond during the project will not sink into the mud.

Water quality to improve

Wozniak said there is an underground pipe at the north end of the campus nearest Lincoln Campus Center that will drain the water into a brook at the far end of campus near the athletic fields.

The water level will be lowered about three feet, leaving enough water for the wildlife in the pond. The water will be refilled by a brook that runs under the Fine Arts Center, Wozniak said. Bringing in the water from the brook, he said, will improve the quality of water presently in the pond.

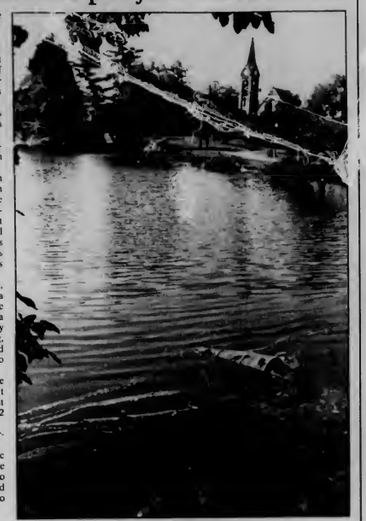
The Physical Plant will supervise the work, positioning workers and providing the necessary equipment, according to Wozniak.

In addition, it will provide free T-shirts and refreshments to the volunteers.

Drumm is hoping groups interested in community service will become involved with the clean-up. She said she would like the Greek organizations to become involved as well as residential halls.

The clean-up is to run from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. so it doesn't cut into the work day. Drumm said this was designed to allow workers on campus to become involved as well.

Anyone interested in volunteering should contact the Alumni Relations Office to sign up.



NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

A two-day, intensive clean-up of the campus pond is scheduled for later this month as part of a long term effort to improve the quality of the pond.

Graduate science program recognized in U.S. News

By Heather Aeikens
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts graduate science program was recently elected as the "18th best in the nation," by U.S. News & World Report magazine in its 1994 ranking of colleges and universities.

Recognized for its outstanding research programs, UMass ranked 18th in a four-way tie with Harvard, Columbia, and Rice Universities.

"We're pleased to be up in these ranks," said David Stemple, the newly appointed director of the computer science program.

A five-point scale was used in a survey by chairs of computer science departments across the country to determine the ranking of the programs.

UMass scored a point average of 3.6, with 4 as "strong" and 3 as "good."

Massachusetts Institute of Technology tied for first place with Carnegie Mellon University with a 4.9 point average.

Also ranked 18th nationally by U.S. News in 18th place last October was the undergraduate computer science program at UMass.

Currently there are 180 doctoral students and 170 undergraduate majors in the UMass computer science program.

Stressed in both graduate and undergraduate programs is an intense devotion to a combined infrastructure of educational and research computing.

"Education and research are essential to one another," said Stemple.

Stemple said one third of undergraduate majors in the computer science program are involved in research studies.

As the University continues to gain national recognition for its research programs, funding remains strong from private industries and the government.

At the present time, the program has over $45 million in active grants and contracts with a yearly research budget of approximately $10 million.

Stemple stressed the variability in funding distribution throughout the different departments of the program.

"Some groups are seeing fluctuations of financial funding that make it uncomfortable," Stemple said. "We have to work to keep things steadier.'

Since the start of the computer science program in 1964, staffing has grown from 13 faculty members to the present number of over 50 administrative and technical members in areas such as robotics, artificial intelligence and distributive systems.

Stemple said there has been a major shift toward research programs involving environmental and health issues over the past few years.

With a growing faculty and steady student population, plans for completion of a new Computer Science Research and Development Center are in mind for the fall of 1996.

"The department is growing, the staff is overflowing," said Stemple.

Stemple said the center will be highly valuable in bringing faculty and students together in a more spacious environment.

The CSRDC will house all departments of the computer science program.

Hello John.... Last night was wonderful. I just love the Mass Daily Collegian. Well, I do aim to please, Phyllis.

AMHERST FISH MARKET
A DIFFERENCE YOU CAN TASTE!
Located 1-1/2 miles North of Atkin's (behind Dairymart)
• Ultra Fresh Seafood & Organic Aquaculture
• Sashimi • Live Lobsters
• Locally Grown Trout
• FISH & CHIPS & TAKE OUT MEALS
SUMMER HOURS: TUES - SAT 11 - 8 • 413/253-5357
Route 116 & Pomeroy Lane, South Amherst

THE BURSAR'S OFFICE
Would Like To Welcome All New & Returning students For The Fall Semester
Dr. Karen Lee Shelley
Bursar
Hours
9:00am - 3:30pm (Teller's Windows, Room 225 Whitmore)
9:00am - 5pm (Questions Only, Room 215 Whitmore)
Monday - Friday

UNIVERSITY STORE'S Textbook Annex UMASS AMHERST

Students Win Book Scholarships

During last May's Textbook Buyback, 25 students won scholarships in our drawings. The winners of these $100 book scholarships were:

Susan Bourque
Michael Hollows
Amanda Lebrecht
Sharon Ornstein
Samantha Worthington
Kevin Conboy
Mike Kennedy
Jessica Low
Brendan Roneyne
Jason Venditti
Kurt Barbuscio
Marie Halloran
Amy McCormach
Angela Motyka
Phumarun Nuon
Paula Castillo
Kristin Curro
Colleen Farrall
Amy Gleckel
Amy Zubiel
Daniela Alvarez
Ryan O'Shea
Arlene Timmins
Lorenzo Macaluso
Michael Shoenig

Textbook Annex hours for the start of the semester:

FIRST WEEK: September 12-17

Monday	SEPT. 12	9AM - 5PM
Tuesday	SEPT. 13	9AM - 7PM
Wednesday	SEPT. 14	9AM - 9PM
Thursday	SEPT. 15	9AM - 9PM
Friday	SEPT. 16	9AM - 5PM
Saturday	SEPT. 17	11AM - 5PM

SECOND WEEK: September 19-23
Monday-Friday 9AM - 5PM

Textbook Buyback will be conducted outside the University Store:

FIRST WEEK: September 12-17

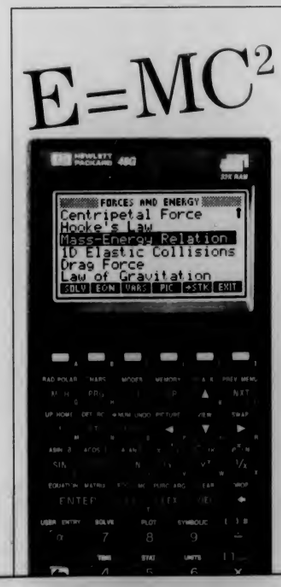
Monday	9AM - 5PM
Tuesday	9AM - 7PM
Wednesday	9AM - 7PM
Thursday	9AM - 5PM
Friday	9AM - 5PM
Saturday	11AM - 3PM

SECOND WEEK: September 19-21

Monday and Tuesday	9AM - 5PM
Wednesday	9AM - 3PM

Did you know:
• the Textbook Annex discounts all "new" books (with a list price of $10.00 or over) by 5%,
• the Textbook Annex carries a large selection of used books,
• has an extensive textbook buyback program that pays you money for you old books?

A genius figured it out— HP built it in.



• The HP 48G has built-in equations, functions, and menus to guide you through complex calculations.
• Access over 300 built-in equations.
• Push a button, choose from a pull-down menu, and fill in the blanks. Entering data is that easy.
• View 3-D graphs.
• Perform algebra and calculus operations on equations before entering values.
• Enter and see equations like they appear on paper.
• Work with different units of measure. The HP 48G will convert them for you. So, enter inches, centimeters, yards, and feet, together in one equation — it'll convert them.
• You'll quickly learn to operate it!
Pull-down menus guide you through problem-solving smoothly and quickly. Push a button, select an entry from the pull-down menu, and fill in the blanks.
• Check it out at your college bookstore.
The HP 48G graphic calculator gives you a whole lot more for a whole lot less than you think. Compare — the HP 48G fits your budget.

HEWLETT PACKARD

The University of Massachusetts at Amherst presents
RACISM
The Problem and the Response:
Seven Social Psychologists Speak Out
All Presentations in Campus Center Auditorium
Thursday, September 22
Thomas Pettigrew, University of California, Santa Cruz 6:00 pm
Intergroup prejudice and discrimination on the campus
This talk will apply what social science knows about these two phenomena to the university campus with remedial suggestions
Friday, September 23
John Dovidio, Colgate University 12:15 pm
Racism among the well-intentioned
This presentation examines how even the most well intentioned person, who genuinely endorses principles of fairness and justice, may develop unconscious negative feelings about African Americans and other minority groups, that are expressed in subtle, indirect, and rationalizable ways
Audrey Murrell, University of Pittsburgh 1:30 pm
To identify or not to identify: Preserving, ignoring, and sometimes destroying social identity
This talk explores the ways in which people come to identify with social groups, what things may exhibit people from being attached to important social groups, and how individuals deal with a threat to their important group identities
David Sears, University of California, Los Angeles 2:45 pm
The symbolic politics of racism
In the political arena modern racism operates through policy and candidate choices that symbolize racial concerns
Saturday, September 24
Jennifer Crocker, State University of New York at Buffalo 1:00 pm
Racism and self-esteem
Racism doesn't always lead to negative self-views. Groups differ in their reactions to racism. The talk will present evidence and suggest why
Patricia Devine, University of Wisconsin, Madison 2:15 pm
The rocky road to positive intergroup relations
The presentation will discuss obstacles to positive intergroup relations and the challenges associated with managing intergroup interactions
Claude Steele, Stanford University 1:30 pm
Under suspicion of inability: Stereotype vulnerability and intellectual functioning
People who are stereotyped as having poor intellectual ability can be apprehensive about intellectual tests, lest they do poorly and reinforce to the stereotype. These apprehensions can disrupt performance
No registration required. For more information call 545-5960
Sponsored by the Chancellor's Multicultural Advisory Board and the Department of Psychology, Personality/Social Psychology Division

Nursing program awarded $1m grant

$350,000 to be distributed over each of next three years

By Geri Sahn
Collegian Staff

After a long fight for its implementation, the School of Nursing doctoral program at the University of Massachusetts will not only begin in the fall, but will be backed by $1.05 million.

In May, the Division of Nursing of the United States Public Health Service awarded a three-year grant for over $1 million to "The Amherst-Worcester Collaborative Ph.D. Program."

This program is a joint effort of the UMass Medical Center in Worcester and the School of Nursing at the Amherst campus.

In a press release, Melanie Dreher, dean of the School of Nursing, said the grant was vital to getting the program started.

"This is a very prestigious and highly competitive grant. we would have been struggling to get the program underway without this extra funding," Dreher said.

The program will receive $350,000 annually for three years. The money will be used to pay for renovations, equipment, personnel and consultation.

Dreher said the money proves "that the federal government acknowledges both the need for the doctoral program and the quality of our faculty at a great university."

The request for the program was originally denied in November 1993 by the Higher Education Coordination Council. HECC felt there were several problems that needed to be ironed out.

In response to the rejection, Dreher resigned from her position as dean in the department. She said the University made a commitment to her to start a doctoral program and that they didn't follow through with their promise.

The request for the program was finally approved by HECC last March. Once the program was ratified, Dreher returned to her position at the University.

In the first two years, students will be studying full-time in classes on both campuses through teleconference capabilities. Students will begin their dissertation research during their third year.

COURTESY SCHOOL OF NURSING
Melanie Dreher

Students will also be able to use resources from both campuses. A collaborative committee will make all decisions in the program.

The research areas to be studied in the program include: mental health, community health, primary health nursing, gerontology, child health nursing, critical care nursing and nursing management.

Financial aid office reorganizes to improve efficiency

By Ben Geman
Collegian Staff

Financial Aid Services reorganized its operations over the summer in an effort to improve the efficiency of student loan dispersal.

Last semester, many students received their loans later than anticipated. By the semester's end, approximately 100 students had not yet received loans promised by the University.

"Last year was the year from hell for student loans," said Director of Financial Aid Burt Batty. "We've worked closely with [state loan guarantor] American Student Assistance to make sure the delivery of loan funds is going to happen on a timely basis."

Some staff members were transferred from the Student Employment office to Financial Aid Services as a result of the re-organization. In addition, the division of labor at the financial aid office became more specialized with the loan counseling and loan processing staffs operating independently of one another.

The office also assigned a staff member to serve as a "counselor on call" to provide immediate assistance to students having problems filing their applications or unclear about what form of financial assistance to pursue.

"It has worked great for us. We're utilizing our staff in a much better way," said Michelle Mattie, associate director of financial aid. "I hope students notice the difference right away. We've gotten some good feedback over the summer."

The Financial Aid office will disperse $65.4 million in aid this year. Most of the money — about $40 million — will come in the form of federal Stafford loans available to any students enrolled in degree programs.

The available loan size varies depending on grade level: first-year students may borrow up to $2,625 per academic year while graduate students are eligible for Stafford loans of up to $8,500 per academic year.

The rest of the available aid comes in the form of Perkins loans, Pell grants and a series of other small grant programs available through Financial Aid Services.

The move to increase efficiency at the financial aid office comes at an opportune time, with the office receiving a 20 percent increase in the number of loan applicants over last year.

Batty said he expects approximately 13,000 students to receive some form of financial aid this year, a 1300-student increase over last year. Part of the increase can be attributed to a $1 million increase in need-based grants available directly from the University this year, bringing the available grants total to $8.5 million.

The office has received about 2,000 appeals to date from students either rejected for financial aid or in need of more aid than provided. One thousand appeals are still pending, but Batty cautions students with pending appeals to be braced for rejection.

"We're trying to notify students as quickly as possible, but it doesn't look promising that we'll be providing any more financial aid beyond Stafford loans and Pell grants," he said. "We really don't have the money to take care of more than a handful of people," said Batty.

New training makes for smoother move–in day

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

Although the campus has been inevitably plagued with jam-packed elevators and congested parking lots for the past two days, the University of Massachusetts planned ahead to make the migration of students into the residence halls go as smoothly as possible.

An intensified resident assistant training program was put together, in part, to better prepare RAs for the arrival of their residents.

Also, more staff was brought in for the move–in period, according to Jerry Quarles, assistant director of Housing Services.

The new RA training program is dramatically different from last year's training, he said. Last year, RAs underwent a week of training prior to move–in day and a semester–long course.

However, this year RAs were trained for two weeks so they would be equipped with more information to offer to students immediately, rather leaving students to learn things gradually over the semester, said Linda Keith, assistant director of staff development.

"We'd been receiving feedback from many RAs that there had been feelings of isolation and alienation," Quarles said. "We worked on team building during the training and tried to encourage more togetherness and teamwork on the job."

In promoting teamwork, more "team members" were brought in, Quarles said. A group of volunteers he referred to as "move–in leaders" took on some of the RA duties including traffic directing and hall registration.

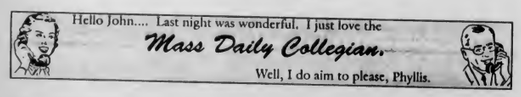
"I was very relieved that we had all of the move–in leaders and security people," sophomore psychology major and RA Emmie Green said. "I don't know how we could've been everywhere at once."

Emphasis was put on RA availability during the move–in process and an attempt was made to work out all the kinks before problems arose.

"We made sure that the halls were ready by early arrival time this year, so that the RAs wouldn't be as tired and could be more helpful to the students," Keith said.

Come sail away

GORDON FENWICK / COLLEGIAN
Shawn Brooks and Aaron Poritz sail their homemade boat in the campus pond.



EXTRA! EXTRA!
EXTRA HOURS
For your shopping convience
UNIVERSITY STORE
Campus Center • 545-2619
Monday Sept. 12 9a.m. - 5p.m.
Tuesday Sept. 13 9a.m. - 5p.m.
Wednesday Sept. 14 9a.m. - 7p.m.
Thursday Sept. 15 9a.m. - 7p.m.
Friday Sept. 16 9a.m. - 5p.m.
Saturday Sept. 17 11a.m. - 3p.m.
A complete line of School, Dorm Room and Art Supplies.
Computers, Accessories, Software and Books
Large Selection of Officially Licenced Clothing
Video Rentals Now At Hampden & Worcester Munchy Stores
Peter Pan Bus Tickets Now Sold at Hampden Munchy Store
Hampden Munchy Hampden D.C. Mon. - Fri. 8a.m. - 9p.m. Sat. - Sun. 12 - 8p.m.
Worcester Munchy Worcester D.C. Mon. - Fri. 7:30a.m. - 9p.m. Sat. - Sun. 12 - 8p.m.
Franklin Munchy Franklin D.C. Mon. - Fri. 7:30 a.m. - 9p.m. Sat. - Sun. 12 - 8p.m.
Mini Store • Student Union
Mon - Fri 7:30a.m. - 10p.m. Sat - Sun 8:30a.m. - 10p.m.

DiGeronimo Brothers VICTORY Super Markets
10 University Drive Amherst, MA
Store Hours: •Mon-Fri: 8am-9pm •Sat: 7am-9pm •Sunday: 12-7pm
Welcome Back!
We're Victory Super Markets, your neighbor just down the street at 10 University Drive...and we want to be your Super Market!
The students at UMASS are an important part of our business...We have the departments and products that we know today's active student is looking for in a Super Market.
As a way of saying "Welcome Back", we have special coupons for you to use at Victory. We look forward to seeing you and hope you have a great time in the Amherst area!
AMHERST VICTORY COUPON WEEK 1 September 10-16 Victory English Muffins 6 Pack FREE
AMHERST VICTORY COUPON WEEK 2 September 17-23 Victory King Size White Bread 20 Oz. Loaf FREE
AMHERST VICTORY COUPON WEEK 3 September 24-30 Any Healthy & Beauty Care Product $1.00 OFF (Not to exceed cost of item.)
AMHERST VICTORY COUPON WEEK 4 October 1-7 5 Cans of Victory Soda 12 Oz. Cans - Assorted Varieties FREE Plus Dep.
AMHERST VICTORY COUPON WEEK 5 October 8-14 Victory Potato Chips 6 Oz. Bag FREE
UMASS Students... take advantage of these fantastic savings at your neighbors just down the street - Victory Super Market!
We Make It Easier To Shop at All Victory Super Markets...
YANKEE 24 Quick Pay BayBank 24 NYCE or Charge It... VISA MasterCard DISCOVER

Anthony's
"The Biggest Stars Shine Only at Anthony's"
Sept 12-17
Mi Mi Miyagi
18 & Over Allowed!
Sunday Thru Thursday
Limited Seating • Positive ID Required
180 FRONT ROW SEATS
Sun-Tues 5pm-2am • Wed-Sat 12pm-2am
500 New Ludlow Rd. South Hadley, MA
Rt. 91 North to Mass Pike East to Exit 5
left on Rt. 33, turn right across from BigY (413) 536-0502

Coach Calipari goes into his closet

New downtown shop to feature Minuteman athletic apparel

CHRISTOPHER RAGUSA / COLLEGIAN
Coach Cal's Closet, featuring the full line of UMass sportswear, opened Saturday on North Pleasant Street.

By Arthur Stapleton Jr.
Collegian Staff

John Calipari is hoping the University of Massachusetts will have as much success in the fashion world as his Minutemen have had in the world of basketball.

Calipari, head coach of the Massachusetts men's basketball team, has given his name to a store in downtown Amherst — Coach Cal's Closet, located in the basement of Cafe DiCarlo at 71 North Pleasant St.

The store will be managed by MassTee's, a company which will hire the staff and order the merchandise to be sold. Brian Gorman, administrative assistant for the UMass basketball team and president/creator of MassTee's, will oversee day–to–day management of Coach Cal's Closet, according to Calipari.

"[In the past], you would go into the mall in this area and see 15 UConn shirts, hats, Boston College, Notre Dame, Michigan," Gorman said. "In the last two years, we've been a top 15 program and there would be one lousy UMass shirt.

"We figured to capitalize on the popularity of the program right now and make a nice store that sells nice, quality stuff."

Ellen Calipari, wife of John Calipari, is the chairperson of JVC Corp., which owns Coach Cal's Closet and contracted MassTee's.

Calipari said that aside from the name of the store, he isn't a part of Coach Cal's Closet.

"Obviously, I'm a basketball coach, so I don't have the time to do this," Calipari said. "My wife is doing the overseeing of this stuff, so I'm not really involved in it other than my name."

Calipari may also broadcast his half–hour television show airing Sunday nights on WWLP–22 Springfield from Coach Cal's Closet during the basketball season.

The store will carry Champion and Nike merchandise featuring the UMass logo. Gorman said the store will not focus just on men's basketball but on as many UMass sports as possible, depending on the season.

The idea for the store grew out of an agreement Calipari made with Champion in which the clothing manufacturer would create a line of sportswear bearing the University logo, according to Calipari.

"Champion approached us about doing our uniforms. One of the things I told them was if they would do a line of clothes that could be sold nationally, then I would let them do our uniforms," said Calipari.

"I just felt that it would be important for the University and to the athletic department that we do something [to enhance our image]. We don't even have anything in the Hadley mall."

The University receives a 5 percent royalty from the venture. According to Calipari, Champion will give 2.5 percent of that to the University Library.

In addition to the shop in Amherst, local J.C. Penney stores and the University Store on campus will carry exclusive UMass merchandise in sections under the heading Coach Cal's Closet.

The Penney stores in this state include those in Hadley, Holyoke, Springfield, Westfield, North Attleboro, Sturbridge, Laneshorough, Leominster and Peabody.

Live in Luxury at...
The Boulders
THE BOULDERS
Apartments Still Available
■ New Huge 2 Bedroom Apartments Available:
• New Appliances • New Counters/Cabinets • New Carpets & Tile
■ New Excercise Facility Featuring Stairmaster, Lifecycle & Nautilus
■ Newly Renovated Hallways, Stairways & Entrances
■ Free Heat/Free Hot Water/5 College Bus Stop on Property
■ New Parking Areas & Landscaping
The Boulders Apartment Complex is conveniently located 1/2 mile from Downtown Amherst. Come check our "Move In Special" today.
Directions to THE BOULDERS from Amherst Center & Route 9
CLIFFSIDE APARTMENTS
248 Amherst Rd.
Sunderland, MA 01375
(413) 665-3958
Office Hours M-F 8:30-5:30 Sat. 10-2
• Eff., 1, 2 & 3 Bedroom Apartments
• Rents from $460 includes all utilities
• W/W Carpeting • On Site Laundry Facilities
• On Bus Route (Free Fare) • Pool & Tennis Courts
• 28 Acres of Wooded Hiking Trails
Only Minutes to UMASS, Shopping & Rt.91

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

ARTS & LIVING

Tuesday, September 13, 1994

Back to School • Special Edition Fall '94

Summer Review

BLACK HOLE SUMMER

By Matt Audette
Collegian Staff

Ahh, summer. 'Tis the season for lazy days in the sun, free from the restraints of school and rock & roll. Music? Yes, it is that time of year where slick record companies executives and concert promoters eagerly rub their hands together at images of "hot" record releases and "happening" tour dates. Fans count their money and by golly they are ready to rock!

So what magic did summer '94 grace us with? Well, a lack of it, for one thing. Which is no surprise to expect. Slinky hip- hop, a couple of standard "summer anthems," and plenty of rockers from yesteryear.

Sound familiar? Of course it does. But stop and take a closer look and you will see a dramatic culmination of events that inevitably will make this summer one of the more interesting ones of past musical memory.

It seems as if every summer the most common word heard in the music world is "reunion" as rock & roll dinosaurs from all corners of the globe sad-dle up their tour buses and head out for the road. And indeed this summer was at no loss for big names. Such rock legends as the Rolling Stones, The Eagles and Pink Floyd dusted off their instruments and hit the road, much to the delight of the media hype, fanfare and outrageous ticket prices. And why not? Baby boomers who experienced the phenomenon the first time around get to receive a heavy dose of nostalgia while those youngsters who unluckily missed it the first time around get their moment in the sun. Everybody wins, as long as the sight of Mick Jagger (now in his early 50s) strutting around in tight pants, singing about how "if you start him up, he'll never stop" doesn't strike you as silly.

Henry Rollins

COURTESY IMAGO RECORDS/PHOTO BY CHRIS GRIFFITHS

Unlike previous years, the old fogeys had to watch their backs as summer '94 strangely became the year the kids moved in. Yes, it was the summer of nostalgia while those youngsters who unluckily became the fashion statement for others. The apex of this occurred when Suburu decided to air its now infamous "this car. . . is like punk rock" ad. Geez, what were they thinking?

Rap artists Dr. Dre and Snoop Doggy Dog

COURTESY ATLANTIC RECORDS

Yet the summer's most exciting tour, Lollapalooza '94 (with it's stellar line-up featuring such top-notch bands as the Breeders, Beastie Boys, and Smashing Pumpkins), had a faint air of commercialism about it. Sponsored by Ernie Ball guitar strings (A quick T-shirt count showed that there were just about as many co-ed naked T-shirts as there were Ernie Ball T-shirts), Lollapalooza '94 proved to be about as dangerous as Barry Manilow these days.

So if yesterday's underground heroes have transformed into today's superstars, what happened to that myth of dirty rock & roll rebellion that has classify rock since its origins in the 1950s? Well, it never fear. The ever-expanding genre of hip-hop and Seattle grunge rock proudly, and loudly, let it be known that this past summer is very much theirs. It shows no signs of waning. This proves true the tired old theory that if parents hate it and society frowns upon it, it must be good.

So thanks to such mega- artists as Dr. Dre and Ice Cube, who paved the way last summer, such aspiring new rappers as Warren G., Coolio and Snoop Doggy Dogg are able to ride the gangsta rap wave with their slinky, mellow, but still intense harrowing depictions of street life. And while gangster rap has been kicking and screaming up the charts regardless of its critics, Seattle's grunge rock continued to provide an appropriate soundtrack to the disaffected youth's angst-ridden attitudes and lifestyles. Last summer's musical trend that began in Seattle a few years ago has now spread across the country, and the first strummed chords of "Smells Like Teen Spirit." But as with any revolution, there comes a price. What was once a way of life for some people quickly

Turn to BLACK HOLE SUMMER page 9

A view of Blarney Castle, one of Ireland's most well- known attractions

COURTESY OF CHRISTOPHER MCCONNELL

Postcards from the British Isles

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

day to Ireland, England and Scotland.

Although this was a once in a lifetime chance to go abroad, I was a bit concerned about the whole family trip was to Bermuda when my brother and I hit graduated from high school. Instead of cruising the island's club- hopping and party- spots. My mom's fear of crime (in Bermuda?) put a damper on my social life and made me the most unattractive member of the opposite sex to take a "quick" snapshot of a mortified you and family replenishing your film supply with the droopy ears and buck teeth.

Having left my teen- age years (and braces) behind, I thought I would have a better time. Being in a car ride whose sole purpose was to view the foliage. (I found that ironic considering our house was surrounded by trees.) I thought my mom had a different idea when she announced that this summer the family was taking a trip and not just any trip, but a whole month's holi-

Turn to BRITISH ISLES, page 5

Editors' own hits and misses

From the Like We Know Department comes a collection of "Collegian Summer Hits & Misses" – an informal polling of Arts & Living editors and writers about the highs, lows, likes and dislikes of the past season. So sit back and live vicariously through our memories. Or, you can just snicker.

• Darienne Hosley, editor in chief
Hit: The lawn at Tanglewood on a clear night with wine, music, a candle and a friend. All you need.
Miss: The Indigo Girls' show. The most amazing moment was Nita's little "take me now" look in the meadow.

• Arthur Stapleton Jr., managing editor
Hit: Bruce Springsteen's Could Happen to You and Bridget Fonda and Ocean City, Md.
Miss: Face-to-Face concert with Bitty Joel and Elton John — that's just fn. I missed it.

• Jon Lupo, arts & living editor
Hit: John Melancamp and Toad the Wet Sprocket in concert, Bonnaroo, Tenn., and the soundtrack of Beavis and Butthead.
Dennis Cooper's bizzarro novel Try.
Miss: Summer movies; Gumpisim; whiny Cory and annoying Puck on "The Real World;" Woodstock '94; Co-ed Naked T-shirts (still)

• Matt Audette, arts & living associate editor
Hit: The book Generation Ecch. Funny, funny, funny stuff all about sex, drugs and rock & roll.
Miss: The Steely Dan concert at Great Woods. Now I know why they haven't toured in 20 years. Zzzzz.

• Tara MK Connelly, arts & living associate editor
Hit: Harvard Square at night – The place has tons of

Turn to HITS & MISSES, page 9

LOLLAPALOOZER?

Forget Woodstock – here's a look at the summer concert

By Michael MacLean
Collegian Staff

Did you have the urge to spend a large amount of money, hear a lot of music and spend time with thousands of sweaty people that you didn't know in a confined area?

I did, and it didn't involve Woodstock.

I'm talking about the Rhode Island Festival, a Lollapalooza knockoff brainchild of Perry Farrell, former frontman of Jane's Addiction and present leader of Porno for Pyros, it did not live up to its name as a festival of youth culture in the '90s.

Once a festival that swam against the tide of the outside world, Lollapalooza has become a part of the tumultuous currents of propaganda and media to become a mainstream event.

As the second tour kicked off in the summer of 1992, the country experienced what one could call the year of post- punk broke.

However this, year saw probably the most diverse crowd ever listening to, in my opinion, the most diverse collection of music ever dished in the festival's four years. From the thunderous bass of George Clinton to the raging, distorted guitars of Rage Against the Machine, there was something for everyone.

And although long lines kept me away from the attractions in the Island Sports Arena, I caught most of after a year's hiatus. Last year I got a little tired of the hemp booths that seemed to be the sole theme of the festival's midway.

As in years before, the second stage acts and the enormous buzz surrounding the arrival of Lucious Left Foot – the Lollapalooza band – reserve my spot near the stage an hour ahead of time. Like Rage Against the Machine the year before, Lucious Left Foot was a relatively unknown band with only one

Kim Deal, Josephine Wiggs, Kelly Deal and Jim MacPherson make up The Breeders, one of the many bands who graced the stages of Lollapalooza '94

COURTESY OF LOLLAPALOOZA

Turn to LOLLAPALOOZA, page 7

SUMMER FILM: THREE FOR THE ROAD

By Jon Lupo
Collegian Staff

What a difference a year makes. Last summer was a season of mediocre films, each new one cramming the multiplex and filling the hungry coffers of Hollywood.

From the early summer release of Wayne's World to Beverly Hills Cop III to The Fugitive's right on the last days of August, the multiplexes were overflowing with product. Heck, even the art-houses were crowded with films like Much Ado About Nothing and Like Water for Chocolate wooing filmgoers and cinephiles alike.

Once again, what a difference a year makes.

Instead of trying to live the mediocre nightmare of this summer's marquee of lame films, here's a look at three of this past season's biggest – though not all certainly best – movies.

Forrest Gump
Like everyone asked me why I didn't like Forrest Gump, they say it with the same aghast, how-could-you glare of shock usually reserved for stealing from the collection plate.

Mullina and Co. from Disney's The Lion King.

But it's true: I didn't like Forrest Gump, and it's only partly because everyone else and their mother liked it. The film's Gump's book portrayal of the last half century of American history, with its cameos and special effects to fill in both narrative gaps and shoddy character development.

The film doesn't start out that way. In the first third, Gump has a sweet, sticky and sentimental charm. Hanks is just right as the boob-ish Gump, a man of little brain but much heart. But when the film goes to Vietnam, Gump turns overzealous. It isn't enough for director Robert Zemeckis (Death Becomes Her) to portray Gump running like the wind through the jungle and then end up

"Why does everyone love Forrest Gump? Maybe it's because for many people an I.Q. of 75 is something to strive for. Stupid is as stupid does, indeed."

American history, but Gump (and the film) end up vanquishing history along the way.

In Gump's world, Elvis is the center of civilization, Gump's world and his actions existing only to serve as a backdrop for the film's director's self-indulgence. Gump's world is a place where everything from the collection with this, well, idiot. From a 1-800-LUV-GUMP hotline (an operator answers "Gump Happens" and will be happy to set you up with a date) to the Gump- produced sequel to Gumpisms, a collection of inane little sayings passing for wisdom, there's something off about the inflation of this manipulative weepy to the status of a cultural touchstone. It's an unfortunate, grandiose reduction of it to a marketing stunt. Forrest Gump is now a trademark, don't you know.

Tom Hanks, seen here in his Oscar- winning performance in this summer's dance from Gay to Forrest Gump

As for viewing Gump as a hero, well, it's time to take a stand. Gump is not a hero. Gump is a man of faith, to be sure, but he's also a man who has no sense of irony. Gump is not a hero. Gump is a man who has no sense of irony. Gump is not a hero. Gump is a man who has no sense of irony. Gump is not a hero. Gump is

What did Clinton do on his summer vacation? Lots.

First Family takes in the Martha's Vineyard scene

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

EDGARTOWN — He golfed; boy did he golf. He ate out and played the saxophone and sang with a rock band and read and shopped and boated and bicycled and squeezed in a few hours of work. What did President Clinton get out of all this vacation activity?

Rest and re-evaluation.

"He had time to spend with his family. Relax. Slow down," White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers said Tuesday. "He found it helpful to leave the workaday world of Washington and get away in order to rest and gain some perspective."

A 12-day vacation on chic Martha's Vineyard was scheduled to end Wednesday for the president and first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton. Their teen-age daughter, Chelsea, left with a girl friend a few days early to get ready for school.

The president came to this island retreat frustrated and drained by a summer of discontent. Whitewater hearings further eroded his administration's credibility and the fight for a crime bill imperiled health care reform.

When he stepped off the Air Force plane into a cool, ocean breeze and an adoring crowd of tourists and island residents, Clinton's first order of business was clear: Relax.

He jumped head first into the vacation. He rose early the first day to play golf, then jogged and spent the evening at a dinner party. It set a pattern of dawn-through-dark fun with family and rich-or-famous friends.

He golfed seven of the first 11 days, trying without success to break 80. Washington lobbyist Vernon Jordan was part of his foursome each time. Mrs. Clinton joined him once, for a cold, rainy Labor Day round. Chelsea and the first lady played miniature golf with Clinton one night.

He jogged at least three times outside the 25-acre estate the family borrowed for the trip.

He ate out, either at a restaurant or private residence, at least six of the first 11 days. That does not include the party he threw for the press, highlighted by his saxophone jam session and off-key duets with singer Carly Simon.

Mrs. Clinton stayed out of the public eye much of the time, although she did bicycle and shop with the family. Chelsea rode a horse and sailed on the estate, quietly slipping out for dinner with her friend.

Clinton attended church twice and went to a Rosh Hashana service. Afterward, he had dinner in a trendy French restaurant with celebrity lawyer Alan Dershowitz.

"He kept saying, 'Great day. Wonderful day. Great vacation,'" Dershowitz said.

But it wasn't all play for the president. He also took time to think about the mistakes of the past year and look forward to the year ahead in what Myers called "a process of evaluating himself."

President Bill Clinton

First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton

Socks, the First Cat

The process worked in 1993. He left Martha's Vineyard energized last year, more confident of passing the trade bill between Mexico, Canada and the United States. It was approved a few weeks later. Clinton's first post-vacation speeches last year were laced with references to community values and the role of religion in public life, and his first public appearance last fall was a prayer breakfast with religious leaders.

Look for the same theme this year. His first post-vacation appearance will be a meeting with religious leaders Thursday morning. He will address community values in a speech to a Baptist group Friday in New Orleans.

"Presidents work long and hard, but mostly they never get the presidency out of their mind," said Marlin Fitzwater, spokesman for presidents Reagan and Bush. "Vacations are important to clear their mind."

Clinton didn't entirely get work off his mind. He welcomed Ireland's deputy prime minister to his retreat and discussed a cease-fire in Northern Ireland. His days began with a briefing from his national security team on the latest refugee tallies in Cuba and preparations for war in Haiti.

But the point is, he got away for a while. For a few precious days, he was like the rest of America: unwinding and on vacation, away from the cameras and controversy. He was another sorry soul knifing golf balls into the woods and forking up a few too many calories.

He'll return to work soon enough. And, with him, will come the same old woes and foes.

"If a guy who screws nuts and bolts on car parts needs a couple, three weeks a year for vacation, how much more does the president need? I would think more," said Lyn Nofziger, Reagan's political director.

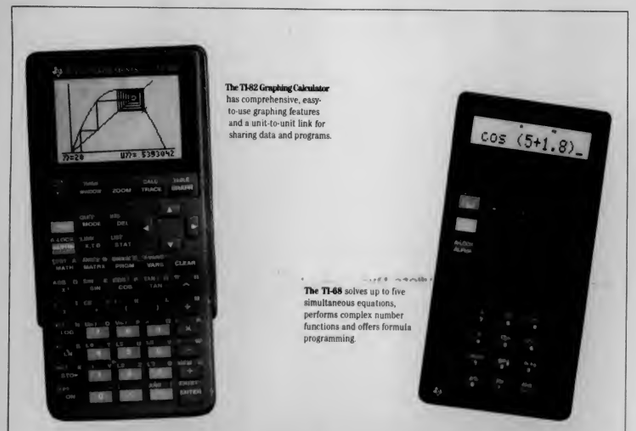
With a cynical laugh, he added, "As a matter of fact, I wish he'd take the next two years off."

"One day I decided to sell my bike and my car, and in the spirit of Walden Woods & Don Henley, I would walk everywhere from now on.

I also decided that the best way to get rid of them and make a whole lot of cash (that I wouldn't donate any of to a worthy environmental cause) was to advertise in The Collegian Classifieds.

Needless to say, I sold my bike and car, but when I looked to see my classified in the paper I saw a really cool classified for a motorcycle. Screw the environment, now I ride with the wind and death at my side."

Collegian Classifieds
They really work.



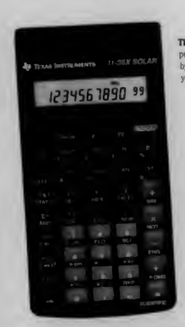
The TI-82 Graphing Calculator has comprehensive, easy-to-use graphing features and a unit-to-unit link for sharing data and programs.

The TI-68 solves up to five simultaneous equations, performs complex number functions and offers formula programming.

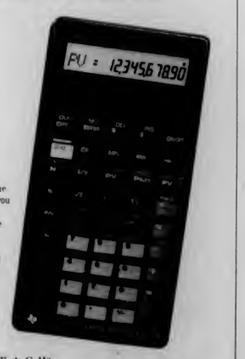
There's A Prerequisite For Every Class.

Get the year off to a great start with a TI Scientific or Business Calculator. They're designed for students and professionals. Recommended by professors. And perfectly matched to your major and coursework.

No matter which classes you're taking, TI Scientific and Business Calculators are what you need to succeed. Try one at your local TI retailer today, or for more information, call 1-800-TI-CARES.



The TI-36X SOLAR, a general purpose workhorse, is powered by ANYLITE™ solar cells so you never need batteries.



The BA II PLUS™ has unique display prompts that guide you through problems. It offers basic business functions like time-value-of-money, plus cash flow analysis for internal rate of return (IRR) and net present value (NPV).

EXTENDING YOUR REACH™
TEXAS INSTRUMENTS
In Canada, call 1-800-561-2197 © 1994 TI 10000000

The Perfect Roommate.

Meet the roommate who'll stay up all night to help you write your papers, spell check and file your work, and provide video game excitement during a study break. The Apple Macintosh Computer—productive, user-friendly systems you can afford to buy or rent. Visit us today in our downtown Northampton location and discover the most productive colleagues on campus.

YES is the Answer
50 Main Street • Northampton • MA • 413-585-0007
YES COMPUTERS

3 three opportunities to learn about arts management at the Arts Extension Service

1 Introduction to Arts Management, 3 credits
Meets Mondays, 4 to 6:30 p.m. Offered through the Division of Continuing Education (Fee waiver available to qualified students through support from the UMass Arts Council)

2 Internships at AES/credit possible
•New England Film and Video Festival •Publications marketing
•Arts for social change research •Artist Business Library
Meeting: Wed., Sept. 14, 4p.m., 602 Goodell

3 Work Study Positions
•congenial staff
•nationally respected organization
•great experience

Interested? Call AES, 545-2360 or stop by 602 Goodell.

AES is a program of the Division of Continuing Education.

Fall Preview

ARTS & LIVING

Back to School • September 13, 1994

Jump in! Valley events spark first week fever

By Emily Marino
Collegian Staff

While returning students stock up on pencils and Scotch tape, local venues are gearing up for an exciting new season of arts and entertainment.

If you are new to the Pioneer Valley, the entertainment scene here includes an array of some of the best gigs, most compelling exhibits, and diverse displays of talent in Western Massachusetts. If you have experienced Valley entertainment before, you are likely curious about upcoming events to avoid those back-to-school blues.

The following is a selection of the best concerts, exhibits and shows happening this week in the area. Try to check out some of these events in between unpacking milk crates and tacking up posters. You will certainly get your money's worth.

Sept. 13: If you are a dancing fool with nowhere to boogie, you'll want to head down to the Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton. Best known as the local home to intimate shows featuring blues, folk and jazz, the Iron Horse is hosting a Rhythm & Blues Dance Party tonight that kicks off at 7 p.m. with a dance lesson.

For the more experienced twinkle toes, the dance floor heats up at 8 p.m. and sizzles until 11 p.m. Tickets are $5 at the door, and more information can be obtained by calling 584-0610.

Sept. 14: Home-grown talent is the main ingredient in the "Foundations Exhibit" on display in the Herter Art Gallery on the UMass campus. The exhibit features the first-year work of the UMass class of 1997 with the purpose of presenting an overview of subject matter, ideas and materials explored during first-year drawing, design and sculpture classes.

Incoming art majors are encouraged to head down and check out this display between the hours of 11 a.m. and 4 p.m., Monday through Thursday. The exhibit ends Sept. 19, so don't hesitate.

Sept. 15: The Iron Horse does it again, this time by playing host to rocker Monte Warden with special guest Joe Keenan. Warden's most recent fame comes from having opened up for Jimmie Dale Gilmore last April, and his show promises jammin' rockabilli-ty. Keenan will play with violinist Larry Packard, whose list of former gigs is topped by The Band. The show starts at 7 p.m. and for a mere $6.50, you could be there to experience it for yourself. Call 584-0610 for more information.

> From concerts to films, dances to art exhibits, clubs to TV, there's plenty to keep you busy before classes get tough.

For those of you who don't want to leave the comfort of your own dorm or living room, don't miss the "1994 MTV Viewers' Choice Music Video Awards." The fun begins at 8 p.m., so check it out.

Sept. 16: Stand-up comedian Janet Chassman will perform a side-splitting comedy show in the Hatch in the UMass Student Union at 8 p.m. Sponsored by the UMass Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns, the "bureaucrat by day and Goddess of Laughter by

Turn to COMING EVENTS, page 7

13 tips, timesavers and other shortcuts for new students

By Michael MacLean
Collegian Staff

Ah, September at UMass — route 9 traffic (and detours), lugging your stuff up to your room, add/drop problems and dealing with Whitless...er, I mean Whitmore.

For the upperclassmen all of this old fat and we've learned how to deal with it one hand tied behind our backs. But for the freshmen...er, I mean first-year student, this can be a fast-paced, exciting and often times frustrating first few days.

Most first-time students have probably heard all the usual tips; things like quarters are worth their weight in gold and that the two words D.C. and food are sometimes contradictory. There are other things, however, that don't reveal themselves until one learns how this university works.

Mastering the Textbook Annex — If you love long lines, the annex is for you. Here's a few tips to make your trip a relatively safe and sane one.

1. Credit cards can be great — except here — for the lone reason that several cash registers share one phone line, so the lines are long and slow. Even after being rung up, you often have to wait a while for an open phone line to check your number. A personal check or cash and you're usually out before you can say "I can't believe that book was 40 bucks."

2. The textbook annex is right next door to Mercury, so dress like it's July, because a hip flannel shirt is going to suck every drop of liquid out of your body before you're even five people away from the register.

3. Don't bring anything that you don't want crushed because they make you dump all your bags at the door. By the time you get out, your stuff is usually at the bottom.

4. Don't buy used books unless you are 100% sure that it is the book being used. I'm not sure who, but someone thinks that change is good so a lot of books don't hang around for too long.

And for some other survival tips:

5. Have a set of headphones, especially for those who have a roommate. If you love Nine Inch Nails and your roommate is an avid Village People fan, I'm sure the usefulness is already becoming clear.

6. Earplugs. These things can save your life, especially if it's the night before a test and your hallmates insist

Turn to TIPS, page 5

The calm before the storm at the Textbook Annex.

100 movies. Four months. This Fall, Hollywood seems to be saying...

FLICK THIS!

By Jon Lupo
Collegian Staff

That's right, over 100 movies are set to be released this fall. And though many will be pushed ahead to spring, the autumn and approaching holiday season is expected to be a sure-fire antidote for the summer movie doldrums, as well as prime time for Oscar handicapping. Here's a look at a dozen of this season's most anticipated releases. . .

COURTESY MERRICK MORTON/COLUMBIA PICTURES
Anthony Hopkins, Matthew Broderick and Bridget Fonda star in the comedy The Road to Wellville, an upcoming fall release.

Mary Shelley's Frankenstein

Francis Ford Coppola, who directed last year's so-so adaptation of Bram Stoker's Dracula, exec-produced this big budget take on Shelley's classic novel. Raging bull Robert DeNiro plays the Creature and Branagh stars as its creator, Dr. Victor Frankenstein, while Helena Bonham Carter portrays the good doctor's adopted sister and later lover. Also starring is Aidan Quinn and, in a rare serious role, Monty Python's John Cleese.

In keeping with the spirit of the original novel, DeNiro's Creature is a being of intelligence and sensitivity, and not the monosyllabic stooge of the Boris Karloff 1930s Frankenstein.

Although this Frankenstein faces stiff competition from Interview With the Vampire, expect a bold, suspenseful and romantic shocker.

Interview with the Vampire

In the trailer for this adaptation of Anne Rice's serpentine novel of undead obsession, Tom Cruise looks the part of the hypnotic vampire Lestat: brooding, passionate, seductive. . . and then he opens his mouth.

Oh well, maybe the trailer was just kidding. Anyway, here's what the film has going for it: Director Neil Jordan (The Crying Game) and a big-time stud quotient. Brad Pitt plays Louis, Lestat's fledgling and intended companion; Antonio Banderas (Philadelphia) is Armand, a dashing neck- biter who battles Lestat for control of Louis; and Christian Slater co-stars as the naive interviewer who gets an earful.

COURTESY BRIAN HAMILTON/STAR PICTURES
Woody Allen's latest film is Bullets Over Broadway, a comedy featuring John Cusak and Dianne Wiest.

COURTESY DAVID APPLEBY/TRISTAR PICTURES
Kenneth Branagh directs and stars as the doctor who creates life and then tragedy in Mary Shelley's Frankenstein

Pulp Fiction

Or Look Who's Starring Now: John Travolta makes his comeback (sans talking babies and dogs) in Quentin Tarantino's long-awaited follow-up to Reservoir Dogs. A trilogy of drugs, guns and cops (sometimes all together), Fiction scored the top prize at Cannes this year and the buzz on this one just starts there.

With a cast that includes Harvey Keitel, Uma Thurman, Christopher Walken and Samuel L. Jackson and a Tarantino script full of profanity and graphic violence, you'd think that would be enough. But amid the flying bullets and the cussing, it's also supposed to be funny — which may prove that Fiction is stranger than truth after all.

Bullets Over Broadway

Why isn't a new Woody Allen film an event anymore? After dozens of films, is it because he's so prolific? Or could it be that he's become so much more idiosyncratic — veering off from his "early, funny" movies and attempting more serious and risky fare? It's a shame, because the bespectacled auteur is truly one of America's greatest working directors, even if he is bonking his stepkid.

Regardless of (or maybe in spite of) the 2-year-old controversy, Woody's latest features a whirling patchquilt of wild characters set against the 1920s Big Apple theatre scene (along with a few goodfellas thrown in). The impressive cast features John Cusack, Dianne Wiest, Tracey Ullman, Jennifer Tilly and Mary-Louise Parker.

Star Trek: Generations

Reason No. 1 to see the seventh Star Trek flick: Captains Jean Luc Picard and James T. Kirk meet for the first time. Reason No. 2: Most of their respective crews team up (through some kooky cosmic screw-up) to stop a nefarious villain (Malcolm McDowell) from destroying the universe. Reason No. 3: William Shatner did not direct this one.

Although both Spock and McCoy declined to appear in this rather historic moment in pop culture (been there/done that), the entire cast of the "Next Generation" does appear, ostensibly to set up a new franchise.

If nothing more, expect this Trek to finally settle the debate over who is the better captain — although the fact that Kirk is slated to kick the bucket may tip the scales in Jean Luc's favor.

Ed Wood

Johnny Depp playing a quirky character in an off-beat film? Quelle surprise! For a slight change, however, this time the quirks are for real. Depp's Edward Scissorhands director Tim Burton tells the story of another film director, the considerably less talented Ed Wood.

Wood made a number of schlocky, no-budget movies in the '50s. Some of them, like Plan 9 From Outer Space and Glen or Glenda? became cult classics, most notably for their cheesy lack of finesse. Ed Wood reclaims these films as lost art and its cross-dressing director (you asked for quirks) as a forgotten artist.

Expect plenty of pathos — and not tie-in action figures — from this Burton epic, not-so-incidentally filmed in black and white.

New Nightmare

Normally, in any sane world, the seventh installment of a stale horror franchise would not exactly be notable. However, this chapter of the Freddy Krueger fright-fest does have some notable twists.

Director Wes Craven returns to the helm (he helmed the scary original) and brings with him a freaky, intriguingly postmodern premise: Freddy Krueger is real and now that he "died" in part six, he's been unshackled from the domain of the films. Still with me? Okay, so now Freddy is stalking the messengers: actress Heather Lankenkamp (who played the heroine in parts one and three), actor Robert Englund (Freddy's creator) and Craven himself. Sounds like a nightmare to me — let's just hope it's intentional.

COURTESY GEFFEN PICTURES
Meryl Streep battles the raging rapids and a devious psycho in the action-thriller The River Wild

Also coming soon...

Robert Altman does to the fashion world what he did to Hollywood in The Player in Pret a Porter, a satire that's filled with stars from Julia Roberts to Sophia Loren. . . Jodie Foster plays an uncivilized woman who lives in the forest and speaks her own language in Nell, which also co- stars Liam Neeson and Natasha Richardson.

Meryl Streep takes on the raging Montana rapids as well as a psycho played by Kevin Bacon in The River Wild. . . Arnold Schwarzenegger plays the first man to get pregnant in Junior. Danny DeVito is Ah-nold's gynecologist and Emma Thompson is along for the ride.

Kevin Costner portrays a Vietnam vet trying to adjust to his home and kids in The War. Elijah Wood co-stars.

Quiz Show

Nowadays, when game show hostess Diane Parkinson sues Bob Barker for sexual harrassment it's just minor news, sensationalist fodder for the tabloids. But back in 1958, America was shocked when it found out that a popular game show had tricked them by feeding the answers to a big- winning contestant. Actor-director Robert Redford has mined the event as a seed for today's rampant cynicism and skepticism — the beginning of the end of America's innocence. Schindler's List co-star Ralph Finnes portrays the collaborating contestant, John Tuttorro is the conspiracy's whistle-blower and "Northern Exposure" star Rob Morrow portrays the chief investigator. The upscale, classy must-see movie of the fall, sure to answer to plenty of Oscar nominations.

ASSOCIATED PRESS
Tom Cruise stars in Interview With the Vampire

Jean Claude Van Damme tries to catch time-tripping villain Ron Silber in TimeCop. . . Sharon Stone and Sylvester Stallone battle bombs and a devious James Woods in The Specialist. . . Tommy Lee Jones in Ty Cobb in Ron Shelton's (White Men Can't Jump) warts-and-all portrait of the legendary baseball player . . . Susan Sarandon and Winona Ryder revive the classic Little Women, co-starring Christian Bale and Gabriel Byrne.

Michael Douglas accuses Demi Moore of sexual harassment in Barry Levinson's Disclosure. . . Misery's Kathy Bates returns to Stephen King territory in an adaptation of Dolores Claiborne. . . Gary Oldman portrays Beethoven in Immortal Beloved, a biopic that co-stars Isabella Rossellini.

INTERESTED IN WRITING FOR ARTS?

As the fall term begins, so does another semester of covering the wide spectrum of entertainment, fine arts and lifestyles in the wildly diverse Five-College area — as well as the national scene in music, film, print and television.

With such a large area to report on and about, we are always looking for new writers to add their knowledge, perspective and talent to the newspaper.

Working for the Collegian Arts & Living can include everything from writing previews and reviews of CDs, films, concerts, books, art exhibits, theater events, dancing and more to interviewing local and national artists from all areas of entertainment.

The second half of Arts & Living includes the area of lifestyles: issues that affect us today on a local and world level and the people who make a difference.

The Collegian will hold a meeting for new and returning staff on the evening of Monday, Sept. 19 in the Campus Center. In addition to learning how the newspaper works, you'll get a chance to meet with the Art & Living staff to discuss the semester agenda and find out how to get involved. Watch for announcements in the Collegian with the time of the meeting.

If you can't attend the meeting, feel free to drop in early afternoons or call 545-1361 to set up a time to talk. We'll be waiting. . .

Jon Lupo, arts & living editor

SUPER STOP&SHOP
VIDEO CENTER
HADLEY SUPER STOP & SHOP
456 Russell Street Hadley, MA

LOTS OF COPIES OF ALL THE HITS

OVER 10,000 TITLES FOR RENT

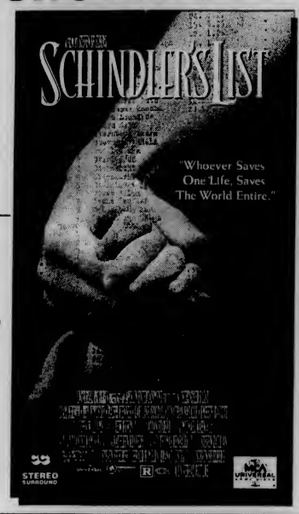
$1.00 BACK COUPON ON EARLY RETURN OF SPECIALLY MARKED NEW RELEASES

IT'S TIME TO GET BACK TO THE BOOKS, AND BACK TO YOUR FAVORITE VIDEO STORE!

★NOW SHOWING★

A film by Steven Spielberg.

"Whoever saves one life, saves the world entire."



LOOK AT THE SAVINGS SCOTTS HAS IN STORE FOR YOU!

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 8 A.M.-11 P.M.
Tel: 549-2692

ICEHOUSE 24-12 OZ. CANS $12.99 + DEP

BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT $9.99 + DEP 24-12 OZ. CANS

BACARDI RUM 750 ML $7.99

GILBEY'S GIN 1.75 LTR.
SALE PRICE $11.99
MAIL-IN REBATE -2.00
FINAL COST $9.99

NAPA RIDGE WHITE ZINFANDEL 750 ML $3.99

ROLLING ROCK 24-12 OZ. BAR BOTTLES $12.99 + DEP

BUDWEISER & BUD LIGHT BEER BALLS $18.99

NEW!! SEAGRAM'S 5 LTR. "BAG IN BOX" COOLERS
SALE PRICE $8.49
MAIL-IN REBATE -2.00
FINAL COST $6.49

BUD & BUD LIGHT 1/2 KEGS $39.99

VISA
Tele-check for your personal check. We now have all Mass Lottery games!

WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE!
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
549-2692

Located Next to Victory Super Market

AMHERST
NEWMARKET CENTER
UNIVERSITY DRIVE
TO RTE 9

Public Enemy, Beastie Boys highlight summer CD releases

By Matt Audette
Collegian Staff

As always, summer is a time for record companies to release albums by big-name artists in hopes of racking up sales or to coincide with the summer tours that bombard us annually. This past summer was no different as new releases from major artists filled the stands at the local record stores across the country. Here is a look at a few of the more notable ones.

Beastie Boys
Ill Communication
Capitol Records

Remember the Beastie Boys? You know, that lovable trio of white, bratty New York punks with a hip-hop conscience who rapped energetically about girls, partying and beer over sampled classic rock riffs.

Huh?

OK, well maybe those days have joined the ranks of nostalgia now that the boys are all pushing 30 and either have tied the knot or discovered religion, but that surely doesn't mean their best days are behind them. On the contrary, for the last five years the group has been producing some of the most mind-melting (not to mention genre-melting) music around, culminating in their landmark 1992 release Check Your Head.

So what does one do after putting out an album that basically dissolved the barriers of modern music? Well, in the Beastie Boys' case you go back into the studio and try to do the same thing again. Hey, if it's not broken, why fix it?

Unfortunately, the resulting Ill Communication may have been a tad bit ill-conceived, as much of the album sounds like Check Your Head outakes that didn't make the cut the first time around. Almost all of the same gimmicks that made that brilliant album seem so refreshing and innovative are back for an encore (distorted vocals, hardcore thrash, slinky instrumentals), only this time they seem contrived and forced.

Not to say that the album is totally without merit. "Sure Shot" is classic Beasties, while tracks such as "Get It Together," "Sabotage" and "Do It" get by with some clever word play and plenty of energy. But that perfect blend of wackiness and inventiveness that the boys were always so good at mustering up seems, for the most part, lost here.

With Ill Communication the Beastie Boys haven't made a bad album, they have just grown up and along with it become a tad predictable. Maybe they should take their own cue and try to reinvent themselves as they did with prior releases. Until then keep your copy of License To Ill handy. B-

Stone Temple Pilots
Purple
Atlantic Records

It is easy to bash Stone Temple Pilots these days. The band has been harshly accused by rock critics as nothing more than grunge poseurs, riding the swelling waves created by such groups as Pearl Jam, Alice in Chains and Soundgarden. And guess what: they're right. But enough already!

The band's mega-selling 1992 release Core, while being an audience favorite, was a critical disaster. But while everyone was jumping all over each other trying to point out how much songs like "Plush" and "Wicked Garden" sounded like other Nineties rock gods (who in turn are really just copies of Seventies rock gods themselves), they forgot one important thing: to actually listen to the songs. Yes, as much as many would hate to admit, some of these songs were really not that bad.

Flash to 1994 when STP releases their much-anticipated sophomore effort Purple. Guess what? Critics completely tore it to shreds as fans nearly tripped over themselves to buy it by the thousands. But what about the album itself? Well, predictably enough it carries on what Core delivered, which basically boils down to a few decent singles and a lot of filler. Even the best song, "Big Empty," is really just a superior rewrite of their 1993 single, "Creep."

So even with their obvious lack of originality, it is hardly fair to call them a bad band, or Purple an awful album. And before you know it the critics will have a new target to blast, and STP will fall out of the spotlight and float away into the background, finally becoming exactly what they are: a decent run-of-the-mill rock band. C

Public Enemy
Muse Sick-N-Hour Mess Age
Def Jam Records

In a musical genre where you can rise from the top of the heap and fall back to the bottom in mere months (just ask Hammer), taking three years off can be commercially devastating. But that is just what one-time rap kings Public Enemy did, and during their extended hiatus rap made a 180-degree turn from the squealing sirens and social commentary to the laid-back grooves of gangster rap.

So the question poised here is simple: How relevant is Public Enemy's hard-hitting message in the age of 40 ounces and blunts? Thankfully all it takes is one listen to realize the answer: If there ever was a time when Public Enemy sounded more relevant, it is now.

The rap pioneers make no apologies when they come blasting out of the starting gate with "Whole Lotta Love Goin On In The Middle Of Hell," a typical P.E.-style jam that could have fit nicely in any of their previous releases. From there on in the album travels at warp speed tackling issues from racism to self-destruction with a ferociousness currently absent in much of rap.

Much of the appeal of Muse Sick-N-Hour Mess Age is P.E.'s refusal to sell out and adapt the current popular styles into their music. In many cases these musical terrorists actually go against the grain condemning the immensely popular gangster rap, which currently sits on top of the rap throne.

While Public Enemy's latest may not race up the charts as fast as their previous albums have, they still have managed to make a compelling as well as an intelligent album, keeping their integrity securely intact. And in an era where rap styles change as quickly as those who jump on the bandwagon to cash in, that's saying a lot. B+

Neil Young and Crazy Horse
Sleeps With Angels
Reprise Records

Neil Young should be considered some sort of national treasure. Since the Sixties the 50-something singer/songwriter has continually produced high quality material (often

COURTESY RALE NATION/PHOTO RESERVE, INC

Chuck D of Public Enemy

Turn to SUMMER REVIEWS, page 9

◆ tips

continued from page 3

on having hall sports outside your door. (See also number 5)

7. UMass water is, to say the least, often "foggy" so if you can afford it, gallons of bottled water are genuer on the palate.

8. The bus schedules should not be considered to be etched in stone. Things like a strong wind even seem to throw them off. Leave yourself time to get to the stop ahead of schedule if you can.

9. As long as we're on the subject of needing time, a few words on the Morrill acience building — another example of UMass architechture gone awry. Leave plenty of time for yourself whenever you enter that building. In fact, if you don't visit very often and dare to venture in, by all means pack a lunch.

10. Take your student I.D. with you wherever you go. You'll need and use it for a lot more than just eating.

11. Those of you who came here anticipating a chance to experience a "college" radio station that played underground stuff on a regual basis...don't be surprised if you here polka and adult contemporary as well on our very own WMUA. But there is a light at the end of the dial — the Amherst College station, 89.3 WAMH, is around for all your indie needs.

12. Not so much of a tip than a suggestion: Explore the Student Union building — there seems to be millions of places to get coffee, food, study and hang out — you just have to find them.

13. The Hatch food only smells like it tastes good.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

The Blue Wall, located in the Campus Center, is a great place to get coffee and ice cream, study and most importantly — people watch.

◆ British Isles

continued from page 1

TARA MC CONNELL/COLLEGIAN

England's Westminster Abbey is the burial place of poets, kings and other famous people. Originally, one could purchase a plot in the Abbey. Now you have to be invited.

with yellow gorse, grazing livestock and low stone walls. From endless stretches of unblemished beaches to rocky mountains and rolling hills, Ireland is a vacationer's dream. Every village we passed through seemed to be frozen in time. The pubs were a far cry from the less desirable bar scene back in the States. To the Irish, a bar is a place to socialize, sing, dance and of course to drink. The nectar of the gods was Guinness, but they'd be happy to serve you any number of stouts, ales and beers. It's amazing how well your family gets along after "relaxing" a little together.

Driving through the country I couldn't help but feel as if I had been caught in a time warp. Pastoral scenes complete with grazing sheep, white painted cottages and some long forgotten crumbling castle ruins kept group photos to a minimum as everyone sought to capture some of Ireland's magic on film.

I was especially taken by Killarney National Park. The narrow and winding roads of the 26,000-acre reservation took me through barren cliffs and rocky hillsides spotted with goat, sheep, purple rhododendrons and smoky heather. I stood on the side of the road in awe as a gaping valley spread out before me backed by a perfect set of mountains all reflected off the mirror-smooth surface of an icy lake.

We moved from the rural to the urban with a few days' stay in the fair city of Dublin. Although the warmth of the people was still there, you felt different. It was disheartening to walk around Trinity College or along the River Liffy only to be greeted by begging children and graffiti. It was yet another reminder that poverty exists everywhere.

My cousins live in Co. Tyrone and we visited them after touring the Republic. The border complete with soldiers, M-16s, barbed wire and bomb detectors really clarified the situation I knew so little about. I still can't understand why a country the size of the state of Maine had to remain segregated because of politics and money. Yet with the recent peace talks it seemed that the people's protest from both sides of the border have finally been heard. Nevertheless, once you got past the border, it was as if you never left the south; the country was just as beautiful and the people just a friendly.

Even though my brother, sister and I had never seen our cousins before, it was like coming home from a long journey. From the huge dinners, afternoon teas and helping on the farm to learning how to Irish step dance, I never once felt out of place or awkward. This was where traditions started and how people used to live — simply and in peace.

From Ireland, I took my first propeller plane ride across the Irish Sea to Scotland. Although I kept my eyes firmly glued to the propeller outside my window and prayed that I wouldn't hear a sudden silence, it was a smooth flight. In Scotland we met another set of cousins. The first words out of their mouths were — well I don't know exactly what, I couldn't understand a word they said to me. But with a lot of head nodding, lip reading and quick assumptions, I seemed to get the gist of what they were saying.

I stayed in a small suburb outside Glasgow called Bregadie. Sadly enough, most of the area was heavily populated with people living literally side by side. The small patches of undeveloped land, however, were very beautiful. I half expected to see acres of heather-covered hills and rocky soil. Instead I saw a huge bowling alley (where I played rather badly), an indoor water park and combination ice skating rink, and a laser war game arena (where I also played badly and got soundly trounced by my 10-year-old cousin).

A trip to Glasgow was also exciting. I visited a mall with four levels, a parking garage and a water park. I also met an interesting man in Burger King who lectured me about the weather, blaming the lack of sunshine on the Americans. He claimed that we "rich Yanks" must have bought Scotland's share. I retorted that the sunshine stock wasn't doing all that well and we'd probably end up selling it to the Japanese.

After a fortnight in Scotland, it was on to England. Now here was the true test of a family. We were spending ten days, in the heart of London, alone, without cousins, tour guides or anyone else to keep us away from each other's throats. Our hotel was located right off Oxford Street, which has three miles of shops, stores and other places to suck dry your wallet. After much debate, haggling and yelling my family, I decided that the only way to see anything was if we signed up on a tour. And seeing that we had 10 long days together, we signed up for three. The first two took us on the standard London tour. We saw Parliament and Big Ben — invariably that one line from European Vacation came to mind as we circled the round-about (rotary for all you Statesiders) trying to get right. Parenthetically, Big Ben, like our Liberty Bell, has a big crack down the side of it. Why? Because the two bells were made by the same company.

Buckingham Palace, Westminster Abbey and the Tower of London all made me realize why the British, and indeed most Europeans, have a fascination with royalty. The allure of blue blood, the acres of property and the dozens of titles can make lollygagging around some posh country manor very appealing. Who hasn't pictured themselves galloping on some powerful steed yelling, "Tally-ho!" surrounded by braying beagles and a fop with a hunting horn? If the palace wasn't enough, the Crown Jewels added the final coup de grace. I was impressed by the Crown Jewels not only for their extreme beauty, but for the incredulous fact that they were truly priceless. How priceless do you ask? Well, Lloyd's of London, the numero uno insurance company in the world, will not even insure them.

The next tour I took was entitled Dover and Canterbury. We left behind the very busy streets of London to venture out into the verdant English countryside. It was beautiful, not like the stark beauty of Ireland that was wild and unruly but it a classical beauty. You could see why so many English poets wrote odes to the scenery. From the calm waving stalks of golden wheat to the blazing red fields of poppies shadowed by stately pines, I now understand why so many people go back.

The White Cliffs of Dover were beautiful as was Dover Castle (the key to England incidentally). Roaming around the castle halls made you feel like a part of history. I could easily see how an empire was constructed by such a country. Leeds Castle was next. Built by Henry VII, it was like someone had transplanted a fairy tale castle into the middle of a lake. Surrounded by water, beautiful gardens and mirrored by a crystal surface where black and white swans floated; I was enchanted. A great admirer of castles and English history, I couldn't have been more at home.

On our way back to London, we stopped in the town of Canterbury where the infamous Chaucer tale was set. It was a quaint town flooded with tourists, dainty shops and places to get tea. I also got to see the original trail where the pilgrims tread. There is always something eerie about seeing "the actual place" where something historical happened.

Here are a few things for trivia's sake that one might not know about London. This will come in use if you take History 140 or 141, or happen to land on "Jeopardy" with a London category. Think of how impressed Alex and the rocket scientist next to you will be when you confidently say, "I'll take London for $1,000, Alex."

The actual capitol of London is divided into two cities: London and Westminster. The city of London is only one square acre in size and it's populates is only a few thousand. But due to the merger with the European Economic Community, the weekly population swells into the millions. Because of this onslaught of people, London is a hot spot for terrorists. Out of 15 original entrances into the city, only seven remain and they are guarded by police, cameras and bomb scanners. Each of the entrances is also marked by a dragon, the city's protector.

If you also hope to glimpse the London Bridge while there, look no further than Arizona — some "bloody Yank" bought it. However, Tower Bridge is an excellent substitute and much more picturesque than the London one. I wouldn't be too fond of a bridge that sported criminals' heads on spikes to amuse and warn the masses.

London isn't all facts and history. Also located in London is Covent Gardens. It is an ideal place to let the cultured person in you emerge with unbridled passion. I loved the Gardens because it was full of theaters, little cafes, bars, bistros and clubs. It was an excellent place to catch a show or sit back and watch the world pass by. I saw a brilliant play at the Duchess Theater and my mom had to drag me from the area when it was through.

Another convenient feature of London is the Underground. One of the finest, cleanest and least confusing transportation systems, the Underground can get you from A to Z with little hassle. Everything is clearly marked so there is no fumbling around for a map, an act which screams tourist. Plus it eliminated the need to ask someone where you were. Invariably there is always the one wise guy who'll tell you something ludicrous: "Buckingham Palace? Why I'm the old butler there. They tore it down, dreadful mess." Ya, okay.

Anyway, I have to say that the trip was a huge success. Oh, we had our share of arguments: "No, mom. I'm sure that the hotel is that way." And we did run to our own rooms to bask in blessed solitude once we returned. But we all agreed that it was a lot better than most trips my mom organized. There was something for everyone, even those with the most eclectic taste. In fact, it was better than the Disney World trip which my brother complained about because it was just "too happy there." It's so hard to please some people!

TARA MC CONNELL/COLLEGIAN

Leeds Castle, located in the United Kingdom, was built by Henry VIII and later used as a rehabilitation hospital during World War II. Open now to the public, the castle features acres of gardens, tea and souvenier shops.

Auditions to be held this week for Escape from Happiness; Sheila's Day

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

Not only does the University of Massachusetts provide its students with an education, but it also enables its students to become a part of the university through countless extracurricular activities.

Among the many clubs and sports teams, UMass has theater. A noble and time–honored way of entertaining the masses, the UMass Theater Department is always looking for actors and actresses to grace the stage with their talent.

If you are interested in exercising your Thespian skills, read on. Escape from Happiness by George F. Walker unleashes one of the most unique, comedic and dramatic voices to emerge in years. His manic satires of contemporary urban life have struck a chord with international audiences and critics alike.

Escape from Happiness is, at its most basic level, the story of a modern family drawn together to face an outside threat. As with many things that have gone awry, Walker picks gleefully at "family values" and how they affect the choices we make. Walker writes with an edge that accents the emotional depth of his writings and give his plays a theatrical drive.

Audition dates: Sept. 14 and 15, 7 to 11 p.m., Curtain Theater, Fine Arts Center.

Callbacks: Sept. 16, 7 to 11 p.m., Curtain Theater, Fine Arts Center.

Performances: Nov. 30 through Dec. 3 and Dec. 6–10, Curtain Theater.

Sign up for an audition slot outside the theater department office, room 112 in the Fine Arts Center. Those who wish to audition but are unable to make scheduled times can contact Ed Golden at 545–2721 prior to Sept. 15 to make other arrangements.

Community members and actors of diverse ethnic backgrounds are encouraged to audition. Scripts are available on a two–hour sign–out basis from FAC 112 between 9 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. For further information, contact 545–3490.

Also holding auditions is Sheila's Day by Duma Ndlovu. Conceived and created by Duma Ndlovu and Mbongeni Ngema, it is a co–production of the UMass Department of Theater and the New WORLD Theater. Directing the play will be Roberta Uno and musical director will be Horace Clarence Boyer.

Sheila's Day is a musical drama that draws a parallel between the lives of African–American women and South African women, binding the struggle for liberation on both continents.

In South Africa, Black women working as domestics in the homes of the country's White minority are called "Sheila" by their employees much like the Black nursemaids in deep south being called "mammy." These names are automatically given to these women. The refusal to learn the more melodic and difficult birthnames only hightens the singlemindedness of the employers.

Sheila's Day is named after Thursday, the day of the week most of these women got off. It was during this day that the women were able to meet and come together in women–only prayer circles to heal and renew their spirits. It was through this spiritual coming together that fed the spirit of resistance and fuels the fires of freedom.

Roles are available for six to eight women of African descent. Those auditioning should come dressed for movement and be prepared to sing a song a capella.

Auditions: Sept. 12, 7 to 9 p.m., room 204, Fine Arts Center; Sept. 13, 7 to 9 p.m., room 204, Fine Arts Center; Sept. 14, 7 to 9 p.m. T190 Theater Building, Smith College.

Callbacks: Sept. 15, 7 p.m., room 204, Fine Arts Center.

Performances: Rand Theater, Oct. 27–29, Nov. 3–5 and 9–12.

Smith auditions are open call. Those auditioning at UMass should sign up for an audition slot on the callboard outside room 112 in the Fine Arts Center.

Anyone who cannot attend any of these audition times is urged to contact New WORLD Theater office at 545–1972 prior to Sept. 15 to make other arrangements.

Scripts are available on a two–hour sign–out basis between 9 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. from the Theater Department office, 112 Fine Arts Department, the New WORLD Theater office, 10 Hampden Dining Commons and the Smith College Theater office.

For further information, contact the New WORLD Theater, 545–1972, or the Department of Theater, 545–3490.

Plays promote local theatre

Eclectic line–up promises a diverse cultural experience

By Emily Marino
Collegian Staff

Boasting one of the finest theater departments in New England, the University of Massachusetts is gearing up to set its stages for an exciting new season of comedy and satire.

From Aristophanes to Moliere to contemporary Canadian and South African playwrights, the UMass Department of Theater promises a slew of on–stage jubilation, despair, hope and laughter.

The theater department will open its 1994 season in October with Duma Ndlovu's Sheila's Day, which will run from Oct. 27–29, Nov. 3–5, and Nov. 9–12 at 8 p.m.

Co–produced by the New WORLD Theater and directed by Roberta Uno, this musical drama pays homage to the many women throughout the world who make their living as domestic workers.

The story takes place in South Africa, where Black women working in the homes of the country's White minority are assigned the name of "Sheila" by employers who refuse to learn their more difficult and infinitely more melodic birth names.

"Sheila's Day" thus becomes a reference to Thursday, the traditional day off for these domestic workers. It is also the day when these Black women come together in women–only prayer circles to heal and renew their spirits. Within them is a wellspring of courage that feeds the spirit of resistance and promises freedom for African people throughout the Diaspora.

Sheila's Day draws a parallel between the struggles of African–American women and South African women, equating the struggle for liberation on both continents.

Next on the theater department's line–up is a satiric look at the breakdown of contemporary family values via George F. Walker's Escape From Happiness. This production will be performed in the Rand Theater Nov. 30–Dec. 3 and Dec. 6–10 at 8 p.m. with a 2 p.m. matinee on Dec. 3.

Escape From Happiness is the story of a family drawn together to meet an outside threat. Walker gleefully picks apart the desperate state of modern "family values" in this sharp, profoundly funny play.

"Walker's comic collection of obsessive eccentrics creates a domestic epic whose emotional depth equals its theatrical drive," said critic Robert Wallace.

In March, Aristophanes' The Birds will kick off the spring semester. Don't miss this masterpiece of Greek comedy, which will run March 2–4 and 8–11 at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater.

The play follows two men who leave Athens in search of the "good life," figuring that the key to happiness is held by high–flying birds. They hatch a quick plot to persuade their newly–found feathered friends to build "Cloudcuckooland," where man and bird can live peacefully halfway between the worlds of earthbound mortals and the lofty Gods of Mount Olympus. Hope, trust and good intentions are skewered in a timeless message for mortal mankind.

EARNEST 100 will commemorate the 100th birthday of Oscar Wilde's The Importance of Being Earnest. The play will be performed April 6–8 and 13–15 at 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater.

The Department of Theater will celebrate this special centennial with a "deconstructed evening of Wildeness." This collaboration between UMass theater professors Richard Trousdell and Virginia Scott will provide an entertaining evening of outrageous humor to all.

The spring season will close with The Misanthrope, Moliere's greatest satiric comedy of life in 17th century France. Moliere presents the story of Alceste, the only truly honest man in Paris, and of Celimene, a beautiful young flirt with a wicked tongue. Their tale of love found and lost unravels amidst a whirl of poets and prudes, courtiers and coquettes.

The Misanthrope will be presented in the Rand Theater, April 27–29 and May 3–6 at 8 p.m.

Tickets to all Department of Theater productions are available at the Fine Arts Center Box Office, 545–2511, Monday through Friday from 10 a.m.to 4 p.m. Tickets are $6 for the general public and $3.50 for students and senior citizens. Group rates and season subscriptions are available, and both the Rand and Curtain theaters are wheelchair accessible.

Eye Witness

"Pieta," a 1987 work by artist Michael David, is only one of the works featured in his upcoming exhibit entitled, "Bearing Witness." The works can be seen beginning Sept. 27 through Oct. 14 at the Hapden Garden.

Music to your ears

COURTESY KOKO TAYLOR

Legendary is an adjective tossed around loosely but Koko Taylor is the rare artist who deserves that description. See for yourself this fall at Pearl Street in Northampton.

COURTESY MANGO RECORDS

Buckwheat Zydeco plays a unique brand of Cajun music that must be seen and heard to truly appreciate. Catch the man who makes playing the accordian truly cool at Pearl Street in the coming months.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Breakin the Law
Breakin the Law
READ THE PAPER THAT PERFECTS EVEN DEATH

"Hello Harold, this is Phylis..."
"Uh... Hello..."
"Golly it's hot Harold... and you know what?.."
"Uh... What?.."
"All I'm wooring now is the Mass Daily Collegian."
"Uh... Phylis... Please save me the Sports Section..."

SHOOT FOR THE COLLEGIAN
New photographers are always welcome at the Largest College Daily Newspaper in New England
COME DOWN TO THE COLLEGIAN — 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT
TALK TO: MATTHEW MARTIN, PHOTO EDITOR

ART works
UMASS ARTS COUNCIL...Over 25 years of providing grant support, financial resource networking, and arts information to student organizations & academic departments; addressing contemporary issues, aspects of identity, and the values of cultural awareness.
Arts Information...
the Arts Council publishes ❖ ARTSITINGS, a bi-weekly arts calendar of events at the five colleges ❖ ART NOTICE: NOTICE ART, a monthly gallery banner promoting all six UMass galleries ❖ ART WORKS ON CAMPUS, a brochure guide to galleries and public art sites ❖ VISUAL ARTS BILLBOARD MAPS in key locations across campus.
Art Eventives...
Interventions of Dance, Music, Poetry, & Theatrical Performance in Public Art Sites and Courtyards.
Public Art... maintenance and campus beautification.
Council Scholarships... at (AES) Art Extension Service for arts management and at (PAD) Performing Arts Division for dance, music, voice or other disciplines.
UMass Arts Council...
is funded primarily by a portion of the student arts fee. Council members include undergraduate and graduate students, alumni, faculty, and professional staff appointed by representative Senates. If you would like to become a Council member, contact your Senate or the Arts Council.
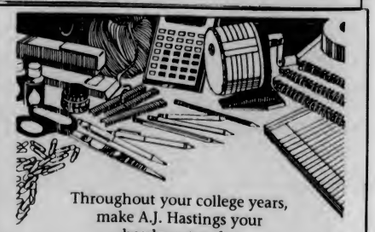
Grant Deadlines... for the Fall are 9/23, 10/21, and 11/18. Applications are available at the Arts Council and Student Activities Office. Call for advice or help with applica-
❖ UMASS ARTS COUNCIL, 101 HASBROUCK, 545-0202 ❖



Throughout your college years, make A.J. Hastings your headquarters for SCHOOL SUPPLIES!
Count on us for everything from your first freshman notebook to your final thesis paper... plus all those years of pens, pencils, paper clips, typewriter ribbons, etc., in-between!
A·J·Hastings, Inc.
Newsdealer and Stationer
"Conveniently located in the center of Amherst"
45 South Pleasant Street
OPEN: Weekdays 5a.m. to 9 p.m., Sundays, 5a.m. to 5p.m.

A Sound you can live with! TEST YOUR DETECTOR
NFPA
National Fire Protection Association

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256-0733
145 main st. northampton 586-0155

INCENSE • SINGLE EARRINGS • COTTON CLOTH IN GHANA AREA RUGS • TOPS • MUGS • CHOPSTICKS • ONE PRICE SALWAR KAMEEZES • PANTS • BAGS • POUCHES • JUGGLESSES • BOLTS • T-SHIRTS

The Mercantile
18 Center St 584-1205 Northampton
Mon-Sat 10-6 Sun 12-5 Thurs & Fri til 9 Amherst Carriage Shops 549-1396
CANDLES • SUNGLASSES • STONE PENDANTS • BASKETS • BANDANAS

◆ Lollapalooza

continued from page 1

Machine the year before, Lusciious Jackson was a relatively unknown band with only one release and gave some of the more commercially popular bands the runaround when it came to enthusiasm and stage presence.

Although the second stage drew a fair amount of attention from me, it was the center stage acts that drew the most anticipation from the hording masses. I think the most asked question concerning the "headliners" of the concert had to do with Nirvana. Was the loss of Nirvana for better or worse? It's really not too clear.

On one hand, Nirvana will probably be one of the only bands associated with my generation for years to come. So in that sense they were sorely missed. But on the other hand, the lack of Nirvana probably saved the tour from doubling its commercial appeal overnight. Look at how much the audience increased at this year's W.O.M.A.D. tour now that Peter Gabriel was on stage.

When Nirvana's meltdown and eventual withdrawal from Lollapalooza occurred, Smashing Pumpkins were left with top billing and the Beastie Boys running a close second. Despite the rumors about a faulty sound system, I was right in the center near the sound board the whole time and I thought they put on a great show.

Love him or hate him, Billy Corgan summed it up when he said, "You can tell your kids you were there and you rocked." The Pumpkins are just about the only band around today that have distinct sounds reminiscent of the art–rock bands of the '70s.

That's where the long middle section of "I am One" came from, to respond to all those whom I overheard calling Corgan all sorts of not–so–nice names just because he indulged himself a little and didn't play "Today" and "Disarm" over and over again.

Then again, those were probably the same people who thought that the Bill of Rights says everyone has the right to crowd surf and annoy everyone else. I paid 30 bucks to hear some music, not to have three sweaty bodies fall on my head at once.

Several aspects of the music scene today relate to what Lollapalooza was in the past and what it may be in the future. Think about this: if the original lineup of 1991 — Rollins Band, Nine Inch Nails and Jane's Addiction — went back on the road today the response would be enormous.

That is a lot of what Lollapalooza was: presenting music that wasn't radio friendly and had a cult following or often very little following at all.

Now the state of the festival is different. Many of the bands not only have a large following, but many have cracked the top 40 albums or been in the top 20 videos on MTV.

New England may not have to worry about the future of Lollapalooza since inadequate planning for trash and traffic by Rhode Island officials made the concert–goers look like a bunch of animals. A return appearance in Rhode Island is now up in the air. Since Great Woods wants to avoid the festival like the plague, the return of the tour to the region may be just a fantasy.

The concert's future depends on its promoters. A format of one major headliner and perhaps 10 or so second stage acts would be something I'd be enthused about.

The entire event has become so much of a profit machine, however, that a major change like this would most definitely result in a major decrease in profit.

I just hope that in the end, it can progress to the point where, in the music business, the business is just that: music.

COURTESY POLLY BORLAND

Lollapalooza '94 performers Nick Cave and the Bad Seeds

COURTESY BARSLEY PARK RECORDS

Funk master George Clinton was one of the more memorable acts from Lollapalooza '94.

COURTESY VIRGIN RECORDS

- Shonen Knife carved their way through the second stage at Lollapalooza '94.

◆ coming events

continued from page 3

night" will perform with local folk singer Linee Perroncel. A $3 to $5 donation is suggested, call 545–4824 for more information.

If music is your thing, local favorite Synaesthesia will perform at Pearl Street Nightclub in Northampton. Having played at the 1994 UMass Spring Concert, the band moves to the most well–known venue in the Valley. With some opening tunage by Meristem, the show will start at 9 p.m., and is open to all 18+ fans. Tickets are $5 at the door, call 584–7771 for more information.

Winona Ryder, Ethan Hawke and Ben Stiller make their debut at Mount Holyoke College tonight in Reality Bites, a flick that will make waves at the free "Big Surf Drive–In" happening tonight. Sponsored by Something Every Friday Night, this movie tells the story of modern–day twenty– somethings mapping out plans for their futures. Be at the Skinner Green (or in Mary Woolley Hall's Chapin Auditorium if it rains) at 9 p.m. And yes, it is free.

More film, anyone? Amherst College will show the 1973 Scorsese masterpiece Mean Streets in the Campus Center Theater. Starring Robert DeNiro, this is a story of a small– time hood, his irresponsible friend and their knockabout cronies in New York City's Little Italy. Only $1.75 will get you into the 7:30 p.m. show, or catch the one at 10 p.m. for the same bargain price.

Finally, you film–goers can get your fill of Anthony Hopkins and Emma Thompson as they star in The Remains of the Day, a touching tale of unrequited love. Mount Holyoke College's Gamble Auditorium is the place to be at 7 p.m. and then again at 9:30 p.m. Presented by the Mount Holyoke College Film Society, the viewing is yours for $2.50.

Sept. 17: For a display of culture via dance, don't miss the Boston–based Chinese Dance Troupe Performance happening at Amherst College's Buckley Recital Hall. Traditional Chinese dances and demonstrations of Chinese instruments will begin at 7:30 p.m., admission is free.

A Fish Called Wanda will be shown in Mount Holyoke College's Gamble Auditorium tonight at 7 p.m. and 9:15 p.m. Starring Kevin Kline and Jamie Lee Curtis, this comedy about murder, sex and seafood will have you rolling in the aisles for only $2.50.

Also at Mount Holyoke College will be a Wild Video Dance Party. This free jam and prime boogie opportunity begins at 10 p.m.

Sept. 18: Amherst College hosts blues master and guitar great John Hammond, who will perform works from his new and second album, Trouble No More, a collection of rawboned guitar riffs and emotionally charged vocals. Special guest Mark Nomad will join Hammond for this 8 p.m. show in the Campus Center Frontroom. Tickets are $2 for AC students and $7 for the general public.

The Massachusetts Wind Orchestra will take the stage under the direction of founder and UMass professor Malcolm W. Rowell Jr. at 3 p.m. in Smith College's John M. Greene Hall. The performance will feature Paul Hindemith's "Symphony in Bb" and include music by Percy Grainer, Syler, Ticheli, Benson and Prokofiev. The wind orchestra is 140 members strong, comprised of music educators and freelance musicians who live and work throughout New England, New York, New Jersey and Maryland. Donations are appreciated for admission.

There you have it, folks — the highlights of this week's Valley offerings of art and entertainment. These events are just the tip of the iceberg regarding the plethora of concerts, exhibits, films and shows that typically light up the local area. Be on the watch for more upcoming events throughout the semester, and remember to look for them first in these pages.

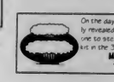
Until then, good luck unpacking!

COURTESY VIRGIN RECORDS

John Hammond

COURTESY COLUMBIA PICTURES

In the mood for a little British repression? The Remains of the Day is one of the many flicks featured this week.



On the day of the apocalypse Gail Finney revealed to Bridget that she was the one to steal her "Mrs. Pretty" make-up kit in the 3rd grade.
Mass Daily Collegian
"Make Amherst Now"

Geez.. working for the Collegian has been the best thing I've done in my four years here at UMASS. The 2nd best activity was yodelling till five a.m. with the Chancellor. TYP!!!!

"You know Brad, you've done a remarkable job on this project... really remarkable... Yes, I'm very pleased with your progress... How'd you like to meet me at the Collegian after work for cocktails?... "Um... sure Andy... why not?"

Get involved with the Student Health Advisory Board
- Sponsor health projects
- Represent student health concerns
- Review UHS Budget
- Serve on UHS Search Committees
- Meet other students interested in health care

Call 549-2671 ext. 181
Ask about "SHAB"

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycles
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

MODRIAN
197 N. Pleasant St
Amherst • 256-3121

Bob Dylan

Amherst College Presents...
BOB DYLAN
Sunday, October 2
8 p.m.
in
LeFrak Gymnasium
Tickets available at Amherst College Campus Center, For The Record in Amherst and Northampton Box Office 586-8686
For More Information, please call 542-5773
$21 public tickets on sale 9/12, general admission

FINE YARNS & NEEDLEWORK SUPPLIES
the Creative Needle
COME IN AND BROWSE
Welcome Class of 1998
- wool, blends, acrylic yarns
- over 300 knitting/crochet pattern books
- over 350 needlework pattern books
- needlework kits & supplies

The Carriage Shop
233 N. Pleasant St., Amherst, MA 01002
413-549-6106

OASIS
TOOLS FOR TRANSFORMATION
Books, Crystals, Clothes, Jewelry, Music, Incense, Candles, Journals, Gifts, Tapestries... Light, Peace, Harmony
10% DISCOUNT With This Ad
63 Main Street, Amherst • 256-4995
(Down up from the Black Sheep Cafe)

PEER GROUP SUPPORT FACILITATOR FOR AN EATING DISORDERS GROUP
If you have recovered from an eating disorder, anorexia or bulimia, and are interested in conducting a support group Mondays, 4:30-6:00, please write to Arleen Thomson, RD, University Health Services, or call 549-2671 x 181.

◆ Summer film

continued from page 1

that difference.

But why does everyone love him? I'm still not sure. Maybe it's because for many people, an I.Q. of 75 is something to strive for. Stupid is as stupid does, indeed.

The Lion King

At the theater where I first saw The Lion King, those shrewd folks from Disney had managed to set up in the lobby a complete Lion King Lollapalooza. Replete with overpriced stuffed animals, soundtracks, books, stock options and more, Disney was ready to pounce on unsuspecting parents and glassy-eyed kids.

Even amid all that shameless marketing and greedy cross- promotion, however, you've really got to hand it to Disney. Again they manage to create yet another animated classic that clawed among the considerable, all-consuming hype and assumed an aura all its own.

To be honest, I didn't have the same glowing, warm-hearted reaction to The Little Mermaid, Beauty and the Beast and Aladdin that I had with The Lion King. While entertaining to be sure, I always managed to keep those movies at a film critic's arm's length. Not so with The Lion King, which offered up the most entertaining, emotionally rich movie experience I've had in quite a while.

The Lion King hooks the viewer in instantly with its truly sublime imagery. The animals journey through the glorious Technicolor African prairie to a surprisingly phallic Pride's Rock, cute Simba is raised to the sun, the Elton John (!) music swells, then boom — The Lion King! Is there a more ebullient, exhilarating moment in recent summer movie memory?

The film never totally recaptures that singular moment of movie-going epiphany, but it's not for lack of trying. The Lion King works because it's relentlessly thought out — one wishes other filmmakers and studios would invest at least half as much time in their projects as Disney spends on its animated features. (Including Disney on their low-rent, non- animated films.) There's an emotional investment in the characters that shines through on the screen. It's what makes Disney characters so potent and so memorable so quickly.

The characters fall down strict good/evil lines, but not at the expense of dimension. The best is Mufasa, who's strikingly voiced by James Earl Jones. When he perishes at the hand of his brother Scar, it's more than a Bambi redux — it's a genuinely affecting, all-powerful movie moment.

And when, minutes later, the audience is roaring again with laughter at Timmon and Pumba's antics, it's a remarkable feat of emotional sleight of hand.

As voiced by Jeremy Irons, the nefarious Scar is the meanest, most blood-curdling Disney evildoer since Maleficent, the wrathful villainess who more than lived up to her name in Sleeping Beauty. When Scar tells Simba his "surprise" is "to die for," there's real threat and genuine terror. Flanked by dastardly hyenas, (which, to be fair, do come too close to racial stereotypes), Scar proves an old theory by Alfred Hitchcock: the better the villain, the better the movie.

While this review may stretch the bounds of acceptable hyperbole, let it be known that The Lion King is not perfect. The songs, eeked out by Tim Rice and pop-meister Elton John, are a bit weak. Except for the raucous "Can't Wait to Be King" and the instantly hummable "Hakuna Matada," the tunes are merely passable. Also, Disney still hasn't figured a way to make their pop versions of their musical numbers more than lukewarm elevator music.

Finally, the female characterizations in The Lion King do leave a bit to be desired. It's never a question that the film is a boy's tale; however, it is a proverbial jungle out there.

But these sins are forgivable, especially when one is dealing with the level of mythmaking going on in The Lion King. It's the merging of Disney old and new, a fresh kind of pop-primalism ready made for the cynic-weary Nineties. In the end, it's the stuff fairy tales are made of.

True Lies

There are many things that scream blockbuster in True Lies. First of all, it has Arnold Schwarzenegger trying once again to mix comedy and action, tons of pricey special effects and a jokey sidekick ripe with one-liners. But most importantly, it's got the top action director, James Cameron, the man who gave us both Terminators, The Abyss and Aliens.

So why, then, is True Lies a mess? Why is it an erratic jumble of suspenseless action sequences, tepid comedy and misogynistic subplots?

The film pushes the boundaries of suspension of disbelief. It's so big and fumbling, so unsure of its tone, pacing or even its point. While many people were on the edge of their seats, I was scratching my head with one question after another, like why is this movie so bad?

The film begins promisingly enough with Arnold escaping from a snowy villa a la James Bond. He returns home that night, safe in his cover as a boring computer salesmen to his restless wife (Jamie Lee Curtis) and neglected daughter. So far, so good. There's a cleverly comic chase up next, as Arnold pursues nasty villain Aziz on a horse through downtown Los Angeles and tangos with a shady femme fatale (Tia Carerre).

Then all of a sudden. . .the film screeches to a halt. With all the subtlety of a freight train, Cameron lurches into the film's problematic subplot. You see, Arnold thinks his wife is having an affair with a slimy used-car salesman (Bill Paxton) who — chuckle, chuckle — is posing as a spy.

Asserting his role as the last pathologically insecure action hero, Arnold then anonymously kidnaps Curtis and interrogates her to the point of tears and rage.

This is summer entertainment?

Upon finding out that all she wants is some adventure, Arnold playfully blackmails Curtis into accepting a fake mission: get sexy, pose as a prostitute and perform a strip tease for a strange figure (chuckle, chuckle — it's really Arnold!)

This is funny? Beyond the fact that this sequence is almost sadistically hostile towards women, it also manages to stop the movie cold for over a half an hour. Where, exactly, does the plot go? What's the villain's name again? Are they making this up as they go along?

ASSOCIATED PRESS

True Lies co-star Jamie Lee Curtis

After fast-forwarding through a few explosions and B-movie intrigue, True Lies then stumbles to its dual conclusions. Following Arnold's rescue of Curtis from a nasty cat fight with Carerre (and some ei-cheapo rear projection — this is one of the most expensive movies ever made?), he attempts to save his daughter from Aziz in nothing less than a Harrier jet.

Wait. . . he had a daughter? Oh, you mean that girl who had all of five lines at the beginning of the movie? I'm supposed to care that this girl is hanging off a skyscraper when I can't even remember her name? Jeesh.

True Lies is like a flashy car: all show and no go, as my grandfather used to say. At two and a half hours, it's a surprisingly uninvolving night at the movies, hardly funny and not very exciting. There's none of the wiry, on-the-edge tension Cameron is best at. Even Arnold seems lost in the pyrotechnics. And when Arnold's considerable ego is hard to find, you know it's time to say hasta la vista, baby.

Summer Movie Scorecard:

The Good: Speed delivered top-notch action thrills despite the fact that the bus had more personality than Keanu Reeves.

Clear and Present Danger wove a complex plot around a truly stellar lead performance by Harrison Ford. Nobody does it better.

The Okay: It Could Happen To You was an old-fashioned romance about really nice people that almost wore out its welcome. Also, someone tell Rosie Perez to please calm down or she's going to have to be put to sleep.

The Flintstones was fine for kids, but the question still remains: It took 32 writers to come up with puns like RocDonalds?

The Bad: Wyatt Earp was so long that I thought director Lawrence Kasdan was telling the life story of the legendary lawman in actual time.

In Maverick, actors Mel Gibson, Jodie Foster and James Garner reportedly made up the film as it went along. It shows.

Blown Away featured hysterical acting, a boring, routine revenge plot and generally made no sense. And those were its good points.

COLLEGIAN

Fresh off the grill, all day long

Back to School: The Bottom Line

Le Boudoir
Fine Lingerie

Very special daywear & sleepwear
Mon - Sat 10-6, Sun 12-5
Carriage Shops
233 N. Pleasant St., Amherst, MA
549-6915

WFSB PRESENTS

Major In Fun
with the CBS College Tour!

Play games based on your favorite CBS Shows!

NORTHERN EXPOSURE
MURPHY BROWN
THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS
THE PRICE IS RIGHT
CBS SPORTS

IT'S FUN! CBS COLLEGE TOUR IT'S FREE!

Win Hourly Prizes
The excitement builds with hourly drawings awarding cool CBS College Tour stuff!

Enter Our Sweepstakes & WIN!*
Register at our Information Center for your chance to win:

Grand Prize (1) - 12 Day Switzerland Bicycle Tour for Two
Courtesy Of CBT Bicycle Tours Europe

First Prize (50) - Late Show with David Letterman Sweatshirts

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS
Library Lawn Pond
September 15, 11a.m. - 5p.m.
September 16, 10a.m. - 4p.m.

SPONSORED BY:
Division of Student Activities

©1994 CBS Inc. All Rights Reserved. *No Purchase Necessary. Sweepstakes ends 5/3/95.

Advil AT&T Walt Disney Touchstone Pictures Hollywood Pictures L'OREAL MasterCard Ford SUBWAY Trident

◆ Black Hole Summer

continued from page 1

evenings.

So what does this jumbled mess add up to? Look no further than the most hyped concert event since the mid-eighties tear-jerker event Live Aid: Woodstock '94.

Yes three days of peace, love, and profit, as 350,000 people (give or a take a few thousand) converged on some muddy ground to witness an eclectic gathering of bands that ranged from original Woodstocker's like Crosby, Stills, and Nash to such ninetiesweirdo's as Primus and Cypress Hill.

This definitely, as advertised, was the concert of the decade, but it was hard not to notice that every time you saw a Woodstock '94 logo it was accompanied by a handsome Pepsi logo (hey come on kids, be young, have fun...).

Yes, the sequel to the original Woodstock was at best commercial and had very little to do with what the concert way back in 1969 stood for, but doesn't it seem a bit appropriate for today's fast food culture?

Basically the concert was a microcosm for everything we love in the music world packaged nicely for our convenience.

Veteran rockers, young thrashers, and hip-hoppers all thrown into a big musical blender and shot out with a glossy MTV shine.

But what else can we expect? In a media drenched age where as a generation we are instructed to sit back and enjoy the summer at the MTV beach house (don't worry, don't go out, the party is right here), it is easy for things to be exploited.

What else can we do but sit back and enjoy the ride?

In the end Summer 1994 can be remembered, if for nothing else, as the season where everything finally came together.

Alternative and rap were finally accepted open arms into the mainstream rock n'roll community, while bands like once metal kings Motley Crue canceled most of their summer tour due to lack of interest.

Indeed the times they are a changin', and despite the industry's tendency to try to cash in on the newest trends, they seem to be changing for the better.

Keep your fingers crossed and your wallets open.

COURTESY MARK SELIGSON & MCRECORDS

On the strength of a hit album, Superunkown, a hit song, "Black Hole Sun," and a hit video, Soundgarden left the realm of "alternative" and broke into the mainstream. The question remains: is this a good thing or a bad thing?

◆ hits & misses

continued from page 1

atmosphere. You can never be bored an Covent Gardens in London for the same reason.

Miss: The movie Andre. Pure cheese, from sappy pet tricks to the annoying song that plays over the credits. Also, The Color of Night. It's so cheesy you should bring crackers.

• Andrew Davidson, production manager

Hit: Budapest and Prague – traveling through the old country was an experience, but crossing the old Iron Curtain was thoroughly eye-opening. Prague was easily the most beautiful city I've ever seen, but Budapest was somehow more enjoyable – not quite as ravaged by tourists, lower prices, friendlier people. I paid a mere $2 to see the Hungarian National Ballet perform Taming of the Shrew.

Miss: Germany. Didn't even stop, except to change trains. The people were very unfriendly.

• Marni E. Heither, editorial production manager

Hit: Driving from New Jersey to Wyoming in four days, the flight back, and good, cheap, lawn seats for The Eagles at Great Woods. Seeing Forrest Gump a first, and then a second time.

Miss: Being stuck in Amherst for every other day of the summer. Seeing Forrest Gump a third time.

• Tracy Monahan, editorial editor

Hit: The sports science exhibit at the Boston Museum of Science. Five-year-old kids could hit fastballs harder than me.

Miss: Having Jimmy Buffet hose his fans by not selling tickets on the day of the concert. It sounded good from the parking lot, though.

• Caleb Cochran, editorial associate editor

Hit: The Beastie Boys at Lollapalooza. I even came home with Adrock's hat.

Miss: The Crow soundrack. Way overrated.

• Matt Vautour, sports editor

Hit: Eagles at Foxboro. I would've paid the $80 all over again.

Miss: Summer movie sequels, especially City Slickers II and Beverly Hills Cop 3.

• Andrew Bryce, sports editor

Hit: Jurassic Park. If you're trying to figure out why this 1993 hit made it on the 1994 hit list, I saw it at a second-run theater for 99 cents. Money well spent.

Miss: Missing just about every hit of the summer because I refused to take out the mortgage on the home to see a movie.

Legends of the Fall

Hoping to live up to its name, Henry Thomas, Brad Pitt, Aidan Quinn and Anthony Hopkins (not pictured) star in the frontier family drama Legends of the Fall.

◆ summer reviews

continued from page 5

decidedly uncommercial) while continually reinventing himself all the while.

After 1992's light 'n' easy folk exercise Harvest Moon, it was inevitable that Young would drop the acoustic guitar and plug the amps back in.

With his latest release, Sleeps With Angels, Young has re- teamed with his infamous as well as noise-raising back-up band, Crazy Horse. And while the group's last effort together — Ragged Glory — was a crash and burn collage of guitars and feedback, this time around the boys restrain themselves a bit. In the process they created an album full of tension-filled numbers that lumber on at mid-tempo, threatening to explode at any given minute. Sound boring? It isn't. With Sleeps With Angels, Young may have made the masterpiece he has been teasing us with since Freedom.

Young cleverly has combined the dripping imagery of his softer releases and combined it with the harsh guitar overtones of his previous Crazy Horse efforts. The result is an album brimming with dark, ominous overtones and mind blowing guitar work.

Tracks such as "Safeway Cart" and "Drive-by," as their names suggest, handle some pretty dark topics with a conviction not seen since Young's milestone album Tonight's The Night, the album's closest kin. Young, in a display of true guts, even pays homage to the late '70s masterpiece by reviving the epic guitar solo with the achingly beautiful 14-minute track "Change Your Mind."

With Sleeps With Angels Neil Young has proved once again that growing old does not necessarily mean being afraid to change and develop. By refusing to ignore current music trends but not allowing himself to be bogged down by them, Young has proved finally what he has been threatening to be for years. A true musical genius. A-

"I couldn't find a decent job while I was at school. So I collected all my prize possessions and had a tag sale, but it rained and no one showed. So I took out some classified ads in the Collegian and now I don't know what to do with all this money. The Collegian helped me it can do the same for you.

Collegian Classifieds 545-3500

Eating Disorder Programs • 1994/95
Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Treatment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.

Friends and Family Group
Single session for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Mondays (except holidays) 4:30-6:00 p.m. Campus Center Room Number posted by elevator.

Peer Health Connections
A confidential phoneline for help around eating disorders - yourself or someone you know. 549-2671, ext. 168.

Hey man! Did you write that stuff? You should write for Arts & Living! Go see Jon Lupo at the Collegian.

LSAT +7.5
GMAT +72
GRE +214
MCAT +6

Small Classes, Documented Highest Results, Guaranteed.

413 584-6849

Course Sites:
Mt. Holyoke College, Smith College, Williams College, MCAT - Umass.

THE PRINCETON REVIEW
We Score More

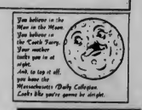
ETS and Princeton University are not affiliated with The Princeton Review

Where'd you get those shoes?

Leather
$19.98
Values of $40 - $60
Leather Boots and Workboots priced separately.

PARADE OF SHOES

180 North King Street
Northampton, MA



You believe in the Man in the Moon. You believe in the Earth Turns. Your mother really gets in at night. Ask in top of all you have the Massachusetts Daily Collegian. Look like you're gonna be alright.

Pearl Street

THURSDAY
18+ Dance Party
Hosted by WHMP's Nick Danger
The Area's Biggest Dance Party, Music by Spin, Inc.

Downstairs /18+/
Underground at Pearl Street
INSOMNIA
Alternative Dance Music w/DJ's
J. Wilson & J. Schwartz

FRIDAY
RETRO NIGHT
Dance Music from the Late 70's & Early 80's w/ DJ Denis
9:00pm - 1:00am
Free Admission With This Ad
• Duran Duran, Wham!, Missing Persons, Rick James, Blondie, Human League, Funkadelic •

SATURDAY
SATURDAY NIGHT DANCE PARTY
with DJ Lance playing club/Top-40 Dance Music

WEDNESDAY
GAY NIGHT
Music by Spin, Inc.
Wed., Sept. 14 - Hosted by The Valley Gay Men's Calendar

Live Music
Fri., Sept. 16 - 9:00pm/18+/
UMASS Back to School Party
SYNAESTHESIA
Meristem
Sat., Sept. 17 - 7:30pm/All ages
NAPALM DEALTH
OBITUARY
Machine Head
Sun., Sept. 18 - 8:00pm/18+/WRSI
VIGILANTES OF LOVE
VELVET CRUSH
Rosemary Caine
Fri., Sept. 23 - 9:00pm/18+/
Pink Floyd Tribute
THE MACHINE
Sun., Sept. 25 - 8:00pm
Special Club Appearance
CHEAP TRICK
Tues., Sept. 27 - 8:00pm/18+/
Free Show!
LEFTOVER SALMON
YEP!
Fri., Sept. 30 - 8:30pm/18+/
CHUCKLEHEAD
Knuckle Sandwich
Sat., Oct. 1 - 9:00pm
ZOO STATION
Mon., Oct. 3 - 8:00pm/18+/
SKA Festival -
THE SPECIALS
Let's Go Bowling/SMA
Tues., Oct. 4 - 7:30pm/All Ages/
OVERKILL
Pro-Pain
Thurs., Oct. 6 - 9:00pm/18+/
MAGGIE ESTEP
Sun., Oct. 9 - 7:30pm
SAVATAGE
Stuttering John
Tues., Oct. 11 - 8:00pm/18+/
DAVE MATTHEWS BAND
Thurs., Oct. 13 - 7:00pm/18+/
LUCIOUS JACKSON

Tickets available at Pearl Street, Strawberries, Tix Unlimited, Northampton. Box Office: 586-8686, For The Record in Amherst 10 Pearl Street Northampton 584-7771

YOU CAN MAKE A DIFFERENCE

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is accepting applications for the following paid positions:

Black Affairs Editor
Developing Nations Editor
Women's Issues Editor

Editors will be responsible for recruiting staff, organizing coverage of their communities and bringing issues of concern to the pages of the Collegian, the largest college daily newspaper in New England.

For more information and an application, contact Managing Editor Arthur Stapleton Jr. by calling 545-0719 or stopping by the Collegian offices, 113 Campus Center Basement. Applications are due Friday, Sept. 23.

The Collegian is an Equal Opportunity Employer

Anastasia mystery possibly resolved

MOSCOW (AP) – Bolsheviks killed Czar Nicholas II's youngest daughter when they executed the royal family in 1918, a Russian government panel has concluded.

Princess Anastasia's fate had been a subject of speculation for more than 75 years. Some claimed she survived the assassinations and escaped abroad.

In a report released Tuesday, the Russian panel said the combined findings of British and Russian scientists showed "definite proof" that one of the skeletons found in a pit outside Yekaterinburg in 1991 belonged to Anastasia.

British experts determined last year that the bones were those of the czar, his wife and three of his five children.

The royal couple had four daughters and a son. British experts said the remains they examined belonged to three of the daughters, but it was not possible to tell which three.

"Our tests could not prove who they were, just that they were three of the girls," said Alison Streeton, a spokeswoman for the British government's Forensic Science Service in London.

Streeton said she could not comment on the conclusions reached by the Russians. The British finished their work in August 1993 and did not take part in subsequent research by the Russian commission.

British scientists are working on their own study based on DNA extracted from the bones, and say conclusive results will not be available for at least several weeks.

Authorities still have not found the remains of Anastasia's brother, Alexei, or sister, Maria, according to the Russian panel's report.

The British also identified the remains of the czar's doctor, valet, cook and maid. They and the members of the royal family were herded into a basement and killed by a Bolshevik firing squad in July 1918.

Interest in the case has increased in connection with Queen Elizabeth II's visit to Russia next month. While some had hoped she could attend the reburial of the royal family in St. Petersburg, the commission said this was unlikely.

Burial is premature "until complete investigation of all records abroad and receipt of materials of independent foreign studies," the commission said.

Geez,.. working for the Collegian has been the best thing I've done in my four years here at UMASS. The 2nd best activity was yodelling till five a.m. with the Chancellor. YEE!!!

SUICIDAL?
LAY IT ON THE LINE.
617-247-0220
The Samaritans
HELPING THE SUICIDAL AND DESPAIRING 24 HOURS A DAY, 7 DAYS A WEEK

"Dedicated to treating the cause not the symptom."
Amherst Chiropractic Family Health Center
Dr. Virginia D. Harper Chiropractic Physician
Rt.116 South, take a left on to Pomeroy Lane (after Dairy Mart). Once on Pomeroy, take a right on to Cariage Lane (#64).
By Appontment Only
256-6700
Present this coupon for free consultation
Good thru 10-31-94

CALL OPTICIANS
256-6375 • 253-7002
PRESCRIPTIONS ACCURATELY FILLED
HEARING AIDS • EVERTHING OPTICAL
SERENGETI • BOLLÉ • RAY BAN
Amherst's First Optician
EMERGENCY SERVICE • PARKING AVAILABLE
HANDICAP ACCESSIBLE
MON-SAT 9:00 to 5:30 178 NORTH PLEASANT SINCE 1960

Bike Sale.

Threshold	239.95	was 259.95
Switchback	269.95	was 299.95
Sycamore	319.95	was 349.95
Willtopper	369.95	was 399.95
Alta	435.95	was 475.00
Rockadille	489.95	was 525.00

Shock Sale.
Rock Shock Mag 21 Installation — Now $299 only $15 — was $379 was $25
Lock Sale.
Kryptonite Locks starting at $29.95
KRYPTONITE
Bicycle World Too
Our Only Business is Bikes
Amherst 253-7722 • 63 South Pleasant St. (rear) • Behind Bertucci's • Greenfield 774-3701

FOR 26 WAYS to help save the EARTH CALL 1-800-488-8887.

AT FACES WE CARRY GOOD QUALITY STUFF FOR YOU TO PUT ON YOUR BODY, OR TO PUT IN YOUR HOME, AT PRICES THAT SEEM FAIR (Y'KNOW – WORTH IT).
EVERYTHING WE SELL IS OF GOOD QUALITY... GOOD ENOUGH FOR US TO SAY, "LIKE IT, OR YOUR MONEY BACK." WE PUT ALL THIS IN A PRETTY, FRIENDLY ATMOSPHERE IN OUR STORE IN NORTHAMPTON.
GET BACK TO IT.
MORE LAMPS $9.95
$69.95
MORE BOOKCASES $34.95
MORE CHAIRS
MORE TABLES $24.95
FROM $7.96
MORE RUGS
MORE BEDSPREADS
MORE POSTERS
FROM $3.50
FROM $9.95
Faces
OPEN 7 DAYS
MAIN STREET ~ NORTHAMPTON

It's Back to School Time
10% off with Student I.D.
Not valid with other discounts
Does not apply to oil changes
Discount valid only at time of purchase
offer expires 10/16/94
Free Midas Snuttle to Campus
MIDAS
MUFFLERS BRAKES SHOCKS STRUTS
COMPUTERIZED ALIGNMENT
RTE. 9/HADLEY
586-9991
Near Hampshire Mall

People in the news: Reynolds, Leno & Rod Stewart

NEW YORK (AP) — After three failed marriages, Debbie Reynolds is devoted to a new love — her fans.

"This is my love. This is my kiss. This is my husband," said Reynolds, in the October issue of Vanity Fair. "Look at the love they give me. They believe in me enough to know I'm going to give them a show that's going to make them happy."

These days, the show is at the Debbie Reynolds Hotel-Casino — the former Paddlewheel Hotel, an out-of-the-way stop in Las Vegas. Her 1992 purchase of the hotel contributed to her split with husband No. 3, Richard Hamlett.

"It all became focused on the hotel and the rooms and the parking structure. So I saved my property and lost my marriage," said the 62-year-old Reynolds, who was previously wed to singer Eddie Fisher and shoe mogul Harry Karl.

Today, she's not in the market for No. 4.

"I don't think people want to know Mary Frances Reynolds," said the star of "The Unsinkable Molly Brown." "They only want to marry Debbie Reynolds. So I think I have to get over this dream of someone to love Mary Frances."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Merle Haggard, who spent three years in prison before going on to stardom singing about blue-collar life, will be inducted into the Country Music Hall of Fame next month. The Country Music Association said Tuesday that the 57-year-old Haggard will be inducted during its Oct. 5 awards show on CBS.

Haggard served time in San Quentin Prison for burglarizing a cafe during a drunken spree. He was paroled at 22.

He has recorded for more than 30 years, singing blue-collar anthems like "Okie From Muskogee." A guitarist, fiddler and songwriter, he has recorded approximately 70 albums and has had about 40 No. 1 records.

Haggard will become the 57th member of the hall of fame.

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — The U.S. champion Little League team showed it can hit, run and chat during an appearance on "The Tonight Show" with Jay Leno.

"Have any shaving deals yet?" Leno wisecracked as the 14 teammates, wearing their white uniforms, made their late-night debut Monday.

The team — whose members live in or around Northridge, the epicenter of the Jan. 17 Los Angeles quake — lost the Little League World Series to Venezuela on Aug. 27.

During the taping at NBC, Leno had the players line up to hit a foam ball with a plastic bat before he stopped pitching, explaining, "I think I threw my arm out."

Los Angeles Dodgers pitcher Orel Hershiser then took over. Gregg Waiiis, the Northridge team's third baseman, hit Hershiser's first pitch toward the studio audience.

"I can hit him here, so why not at Dodger Stadium?" he said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Rocker Rod Stewart and his wife, model Rachel Hunter, are proud parents again. This time it's a boy.

Liam McAllister Stewart — 7 pounds, 14 ounces — was born Monday at a London hospital, said Stewart's spokesman Paul Freundlich. Stewart, 49, took time off from working on a new album to await the birth of his son.

Stewart and Hunter have been married four years. They have a 2 1/2-year-old daughter.

Hunter plans to remain in the hospital for a few days before beginning work on a new exercise and nutrition video.

The bloody Martian Space Patrol did not take kindly to young folks... That's why it was no surprise when little Max, Brad, and tiny tot Andrew were thrown in the Intergalactic Slime Pen. "Why is it always the good ones that suffer?" whined Andy. "Shaddup!" replied Maximillian and Brad. Andy ignored the older boys, as he scavenged another twist-tie. He had plans. BIG plans. He didn't plan on sticking around.
Collegian
"Just another brother on intergalactic lockdown."

Reach for the Power TEACH
Ad Council — A Public Service of This Publication
Reach for the Power TEACH

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycles
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

Council Travel
LONDON FRANKFURT PARIS SYDNEY TOKYO AMSTERDAM AUCKLAND HONG KONG CHEAPEST FARES TO:
•EUROPE •ASIA •AUSTRALIA/ NEW ZEALAND
Plus rail passes, International student ID, tours & much more.
Ask for our FREE travel catalog!
79 South Pleasant St. AMHERST (413) 256-1261

PEER HEALTH
Sex
STDs
Alcohol
HIV AIDS
Eating Disorders
Drugs
CONNECTIONS
Call with concerns and questions.
Get information and referrals.
549-2671 x168
Sponsored by UHS / Health Ed Division

"Simplify, simplify."
Henry David Thoreau

"Hey, that's not a bad idea."
AT&T

AT&T Universal MasterCard.
The credit, cash and calling card. All in one.
The AT&T Universal MasterCard. No annual fee—ever. Access to cash at over 350,000 locations. Plus an AT&T calling card. Because life should be contemplated. Not complicated.
Call 1 800 438-8627 to request an application.
Look for FREE STUFF at the AT&T Universal MasterCard Table
AT&T

© 1994 Corbis (South Dakota) N.A.

HOW TO SAVE A FEW BUCKS.

(YOU CAN'T LIVE OFF PSYCH EXPERIMENTS ALONE.)

- Buy pizza at closing time.
  Haggle for slices they'd otherwise just throw away.
- Eat Ramen noodles.
- Make friends with a Senior.
  Come June, they'll be more than glad to give you their old Poly Sci books and couches.
- Donate blood.
  Save a life and get a free lunch to boot.
- Pick up a Citibank Classic card.
  There's no annual fee.

WE'RE LOOKING OUT FOR YOU.℠
To apply, call 1-800-CITIBANK.

Apply for the Citibank Classic card by completing the application in this issue or by calling 1- 800 - CITIBANK

Options exist for GLB students at UM

By Stephen C. Campbell
Collegian Staff

The college years are notorious as a period of change, a time for making decisions — decisions that define you as an individual.

Coming out as a gay, bisexual, lesbian or transgendered individual is a difficult decision to make, but there are places to go if you need help.

For those who are already out, there are a number of organizations on campus providing opportunities to meet new people, unwind and learn more about yourself.

They also provide information if you are questioning your sexual orientation or want to get involved in gay, lesbian and bisexual issues.

The Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual Alliance (LBGA) is located on the top floor of the Student Union in 413B, behind the Alliance for Student Power office.

A registered student organization, the LBGA provides a safe space for gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgendered (GLBT) students.

Here you can relax between classes, meet new people and sometimes get homework done. The LBGA also sponsors discussion groups including the Lesbian Bisexual Women's Union and the Bi Rap Group and holds weekly info-socials.

The Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Concerns is housed in Crampton House in Southwest Residential Area.

The program has collected a library of over 1,500 volumes available to anyone in the Five College community for projects, papers, national resources and simply enjoyable reading.

The Program for GLB Concerns organizes the Speakers Bureau which provides panels of speakers to classes, dorms, student organizations in the Five College area, and any other organization which makes a request.

Speakers are lesbian, bisexual and gay individuals as well as heterosexual allies who speak about their own experiences and answer questions from the audience.

The relaxed atmosphere allows people to ask questions about gay, lesbian and bisexual culture and experience that they would not normally have the opportunity to ask.

The bureau also focuses on dismissing common stereotypes, myths and misinformation about gays, lesbians and bisexuals.

Another program is the weekly Brown Bag Lunch series, featuring seminars on a variety of gay studies topics that can be taken for credit.

A monthly GLB Cafe series featuring comedy, music, poetry and theater by local and national performers is also scheduled.

If you experience discrimination or harassment on campus, the Concerns Office offers support and referral services and maintains a record of homophobic incidents.

If you're looking for a place to live during these changes in your life, you can try the Two in Twenty Floor.

Located in Mary Lyon Residence Hall in the Northeast Residential Area, the floor offers GLBT students and allies a supportive and productive living environment.

For additional information you can read BLATANT, a monthly newsletter published by the Concerns Office, or call their 24-hour voice mail line, 54-LAMDA (545-2632), which lists information on counseling, local business, health issues and Five College groups.

PLANNING TO OBSERVE YOM KIPPUR?

MAKE SURE TO NOTIFY INSTRUCTORS WELL IN ADVANCE
if you will miss classes. If you experience any difficulties, please contact the department head or call the Ombuds Office at 545-0867

Smoking ban hits town of Amherst

By Ben Geman
Collegian Staff

The Amherst Health Department has instituted a comprehensive smoking ban in Amherst work places in an effort to spare residents from health problems linked to passive inhalation of tobacco smoke.

The ban, which went into effect Sept. 1, prohibits smoking in all enclosed places of employment, although bars will be exempt from the new regulations until next July.

Members of the health department announced their decision to curtail smoking in Amherst at a March 30 Amherst Select Board meeting. They moved ahead with the current regulations after an April 13 public hearing showed support for a ban.

The department is also using money awarded by the state to fund anti-smoking educational programs for Amherst youths as part of its push to decrease smoking in the area (see sidebar).

Tobacco smoke, inhaled directly or passively, is linked to lung cancer, heart disease and the inflammation of respiratory disorders. The Surgeon General classifies cigarette smoke as a carcinogen.

Joins Northampton in ban

The Northampton Board of Health has also taken steps to limit the number of areas where smoking is allowed. As of Sept. 1, smoking in Northampton was banned in public areas such as libraries and common areas of shared housing.

Cigarette vending machines and the advertising of tobacco products on public transportation are also prohibited.

Smoking in Northampton restaurants will be prohibited as of November, and the city is still considering banning smoking in its bars.

The new regulations in Northampton come as a relief to members of the Amherst business community who feared ban in only Amherst would drive restaurant clientele into Northampton establishments.

"In order for it to work, everyone's got to do it. That's the bottom line," Dian Mandle, director of the Amherst Area Chamber of Commerce. "I'm not worried. I think everyone's coming on board.

"We were in favor of it as long as everyone else did it. We'd like to see Springfield and other small towns jump on too."

While the Amherst Health Department considered the potential effect on eateries the ban might have, department member Epi Bodhi said she believes the new regulations won't damage area businesses and may attract customers.

"It can go both ways. We're hoping people will seek out the smoke-free restaurants," said Bodhi.

The reaction of restaurant owners and managers to the ban has been mixed.

"Even on a weekend, with a line down to the door, the smoking room would be empty," said Judie Teraspulsky, owner of the popular downtown Amherst restaurant Judie's.

Teraspulsky began experimenting with a completely smoke-free restaurant three months ago by prohibiting smoking in Judie's if the first customer seated in the smoking section preferred a smokeless environment.

"In the three months, I only got one person who was so pissed off that they left," said Teraspulsky. "One customer already told me they came from Northampton to Amherst because they don't like the smoke."

When is a bar not a bar?

Jerry Jolly, manager of Rafters sports bar and the Pub and Seasons restaurants, said business hasn't suffered noticeably because of the ban but he's worried about the other area bars because it is classified as a restaurant and consequently is smoke-free.

Establishments earning 60 percent or more of their revenue from alcohol sales are considered bars by the health department.

While the Pub doesn't fall into that category, most of its business after 9:30 p.m. comes from alcohol sales. Jolly is planning to appeal to the board for an exemption allowing smoking at the Pub after 9:30 p.m. until all Amherst bars become smoke-free in July.

"I think it's a little unusual. I feel I'm going to be at a competitive disadvantage if the bars attracting students are smoking and the Pub is non-smoking," said Jolly. "I'd like to see a level playing field."

Violators of the new regulations face fines between $20 and $60 if caught allowing smoking in restricted areas.

Amherst youth targeted by anti-smoking campaign

By Ben Geman
Collegian Staff

Amherst's ban on smoking in places of employment, instituted Sept. 1 by the Amherst Health Department, is only part of the department's push to decrease smoking in the area.

The department has also embarked on a state-funded effort to educate Amherst youths about the dangers of cigarette smoking through a series of innovative, hands-on activities.

"My philosophy is to focus on youth. Seventh graders will be targeted to be a smoke-free generation," said Constance Johnson, the health department's tobacco control director.

This year the department is using $50,000 granted by the state Department of Public Health's Health Protection Fund. The fund was established with revenues generated from the state cigarette tax passed in 1992.

Earlier this summer Johnson worked with Amherst Regional Junior High School students to create an "Teens Take Charge," an educational video that aired on Amherst Community Television.

Also included in the video was a concert by area teens rapping about health issues like safe sex and the dangers of smoking.

The students didn't just perform, though. They got behind the cameras and worked on the video's production.

"A lot of the program featured youths as part of the production team. Just being involved [with the production] reinforced the idea that smoking is bad," said ACTV Executive Director Myra Lenburg.

Johnson says the goal of the department's program is to put an end to smoking as a socially encouraged practice.

"More people die from tobacco-related deaths than from drunk driving or AIDS," Johnson said. "One day I realized how socialized the level of acceptance is."

Johnson also ran an anti-smoking booth at the Tri-County Fair in Northampton and at last Thursday's public health forum, the "Health and Benefits Fair" at Amherst Regional Junior High.

The Amherst Health Department will receive $45,000 from the state public health department in 1995, but Johnson hopes eventually the funds won't be needed.

• 3-D • COMPUTER FRACTALS • OpArt • MOVIE POSTERS • FINE ART • ROCK POSTERS • MODERN & ABSTRACT • MATISSE • HUMOR • TRAVEL • GALLERY PRINTS • ANIMAL POSTERS • FAMOUS MODELS • ROMANCE • FANTASY • CONTEMPORARY BLACK & WHITE PHOTOGRAPHY • TALBOT • MONET • VAN GOGH •

BACK TO SCHOOL POSTER SALE

Most Images Only $6, $7 and $8

Sponsor:
WMUA 91.1 FM

Date:
Mon. Sept. 12 thru Fri. Sept. 16

Time:
9 A.M. - 4:30 P.M.

Place:
Student Union Ballroom
(Thursday: Library Lawn)

Biggest & Best Selection

• WARHOL • DALI • ANSEL ADAMS • ROCKWELL • PICASSO • MC ESCHER • NATURE • MUSIC • FLORALS • MARILYN MONROE • EINSTEIN • SKIING • accusations

continued from page 1

"The proposal includes the parking spaces. They are not a separate cost like the article reported," Wright said.

The three parking spaces are for state vehicles in a car pool used by the UMass staff to travel between the five campuses and throughout the state, according to Wright.

The Globe's math was also incorrect, according to Wright. The three parking spaces would cost the UMass President's Office $855 a month, not the $885 a month, as the Globe reported.

The lease for the UMass president's office, which costs $16,273 a month, was reviewed and approved by the state's Division of Capital Planning and Operations. The lease will remain in effect until 1997, according to Wright.

The Globe reported officials at the Division of Capital Planning and Operations noted the $16-per foot price negotiated during an economic downturn is better than the current price of comparable office space, which costs as much as $23-per square foot.

"We are saving $7-per foot, which currently saves us a total of $84,000 a year at market rate," Wright said. "We will continue to have a good bargain on office space for the next five years, at least."

The Globe's story also reported that the 75 State St. garage offers several "luxurious" services, including uniformed valets on duty 24 hours a day and elevators with piped-in music.

The UMass president's office had no control in decision where the reserved parking would be located, according to Wright.

The Flatley Co. first found parking space across the street, at the Center Plaza building, said Wright. The Plaza then forced the Flatley Co. to relocate the parking spaces when it needed the space for employees working in the office.

The Flatley Co. found space at the State St. garage, and according to Wright, it actually costs less to park there.

"The Plaza was right across the street and it still costs $5 more to park there than at the State Street garage," Wright said.

The Globe reported in the article that there was free parking at two state garages, the McCormack and Saltonstall buildings, which is actually closer than the State Street garage.

"The fact of the matter is that there is no available space for parking at either lot," Wright said. "The open lot currently used by the state is being closed to create space for the new courthouse, eliminating 370 spaces.

"Parking has been a serious problem in downtown Boston for quite a few years," Wright said.

The UMass president's office did add an additional parking space which costs $285 a month, according to Wright. The additional parking is not included in the office's lease.

The UMass office also leases parking for Hooker's car for $295 a month at a Washington Street garage. Hooker's Oldsmobile sedan, leased by UMass for $430, is included in his contract, Wright said.

The Globe's story contributed to an article run by the Associated Press and several other newspaper stories and editorials with inaccurate information, Wright said.

"I am surprised that none of the other newspapers called to confirm the information in the Globe's article," Wright said.

According to Wright, the University's office has received several complaints following the Globe's story and has resulted in bad publicity.

Williamses

continued from page 1

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Keith Williams

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Marcellette Williams

at the University while they were being heavily recruited by Scott and were still employed at Michigan State University.

The chancellor wrote letters to the Williamses asking for the money back because they weren't paid for the consulting work until May 10. They assumed their positions full-time in January.

Scott said he delayed paying them because of a mental lapse.

"I did actually forget at the time, due to some serious illness in my family and other distractions," Scott said to the Daily Hampshire Gazette.

"It was mentioned once or twice since then, and I guess I procrastinated because of the issue of the time merging into their actually being employed full-time."

The chancellor worked with the Williamses at Michigan State, where he served as provost before coming to UMass.

"We are eager to fulfill our commitment of working for the continued growth of this fine institution. We hope that with the rescission of the consulting contracts we can continue to focus on our jobs," the Williamses said in a joint statement.

When contacted Sept. 9, Keith Williams declined to comment on the incident. He said he does not want to add anything more to what he has already said to the press.

Students and other members of the University community have been highly critical of Scott's relationship with the Williamses. He was criticized in November for hiring the couple during lay offs and a hiring freeze.

lobby

continued from page 1

fees.

Last May, the Higher Education Coordinating Council (HECC) agreed to a plan proposed by administrators in conjunction with student leaders to freeze tuition and fees and possibly roll them back.

A rollback can only occur if the state legislation gives the school an increase of $21.8 million in appropriations or at least the amount of the rise in the cost of living.

Administrators, students and parents joined together in a successful lobbying effort to gain support in the State House for the need increase in state appropriations.

The House approved a $10 million increase in funding. The Senate increased that figure to $15 million for the five- campus University system.

UMass-Amherst will receive a $6.3 million increase in appropriations for this year.

The freeze was approved by the Board of Trustees on Aug. 10.

FAC

continued from page 1

"It was one of our highest deferred maintenance priorities," Cahill said.

The building's flaws were addressed by the state Attorney General's office in the late 1970s, which considered examining the liability of the building's original contractor, the now defunct state Bureau of Building Construction. No action was taken and the project was handed to the state Division of Capital Planning and Operations, which completed a study in 1986.

A design firm contracted by the DCPO completed a renovation plan in 1988. State budget cuts shelved the project in that fall, only to have them dusted off again in spring of 1993 with a decision to tap a state fund for public building renovation and repair.

The FAC's University Gallery has been closed throughout the renovations. Water had leaked into the gallery, forcing the construction of troughs to collect and re-route the leakage.

"We had had problems since the building opened in 1975. Rain would collect in the [building] plaza and find its way through the concrete," said University Gallery Director Betsy Siersma.

The Music Library, previously in the FAC, has relocated to the University Library during the process. It had also experienced problems with leaks in the past.

Classes held in the FAC will continue during the repair period although four travel near the south side of the campus pond will be cut off until October.

Another leakage problem on campus should be solved this week as workers put the finishing touches on a new roof on John Adams Residence Hall in the Southwest Residential Area.

HOT MAMA'S SUPER NATURAL FOODS
Wecome Back Students from the Valleys Favorite Salsa & Dips
• On sale at Stop & Shop for 50¢ off thru September
• Try our new Fresh Roasted Garlic Humus available at Bread & Circus
Also available at UMASS' People's Market

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
AEROBICS: Funk, REEBOK STEP, Hi/Low, Boxercise, Yoga
STRENGTH: Keiser Air Power, NAUTILUS, Olympic weights, GRAVITRON, The Treadwall
CARDIO: STAIRMASTERS, LifeCycles • LifeRower, Treadmills • BioCycles, Climb Max • NordicTrack, TrueClimb• VersaClimber
SEMESTER SPECIAL $139 four months
Amherst Athletic Club | 460 West St. | South Amherst 256-0080

RUSSEL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Icehouse "ICE" bottles $12.99 case
S.S. Pierce Vodka $8.99 1.75L.
Pete's Wicked Ale, Lager, Red $4.99 6/pk. bottles
American Beer $7.29 cse.
Amstel Light 12 bottles – 22 oz., only $12.40+
"Outrageous" Bock Beer $6.99 12/pk. bottles (close-out)
Miller "30-Pkg cans" $9.99 case
Sam Adams or Catamount $9.99 12/pk. (Your Choice)
"Lite" 16 oz. cans $12.99 case
Lionshead Pilsner Beer $7.99 case bottles
All Beer plus Deposit
Visa/Mastercard accepted on Keg Deposits • Many More In-Store Specials (especially on wines)

BELL'S Pizza HOUSE 27 YEARS 1967-1994
549-1311
DINE-IN OR TAKE OUT
PIZZA • LARGE & MEDIUM GRINDERS • SPAGHETTI SALADS • (CHEF, TOSSED & GREEK)
HOURS DAILY 11AM TO ?
Free Delivery, Call Delivery Express 549-0077
65 UNIVERSITY DRIVE • AMHERST

take Kaplan and get a higher score...
LSAT GMAT GRE MCAT
More students take Kaplan's courses every year than any other test prep company's. Call us today to find out why.
(413) 549-5780
KAPLAN
The answer to the test question
Look For Us On The Campus Center Concourse

SCHOOL Back To ELECTRONICS AND DORM APPLIANCES

13'' COLOR TELEVISION *
• 181 Channel cable-ready stereo tuner • Remote control • Headphone jack • Dark tint, black matrix picture tube for high-contrast performance • Audio/Video inputs
2 HEAD VCR *
• On-screen programming • Digital auto tracking • 8 channel tuner • Auto playback
YOUR CHOICE $129 $15 PER MONTH
VHS CASSETTE TAPES $1.49
* reconditioned

SPACE SAVING MICROWAVE OVENS WELBILT
• Automatic turn-table for even cooking • Full touch control • Goes anywhere • Sets up anywhere • Cooks everything - fast and easy
0.65 cu. ft. Touch control - $129
0.6 cu. ft. Rotary dial - $99
$15 PER MONTH

REFRIGERATORS
• Full width, separate freezer compartment with ice cube tray • Defrosting pan under freezer compartment • Adjustable, plastic coated refrigerator shelves
1.7 cu.ft. - $109
2.5 cu.ft.* - $139
4.4 cu.ft. - $179
* reconditioned
$15 PER MONTH

RACK SYSTEM
• 120 watts Dolby Pro Logic • 5 speaker rack system • 5 disc carousel •SCS2500
Technics $999 $28 PER MONTH

RECEIVER
• 100 watts per channel• Remote control receiver • SAGX170
Technics $199 $15 PER MONTH

SPORTS SERIES RADIO CASSETTE RECORDER — SONY — • Rugged, splash-resistant • AM/FM stereo tuner • Mega Bass® sound system • CFS-904 — $79.99 $15 PER MONTH
AM/FM STEREO CASSETTE RECORDER — SONY — • Full auto shut-off • AC/DC power supply • Built in microphone • CFS-200 — $44.99 $15 PER MONTH
PRESSMAN® DESKTOP CASSETTE RECORDER — SONY — • Built-in microphone • One touch recording • AC or battery operation • TCM-919 — $21.99 $15 PER MONTH
WALKMAN® RADIOS — SONY — • FM stereo tuner • Single AA battery operation • Local/DX switch • SRF-36 — $12.99 $15 PER MONTH
CD/AM/FM STEREO CASSETTE RECORDER — SONY — • 16 track programmability • Bass boost • IntroScan™ feature • Synchronized CD cassette dubbing •CFD-20 — $149.99 $15 PER MONTH
CASSETTE PLAYER CLOCK RADIO — SONY — • AM/FM tuner • Dual alarm • Date display • Full power backup • ICFC610 — $41.99 $15 PER MONTH
PRESSMAN™ MICROCASSETTE™ RECORDER — SONY — • Fast playback • Compact series™ • Earphone jacks • Voice operated recording • Auto shutoff • M-507V — $34.99 $15 PER MONTH
SPORTS WALKMAN® RADIO — SONY — • AM/FM stereo • Cassette player • Water resistant • Compact series™ design • WM-SR110 — $64.99 $15 PER MONTH
CD/RADIO CASSETTE RECORDER — SONY — • Programmable • AM/FM tuner • Synchronized CD/cassette dubbing • CFD-10 — $132.99 $15 PER MONTH
CD/AM/FM STEREO CLOCK RADIO — SONY — • Wake to CD, radio, or buzzer • Three speaker stereo sound ICF-CD803 — $189.99 $15 PER MONTH
TABLE RADIO — SONY — • AM/FM tuner • 6 1/2" full range speaker • Loudness control • Walnut tone cabinet • ICF-9740W — $49.99 $15 PER MONTH
DREAM MACHINE® CLOCK RADIO — SONY — • Dual alarm • Date display • Full power backup • ICF-C243 — $19.99 $15 PER MONTH

"Visit my newest store and save"
Manny's
HADLEY Mountain Farms Mall Route 9
Open 10 till 9 daily, Saturday till 6, Sunday 12 till 5
1-800-MANNYS-6

Robinson reshapes Student Affairs to foster collaboration

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

Vice chancellor of Student Affairs Thomas Robinson felt it was time for the University of Massachusetts to make some changes to support the overall mission of the University, to deliver campus services and meet students' needs.

In August, Robinson announced plans to restructure Student Affairs by eliminating the current organization based on the concept of six divisions.

In place of the divisions, Robinson is creating an organization based on clusters of departments which, in his words, "share an affinity with other departments and programs within the cluster."

In a memo to the Student Affairs staff and student leaders, Robinson explained his reasons for eliminating the divisions and replacing them with clusters.

"At a time when collaboration and partnership is critical at the University, the concept of divisions does not work well — literally or figuratively," Robinson said.

> "At a time when collaboration and partnership is critical at the University, the concept of divisions does not work well — literally or figuratively,"
> —Thomas Robinson

Robinson said he believes the new organization for Student Affairs will allow for a manageable span of control, facilitate the daily work of departments and programs, enhance communication, create innovation and provide ample opportunity for decision making in a timely fashion.

According to the vice chancellor, the new organization will also give him more free time to interact with students and staff.

"Since a number of Student Affairs program areas are engaged in change, I also want to be more available to department and program heads to offer assistance and support," Robinson said.

The four main clusters are the Campus Activities Cluster, the Student Affairs Cluster, the Enrollment Cluster and the Vice Chancellor's Cluster.

Robinson hopes the clusters will lead to greater interaction between the different areas within Student Affairs.

"I am hopeful that the clusters will be flexible so that collaboration and partnership will occur within and between clusters," Robinson said.

The basic concepts of the organization have been consistent with those endorsed by an advisory group of faculty, staff and students a year ago. According to the memo, Robinson also has the support of Chancellor David K. Scott.

Robinson also ensured staff members that despite the changes occurring to Student Affairs and the loss of positions in the past due to budget reductions, all current staff will be accommodated in the new structure and no currently occupied positions will be eliminated.

According to the memo, changes within Student Affairs will begin to take effect immediately but likely won't be completed until fiscal year 1996.

Alums' donations helps food science dept. close in on $1M goal

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts has nearly met its goal of raising $1 million for the food science department to finance new equipment, upgraded labs, scholarships, visiting professorships and travel expenses.

The two-year campaign, which has already tolled in at $850,000 in donations, pledges and equipment, will come to a finish at the end of September, according to Fergus M. Clydesdale, head of the food science department.

The goal is to get an endowment that would stabilize funding for the department and leave it unaffected by fluctuations in state budget cuts, Clydesdale said.

"If we can raise enough money for an endowment, the department will receive somewhere between $50,000 and $100,000 a year forever," Clydesdale said.

The University will invest the money once the campaign is complete and the department will receive the amount of the annual interest each year, Clydesdale said.

A 20-member alumni advisory committee kicked off the fund-raising campaign by contributing funds, Clydesdale said.

The fund-raising entailed work with the Telefund telemarketing organization on-campus and drew contributions from friends of the department and a handful of corporations, such as Coca-Cola, Pepsi, Nabisco and Frito-Lay, Clydesdale said.

Some of the corporations that contributed are headed by UMass alumni, such as Ocean Spray and CPC International Inc., whose products include Hellman's mayonnaise, Thomas' English muffins, Argo cornstarch and Skippy peanut butter, Clydesdale said.

"The food science department needs desperately to upgrade its instrumentation," grad student Srini Subramanian said. "Most of the labs are underequipped and sometimes our students will go to the engineering labs to do work because we have such poor computer facilities."

The UMass food science department, the oldest of its kind in the country and ranked among the top five in the nation, has received $150,00 worth of new equipment because of the campaign.

The campaign has targeted contributions from alumni, which, in turn, has opened the door to improved alumni relations with students and the department as a whole, Clydesdale said.

"We encourage anyone who gives to come and check out the department and meet the students," Clydesdale said. "They come down here and see what we're up to. Students have been getting three or four job offers each."

READ AND REAP THE SPECIAL VALUES AT...
LIQUORS 44
BEER WINE LIQUORS

Miller HIGH LIFE SPECIAL $9.99 +DEP
30 PACK-12 OZ. CANS
BUD, BUD LIGHT $12.99 +DEP
CASE OF 2-12 PACK BOTTLES
ICE HOUSE $12.99 +DEP
SUITCASE 12 OZ. CANS
FOSTER'S LAGER $14.99 +DEP
CASE OF 2-12 PACK BOTTLES
HARPOON OCTOBERFEST $4.99 +DEP
6 PACK BOTTLES
SCHMIDT'S & SCHMIDT'S LIGHT $7.29 +DEP
CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS
1/2 KEGS $39.99 +DEP
ICE HOUSE, BUD, BUD LIGHT, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LIGHT, BUD ICE & LOWENBRAU

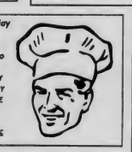
BANDIERA WINE OF THE MONTH $4.99
CHARDONNAY & CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750 ML
"Great Value from the Napa Valley"
GALLO WINES LIVINGSTON CELLARS $6.49
CHABLIS, BURGUNDY, CHENIN, RHINE, RED ROSE, PINK CHABLIS, BLUSH, WHITE GRENACHE, FRENCH COLUMBARD
3.0 LITERS
RENE JUNOT $4.99
FRENCH RED & WHITE TABLE WINE 1.5 LITERS
BERINGER $3.99
WHITE ZINFANDEL 750 ML
MARTINI & ROSSI $8.49
ASTI SPUMANTE 750 ML
BOONES WINES $1.99
ALL FLAVORS 750 ML
BACARDI BREEZERS $3.99
ALL FLAVORS
4 PACK BOTTLES

LIQUORS 44 VODKA $8.99
1.75 LITERS
BACARDI BLACK RUM $8.49
750 ML
TANQUERAY GIN $10.49
750 ML
KENNEDY'S BLENDED WHISKEY $9.49 MAIL IN REBATE -$2.00 COST AFTER REBATE $7.49
1.75 LITERS
RON ROBERTO WHITE RUM $10.49
1.75 LITERS
KAHLUA $11.99
750 ML
JUAREZ GOLD TEQUILA $6.99
1.0 LITER

We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St. 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 9/8/94 THRU WEDS. 9/21/94
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

FOR 26 WAYS to help save the EARTH CALL 1-800-488-8887.

"I overcame my fear of French Poodles and Neil Diamond in only 21 days!!! And it's all because of you Mass Daily Collegian" "Roll the rolled door and Woke your grandmother!!! Quickly!!!"



Yes, it's always a fine day for a barbeque. Ahh nothing like the hot coals to cause a man to break down in a fit of hysterical crying. "WHY DIDN'T I LISTEN TO MY MOTHER AND BECOME A DOG GROOMER!!!" COLLEGIAN NEVER TOO LATE TO CHANGE

Six-Disc Carousel!
ONKYO DX-C211 CD Player
Sale $289.
Sound & Music
Millbank Place • 351 Pleasant Street • Northampton
584-9547 • VISA & MasterCard accepted

Alpine Model 7510
Compact detachable front panel FM/AM Cassette player, Built in 25W x 2 or 15W x 4 amp, ISO mountable, MaxTune C Tuner
Radio Special $229.95
LONG RADIO MOBILE ELECTRONIC SPECIALISTS
Alarms Start At $199 & Up
$395 Installed
Alpine Model 8026
Built in glass breakage sensor, Two 8435 remote controls included with code ROM technology, Relay for dome light surveillance, Ignition control door locks, Selectable starter cut relay, Faulty sensor bypass, Two-car operation

30 Russell St, Rt 9 Hadley, MA 01035 584-3259

Come One Come ALL!
TERMINAL ADAPTER UNITS
will be distributed at the following locations and times for University Housing Residents only:
Beginning Sept. 20th TAUs will be available in the Housing Assignment/Telecommunications Office, 235 Whitmore.
Remember to bring your Student ID with you!
NE/Sylvan Area – Wednesday Sept. 14 4-6:30 Worcester Dining Commons, Hillside Lobby
Southwest Area – Thursday Sept. 15 4-6:30 Berkshire Dining Commons, Lobby Orchard Hill/Central Area – Monday Sept. 19 4-6:30 Franklin DC, Lobby near the Munchy Store
NOTE: TAUs will only work with the residential hall phone system.

4 MEAL DEALS!!
1) 1' LONG B.M.T. MED. SODA/CHIPS $4.99
2. 6' SUBWAY CLUB MED SODA/CHIPS $3.99
3) 1' COLDCUT COMB. MED. SODA/CHIPS $4.39
4) SEAFOOD+CRAB SALAD/MED. SODA $3.79
no coupon required
SUBWAY
Subway sandwich shops may be all over the country but we're certainly at home in Amherst. We buy our vegetables locally from Atkins farms as well as our salami & pepperoni from Carando. And of course our bread is baked fresh daily, in our own ovens.
4 MAIN STREET, AMHERST
256-1919
hours: Sunday - Thursday 10-12, Friday & Saturday 10-2

Sh-Booms & POLLY ESTA'S
Welcome back to school, now it's time you started "PARTYING!" When in Springfield think Sh-Booms and Polly Esta's. Book your date parties early, spots are going quick.
FREE WELCOME BACK PASS
Sh-Booms POLLY ESTA'S
10-12 Stearns Square, Springfield, MA • (413) 781-4509

STAPLES® The Office Superstore
Big Savings For STUDENTS!
5/PACK ENTRÉ Highlighters FREE! (No. 412783)
6/PACK Notebooks FREE! (No. 201350)
STAPLES OUR BEST VALUE
1 SUBJECT WIDE RULED NOTEBOOK
6 NOTEBOOKS
8"x10½" (20.3cm x 26.7cm) WIDE RULED 70 SHEETS 70 PERFORATED
BIC round stic
Dozen BIC Round Stics FREE! (Assorted Colors)
MEDIUM POINT • BLACK INK
TO REORDER IN USA CALL 1-800-333-3330
Get $5.13 Worth Of Supplies FREE!
With any $20 purchase
Stock Up At Staples And Save On:
• Calculators & Diskettes
• Typewriter & Printer Ribbons
• Presentation Supplies
• Pens, Pencils & Markers
• Huge Student Furniture Selection
• Complete Copy Center Services as low as 2¢ each
GRAND OPENING!
HADLEY
N. Maple St. Route 116 UMASS N. Pleasant St. Route 9 (Russell St.) Hampshire Mall STAPLES S. Maple St. Route 116 Amherst College
125 Westgate Ctr. Drive (Routes 9 & 116)
OPEN 7 DAYS: Mon-Fri 7am-9pm. Sat 9am-9pm. Sun 11am-6pm.
Open To The Public! Membership Is Free!
FREE
With Any $20 Purchase
To receive $5.13 worth of supplies just bring your purchase of $20 or more, your STAPLES Member Card and the items pictured above (BIC Round Stics: Assorted, Notebooks: 201350, Entré Highlighters: 412783) to the register.
Limits: Not valid with phone-in orders. Not valid with any other offer. Good at our Hadley store only. Coupon value does not include tax. Expires 9/26/94
Coupon Value 5.13
928-68
Not responsible for typographical errors
STAPLES and STAPLES THE OFFICE SUPERSTORE are registered trademarks of Staples Inc.

UMass chosen for direct loan program

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts has been selected to participate in a new program that will enable students to obtain all of their educational loans directly from the government.

UMass is one of the 87 schools in the country that has been chosen to take part in the Federal Direct Student Loan Program beginning in the 1995-96 academic year.

"This is one program we've needed for a long time," said Burt Batty, director of Financial Aid Services.

The way the system runs now, it takes six to eight weeks to process a loan application, get all the paperwork out of the way and finally receive the loan. Under the federal program, the process will begin and end in the span of one week.

By streamlining the system, administrative tasks will be simplified, costs for taxpayers will be cut and better services will be available to students, U.S. Secretary of Education Richard W. Riley said in a press release.

The federal government will do this by providing loans directly through the school, thus eliminating the need for guaranty agencies, secondary markets, banks and other private lenders.

"This will relieve anxieties and fears of going here, there and everywhere for a loan," Batty said. "It'll be like one- stop shopping."

> "This will relieve anxieties and fears of going here, there and everywhere for a loan. It'll be like one- stop shopping."
>
> –Burt Batty

Repayment options are presently fixed on a 10-year payment plan. The federal program will offer standard, extended, graduated and income contingent repayment options.

By offering an income contingent option, the program assists post-grads in avoiding the scenario of entrance into the work force in a state of "high indebtedness," and suffrage through a payback schedule that is disproportionate to their actual income, Batty said.

There will be four direct loan programs offered: a Federal Direct Stafford Loan Program, Federal Direct Unsubsidized Stafford Loan Program, Federal Direct PLUS Loan Program and Federal Direct Consolidation Loan Program.

The standard plan will offer a fixed annual repayment over a fixed period of time, the extended plan will offer a fixed annual repayment over a longer period of time. The graduated repayment plan will also offer two or more levels of repayment.

The program will take advantage of the federal government's access to lower interest rates attached and will save taxpayers money in the long run.

UMass was chosen from more than 7,500 eligible schools. Other schools chosen from Massachusetts include UMass- Lowell, Harvard University, Amherst College, Stonehill College and Williams College.

Faculty union wins contract, 15 percent pay raise

By Geri Sahn
Collegian Staff

Faculty and librarians at the University of Massachusetts accepted a three-year contract which will provide raises of up to 15 percent over the next three years.

At the end of July, the Massachusetts Society of Professors (MSP), which represents 1,200 faculty members and librarians, approved the contract by a nearly unanimous vote.

Although many people weren't present on the voting day, history professor and MSP President Leonard Richards said many people voted by phone although their votes did not count.

"The vote of the faculty was 155-2, and this indicates that most people were happy with the contract," he said.

The approved pact includes a 2.5 percent increase across the board that will go into effect Jan. 1. The contract also calls for 2.3 percent increases in merit pay beginning July 1.

The contract was approved by the UMass Board of Trustees and President Michael K. Hooker. Yet in order for it to become official, the requested contract must be taken to Gov. William Weld.

Weld will have 45 days to bring the request to the state Legislature and ask for funding. The state Legislature must appropriate the money for the raises.

The union went without a contract for more than a year, with faculty and librarians working 13 months under the expired contract.

"It took us a long time to put a coniract together, so there was a delay," Richards said.

Merit raises will be based upon performance. Each individual will be evaluated by their department head, who will then submit recommendations for a raise to the dean of that department.

News Briefs

Young entrepeneur's first tax

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) — If only all taxpayers were like Ruth Holmes.

After selling $10.75 in lemonade from her street-corner stand this summer, the 10-year-old entrepreneur dutifully deducted her expenses, calculated her profits, figured her sales tax and delivered it to the mayor.

All 75 cents of it.

The girl's stand averaged no more than six customers per day. "And that included mom, dad and me," Ruth said.

Her mother, Phyllis Roth, said she gave the girl a lesson in profits, but never suggested the taxes.

"I didn't say to her, 'Where are the taxes?'" Roth said. "She came to me with the 75 cents in an envelope and said she wanted me to give it to the mayor."

Mrs. Roth handed the money to Saratoga Springs Mayor A.C. Duke during a business luncheon last Friday. The mayor wrote the girl a letter, thanking her for her "good citizenship."

But while city officials are grateful, but they're not sure what to do with the money.

A spokesman for the state Department of Taxation and Finance said sales under $600 and sales made by minors aren't subject to tax.

"Under the age of 17, she is not viewed by the law as a business no matter how serious she was, although we do applaud her attitude and spirit," Paul Rickard said.

The city is considering several options for the funds — returning it, counting it as miscellaneous city revenue or giving it to a charity along with money donated by City Council members. Ruth gets the final say, and so far she favors the charity option.

Jobless grads paid by college

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — St. John Fisher College is willing to bet up to $5,000 that each student will land a job within six months of graduation.

The liberal arts college in the Rochester suburb of Pittsford is starting a program called "The Fisher Commitment," a contract requiring each participating freshman to join campus activities, complete a job-related internship, map out career goals and graduate with a 2.75 grade-point average or better.

For its part, Fisher will provide guidance from mentors and career counselors. Students who complete the program will be so well qualified, they'll land a job offer in their field within six months, college President William Pickett promises.

If the graduate can't find a job, Fisher will dole out $400 per month — up to $5,000 — until he or she is employed.

"There's no doubt in my mind students will be able to work in the field they want to," said Pickett. "No student is going to want the money."

The president said the program was in part a way to help boost enrollment, which is projected to drop this fall by 6 percent to 1,580 students.

Fisher already has a high placement rate for graduates, Pickett said. In a recent placement survey, more than 90 percent of students responding said they were employed full time or attending graduate school within nine months of graduation.

Open 7 Days a Week
8am to 11pm
Last Wash: 9:30pm

(413) 549-2640
6 University Drive
Newmarket Center
Near Victory Market

THE LAUNDRY CLUB

√ Self-Serve Coin-Operated Washers & Dryers
√ Drop-Off Laundry Service
√ Smoke-Free Establishment
√ Senior Citizen Discount
√ Pool Table & Video Games
√ Large Screen TV
√ Snack Bar

$1 OFF Any Size Washer
One Coupon Per Visit
Expires Oct.15, 1994

$2.50 OFF Drop-off Laundry Service
Wash, Dry, Fold - We'll do your laundry!
(12 lb. Minimum)
One Coupon Per Visit Expires Oct.15, 1994

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE

AEROBICS	STRENGTH	CARDIO
Funk REEBOK STEP Hi/Low Boxercise Yoga	Keiser Air Power NAUTILUS Olympic weights GRAVITRON The Treadwall	STAIRMASTERS LifeCycles • LifeRower Treadmills • BioCycles Climb Max • NordicTrack TrueClimb• VersaClimber

SEMESTER SPECIAL
$139 four months
Amherst Athletic Club | 460 West St. | South Amherst 256-0080

IF YOU HAVEN'T YET, NOW IS THE TIME!

Register now through September 26 for over 200 evening credit courses and noncredit workshops.

University of Massachusetts/Amherst
Division of Continuing Education
Goodell Building
545-2414

A quality education at affordable prices

COLLEGE STUDENTS
GET THE STUDENT VALUE
PACKAGE!
...FOR CHECKING, SAVINGS, CREDIT, AND MORE.

With a BayBank Student Value Package®, you'll get:
- BayBank Student Value Checking® with companion Savings
- The BayBank Card with X-Press Check™ for the best in 24-hour banking and buying convenience including unlimited transactions at BayBank X-Press 24® banking machines
- A BayBank Visa® or MasterCard®*
- Reserve Credit overdraft protection with no annual fee*
- CheckView® with no monthly fee

Get your Student Value Package for just $6 a month, or no monthly service charge at all if you're under 19. And the annual fee for a BayBank Credit Card is just $21. Open your Student Value Package today! Visit one of the offices listed below, or call 1-800 BAY-FAST®.

Amherst Office
75 East Pleasant Street
Opening Fall, 1994
Northampton Center Office
144 Main Street

Temporary Northampton Center Office
112 Main Street
Northampton Office
297 King Street

BayBank®

* Credit products are for qualified applicants who are 18 or older. The annual percentage rate (APR) for a BayBank Classic Credit Card is 16.15%, based on BayBank's Prime Rate plus 8.4% and is adjusted monthly. Rate effective September 1, 1994.
 To get the BayBank Student Value Package you must provide proof of current student status. Other fees, such as transactions at BayBank X-Press 24 CASH® machines, non-BayBank ATMs, and designated point-of-sale terminals, are additional.

Equal Opportunity Lender Member FDIC

Obituaries

Eleanor Bateman, 91, alumni medal recipient

Alum Eleanor Bateman died Aug. 8. She was 91.

Bateman, who graduated from UMass in 1923, was a founding member of the Board of Trustees of the UMass Building Association. She was awarded the UMass alumni medal in 1957.

In 1989, the Eleanor Bateman Alumni Scholar-in- Residence program was established in her honor. Memorial services will be held in September.

Patrick Brennan, 21, senior forestry major

UMass senior Patrick R. Brennan, 21, of Dalton died in an automobile accident in Ontario, Oregon, on June 19. He was in the forestry program at UMass.

The son of Donald and Pamela Stone Brennan, he was born in Pittsfield on Sept. 22, 1972, he graduated from Wahconah Regional High School in Dalton, where he was inducted into the National Honor Society.

Brennan's interest in directing, acting and singing had landed him performances at the Theater Barn in New Lebanon, N.Y., and at the Starlite Theater in New Jersey. He was planning to work this past summer at Yellowstone National Park.

Brennan was inducted into the National Honor Society at Wahconah Regional High School in Dalton.

He was one of four people traveling near the Oregon- Idaho border in a 1991 Chevrolet Blazer. According to police, the driver of the car fell asleep at the wheel and the car ran off the road and flipped over before striking a tree.

Brennan is believed to have died at the scene. The other three occupants of the car recieved varying degrees of injuries.

Suzanne Prunier, 24, 1993 fine arts graduate

Alum Suzanne Prunier, 24, died of stab wounds in the doorway of her Malden apartment on July 15. Prunier graduated from UMass in 1993 with a bachelor of arts degree in fine arts.

Prunier's boyfriend, Darron Conley, 22, was arraigned July 15 in Malden District Court and pleaded not guilty to murder and armed assault with intent to murder.

He is being held without bail at the Middlesex District Court in Cambridge.

Four large-scale paintings that were part of Prunier's thesis exhibit called "Kaleidoscapes" are currently on display near the escalators on the Lincoln Campus Center Concourse.

Arless Spielman, 77, retired dean at UMass

Arless Spielman, 77, of Amherst, retired dean of the College of Food and Natural Resources, died July 16 at Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton.

During the 25 years that Spielman headed the College of Food and Natural Resources, it grew to be the seventh largest among the land-grant colleges of agriculture in the United States.

He initiated, organized and administered the UMass-Aid program to develop a college of agriculture across seas and improve the African nation's farm credit and rural extension programs.

Spielman was appointed to the state Board of Agriculture in 1972 and has taught at both Washington State University and Cornell University.

Franklin Patterson, 77, Hampshire College founder

Franklin Patterson, founder of Hampshire College, died July 14 at his home in Framingham. He was 77.

Patterson headed Hampshire College from 1966 to 1971 and wrote "The Making of a College," which served as the foundation for the Hampshire College philosophy.

He taught at New York University and Tufts University and served as Hampshire College's University secretary from 1974 to 78 and was acting president from 1977 to 1978.

Alum Douglas T. Adam, 47, manager for Massport Authority and a member of Sail Blind, died in July.

Bobbie Jean Ashley, who attended the University, died in August at the age of 45.

Alum Stanley F. Baranoski, 36, died in July in a plane crash.

Painter Jean Morrison Becker, who received a master of fine arts degree from the University, died July 6.

Sergius Joseph Bernard died June 9. A graduate of UMass, he was formerly the superintendent of Bridgewate/ Raynham High School.

Alum Sally Riley Bishop, 58, died in July. An artist, her work has been exhibited throughout New England. She held a master's degree from the University.

Bernard Bowler, 82, a former UMass custodian, died in July.

Alum Ferdinand A. (Fred) Caraneglo died Aug. 16 at the age of 62. He coached and counseled generations of youngsters as a founder of the North End (Boston) Athletic Association and a social worker at the North Bennet Street School's Shaw Settlement House.

William B. Cohen, a member of the class of 1932, died July 15 at the age of 84. A retired medical doctor, he was also associate vice president of medical affairs at Baystate Medical Center in Springfield.

Michael Cosseboom, formerly of Braintree, died in the Sept. 8 plane crash near Pittsburgh which left 132 people dead. He attended UMass before becoming the director of sales training and development for SmithKline Beecham in Pittsburgh.

Alum Ralph Crocker, 89, a graduate of the Stockbridge School of Agriculture, died May 28. He worked in the radiation department at Massachusetts Institute of Technology and later worked as a maintenance worker at UMass.

Sylvia Wilson Cummings, class of 1933, died July 8 in Sun City, Calif. She served as president of the Women's Student Government and then was named permanent vice president of her class.

Patrick DeSantis, 66, a graduate of the Stockbridge School of Agriculture, died July 31.

Doreen (Berube) Dostal, a clerk and computer operator in the Physical Plant Department, died July 29. She was 47.

Earle S. Draper, a member of the class of 1915, died July 1 in Florida. He was a former top executive with the Tennessee Valley Authority in the 1930s.

Irving Fagerson, professor emeritus in the Department of Food Science and Nutrition, died June 3. He was 73.

Alum John F. Felcher of the class of 1969 died in August with his 6-month-old daughter in a car accident on the Ohio Turnpike.

Elsie Gaunt, a former member of the UMass Women's Club, died June 20.

Alum Linus Gavin of the class of 1927 died July 26. He was 89.

Myron Griffin, 88, who worked for 16 years as a custodian at UMass, died Aug. 15.

Alum Lewis Gurwitz, a lawyer and advocate for Native Americans, died Aug. 28. He was 56.

Maude Bosworth Gustafson died in August. A member of the class of 1926, she was 88.

Stockbridge alum Carl Herrmann, a state forest and park superior since 1967, died Aug. 1 at age 60.

Alum Eleanor (Murphy) Hobart, who graduated from the former Massachusetts Agricultural College, now UMass, died Sept 5. She was 70.

Charles Horne, 48, a playwright and AIDS columnist who did graduate work at UMass, died Sept. 2.

Former UMass employee Charles E. Johnson, 85, of Winter Haven, Fla., died in July.

Alum David M. Kagan, a dentist, died in August. He was 73.

Alum Edward Joseph Leary Jr., 46, city planning and zoning director in Norwalk, Conn., died in July.

Former student Gale Ann McKay Marceau, 48, died in August. She was employed by the Massachusetts Department of Revenue in Springfield.

Stockbridge grad Elizabeth (Sherman) Hatch Martinson died June 24. She was 83.

Anna McDonnell, 97, who received a master's degree from Massachusetts State College, now UMass, died Sept. 4. A math teacher, she was the first registered woman pharmacist in Northampton.

Alum Brian A. Moore, 35, died in July of complications from the AIDS virus. A Provincetown attorney, Moore dealt with mental health probate law and special mental health prosecution handling sexual assault and other similar cases.

Bernard Moreau, 77, a graduate of University Without Walls program and a former employee of the UMass Labor Center, died in August.

Leonard Parkinson, former professor of food technology at the University, died July 13. He was 84.

Alan Robertson, 51, died May 28 in a car accident. He was project director for Berkshire Enterprises based in Pittsfield, a division of the Donahue Institute.

Alum Paul J. Roddy, a civil engineer, died in July at age 38 of complications from lymphoma.

Doma Rogers, a former Dining Commons employee, died in July.

Gilbert Rogers, a 25-year employee of the University Physical Plant Department, died Aug. 8.

Mabel (Cook) Romancier, 93, a retired worker in the Dining Commons, died Sept. 4.

Stockbridge alum Robert D. Shea, 60, a forester and mill manager, died in August.

Charles Shelnut, a graduate of the Stockbridge School of Agriculture, died June 18. He was 88.

Evelyn Sibley, a 16-year employee in the food service department at the University, died July 30. She was 73.

Former student Robert A. Silva, 46, died in August. He was a program coordination specialist in the Federal Disaster Assistance Program in Washington, D.C.

J. Harold Smith, 79, professor emeritus of chemistry, died Aug. 28.

Alum Richard Sullivan, a retired electrician, died in August at age 74.

Joseph Tribble, associate provost for academic affairs at UMass-Boston, died from an apparent heart attack in June.

Frederick Knowlton Utley Jr., 92, died Aug. 1. He worked for 20 years in the University mailroom and was its original organizer.

Former Easthampton town offical John White, who attended the University, died Aug. 30. He was 72.

Michael A. Williams, a self-employed cleaner, died in August at age 39. He was a graduate of the Stockbridge School of Agriculture.

Pam Wrisley, 24, died at Tufts New England Medical Center in Boston on Aug. 28 following illness. She was a graduate student at UMass.

Helen (Cragin) Wyman, 79, a member of the Faculty Women's Club, died Aug. 29.

William Yorczyk, 90, who worked on buildings at UMass, died June 4.

Alumni Randolph Blatche Jr., 44, who attended the University, died Aug. 7; Nancy Curto Desmond, 37, died in July; John Fitzgerald, 71, died June 3; Linus Gavin, 89, died July 26.

William Kaschuluk, who attended the University, died July 10; Tom Kerrigan, 50, died May 29; Carl Robert Kinney, 70, died Aug. 13; Jacqueline LaCoy, 54, died June 1; Douglas Lyman, 62, died in July.

Edward Magiera, 64, died in July; Paul Monaghan, 45, died Sept. 1; James Moran, who attended the University, died July 13 in Westfield; Bernard Moreau, 77, died Aug. 27.

Daniel Pellegrino, 66, died May 30; Richard F. Stone, 62, died in July; Evelyn Tracy, 83, died June 2; Linda Yancey, 44, died June 4; Isidore O. Yergeau, 70, died in August.

HUGE SAVINGS AT THE NEW SALVATION ARMY SUPER THRIFT STORE
STUDENT DISCOUNT EVERY THURSDAY ON CLOTHING 50% OFF WITH ID
159 N. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA • 253-4747

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家湖園南湖
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over. $2 charge for orders under $15
NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet served 5-8pm Sun-Thurs.
Brunch served Sunday 11:30am-3pm
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.25
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3pm - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup
TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

For Everyone's Information
Submit your FYI to the Collegian and tell the world what they need to know.

CANSBOTTLESPAPERPLASTIC
RECYCLE
It's the everyday way to save the world.
ENVIRONMENTAL DEFENSE FUND

Contraception Information
Are you about to choose a method? Are you about to change your method? Do you want the most up to date information about contraception? If your answer is yes to any of these questions, then attend one of the contraceptive choices sessions. Men and Women are welcome.
An appointment is not necessary.
Monday and Thursday - 3:00 p.m.
Tuesday and Wednesday - 7:00 p.m.
Room 302 in the University Health Services.

Auto Reverse Double Deck!
ONKYO TAR-W313 CASSETTE
Sale $209.
Sound & Music
Millbank Plaza • 351 Pleasant Street • Northampton
584-9547 • VISA & MasterCard accepted

Get A Life with Jesus Christ
John 5:12
a UMass RSO since 1984
Alliance Christian Fellowship
BIBLE STUDY
DISCIPLESHIP
OUTREACH
PARTIES
RETREAT
MORE INFO CALL
MARK 256-4625
PAULINE 549-1930
TIMEOUT FELLOWSHIP
FRIDAYS • 7 PM
CAMPUS CENTER

FINE ARTS CENTER SERIES
GET YOUR TICKETS NOW!
Experience Virtuoso Reality!
Students! Get your half-price tickets now for the 1994-95 season featuring the best in Fine Arts Entertainment!
Call 545-2511 for tickets.
University of Massachusetts Amherst

EVERYWOMAN'S CENTER
OPEN HOUSE
MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1994
9am - 4pm, Open House
4pm - 7pm, Reception
WILDER HALL
INVITING STUDENTS, FACULTY & STAFF
Staff will be available to provide information about work-study, student hourly, internships, and volunteer opportunities
For more information call 545-0883

Bus Schedules

UMASS TRANSIT SERVICE

Campus Shuttle Schedule

340 - NORTHBOUND
350 - SOUTHBOUND

effective
Sept. 12, 1994 - Dec. 23, 1994
and
Jan. 30, 1995 - May 25, 1995

Operates on UMass class days only. No service on Campus Shuttle routes on weekends, reduced service periods (Oct. 10, Nov. 11, Dec. 26 - Jan. 27, Feb. 20, Mar. 20-24, Apr. 17 and May 29 - Sept. 4), or any non-class day.

SCHEDULE INFO: 586-5806
INFO FOR THE DEAF: 545-2086

Schedules are available at the Campus Center Information Desk and on all UMTS buses

Lost and found, suggestions, and complaints should be directed to the UMTS Business Office at 545-0058

For schedule changes during inclement weather, please tune to WMUA 91.1 FM, WRNX 100.9 FM, or WTTT 1430 AM, or call the UMTS 24 hour Hotline at 545-1633

Pets (except seeing eye dogs), food, drinks, skis, rollerblades/skates, alcohol, bicycles and smoking are not permitted on UMTS buses

UMASS TRANSIT SERVICE

SATURDAY SCHEDULE

effective
Sept. 17, 1994 - Dec. 17, 1994 ★
and
Feb. 4, 1995 - May 20, 1995

No Weekend Service on Gatehouse Road, Pine Street/Mill Hollow, West Street, West Street/Bay Road Extension, and Campus Shuttle/Orchard Hill routes

No Weekend Service on the following dates: Nov. 26, Dec. 24, Jan. 29, and May 27 - Sept. 3

For schedule changes during inclement weather, please tune to WMUA 91.1 FM, WRNX 100.9 FM or WTTT 14.30 AM or call the UMTS 24 hour Hotline at 545-1633.

Pets (except seeing eye dogs), food, drinks, skis, rollerblades/skates, alcohol, bicycles and smoking are not permitted on UMTS buses.

Schedules are available at the Campus Center Information Desk and on all UMTS buses

Sponsored by
PVTA/TA
UMass Administration
UMass Undergraduate Senate
UMass Graduate Senate

Lost and found, suggestions, and complaints should be directed to the UMTS Business Office at 545-0058

★ There will be service Saturday, Dec. 24, if there is a snow day for exams on Friday, Dec. 23

SCHEDULE INFO: 586-5806
INFO FOR THE DEAF: 545-2086

UMASS TRANSIT SERVICE

SUNDAY SCHEDULE

effective
Sept. 18, 1994 - Dec. 18, 1994
and
Feb. 5, 1995 - May 21, 1995

UMASS TRANSIT SERVICE

Orchard Hill/ Mullins Center
350 - SOUTHBOUND

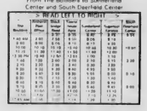
Runs from Lot 25 and GRC Southbound through Campus on North Pleasant Street to Central, Orchard Hill and Sylvan

SCHEDULE INFO: 586-5806
INFO FOR THE DEAF: 545-2086

SATURDAY

Northbound
380 - Sunderland
AND
390 - South Deerfield

From The Boulders to Sunderland Center and South Deerfield Center



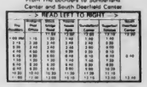
Southbound
330 - South Amherst

From South Deerfield Center and Sunderland Center to The Boulders

SUNDAY

Northbound
380 - Sunderland
AND
390 - South Deerfield

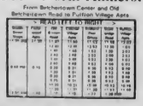
From The Boulders to Sunderland Center and South Deerfield Center



SUNDAY

Northbound
360 - North Amherst

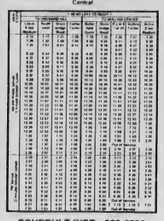
From Belchertown Center and Old Belchertown Road to Putnam Village Apts



UMASS TRANSIT SERVICE

Orchard Hill/ Mullins Center
340 - NORTHBOUND

Runs from Stadium and Southwest Northbound through Campus on North Pleasant Street to Sylvan, Orchard Hill, and Central



SCHEDULE INFO: 586-5806
INFO FOR THE DEAF: 545-2086

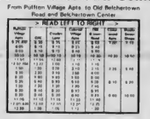
SATURDAY

Northbound
360 - North Amherst

From Belchertown Center and Old Belchertown Road to Putnam Village Apts

Southbound
320 - Belchertown Road
AND
310 - Belchertown Center

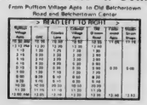
From Putnam Village Apts. to Old Belchertown Road and Belchertown Center



SUNDAY

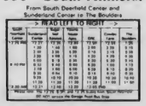
Southbound
320 - Belchertown Road
AND
310 - Belchertown Center

From Putnam Village Apts. to Old Belchertown Road and Belchertown Center



Southbound
330 - South Amherst

From South Deerfield Center and Sunderland Center to The Boulders



UMASS TRANSIT SERVICE

NO. AMHERST/BELCHERTOWN RD. WEEKDAY SCHEDULE

effective
Sept. 12, 1994 - Sept. 1, 1995

For weekend service on these routes, refer to the yellow Weekend Schedule.

SHADED TRIPS DO NOT OPERATE DURING THE FOLLOWING REDUCED SERVICE PERIODS: Oct. 10, Nov. 11, Dec. 27-30, Jan. 3-27, Feb. 20, Mar. 20-24, Apr. 17 and May 30 - Sept. 1.

NO SERVICE ON THE FOLLOWING DATES: Nov. 24-25, Dec. 26, Jan. 2, May 29, July 4 and Sept. 4.

SERVICE ENDS EARLY ON THE FOLLOWING DATES: Nov. 23 and Dec. 23.

Schedules are available at the Campus Center Information Desk and on all UMTS buses

For schedule changes during inclement weather, please tune to WMUA 91.1 FM, WRNX 100.9 FM, or WTTT 14.30 AM, or call the UMTS 24 hour Hotline at 545-1633

Pets (except seeing eye dogs), food, drinks, skis, rollerblades/skates, alcohol, bicycles and smoking are not permitted on UMTS buses

Southbound
320 - Belchertown Road
AND
310 - Belchertown Center

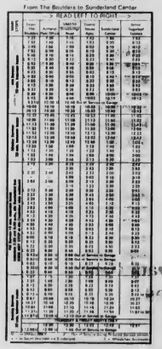
From Putnam Village Apts. to Old Belchertown Road and Belchertown Center

Southbound
330 - South Amherst

From South Deerfield Center and Sunderland Center to The Boulders

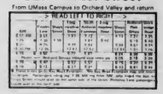
Northbound
380 - Sunderland

From The Boulders to Sunderland Center



325 - West Street

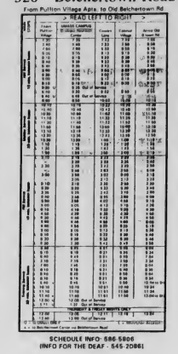
From UMass Campus to Orchard Valley and return



SCHEDULE INFO: 586-5806
INFO FOR THE DEAF: 545-2086

Southbound
320 - Belchertown Road

From Putnam Village Apts. to Old Belchertown Road

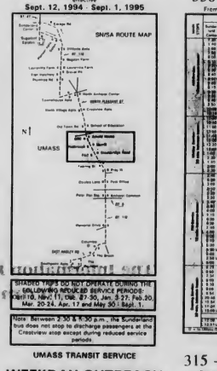


SCHEDULE INFO: 586-5806
INFO FOR THE DEAF: 545-2086

UMASS TRANSIT SERVICE

SUNDERLAND/SOUTH AMHERST WEEKDAY SCHEDULE

effective
Sept. 12, 1994 - Sept. 1, 1995



SHADED TRIPS DO NOT OPERATE DURING THE FOLLOWING REDUCED SERVICE PERIODS: Oct. 10, Nov. 11, Dec. 27-30, Jan. 3-27, Feb. 20, Mar. 20-24, Apr. 17 and May 30 - Sept. 1.

Note: Between 2:30 & 6:30 p.m., the Sunderland bus does not stop to discharge passengers at the Crossview stop except during reduced service periods.

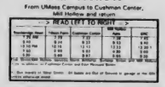
UMASS TRANSIT SERVICE

WEEKDAY OUTREACH SCHEDULE

effective
Sept. 12, 1994 - Sept. 1, 1995

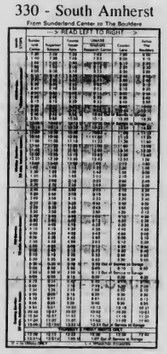
335 - Pine Street/ Mill Hollow

From UMass Campus to Cushman Center, Mill Hollow, and return



Southbound
330 - South Amherst

From Sunderland Center to The Boulders



315 - Gate House Road

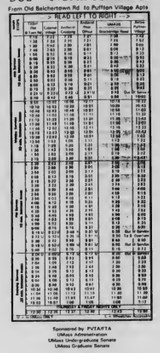
From UMass Campus to the hill and return

West St./Bay Rd. Extension

From UMass Campus to DEEP South Amherst and return

Northbound
360 - North Amherst

From Old Belchertown Rd. to Putnam Village Apts



SCHEDULE INFO: 586-5806
INFO FOR THE DEAF: 545-2086

Sponsored by PVTA/TA
UMass Administration
UMass Undergraduate Senate
UMass Graduate Senate

Where can you go for quick, convenient walk-in service for car insurance?

Amherst Insurance Agency 253-5555

A DIVISION OF THE NATHAN AGENCIES

Amherst Insurance Agency, Inc.
Amherst Real Estate Agency, Inc.
Amherst Financial Service Agency

• Auto • Home • Rentals • Life • Health for personal and business is your VCR insured?

20 GATEHOUSE ROAD, AMHERST, MA

200 Throbbing Watts!
ONKYO TX-SV940 Receiver
Sale $289.
Sound & Music
McGrath Place • 151 Pleasant Street • Northampton
584-9547 • VISA & MasterCard accepted

Comfortable Clothes • Comfortable Prices
FINE'S EVOLUTION
All Styles
Levi's
All Styles
Exp. 10/15/94
$29.95 JEANS $29.95
Rt. 9 Hadley (Next To McDonalds) 584-3474

Bulger a political issue in upcoming elections

By Jonathan Yenkin
Associated Press

BOSTON — For more than 15 years, Senate President William Bulger has stood on top of the power structure in the Massachusetts Legislature. Now a fellow Democrat is trying to topple him. Is this just a political battle that has caught the fancy of insiders on Beacon Hill? Or do Massachusetts voters have a deep desire to see a shakeup in the Senate?

The primary election on Sept. 20 should give a good clue. On that day, voters in about 10 state Senate districts will have the chance to elect newcomers who are running on an anti-Bulger platform.

In several of the contests, the candidates are challenging incumbents who are aligned with Bulger or who say they aren't committed either way.

These races will serve as a barometer for the public's interest in the bigger fight between Bulger and Sen. William Keating, D-Sharon, who says he will seek the Senate presidency next year. Keating, who currently doesn't have enough supporters inside the Senate, needs a bunch of victories by anti-Bulger candidates if he hopes to ascend to the Senate throne.

Keating's political consultant, Michael Goldman, who also has a few of the Senate challengers as his clients, insists the Senate leadership fight will loom large in the district races.

"The only people who don't have confidence are the political insiders who don't think it matters," he said. "But the public gets it."

State Sen. Michael Barrett of Cambridge must think the Bulger issue resonates with the public. Barrett, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for governor, has been running campaign ads trying to tarnish the party's endorsed candidate, Rep. Mark Roosevelt, as a Bulger ally.

Earlier this year, a poll commissioned by The Boston Globe and WBZ-TV found 68 percent of Massachusetts residents wanted to see someone else as Senate president other than Bulger, who has a reputation for running the Senate with an iron grip.

But only one-third of the respondents said they would be inclined to vote against an incumbent who supported Bulger. That statistic bolsters the argument of senators who say the leadership battle doesn't mean a lot in local elections. Instead, they say voters are more concerned about other issues, such as the economy and crime.

Even one group backing the Keating challenge says a senator's stance in the leadership fight shouldn't necessarily be a deciding factor when casting a vote.

Citizens for Participation in Political Action (CPPAX) this year considered placing questions on local ballots instructing senators not to vote for Bulger. But the group is running such a question only in one Senate district — that of Sen. Thomas Birmingham, D-Chelsea, a staunch Bulger ally.

Jamie Sabino, an activist with CPPAX, said the group decided not to mount ballot campaigns in some districts where the incumbents share the group's progressive agenda, even if they haven't committed to voting against Bulger.

"They should not be defeated because of that one issue," Sabino said.

Certainly, candidates recognize that voters don't care only about the Bulger-Keating fight. Deborah Smith Walsh, a Lynn city councilor running for an open seat in Essex County, describes in a recent campaign brochure how she stands on crime and welfare.

But that isn't the main message she wants to deliver. Look at the cover of the brochure, and you'll see a smiling picture of the candidate with the following words: "Unlike her opponent, Deborah Smith Walsh will tell you how she'll vote on Senate President Bulger. She'll vote No."

ACCENT

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES
in
Information Systems

We're looking for a few highly motivated people with a strong background in computer-related disciplines who want a career in Information Systems.

If you're the kind of person who is interested in rotational assignments, exposure to senior management, classroom development, and you like the idea of having input into the direction of your career, the ACCENT Program may be the right opportunity for you.

We'll be on campus with Travelers' Financial Management Development Program (FMDP) for:

Undergraduate Business Club's CAREER DAY:
Wednesday, October 12, 1994
INTERVIEWS:
Thursday, October 27, 1994

To be considered, bring your resume to the SOM Placement Office by September 19th or stop by with any questions you have on the ACCENT Program.

The Travelers Insurance Companies
An Equal Opportunity Employer

Peer Health Education
• Interactive
• Dynamic • Challenging

What students have said about Peer Health Education: "The best course I've ever taken at UMass!" "It changed my life - I learned about things that affect me." "I liked being able to teach other students about sexuality, stress, alcohol and eating disorders."

Peer Health Educators
Are students helping students.
Public Health 213
Education 213
6 Credit Program
2 Semester Commitment
Permission of instructor required. Call 549-2671 ext. 181. There are still a few openings.

The Information Data Bank Welcomes
New & Returning Students
IDB is here to offer help with:
• University administrative & academic policies & procedures
• Schedules
• Campus events
• General information & referrals
• How to get "There" from "Here"
Stop by IDB in the Whitmore Administration Building or call 5-1555. We are open Monday - Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 6:00 p.m.
IDB can help make a seemingly huge campus seem a bit smaller.

AFFORDABLE COMPUTERS
Priced to fit your budget. We sell new and previously owned computer and office equipment - authorized Atari (Jaguar & Falcon) + NEC distributor.
Call 413-592-8223 for more info...

If your hair and tan isn't becoming to you, you should be coming to us
TANNING
at Carol's Headquarters
Intro Special: 8 Sessions for $29.95
115 Russell St. • Rt. 9 Hadley • 584-9948

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycles
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

100% BEEF
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
Great Burgs!
Great Deal!
QUARTER POUNDERS • OPEN YEAR ROUND
585-0241 ROUTE 9 HADLEY MA
PETE'S DRIVE-IN

We Deliver to UMass
Kai Chi
Chinese — American Classic Restaurant & Bar
LATE NIGHT DINNER SPECIAL!
UP TO 30% OFF!
Friday, Saturday & Sunday • 9pm - Closing
No other promos apply / Not available for Take Out
Entrees Starting at $4.50
Kai Chi Restaurant
MT. FARMS MALL • RT 9 • HADLEY • 586-2774
Open Sun. - Thurs. 11:30am - 11:00pm
Fri. - Sat. 11:30am - midnight

Writing and Editorial Services for business, professionals, students • published author, fiction and nonfiction •12 years experience
• books • manuals • theses
• newsletters • articles
• consulting • "technotalk" translated into simple language
• call in a panic or at your leisure.
LAURA RICARD, Ph.D.
5 Jenks Street
Amherst, MA 01002
413•256•3067
Phone or Fax

Get Your Hair Cut ON CAMPUS!
University Barbers
(across from the arcade)
Hours:
Weekdays
8am-4:45pm
Sat. 8am-1:45pm
No Appointment Necessary
549-0123

HOUSE of WALSH
AMHERST
Welcome Back Students
Clothes for Men & Women
32 Main Street, Amherst, MA 01004
(413) 253-3361 FAX 253-0480
HOURS: M-F 9:30-5:30

Murder suspect returns to high school

ROCKLAND (AP) — A judge's decision to allow a 16-year-old awaiting trial on a murder charge to return to school for his senior year has angered state and local officials, who say they have the right to keep him out.

"It's a travesty," School Superintendent Ronald Gerhart said Thursday of the ruling which permitted Stephen DiRenzo to start school this week.

DiRenzo was one of six youths indicted in April in connection with the beating death of a 21-year-old Abington man outside of a D'Angelo's sub shop on Rte. 23.

Edward Sullivan died Feb. 23 after being struck in the head repeatedly with a baseball bat and a beer bottle.

In August, Superior Court Justice Richard Kelley ruled that school officials could prevent DiRenzo from attending Rockland High School. But that decision was reversed Sept. 1 by Appeals Court Justice Kenneth Laurence.

School officials, who received the decision Wednesday, say state law gives them power to keep any students convicted of felonies out of school.

"Obviously if a student is indicted for murder, the common sense of most people is that of course that's going to impact the school," Gerhart said. "How can the rights of one student supersede the rights of 3,000 others?"

Gerhart said the school system plans to appeal to a full Appeals Court.

Local and state educational officials cited an amendment to the Education Reform Act, passed in April, which gives principals the right to expel students who they believe will have "a substantial detrimental effect on the welfare of the school," Commissioner of Education Robert Antonucci said in a statement.

The amendment was prompted by a case last year in Billerica, where school officials tried unsuccessfully to bar a student from class while he awaited sentencing on juvenile manslaughter charges. A state Appeals Court judge ruled that the student couldn't be punished for conduct that was unrelated to school activities. Gov. William Weld called that "a crazy situation."

Gerhart said DiRenzo attended the first day of school on Wednesday. While the students were "relatively quiet" about the case, a dozen community members contacted the school to complain about DiRenzo being there.

Endicott College goes co–ed

School welcomes men for first time in its 55-year history

By Glen Johnson
Associated Press

BEVERLY — Walking along the first floor of Ebinger Hall, it was clear that both sexes will be making adjustments now that Endicott College has gone co-ed.

The first room inside the formerly all-female dormitory had a poster of a buxom, bikini-clad woman tacked to the door on Wednesday. Just down the hallway, the bathroom in the now all-male dorm is still painted pink.

Endicott's trustees decided last October to admit men for the first time in the school's 55-year history, in part because Endicott faced the prospect of cutting programs due to rising expenses. Both factors could have decreased enrollment.

Less than a year later, the first group of 65 men arrived for freshman registration, along with about 280 women.

Ben Paula, a hotel/restaurant major from Barre, was among the first to register. He had been on campus for a week because of program orientation, and he said his reception had been good.

"Everyone's been pretty open-minded about it. It was kind of quiet at first, but they've warmed up to us," Paula said.

Heather Peatman, a third-year visual communications major on campus for student orientation, said some students were upset that a school they thought would be all-women was adding men before they graduated. But she's in favor of the change.

"I think there'll be more people at the mixers. It's been kind of boring, all women," she said.

Overall, Endicott has about 715 full-time, resident students, but President Richard Wylie said he expects going co-ed will increase the student body to about 1,200 within five years. Wylie hopes by that time, men will make up about 40 percent of Endicott's students.

"Every major we have, whether it's nursing, photography or design, is computer based. . . You can't do all that on a small student base. You have to achieve a critical mass," Wylie said.

Another factor in the decision was that tuition, room and board at Endicott now exceed $17,000 per year. By adding men, the college has doubled the number of people who could be admitted to pay that bill.

Like Vassar and Wheaton colleges, schools that have recently begun admitting male students, Wylie said Endicott had three major concerns about making the change.

Could the school attract men? Would it lose women because of the change? And how would the academic community react?

"I know of less that a handful of students who left because of it," Wylie said. "I know of many more students who came because we're co-ed." The faculty, meanwhile, approved the change unanimously.

Since then, the athletic department has been busy adding a men's sports program and attending to such details as buying baseball jerseys. The food services division has been broadening its menu. Men's locker rooms are being added to Bierkoe Gymnasium.

Peatman, the visual communications major, said the returning women also will have to make adjustments.

"Some of the people will definitely change the way they go to classes. I've seen people in their pajamas because they've been late. That won't happen any more," she said.

Celina Aucoin, a second-year hotel/restaurant major, said increasing the student body will energize the campus. She expected larger turnouts at athletic events, for example.

Ryan Radabaugh, a liberal arts major registering Wednesday, said he was attracted to Endicott because its seaside campus is quiet. It's also close to his home in Marblehead, and he wanted the chance to play Division 3 baseball. The school will offer both fall and spring programs.

Uptown not enough? Register now for 'Beer Camp'

FORT MITCHELL, Ky. (AP) — Three days and 278 kinds of beer means one sure thing for participants in a popular summer camp: aspirin by Sunday morning.

Welcome to Beer Camp at the Oldenberg Brewing Co., a three-day brew to-do so popular that the session that began Friday is full and the camp scheduled for March is nearly sold out as well.

"Granted, it's quite silly in a way — a camp where people can drink hundreds of kinds of beer," said Benjamin Myers, co-chairman of the North American Guild of Beer Writers.

"But it's great. I could probably count on my hand the number of places where you could find such a fantastic selection at one time."

For this session, organizers have assembled 278 kinds of beer for sampling, everything from double bock to oatmeal stout. Arriving campers were given a notebook filled with a schedule, recipes for cooking with beer and a list of available beers, their breweries and origins.

They write their names on beer-tasting glasses and learn the camp song: "I'm Dying of Thirst! So Please Serve Me First!" Today's schedule includes a lesson in beer anthropology, a pub crawl in a trendy Cincinnati neighborhood, more beer tasting and a five-course meal prepared with beer.

Sunday features a "hair of the dog" brunch, temperance plays about the evils of drink, group photos and graduation, with certificates from Ale University.

This is the sixth session for the biannual camp. It draws a diverse crowd — insurance salesmen, executives, truck drivers, even an Iowa judge.

The 175 campers pay about $250 to $350 each, depending how many people share a motel room.

Controversial soft money gifts top $881,000 in Massachusetts

By Melissa B. Robinson
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — From paper distributors to cranberry growers, Massachusetts residents and businesses have given at least $881,000 to national Democratic and Republican committees during the 1993-94 election cycle, federal records showed.

Top donors included Steven Grossman, president of the Somerville-based Massachusetts Envelope Co., who gave $75,000 to the Democratic National Committee, The Ivey Companies of Great Barrington, which gave $50,000 to the DNC, and Ocean Spray Cranberries Inc., which gave $35,000 to the DNC and $5,000 to a branch of the Republican National Committee, according to the Federal Election Commission.

The figures represent so-called "soft money" donations that are not subject to federal limits and, by law, cannot be used in connection with federal elections.

Direct donations to federal candidates are subject to strict limits.

For each election, U.S. House and Senate candidates can receive $1,000 from individuals, and $5,000 from political action committees representing corporations, labor unions and other interests.

Soft money is used, typically at the state level, for party-building activities such as get-out-the-vote drives. Nonetheless, campaign finance reformists — who have long argued for a ban on soft money — argue that the millions of dollars that trickle into the parties' nonfederal accounts still corrupt the political system.

"The average citizen in this country doesn't have a whole lot of access to either the political parties or the political candidates," said Suzanne Greenfield, a lobbyist for Common Cause, the government watchdog group. "Those who contribute large sums of money do."

Also, soft money, because it covers party expenses, frees up other contributions that can directly help candidates, Greenfield said.

New Englanders who made sizable donations, however, argue that they were not driven by a desire to influence specific policies or laws.

By and large, their financial support stems from their over-arching, philosophical agreement with a party, and its practitioners, they said.

"You could call me a genetic Democrat," said Grossman, who, along with his father, grandfather and uncle, has been a delegate to national party conventions. He chaired the state party in the early 1990s, and co-chaired the finance committee for 1988 presidential candidate Michael Dukakis.

BEE BOP

If you've got a good vibe you can read your fingers, you can whistle, and you can hum.
Mail Daily Collegian tickle my tummy honey

WordPerfect Office
WordPerfect
Quattro Pro 5
Big Deal.
$99
SPECIAL LIMITED-TIME OFFER: WordPerfect 6.0 for Windows, Quattro Pro 5.0 for Windows, and Random House Webster's Electronic Dictionary and Thesaurus, College Edition.
See your local campus reseller for more information.
$99 WordPerfect Presentations 2.0 for Windows or DOS
The ultimate tool for graphics and presentations!
$99 Macintosh Student Essentials WPMac 3.0, electronic dictionary, spell-parse, and more!
WordPerfect
Novell Applications Group
WordPerfect is a registered trademark of Novell, Inc. All other brand or product names are registered trademarks of their respective companies. © 1994 Novell, Inc.

Don't Dive Headlong into a New Hair Cut!
Spend a few minutes with a professional at Styles by Deborah the spa for hair, nail & skin care.
65 University Drive
Amherst, 549-5610

Adorable Bouquets
Florist & Formal Wear
Floral arrangements ~ Roses for that special occasion • Tuxedos & Semi Formal ladies wear.
323-8291
Jct. Rt 9 & 202 • Belchertown
Open Late Thursday

Hadley Coin-Op Laundromat
206 Russell St./Rt.9
Open 7 Days 6am-11pm
Top Loaders: $1.00 • Dbl Loaders: $1.50

Salem Cross Inn
Food & Drink
Ask about our BACK TO SCHOOL SPECIAL thru September
Complete Dinner $12.95
Rt. 9 East, 30 minutes to West Brookfield
Tuesday ~ Friday 11:30 am - 9 pm
Early Bird until 6:15 pm
Saturday ~ 5 pm - 10 pm
Sunday ~ Noon - 8 pm
Reservations Suggested 508-867-2345

Cooking at your table
Special
Tues.-Wed.-Thurs.-Fri. & all day Sunday
Two Dinners for $15
Steak & Chicken Combo
Two dinners $18
Shrimp & Scallop Combo
Both include soup, salad, vegetables, noodles, steamed rice, tea, & ice cream
Full Bar
Exotic Specialties
Gift Certificates Available
For Reservations Call 413-665-3628
Goten
OF JAPAN
Rt.116 Sunderland • 413-665-3628
Open Tues.-Sat. at 5pm, Sun. at 2

$129/Semester
Co-Ed
FLEX
FITNESS CENTER
AMHERST, MA
Co-Ed
The Valley's Leading Weight Training Facility
175 University Drive • Amherst • 253-3539
WALKING DISTANCE

HEALTH T.V.
... Now you can learn about safer sex, ways to stop smoking and more... right in your room. Check the HSCN Program Guide, the Collegian, or call Health Education (549-2671 ext. 181) for a schedule of Programs on your cable T.V. Station.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

WHERE'S SUMMERTIME HANTHEY? HAS SATAN HIM TO THE HILL
HMM... HOW TO ASSUAGE CRITICS OF THIS CRIME BILL W/ TRICKY LOOPHOLES INTO THE FOUNDERS INTENT?
LET'S SEE... A SMALL CHANGE IN LANGUAGE HERE... A CLARIFICATION THERE... A CONCESSION HERE & THERE... & CROSSED...
ET VOILA! GOOD GOD! HE'S BROKEN THE DEAD LOCK!
THAT BILL WILL WIN PASSAGE IN A HEART BEAT!
NOW THEN! I UNDERSTAND HEALTH CARE IS STALLED
QUICK! REMEMBER FOUNDERS' ALL THE DRAFTS!

Jim's Journal By Jim

Tony came over today and said, "I've decided how I'm gonna make my million, Jim."
"Writing songs!" he shouted.
He said big-name recording artists are always looking for good new material.
Then he asked if I had any ideas for a song.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

MIKE, THIS COMPREHENSIVE HEALTH CARE BILL YOU HAMMERED OUT IS ASTONISHING! NO WONDER IT RECEIVED BIPARTISAN SUPPORT IN BOTH HOUSES!
YOU HAVE A REMARKABLE TALENT FOR BRINGING PEOPLE TOGETHER.
WELL, THANKS, SIR, BUT I ALWAYS REALLY ONLY ACTING AT YOUR BEHEST.
ITS NOT LIKE TO DESERVE TO RECEIVE THE MEDAL OF FREEDOM, OUR NATION'S HIGHEST HONOR, MAKING ME THE YOUNGEST RECIPIENT IN HISTORY.
LATER THAT DAY...
CONGRATULATIONS, MIKE
I'M NOT WORTHY BUT I'M NOT TOO YOUNG

Jim's Journal By Jim

Today Tony said, "Hey, Jim, I hear you're looking for a new apartment."
He said he has some friends who need a roommate.
"It's five guys sharing a basement, and you'd get the space next to the furnace," he said.
"You know what five of my friends living together means, don't you?" he asked. "Round-the-clock PARTY!" he said.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

CONGRATULATIONS ON BECOMING OUR NATION'S YOUNGEST EVER RECIPIENT OF THE FREEDOM MEDAL, MIKE!
THANKS VERY MUCH, MRS. CLINTON
I DON'T KNOW HOW YOU MANAGED TO SOLVE ALL OUR NATION'S PROBLEMS SO QUICKLY!
I COULDN'T HAVE DONE IT WITHOUT YOUR HELP, BARRY SUE PERT, MRS. C.
BEYOND THAT, ALL IT REALLY TOOK WAS A LITTLE COMMON SENSE AND IMAGINATION!
ESPECIALLY IMAGINA-TION
THANKS, HILL. MAY I CALL YOU HILL?

Which comic strip would you like to see here?

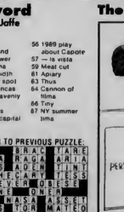
The Daily Collegian is looking for suggestions
contact Arthur Stapleton Jr.,
Managing Editor
545-0719

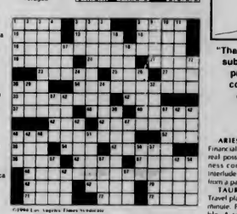
Daily Crossword
Edited byTrude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Theos of the sixties
5 Hooter
8 Pond dweller
12 Sign
13 Cashmere
15 Data, informally
18 Poore MIT grads?
19 Mountain ridge
20 Where to get a harp
21 Marsh bird
23 Speeder's nemesis
25 Take steps
27 One — million
28 Foot
30 "Tag" rules?
33 Ostentation
36 "— tu" Verdi aria
37 Merchant ship
38 Pouch
40 Wiser's companion
44 Peruse
46 Certain canines
48 Kissing?
52 Egg — yang
53 French soul
54 Agnus —
55 Forgetfulness
58 False god
60 Reverberate
62 Soap
65 Baby-food business?
66 Nobelist Wiesel
66 First name in fashion
70 Forum wear
71 Aud lang follower
72 Part of a
73 Presley's middle name

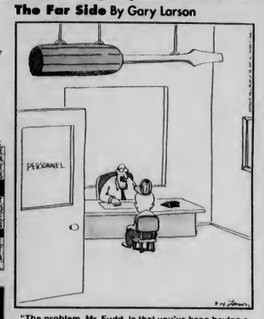
DOWN
1 — Raton
2 Moslem princes
3 Overthrow
4 Author Loos
5 See rad?
6 Marvelous
7 Theater section
8 Ascot
9 Unique person
10 Fearful
11 Medicinal activity
14 New Hampshire's state flower
17 Used a baton
18 Alcove
22 Cambodian's neighbor
24 Lunched
26 Seer's card
28 Back when
29 — Lanka
31 Old Egyptian headdress emblems
32 Cleo's river
34 Word
35 Helped with the dishes
39 Severe storms
41 Polecat party refugee
42 DDE's command
43 Pi follower
45 Wascona
47 Shoe width
48 Tasting spot
49 Semblances
50 Like heavenly gates
51 France's W.W.II capital
56 1989 play about Capote
57 — la vista
59 Meat cut
61 Apiary
63 Thus
64 Cannon of Ilima
66 Tiny
67 NY summer Ima

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:





The Far Side By Gary Larson



"The problem, Mr. Fudd, is that you've been having a subliminal effect on everyone in the factory. We're proud of our product, Mr. Fudd, and there's no company in the world that builds a finer skwoo dwivuh. . . Dang! Now you got me doing it!"

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21–April 19): Financial luck on a large scale is a real possibility; cultivate new business contacts. A brief romantic interlude leaves you wanting more from a partner.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20): Travel plans could change at the last minute. Public recognition is possible. A sudden personal decision may work out even better than anticipated. Loved ones are very interested.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20): Have faith in your ideas and special talents. Your dreams are particularly significant now. Put your writing skills to work. Read the fine print before affixing your signature to a contract.

CANCER (June 21–July 22): This month, your greatest satisfaction will come through your work. If planning a trip, consider going by water. Financial matters are up and down, but mostly up.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22): Keeping the cost of doing business down may be more difficult than ever. You can only try. Community service is a rewarding way for retirees to make new friends. Invite someone over for lunch or coffee.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22): Many of the projects you have in mind should be kept secret for now. Wise associates make the best advisers today. Step out of your shell and hold the disadvantaged. New friendships will develop.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22): Anyone who asks you to lend money or back a risky venture should be refused. Why take needless chances? Fame can be transitory. A romantic partner's respect and admiration could be permanent.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21): Only the soundest financial practices are valid during these times. Ignore any claims to the contrary. Your eagle eyes help you spot bargains while shopping.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21): You can open new doors now. Push harder for an overdue promotion. A special creative project could win you a helpful admirer. Postpone signing agreements until tomorrow.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19): You can own your own home and should be looking into it. Keep your ambition in perspective; walking over people will backfire. Own up to your mistakes. Kindness will help strengthen family ties.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18): A suggestion that improves job efficiency could bring you a promotion or preferential treatment from the boss. Get rid of some emotional baggage. Dwelling on old disappointments is waste of time.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20): A lot can be accomplished this morning. Discuss joint financial interests or shared belongings behind closed doors. Business and pleasure will mix well.

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

I'M HOME
HOW WAS YOUR MEETING WITH CALVIN'S TEACHER?
WELL, WHEN WE GOT TO THE CLASSROOM, WE SAW THAT ALL THE KIDS HAD DRAWN SELF PORTRAITS IN ART CLASS, AND HAD LEFT THE PICTURES ON THEIR DESKS SO THE PARENTS WOULD RECOGNIZE THEIR CHILD'S SEAT.
THAT'S A CUTE IDEA DID YOU FIND CALVIN'S PICTURE?
THERE WAS ONE DRAWING OF A GREEN KID WITH FANGS, SIX EYES, AND HIS FINGER UP HIS NOSE
UH OH
THE MEETING WENT DOWNHILL FROM THERE

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

CALVIN, I
YIKE!! YOU'RE HOME! I DIDN'T EVEN FINISH PACK... THAT IS, UM...
LIES! EVERYTHING MISS WORMWOOD SAID ABOUT ME WAS A LIE! SHE JUST DOESN'T LIKE ME! SHE HATES LITTLE BOYS! IT'S NOT MY FAULT! I'M NOT TO BLAME!
SHE TOLD YOU ABOUT THE NOODLES, RIGHT? IT WASN'T ME! NOBODY SAW ME! I WAS FRAMED! I WOULDN'T DO ANYTHING LIKE THAT! I'M INNOCENT, I TELL YOU!
WHAT NOODLES?
UH... UH... HA HA! DID I SAY NOODLES? YOU MUST HAVE HEARD WRONG. I DIDN'T SAY NOODLES

Your student strip could be here

Bring a sample down to the Daily Collegian offices
ask for Arthur Stapleton Jr.,
Managing Editor

Jim's Journal By Jim

Today I got home from the copy store around 4 p.m.
I was really tired, so I took a nap.
When I got up it was 6 o'clock.
For a second, I couldn't tell if it was morning or night.

Jim's Journal By Jim

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Greg's Hot Heroes	Cavatelli Supreme
Chicken Pucks	The Dreaded Scrod
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Yentil Chili	Black-Eyed Peas
Chicken Pucks	Scrod (YUCK!!)

Quote of the Day

"It is generally much more shameful to lose a good reputation than never to have acquired it."

—Pliny the Younger

Do you have a knack for writing?

Are you interested in Black, Jewish or multicultural affairs? Or maybe women's issues, developing nations or gay, lesbian and bisexual issues?

If so, come on down to the Massachusetts Daily Collegian and let your words be read by thousands. . .

Editorships are open for Black Affairs, Developing Nations and Women's Issues. Stop by the Collegian offices, 113 Campus Center for more information.

Radical students regroup as Alliance for Student Power

By Ben German
Collegian Staff

The voices of radicalism on campus aren't radical anymore.

The Radical Student Union (RSU), a registered student organization advocating leftist philosophies on campus for 20 years, has changed its name to the Alliance for Student Power (ASP). But while the word radical may be absent from the ASP's title, it remains entrenched in its goals.

"Our goal is to be farther left than any other group on campus and to make the liberals debate us instead of the conservatives," said ASP member Kenneth Miller.

The ASP will continue to publish its newspaper, the Liberator, and has scheduled Prison Awareness Week in November to draw attention to the plight of political prisoners and the high rate of minority incarceration in the United States. The ASP also plans to focus on the link between economic opportunities and crime rates.

"The rate of criminal behavior is related to the shape of the economy, the joblessness and reliance on social assistance," said Miller.

The ASP will continue advocating the elimination of tuition and the establishment of education as a right for everyone, according to Liberator editor and former RSU president Charles Lenchner.

Lenchner, a senior, has interrupted his studies in the past because he hasn't been able to afford to stay in school, an experience he says has had great impact on his beliefs.

Part of the ASP's agenda for the semester is to erase the image of the RSU as a nihilistic organization and convey to students that it's an outlet for acting on distrust of government.

"People's impression of the RSU has been that it was against everything and didn't have constructive politics. Our job now is to explain to people that the things we want are very commonsensical. People accused Roosevelt of being a socialist for advocating social security," said Lenchner.

The RSU's predecessor was established in the wake of the splintering of the student-driven radical movement at the end of the 1960s. In the early 1970s, a fragment of the shattered nationwide progressive organization Students for a Democratic Society called the Revolutionary Communist Youth Brigade (RCYB) formed a chapter on campus.

The sphere of the group's influence on campus peaked in the late '70s when the organization hosted several conferences on socialist thought. The RCYB changed its name at the turn of the decade to the RSU. Between 1985 and 1989 the RSU published a paper called Critical Times, the predecessor to the Liberator.

The upcoming edition of the Liberator, published monthly, will focus on the role of socialism in the lives of women in Eastern Europe, the 1960s and W.E.B. DuBois.

This semester the ASP hopes to plan its activities in cooperation with other local progressive organizations.

"There's a network around the Valley of left-wing organizations. We'd like to see ourselves as part of that community," Miller said.

Women's advocates' training starts Sept. 24

The Everywoman's Center has announced that applications for its Counselor/Advocate and Educator/Advocate programs are due Sept. 19.

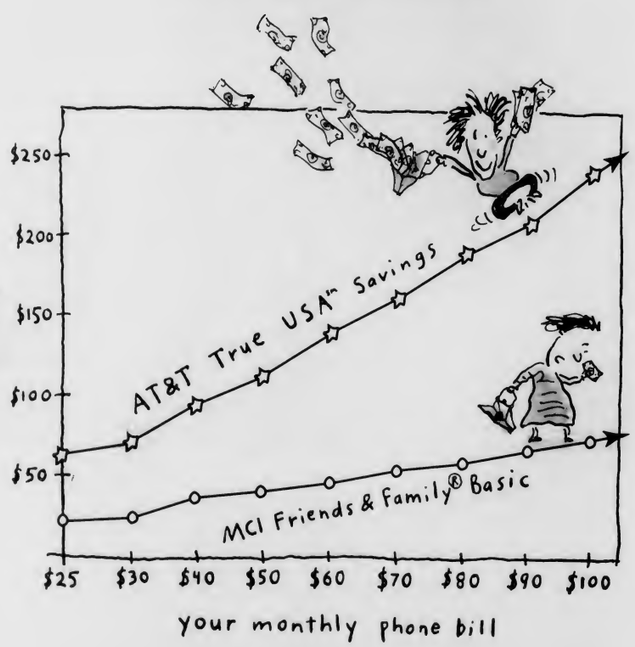
The fall training program for volunteers interested in working with survivors of sexual assault and battering or educating the community about violence against women will begin Sept. 24.

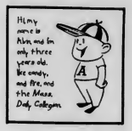
The Counselor/Advocate Program includes a 24-hour hotline and counseling and advocacy services for victims of sexual assault and battering. Spanish-speaking counselors are now available on the hotline.

The Educator/Advocate Program provides public education, professional training and community advocacy on the same issues.

No experience is necessary and bilingual women and women of color are encouraged to apply. For more information, call the Everywoman's Center at 545-3474.

True Math.





"One day I decided to sell my bike and my car, and in the spirit of Walden Woods & Don Henley, I would walk everywhere from now on.

I also decided that the best way to get rid of them and make a whole lot of cash (that I wouldn't donate any of to a worthy environmental cause) was to advertise in The Collegian Classifieds.

Needless to say, I sold my bike and car, but when I looked to see my classified in the paper I saw a really cool classified for a motorcycle. Screw the environment, now I ride with the wind and death at my side."

Collegian Classifieds
They really work.

Campus Center Basement 113 545-3500

You don't have to be a calc professor to see you could save more with AT&T True USA℠ Savings.

It's true—if you live off campus, AT&T True USA℠ Savings really could save you more. Just look up your average monthly long distance bill on the chart, and see for yourself.

Now here's why. AT&T's and MCI's basic rates start off about the same. Then, with Friends and Family, MCI advertises 20% off your long distance calls, but—here's the catch—only if they're to MCI users who are also on your calling circle list. Truth is, two-thirds of most Friends and Family members' calls aren't to those selected people. So the average discount you end up seeing on your bill is only 6%.* Not the 20% you expected.

AT&T True USA℠ Savings is a whole lot simpler. Spend $25 a month, and we'll subtract 20% off your bill. The full 20%—not some conditional percentage. Spend $75 a month, and we'll take 30% off. You can save on calls to anyone, anytime, anywhere in the good old U.S. of A. No restrictions. No calling circles. No disappointments.

So take a good look at the chart (you can ask a math major for help) and check out who's saving you what. We think you'll find you could be saving a lot more with AT&T. Call 1 800-TRUE-USA.℠ And get all the savings you expect.

1 800-TRUE-USA℠

AT&T. Your True Voice.℠

AT&T

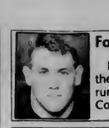
*Discount off MCI basic rates. Friends & Family provides an extra discount on qualifying calls.
Discount off AT&T basic residential rates. Available in most areas. Certain exclusions apply.

© 1994 AT&T

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycles
Biocycles
Treadmill

EMERGENCY MEDICAL TRAINING
BY HUMAN SERVICES TRAINING CONSULTANTS, INC.
PART TIME EVENING CLASSES START SEPT. 19, 1994
CALL UMASS CONTINUING EDUCATION
545-0474

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Sports
Fall 1994 Season Preview
Tuesday, September 13, 1994



Football off & running

Rene Ingoglia heads into the season as one of the top running backs in the Yankee Conference (Story on page 8).

Volleyball off to hot start

In only their second year the volleyball team has been impressive jumping out to a 4-0 start. Game Capsules and season preview on page 5.

Women's Soccer

The Minutewomen, after making it to the NCAA FInal Four last year, will attempt to duplicate that feat this year with a younger team (Story on page 7).

Donnelly's Debut

Former player Megan Donnelly returns to coach field hockey at UMass (Story on page 3).

Garber leaves UMass lax

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

For the first time in the University of Massachusetts men's lacrosse history, the team will be Garberless.

After a successful four-year stint, Ted Garber resigned on Aug. 12, effective immediately, and accepted both the lacrosse and soccer coaching positions, as well as the position of associate athletic director at Avon Old Farms Preparatory School in Avon, Connecticut.

Arriving in 1990, and replacing his legendary father Dick, Garber compiled a 37–17 record at UMass in his tenure, and made the NCAA Tournament twice (1991 and 1993). Garber had chalked up a 117–98 record while coaching for 12 seasons at the University of New Hampshire prior to coming to Massachusetts.

"I certainly wasn't looking to leave," said Garber.

Avon Old Farms Preparatory School had the three job vacancies to fill. Headmaster George Trautman contacted Garber, and offered him the spots. Garber had previously taught and coached at Avon Old Farms 20 some-odd years ago.

Garber said he went to the Massachusetts athletic department about a contract, and the offer extended "wasn't worthwhile" because of the lack of "job security." Since the contract was a more lucrative one at Avon Old Farms, Garber felt he had no choice but to accept the more financially secure job.

"[At Massachusetts], I was being offered one year contracts each year," said Garber. "I was told in my first year under a different administration that it was going to be like that. I thought that was unfair. I still felt I deserved a long term contract."

Garber and his wife Deb have three children, sons Brook, 14, Brett, 11, and daughter Brittany, 8. His children influenced his decision to take the new job. Each of the three kids will be able to go to the private school at no cost, which is a definite benefit.

After 16 plus years of coaching on the collegiate level, Garber will try his hand at coaching high school once again. The Avon Old Farms Preparatory School has what Garber described as "unbelievable" facilities. Which is not surprising, considering that it costs $20,000 a year to go there.

As for the lacrosse team, the Winged Beavers, a much different team nickname than the famed Gorillas at Massachusetts, are coming off a 19–1 season in the Founder's League.

After building a collegiate team to becoming one of the best ones in the country, Garber is now walking into one of the most successful high school preparatory school teams in the country. A transition, of sorts.

Garber admitted he felt a bit eerie as he packed his things up while moving out of his office for the last time.

"Walking into Boyden Gym again was weird," Garber said. "I grew up there. I used to watch my Dad down at the field. I just wish I had a little more loyalty."

As for who is going to be the next Massachusetts men's lacrosse coach is anyone's guess. A search committee is going to be organized by the athletic department to find Garber's successor. The interim coach is former Garber assistant Greg Cannella.

"They should name Greg head coach," said Garber. "I have gotten a lot of positive comments from people, and Greg had a lot to do with it. He's a great recruiter, and he works his tail off."

It's easy to notice the disappointment in Ted Garber's voice. He sounded a bit sad and a little bitter. But despite the feelings and emotions, Garber puts it into proper perspective.

"It's like dropping a rock into a big bucket of water. When it happens, there is a big splash, but then it all evens out," Garber said.

Ted Garber certainly wasn't looking to leave. Regardless, he's now gone.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO
Ted Garber resigned as men's lacrosse coach, and took the job at Avon Old Farms Prep School.

Scurry on U.S. National Team

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

After leading the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team to the NCAA Final Four last November, former UMass goalkeeper Briana Scurry picked up where she left off, earning MVP honors playing for the United States National team at the Chiquita Cup tournament.

Scurry was awarded the Adidas Golden Boot after she started all three games, recording a shutout while giving up only two goals in the three games.

The United States went undefeated in the four-team, round-robin tournament, which was held in August, with wins over Germany, 2–1; China, 1–0; and Norway 4–1.

The Chiquita Cup tournament is a tuneup for the World Cup qualifications. The World Cup will be held in Sweden next year.

Scurry's former coach, Jim Rudy, was obviously pleased with the honor bestowed upon his former goalkeeper.

"It's a great honor for her and for us; her teammates, coach and the school. It's great publicity for us," Rudy said.

"But it's about time too. She could have been in that group a long time ago. Sometimes these things take time. She should have been in there a while ago, I think, but I'm glad she's in there now," she said.

Scurry finished off her tremendous career at UMass last year by leading the team to the NCAA Final Four where they lost to North Carolina.

Scurry started all 23 games for the Minutewomen and had a 0.48 goals-against average, which just happened to be the best in the nation, along with 15 shutouts.

The goalkeeper also made 124 saves for the year, giving up only 12 goals for a .912 save percentage.

Scurry was named the Atlantic 10 Co-player of the Year and was last year's winner of the Missouri Athletic Club/Adidas National Goalkeeper of the Year award.

Named to the Northeast Region All-America team, Scurry was also named to the National Soccer Coaches Association of America/UMBRO All-America second team.

In Scurry's overall career at UMass, she had a 0.56 goals against average, 37 shutouts and a 48–13–4 record.

She is the all-time saves leader with 368 and the all-time leader for most shutouts in a season (15). She is second all- time in career shutouts, behind leader Carla DeSantis (1985– 88) who had 37.5 while Scurry had 37.

Hixon leads U.S. in Cup

By Mike Pinder and Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts field hockey coach Pam Hixon led the United States women's national team to a stunning bronze medal performance at the World Cup in Dublin, Ireland in July.

"Not in our wildest dreams did we expect this," said Hixon. "It was absolutely fantastic."

Hixon is on a two-year sabbatical from her position at UMass to become the coach of the United States National Team and will return after the 1996 Olympics in Atlanta. Former Minutewomen player and assistant coach Megan Donnelly will be coaching UMass in Hixon's absence.

The U.S team, ranked 11th entering the tournament, opened up with a 1–0 victory over an English squad (whose back up goalkeeper was current Minutewoman netminder Hilary Rose) for its first win in World Cup competition in 20 years.

Hixon's squad followed that performance with a 1–1 tie against Germany and a 2–1 upset of defending World Cup champion, the Netherlands. Despite falling to Canada 1–0 in their next match-up, the Americans earned a berth in the tournament semifinals.

In the semifinal round, the U.S was defeated by a tough Argentinian squad, but rebounded from the loss by knocking off Germany to take the bronze medal.

In addition to the younger players, the team was comprised of several veterans from the 1990 World Cup that finished last, as well as the 1992 national team that failed to qualify for the Olympics in Barcelona. The success had an extra special meaning for them.

"There were a lot of older players on the squad who had felt like they just couldn't do it," said Hixon. "But our youth and experience came together so well."

As a former member of the National Team herself, Hixon holds a special place for representing her country.

"Even without the bronze medal, it was a great experience," said Hixon. "It was a great honor to be selected."

Hixon has had a very illustrious coaching career at UMass and is recognized as one of the top field hockey coaches in the nation. She has been named Atlantic 10 Coach of the Year for four straight years (1990-93). During her 16-year tenure, Hixon has compiled an impressive 255-69-18 record, making her the winningest active coach in Division I.

The Framingham, Mass. native was named the 1981 National Coach of the Year in Division I field hockey and has led UMass to all 13 NCAA Tournaments, a feat unattained by any other coach in NCAA history. Four of her teams reached the Final Four.

Hixon and the US squad will next compete in the Pan Am games in Argentina in March.

* * *

The U.S National Team was not the only American team in Ireland in July. The UMass field hockey team was also in Dublin participating in four exhibition games.

Donnelly led the Minutewomen to a 3–1 record during their 10-day international trip.

COURTESY UMASS MEDIA RELATIONS
Hixon led the U.S. National Field Hockey team to the bronze at the World Cup.

UM alumni earn tryouts

By Andrew Bryce and Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

Three former University of Massachusetts football players kept their playing careers alive this summer.

Former offensive guard Bill Durkin, linebacker Mario Perry, and safety Don Caparotti all hooked up with professional teams, and two, Perry and Caparotti, are still playing.

Both are members of the Shreveport Pirates, a Canadian Football League team from Shreveport, Los Angeles. Perry is starting at outside linebacker for the Pirates, while Caparotti is on special teams, according to Massachusetts football coach Mike Hodges.

Durkin, after being cut by the New England Patriots, was supposedly released by the Pirates after just a week of being there, said Hodges.

On May 4, the 6-foot–5, 290-plus–pounder signed a free agent contract with the New England Patriots before heading to Training Camp in August.

Despite being cut when the team was brought down to 53 players [with 80 players that started camp], Durkin did not leave unnoticed. One person that noticed was Patriot head coach Bill Parcells.

"He's a tough kid," said Parcels at Bryant College campus in Smithfield, Rhode Island, the camp site for the Patriots, during one of the preseason practice sessions. "He's certainly not out of place here, but he's fighting for his life. He's a hard worker."

Durkin, 23, proved that he has the potential to play on the professional level. An All-American senior last season at Massachusetts, it must be noted that Durkin has only played offensive line for that past two years.

* * *

Another former Minuteman tried to hook on with a local team this summer as well. Former center Harper Williams was invited to the Boston Celtics rookie-free agent camp at Brandeis University in July.

Williams had spent a season in Spain after trying out for the Los Angeles Lakers finishing his career at UMass in 1993.

Minor injuries hampered Williams, sidelining him from the first of the four-day camp. He performed fairly on the offense, but struggled defensively on the second.

Williams suffered a separated shoulder on day three ending his chances of making the team.

Williams plans to return for his second season in Spain.

COURTESY UMASS MEDIA RELATIONS
Haprer Williams participated in the rookie free agent camp this summer.

A look at sports stories of the summer

It was a memorable summer indeed in the sports world. A memorable one for many negative reasons, as well as some positive ones. There was the unexpected and the expected. There were the surprising, and the disappointing. That's why you gotta' love sports, man. The drama alone just gives me tingles in lonely places. Well, here it goes...

...There was a tragedy, and all of you followed it. You heard about the double-murder, and you waited to see if there was a link to him. When there was a link to him, you watched to see if anything would happen. You then watched the television in a shock as the white Ford Bronco was being followed by a load of cop cars.

You saw the bloodied murder sight. You saw the friend dictate the letter written by him. You saw the onlookers on the overpasses of the highway, cheering him on as he drove by. You saw the policeman take him into custody, and you saw his mug shot.

You've seen him on the cover of the Enquirer, and you have learned something new about him on "Hard Copy." You've seen him on all of the major television networks in court, and you've seen extensive coverage on CNN.

"Did OJ do it?," people ask. "Do you think OJ was capable of doing such a thing?" OJ this, OJ that. I'll tell you what bothers me about the OJ situation is just this: that this incident, which includes two people being murdered, has turned into the OJ incident.

Again, two people were murdered. Stabbed to death. And all we care about is if one of America's well-known celebrities did it or not. It's the American media, and we all get caught up in it. All of us.

...There was a travesty. Instead of a baseball diamond, America's pastime now has two teams going up against each other on opposite sides of a table.

The players — those greedy bums. Those owners — the stiffs. I really do miss watching baseball on television and listening to it on the radio. It's hard to believe there's a strike and there's no resolution in sight.

They picked a good year to strike, huh? History could have been made by Tony Gwynn, who was in and around .400 most of the season. Matty Williams had a chance at hitting 61 dingers. Frank Thomas and Albert Belle were each close to a Triple Crown season. How 'bout that Bagwell guy? Should have been a Red Socker.

And, despite being a Yankee-hater, it would have been nice to see Don Mattingly play in the playoffs for the first time in his career.

But why get all hung up on it? My friend heard an interesting quote on the radio: "Hey, if the players and owners don't care about baseball, why should we?"

The strike sparks up another thought in my mind. I was watching Sportscenter on ESPN the other night, and they said how much money was being lost by the owners as well as the players, and I thought about this.

An owner is losing, say, over $200 million and counting. That player is losing, maybe, over $30,000 a year, and still going. What about that man that works as a hot dog vendor at Fenway with a salary, and is forced out of work by the strike?

Think about it. Vendors, ushers, ticket sellers, cashiers, custodians and the many others who have jobs affiliated with baseball and can't work. While Bobby Bonilla doesn't get that three million dollars during the course of strike, Bobby Cornshucker doesn't get his $5 an hour, either.

Mr. Cornhusker's job may not be as high-profile as Mr. Bonilla's, but it is a living. And because of the extremely and outrageously high amounts of money (and greed) being thrown around by the millionaire players and millionaire owners, Mr. Cornhusker is out of a job.

...There was Phil Rizzuto making it to the Hall of Fame. Does he deserve it? Obviously, I didn't see him play. By statistics? Not in my mind. Hey, if you say "Holy Cow" in an annoyingly loud, high-pitched voice, I guess you too can become a baseball Hall of Famer.

...There was Dominique Wilkins becoming a Celtic. I love the thought of 'Nique in green and white, and I get all bunched up inside when M.L. Carr wheels and deals. But the only way a team achieves the ultimate success of an NBA Championship is through the draft. Don't build on today. Mi., you don't have enough. Build on tomorrow.

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

Millon wins M.V.P.

By Anthony Gaido
Collegian Staff

Mark Millon's star continues to rise in the lacrosse world, as the former University of Massachusetts athlete was named Most Valuable Player of the World Championships.

Millon and three other former UMass lacrosse players helped the United States capture its sixth consecutive World Lacrosse Championship, which was held in Bury, England.

Sal LoCasio, a UMass standout from 1986–89, was named All-World goalkeeper. Former All-American Scott Hiller and Tim Soudan also were on the gold-medal winning squad.

Millon, a 1993 graduate, lead the U.S. in scoring with 27 goals and 17 assists throughout the seven game tournament. He scored four goals and picked up two assists to lead the U.S. over Australia 21–7 in the championship game.

In his senior season, Millon led the NCAA in scoring with 81 points on 58 goals and 23 assists. He totaled 155 goals and 58 assists to place him fourth on the all-time UMass scoring list, second all-time in goals.

Millon led UMass to the NCAA tournament in 1993 and was named New England Player of the Year, an honor LoCasio earned three times while leading UMass to the tournament from 1986–89.

After graduation in 1993, Millon was drafted by the New York Saints of the Major Indoor Lacrosse League. Earlier this year, he garnered Most Valuable Player honors while playing for the Long Island Hofstra Club team in the Club Lacrosse League.

John Hopkins, which had seven former players, was the only other school to have more players represented on the U.S squad.

NHL selects Minutemen

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

The best recruiting class in Hockey East?

It is an arguable point, but if the National Hockey League draft is the measuring stick, the Minutemen seem to have quite a crop of freshman as they enter their first season of Hockey East competition.

"I'm almost 100 percent certain that no other college hockey team in the nation had four guys drafted in the 1994 season," said Massachusetts Coach Joe Mallen. "To have four guys drafted in our second year of operation is a tribute to the work we've done this year."

Five incoming University of Massachusetts freshmen have been drafted by NHL teams. Tom O'Connor (Pittsburgh fourth round), Mike Gaffney (Ottawa sixth round), Dan Juden (Tampa Bay sixth round) and Brian Regan (Hartford 11th round) were picked in the 1994 draft. Brad Norton was taken by Edmonton in the 1993 draft, but played in preparatory school at Cushing Academy a year before coming to UMass.

Mallen got O'Connor as a direct result of the scholarship turmoil that has recently plagued the Boston College hockey program.

Several BC recruits claimed that the BC program has backed out of promised scholarship money. O'Connor, who was expected to be a key addition to the Eagle defense, was one such recruit.

"We have an agreement in our league that if a player signs a letter of intent and commits to one of the schools in our league, then it's hands off," said Mallen. "He did not sign a letter of intent, and because of the way our agreement is, he was open to be approached by other institutions. We went after him and we were lucky enough to get him."

Juden is an interesting story as well. The Tampa Bay Lighting front office liked Juden's size and speed, and picked him in the sixth round. Despite the professional interest, Juden did not receive any Division I scholarship offers.

"Scouts in the National Hockey League have seen something in him, some spurts that make him look like he could develop into a professional hockey player," said Mallen. "But there are a lot of other people that question whether he can play that way consistently. So therefore nobody in Division I offered him a scholarship.

Defense will get the biggest boost from the freshman class. Mallen looked to add size to his defense during the recruiting season. In addition to the 6'2, O'Connor, Gaffney (6'1, 210 lbs) and Norton (6'5, 225 lbs) will be competing for playing time.

In goal, Regan will challenge incumbents David Kilduff and Rich Moriarty for the goaltending duties.

As a Connecticut native, Regan was excited to be drafted by the Whalers.

"It was very exciting to be drafted, no matter what team," said Regan. "To have it be the Whalers was icing on the cake."

Mallen warns the players against getting too excited about their immediate contributions.

"Can we expect miracles from these guys? Absolutely not," said Mallen. "You can expect them to be key contributors, but not miracles. They've got to be weaned into the Hockey East because it's a big step for freshman. As far as potential though, they could be solid contributors in the Hockey East three or four years down the road."

Minutemen prepare for Hockey East

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

The dress rehearsal is over.

Last year ice hockey made a successful return to the University of Massachusetts, compiling an impressive 20–9 record against mostly Division II and III opponents. But make no mistake, as the Minutemen prepare to enter into a full Hockey East schedule, the real challenge lies just ahead.

"I'm very excited and enthusiastic about the upcoming year, but in terms of the program, I look at this as being the toughest year," said Minuteman Coach Joe Mallen. "At least this year, I know the faces that are coming back here and what they can do. I have a little bit better sense of what our team might look like."

The difference between Divisions II and III and Division I is considerable. While the Minutemen regularly pounded their lesser opponents, they were a meager 1–6 against Division I opponents.

Increased experience will be a key for UMass. One year ago, Mallen's squad consisted of mostly freshman with no collegiate experience and no playing time. Having a season under their belt will go a long way, despite having very little Division I experience.

"I expect to see huge improvements in their strength," said Mallen. "I think we're going to see a huge jump in the play of a lot of guys. The question is whether they can jump up with their skills and determination, night in and night out against Division I teams."

The Minutemen will need several things to take that next step. Offensively, the Minutemen will need continued scoring consistency from their first two lines. Rob Bonneau, Mike Evans and company need to prove that they can be scoring threats night in and night out at the next level.

The blue line is a potential bright spot if the mixture of the talented returning players transfers, and highly regarded recruits can get together and continue to improve.

The 1994–95 Minutemen will have four players that will provide some quality experience. When Mallen left Boston College for UMass, two of his players came with him. Forward Sal Manganaro brings two seasons of Hockey East experience to the Minuteman offense, and former Eagle defensemen Keith O'Connell is expected to improve UMass on defense.

Two other transfers, Josh Hoekstra (Colorado College) and John Jacques (Boston University) will also be competing for roster spots.

An impressive recruiting class that includes five NHL draft picks will improve the Minutemen. Mallen added size to his defense by including three large blue liners and speed to his offense with two talented forwards.

Mallen is pleased by the idea of another competitive training camp. With the additions of the transfers and recruits, there are few defined roles in terms of roster spots and playing time.

GORDON FENWICK / COLLEGIAN

Blair Wagar and the rest of the Minutemen will have to step up their performance to be successful in Hockey East.

"We have a whole team of guys coming back, where nobody thinks they have anything made," said Mallen. "It's going to be a very competitive training camp. Therefore all the guys aren't resting on their laurels. The motivation is there for everybody to be at their peak."

Competing in one of the premier divisions of college hockey will be a daunting task for the Minutemen. Maine is only two years removed from their National Championship season, and BU went to the finals last year. Mallen has set his goals on being competitive.

"Our challenge, as a mostly freshman and sophomore team, is to make our mark on the league and be competitive night in and night out," said Mallen.

In the past Mallen has drawn upon the Florida Panthers and Finnish National teams as models for the underdogs remaining competitive.

Mallen is hoping that the top competition and the likely emergence of local rivalries will draw more fans to the Mullins Center.

"In my estimation, it [ice hockey] is the most exciting spectator sport that there is," said Mallen. "I think we're at the stage where we need to build the student base. We're not going to wait for the students to come to us. We have to go out and bring the students into the building, because once you get to see a UMass hockey game, you're going to come back and see another."

The Minutemen open their season October 22 at UMass, Lowell. Hockey East action returns to the Amherst campus November 18, when the Minutemen take on BU.

1994–95 UMass Men's Hockey Schedule

October		December		17	BOWDOIN
22	at Lowell*	2	MERRIMACK*	20	at Providence*
29	at Providence*	3	MERRIMACK*	22	PROVIDENCE*
30	at Boston College*	9	at UNH*	24	ARMY
November		10	UNH*	27	MAINE*
4	COLGATE	16	PRINCETON	28	MAINE*
5	UNION COLLEGE	30	NOTRE DAME	31	at Holy Cross
11	at Air Force	31	NOTRE DAME	February
12	at Air Force	January		3	BOSTON UNIVERSITY*
18	BOSTON UNIVERSITY*	6	at Boston College*	5	UNH*
19	at Boston University*	7	BOSTON COLLEGE*	10	at Merrimack*

11	at Maine*
17	at Lowell*
18	LOWELL*
24	NORTHEASTERN*
25	at Northeastern*
March
4	at Northeastern*
10–11	Hockey East Tournament
17–18	Hockey East Tournament

*Hockey East Conference game

JCPenney
DOING IT RIGHT
HAMPSHIRE MALL • HADLEY
Your UMass Headquarters
25% off all UMass apparel
T-Shirts
Sweatshirts
Sweatpants
Jackets
Hats
Shorts
• Prices effective thru Sunday September 18
Store Hours
Monday - Saturday 10a.m. - 9p.m.
Sunday 12p.m. - 5p.m.

Hampshire Mall
Hadley, MA
586-5505

Field Hockey: UMass At a Glance

"We're here to win the National Championship. As far as I'm concerned, we're capable of doing it."
-sophomore goalie HILARY ROSE

Megan Donnelly

Head Coach: Megan Donnelly, Massachusetts 1986.

Assistants: Amy Robertson, Massachusetts 1986, Ainslee Press, Massachusetts 1993.

1993: 19–4

Pre–season Rank: Seven

Captains: Danielle Borges, Kyri Sparks.

Starters Lost: Tara Jelley forward, Jenn Salisbury forward, Holly Hockenbrock midfield, Tracy Barclay defense.

Probable Starters:
FORWARDS: Danielle Borges, Kerry Metelski, Streya Volla
MIDFIELD: Colleen Duffy, Kyle Rothenberger, Amy Ott
DEFENSE: Andrea Cabral, Kyri Sparks, Melanie Gore
GOALTENDER: Hilary Rose

Newcomers: Tiffany Clark, Amesbury, MA. Courtney Maclean, Westboro, MA. Amy Ott, Schwenksville, PA. Melissa Sweeney, Malvern, PA.

Minutewomen set sights on title

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

New coach, same goal.

It will be a different looking Massachusetts field hockey team this year, starting at the top. Coach Pam Hixon, who has been an institution, is on a two-year hiatus coaching the United States National Team. It will be former Minutewoman Megan Donnelly pacing the Totman Gymnasium sidelines.

With Hixon at the helm, making the NCAA Tournament was a given. Beginning with the first NCAA Field Hockey Tournament in 1981, UMass has gone to the post season every year. Despite Hixon's absence, Donnelly expects no less from the Minutewomen.

"I don't want to lower our expectations just because Pam isn't here," said Donnelly.

Despite her short tenure, Donnelly feels very comfortable with her squad. She credits the team's four–game summer trip to Ireland as a crucial factor for her and the team.

"I have a good idea what they're capable of," said Donnelly.

The team's strengths have shifted from last year's Final Eight team. With All–American seniors Tara Jelley and Jenn Salisbury at forward, it was the offense that paced the 1993 Minutewomen.

Graduation claimed the Minutewomen's top scoring threats, and in 1994 it will be an experienced defense that leads Donnelly's squad.

Offense: Only senior co–captain Danielle Borges returns from last year's front line. After performing in the shadow of Jelley and Salisbury, Donnelly thinks that Borges will shine in her new leadership role.

"Danielle Borges has really stepped up big. When I saw her in Ireland, she just played out of her mind," Donnelly said. "I think she's excited at the chance to come into her own and to step up and be noticed."

Borges did step up in the Minutewomen's season opener, scoring all three goals in their 3–0 victory over Boston College.

Also moving into increased roles will be juniors Kerry Metelski and Streya Volla. Donnelly is confident that the duo will emerge as a talented offensive unit.

"Streya has played really strong this preseason," said Donnelly. "I think they're ready to step up. They have both been doing extra work after each practice."

The offense will get a boost when Sharon Hughes (mononucleosis) and Julie Loranger (knee), who have both been sidelined, return to the line–up.

"We can't afford any problems at the forward line," Donnelly said. "We don't have a lot of experience up there right now."

With Hughes and Loranger out indefinitely, freshmen Melissa Sweeney, Courtney MacLean and Tiffany Clark will have an opportunity to get some experience.

The penalty corner should be potent again, with the cannon shot of Natalie Hart giving opposing goalies nightmares.

Midfield: Led by senior Colleen Duffy and sophomore All–America candidate Kyle Rothenberger, the midfield will be strong as well.

"The midfielders will get more involved in the offense this year," said Donnelly. "Both Colleen and Kyle have excellent offensive skills, and I think you'll see them get more shots."

Amy Ott will be the lone freshman in the starting line up replacing graduated left back Holly Hockenbrock.

Defense: Without question, the defense is the key to the team.

Led by goalie Hilary Rose, sweeper Natalie Hart, and backs Kyri Sparks and Andrea Cabral, this is one of the best units in the nation. The team will go as far as the defense carries them.

Outlook: The team has set their goals high. They begin the season ranked No. 7, and are considered Atlantic 10 and New England favorites. The team also has loftier goals, as they've set their sights on the National Championship.

"We have things you need to get that far in the tournament," said Donnelly. "We have a very strong defense, an outstanding corner shooter and a hot goalie. Our strengths are the strengths that you need to be a final four team."

"Our goal is to be national champs," said Sparks. "Nothing is going to falter us from that."

The Minutewomen will be tested along the way, playing No. 1. North Carolina (Oct. 9), and No. 2 Old Dominion (Oct. 2).

SPORTS INFORMATION

Natalie Hart is expected to play a vital role on offense and defense for UMass.

Solid defense key to crown

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

Offense wins games. Defense wins championships.

If the axiom holds true for the University of Massachusetts field hockey team, 1994 could be the year.

One year ago, Coach Pam Hixon listed her inexperienced defense as the team's biggest question mark going into the 1993 season.

A lot has changed in a year.

Throughout the course of the season, the defense erased the questions from Hixon's mind and emerged into a talented unit.

Heading into this season, with an inexperienced offense, it will be the defense that anchors the Minutewomen.

"The defense is the key. The team plays how the defense plays," said Coach Megan Donnelly. "If we stay healthy, I don't see too many teams that can do much against us."

It starts with sophomore goaltender Hilary Rose. In her freshman season, she led the nation in goals against average and save percentage. Her field hockey resume includes playing in the World Cup for Great Britain.

"Hilary is an international player," Donnelly said. "There isn't a game on our schedule that would faze her."

That experience, combined with her calming presence, is a great asset to the Minutewomen.

"Hilary is like another coach on the field," Donnelly said. "She has a great knowledge of the game. She has a great manner and sense of humor that keeps everybody loose. She's very important to the team on and off the field."

In front of Rose is another talented British import. Armed with a powerful shot, 6'2 Natalie Hart has become an important part of the Minutewomen defense. If an opposing team is to have any success on offense, they have to keep the ball away from her. One opposing coach described Hart as "the place offense goes to die." Her strong shot, especially on turf, enables her to clear out any threat that comes into her area.

"She is extremely valuable," Donnelly said. "She takes up all this room and makes you go wide."

Perhaps the most underrated member of the UMass defense is co–captain Kyri Sparks. The California native usually gets the assignment of shadowing the opponents top scorer. If she gets noticed, it's because she has failed to perform her task.

In last year's Atlantic 10 championships, Sparks drew the task of covering the A–10's top gun, Rutgers' Heather Jones. Fresh off a four–goal performance against Rhode Island, Jones appeared to be in top form. But throughout the final game, she barely saw the ball, as Sparks blanketed her on route to a 4–0 Minutewomen victory.

"Kyri is an outstanding marker," Donnelly said. "She is probably one of the marking defensive players in the game. It shows her defensive mentality and work ethic. When she sets her mind to something, she pretty much does it."

The combination of Sparks and Hart forces opponents to attack from the outside.

"It's hard to get by those two," Donnelly said. "Teams can't attack the middle on us. That's a huge advantage."

The defense takes pride in their role, and they have confidence that they can live up to the expectations.

"They are tough and strong, and that's a tradition at UMass," Donnelly said. "The defense has always had the mentality of nobody gets by you. Nobody gets in your circle. They work together as a unit very well."

"It's a sense of tradition. We feel we have something to live up to," said Sparks. "We want the ball. We want to own it. We want to get it out of our end so the offense can score. Nothing is going to stop us."

"We all get feisty when we get down to it," said junior Andrea Cabral. "We all really get focused. We go a little bit nuts."

The defense received a setback when projected starter Jen Gutzman suffered a knee injury in practice. Gutzman will definitely miss the season opener and could possibly miss the entire year. Sophomore Melanie Gore will start in her place.

Former Minutewomen returns as coach

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

If you told Megan Donnelly a year ago that she would be coaching a National Title contender, she probably would not have believed you.

Fate does funny things. When UMass Coach Pam Hixon accepted the position of United States National Team Coach last December, a two–year interim head coach position became available. Nine months later Donnelly is back at her alma matter, continuing UMass' quest for a National Title.

Donnelly brings an impressive resume to the position. She was an All–American all four years of her playing career. She won the Broderick Award, the highest honor in college hockey in 1986, and was named to NCAA's All–Decade Team.

Times have changed in the field hockey program since Donnelly's playing days.

"We used to travel everywhere in these two vans," Donnelly said. "We'd sleep four to a room in Motel 6, eight dollars a day. Now we're flying to Old Dominion and staying in nice hotels – two to a room. It's great. They deserve it."

After finishing her playing career in the 1988 Olympics, Donnelly worked as an assistant coach at Stanford, UMass, Boston College and Penn State before becoming the head coach of Rhode Island in 1992.

She compiled a 7–27–1 record in two seasons at Rhode Island as she worked at building a traditionally weak program.

When the head coaching position at UMass became available, Donnelly decided to return to the place of her glory days.

"I'm excited. There isn't any better feeling," said the new coach. "There isn't any place you'd rather be than at your alma matter, trying to keep them in the top ten."

In addition to the excitement of coming home, there is another positive thing about returning to Amherst. Unlike Rhode Island, Donnelly has a chance to coach a team that is loaded with talent.

"It's so much fun to inherit a team with so much talent," Donnelly said. "It's exciting going into the season preparing a team to make a run in the NCAA tournament. It's a very different feeling."

Donnelly got a head start on getting to know her new team on a ten–day, four–game tour in Ireland.

"Having the opportunity to be coached by Megan in Ireland made a world of difference for us," said senior co–captain Kyri Sparks. "We really got set there."

"The trip to Ireland was critical," Donnelly said. "I can't imagine being here without it. I got a chance to know them as people."

There are many expectations and pressures that come with coaching a program with a strong winning tradition, and following the footsteps of a legend.

"We're trying not to lower the expectation level just because Pam is gone for a couple of years," Donnelly said.

Despite the fact that taking the position meant leaving job security at URI for potential unemployment in 1996, Donnelly is pleased with her decision.

"This program means more to me than any other program in the country," Donnelly said. "I have had a few anxiety attacks saying, Oh God! I'm out of work in two years. My years here were four of my best years. It's something I love. I want to see it keep going."

Not that leaving Rhode Island was easy. There will be considerable emotion from both Donnelly and her former team when the Minutewomen travel to Kingston, RI for an Oct. 15 match up with the Lady Rams.

"That's going to be an interesting game," Donnelly said. "I know they're going to be fired up. They're passing out fliers and promoting that game already. It will be emotional, but not until after the game. I'm not going to talk to the kids until the game is over. They're either going to play great or the emotions will get to them."

Following in the footsteps of Hixon, the winning active coach in Division I field hockey, has forced Donnelly to compare herself to her former mentor.

"I took a lot of coaching philosophy from Pam," Donnelly said. "I think our philosophy of the game is real similar. Strong defense; build out from there. Sometimes I even hear Pam in my voice when I'm correcting somebody."

Their differences? According to Donnelly "about 240– something victories."

Donnelly's goal for this year is to achieve the one victory that eluded her predecessor, the National Title.

"I wouldn't say one [coach] is better than the other," Sparks said. "Megan is extremely positive, which is wonderful. We have set a goal of National Championship."

"There have been some bad breaks in the Final Fours," Donnelly said. "This program is overdue."

Whether or not they achieve that goal, Hixon will be back in 1996, and Donnelly will be unemployed.

SPORTS INFORMATION

Megan Donnelly was a star player for the Minutewomen before returning as a coach.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Breakin the Law
Breakin the Law

On the day of the apocolypse Gail finally revealed to Bridget that she was the one to steal her "Mrs. Pretty" make-up kit in the 3rd grade.
Mass Daily Collegian
"Make Amends Now"

PIZZA , SUBS , CALZONES
Superior Pizzeria
New at Superior Pizza
Cheesburg Grinders
Calzones - Party Size Pizzas
Pizzas - Subs - Dinner
Fresh made to order.
17 Montague Rd., North Amherst
Free Delivery - Call 549-0626
$2.00 off Any Large Pizza
with coupon
One coupon per order
cannot be combined with other offers
$2.00 off Any Large Pizza
with coupon
One coupon per order
cannot be combined with other offers

Paul Rossi
Former Campus Center Barber
Now At
NEW LOCATION
104 Russell St. (Rt.9)
in Hadley, MA
(Second Floor of the Former Carbur's Restaurant Building)
586-3885
Free Parking
On Bus Route

WELCOME BACK UMASS!!
THE SPOKE
The Spoke
Amherst, Mass

A DRINKERY
TO MEET, RELAX AND ENJOY
BACK TO SCHOOL SPECIALS
Beer of the Month
16 OZ. BUD BOTTLES
$2.00

Drink of the Week
JIM BEAM & COKE
$1.75
*PROPER ID REQUIRED
35 E. PLEASANT STREET

Men's Water Polo: At a Glance

UMass

"I'm expecting us to again challenge for the Eastern title. It's up to me to start putting them in situations that will allow them to be successful. We have a lot of firepower to replace."
-RUSS YARWORTH, head coach

Head coach: Russ Yarworth
Assistant coaches: Andrew Mahar, Tasan Engin
Last season: 21–6, 15–1 EWPA
Starters lost: Jeremy Alters, Tasan Engin, Luke Harlan
Captains: Javier Gonzalez, Adolfo Oliete
Projected starters: "We're still developing who will start. Right now, I have no idea," – Yarworth.
Newcomers: Mark Staudenbauer, Juan Carlos Limardo, Joe Wilimek

NCAA Collegiate Water Polo
Top 25 Poll

1. Stanford
2. Southern California
3. California-Berkeley
4. Pepperdine
5. California-Irvine
6. California-Santa Barbara
7. UCLA
8. Long Beach State
9. Pacific
10. Massachusetts
11. Bucknell
12. California-San Diego
13. Air Force
14. Navy
15. California-Davis
16. Richmond
17. Chaminade
18. Brown
19. Princeton
20. University of Redlands
21. Harvard
22. Slippery Rock
23. George Washington
24. Claremont Mudd Scripps
25. Villanova

Water polo not resting on laurels

By Mike Reiss
Collegian Staff

Throughout the duration of a historic 1993 season, Russ Yarworth often spoke of the NCAA Tournament. His University of Massachusetts men's water polo team would set its sights on the NCAA's, a sight that would soon became the squad's ultimate goal.

After achieving the feat, the Minutemen made history in becoming the first East Coast school to ever defeat a West coast school (California–San Diego) in NCAA competition. Massachusetts finished sixth out of the eight team field.

So what is the goal for Yarworth's 1994 entry?

"To get back to the NCAA's," he said. "Basically, there are three or four teams in the hunt, the top three being Navy, Bucknell and ourselves. Right now, the sky's the limit."

Already, Massachusetts has earned nationwide respect this season, checking in with a No. 10 ranking in the 1994 pre- season water polo poll. Leading the Minutemen into the new season will be senior Javier Gonzalez, a 5–foot–10, 175 pound, right–handed gunslinger and 6–foot, 170 pound Adolfo Oliete, also a senior.

"Javier's the guy we look to for a great deal of our scoring, but also for his defensive play," Yarworth said. "He has to be smart, and I think he has to realize his defensive play will help hold us together."

"Adolfo looks great this year and is in great shape," Yarworth said. "I'm excited about him becoming the player I know he can become."

In 1993, Massachusetts was No. 9 in the final water polo poll. Without key performers Tasan Engin, Jeremy Alters and Luke Harlan, the Minutemen will look to a mix of experienced veterans and unseasoned youngsters to carry the load.

The team will also be without the services of talented two– meter man Gary Spremullo due to academic reasons.

"You just can't replace a player like T (Tasan Engin)," Yarworth said. "We're just going to have to adjust defensively and develop someone to play the position. Luke, Jeremy and Gary will also be tough to replace. That's a lot of firepower right there."

Indeed. But with freshman recruits Mark Staudenbauer, Juan Carlos Limardo and Joe Wilimek around, Massachusetts receives an immediate jolt in the arm. Toss talents like goalies Alex Mujica and Paul Engin will anchor the rest of the returnees into the fold, and the Minutemen will

Turn to WATER POLO, page 13

SPORTS INFORMATION

Junior Javier Gonzalez and the rest of the Men's Water Polo team will be shooting for a return to the NCAA's.

WILDWATER OUTFITTERS
Bookbag SALE!
15% to 25% OFF!
ROUTE 9, Hadley - Across from Stop & Shop

Sports Notice:

There will be a meeting for men and women who wish to try out for the tennis teams Wednesday, September 14 at 3:30 p.m. in Boyden Gymnasium, in Rm. 248.

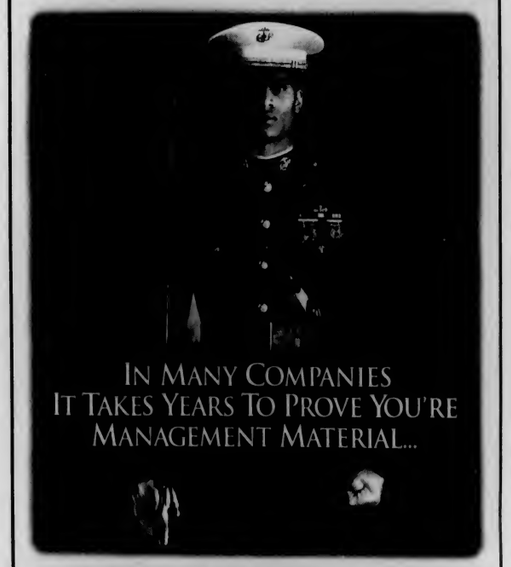
There will be a Women's varsity softball open tryout Sept. 14–15 at 3 p.m. at Totman Field. For more information, call 545–0038.

Accepted at more schools than you were.

VISA

It's everywhere you want to be.

© Visa U.S.A. Inc. 1994



WE'LL GIVE YOU 10 WEEKS.

Ten weeks may not seem like much time to prove you're capable of being a leader. But if you're tough, smart and determined, ten weeks and a lot of hard work could make you an Officer of Marines. And Officer Candidates School (OCS) is where you'll get the chance to prove you've got what it takes to lead a life full of excitement, full of challenge, full of honor. Anyone can say they've got what it takes to be a leader, we'll give you ten weeks to prove it.

Marines
The Few. The Proud. The Marines.
MARINE OFFICER

Women's Volleyball: At a Glance

UMass

"We have 11 people that can play. This makes practice easier, and also makes our team work harder because they know they'll be challenged at their positions."
–Coach BONNIE KENNY

Head Coach: Bonnie Kenny
Assistant Coach: Tina Grutsch
Last year's record: 17–14
Starting players lost: none
Returning players: Cass Anderson, Beth Cabral, Rachel Sky, Susan Maga, Kim Mizner, Dionne Nash Probable starters: Anderson, Nash, Lesley Nolan, Leigh Readey, Giza Rivera, and Sky.
Newcomers: Maria Dueno, Nolan, Michelle Paciorek, Readey and Rivera.

Experience and new mix boost UMass

By Brian Perillo
Collegian Correspondent

Is it really possible for a second year program to contend in the Atlantic 10? The University of Massachusetts volleyball team thinks it is.

Last year the Minutewoman volleyball team returned after a two–year hiatus. The team surprised many by finishing with a respectable 17–14 record, and advanced to the semifinals of the Atlantic Ten Tournament. This year, the team will look to build on that foundation, and set their sights even higher.

"If we work hard, and get to the finals of the Atlantic 10, we have a chance," said Coach Bonnie Kenny. "We're definitely trying to improve our conference record."

The Minutewomen ended the season at 5–9 against A–10 foes, good for sixth place, but their first round tournament upset of two–time defending champion Rhode Island, a team that had beaten them twice in the regular season, stands out as last year's bright spot.

This year's team boasts several strong returnees, as well as a solid recruiting class. UMass will also benefit from an increased roster.

"We have 11 people that can play," Kenny said. "This makes practice easier, and also makes our team work harder because they know they'll be challenged at their positions."

Returning to lead the Minutewomen will be junior middle blocker Rachel Sky, and sophomore outside hitter Dionne Nash. Sky, who led last year's squad with 340 digs (fifth in the A–10), and was named to the Atlantic 10 All– Tournament Team, looms large for the UMass defense. Her 91 total blocks led last year's team. Kenny called her the unit's primary passer.

"We have better players all around this year," Sky said. "The intensity is higher, and we hope to win the A–10 and get an automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament."

Nash was UMass' biggest offensive weapon last season. Her 371 kills were good for fourth in the conference, and first on the Minutewoman squad. Her team leading 3.17 kills per game and .198 hitting percentage helped Nash to be named first team All–Atlantic Ten.

ARAM COMJEAN / COLLEGIAN

Sophomore Dionne Nash will be one of the leaders for the Minutewoman.

"We're really working together as a team," Nash said. "We're inspired and we had a great recruiting year."

"One of our strengths is that we have a lot of weapons in Dionne, (freshman outside hitter Lesley) Nolan and Rachel," Kenny said. "We are also passing the ball very well, but our offense needs to be stronger."

Another key to the UMass squad is junior setter Cass Anderson. Anderson started every match last season, and was responsible for over 94 percent of the team's assists, finishing the season with 1,281, second in the conference.

Also returning to the Minutewomen will be junior defensive specialist Beth Cabral, who saw action in 29 of 31 matches last year. Also returning will be Susan Maga and Kim Mizner, two sophomore outside hitters who joined Nash and Sky on UMass' 300 Club a year ago, recording over 300 kills and digs.

Five newcomers join the squad this year. One who will be looked to immediately is Puerto Rico native Giza Rivera. The sophomore outside hitter has won two silver medals with the Puerto Rican Junior National Team, and will be looked to for offense on the court.

"Giza has a lot of intensity, and will step right in as a go– to girl," Kenny said.

"It's a good team, and we're improving every day," Rivera said. "Back home, I had been with the same setter since we were little kids, but now I'm getting used to Cass (Anderson), and we're starting to work well together."

"There is a great improvement from last year," Sky said. Both she and Nash insist that personal goals will take a backseat to the team's winning.

"We're definitely looking forward to the A–10 matchups," Kenny said. "Our goal is to keep getting better as a team."

Minutewomen start season on hot streak

By Brian Perillo
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts volleyball team started its season off with a bang, sweeping–by Army, Siena and Hofstra to take first place in the UMass Invitational Tournament on September 2–3.

The Minutewomen won all nine matches they played in the tournament, finishing 3–0.

Sophomore outside hitter Giza Rivera, who led the team in kills during all three matches, was named Tournament MVP. The Puerto Rico native garnered the honor in her first tournament with UMass

Junior middle blocker Rachel Sky, who led the team in blocks during the tournament, and freshman outside hitter Lesley Nolan, who has won a starting spot on the UMass squad, were named to the All–Tournament Team

UMass continued its winning ways Tuesday, Sept. 6, by rocking the Boston College Eagles in three straight games to stay undefeated and improve their record to 4–0. This is the best start for the UMass volleyball team since 1988, when the squad jumped out to a 9–0 mark.

Rivera's play in the first four games garnered her UMass co–athlete of the week honors.

"I'm ecstatic with the way our team is playing. These games will prepare us for the A–10's."
-Coach Bonnie Kenney

UMass defeats Army 15–2, 15–8, 15–6

In the first game of the UMass Invitational Tournament, the Minutewomen used Rivera's 12 kills to get by Army. The sophomore outside hitter had only three errors in 28 total attempts, a .321 hitting percentage.

"We played consistently," said Sky, who led the team with 17 digs, and was also second in kills. Sophomore outside hitter Dionne Nash also collected 16 digs for UMass.

"We played very well disciplined," said Coach Bonnie Kenny.

Dianna Laehn, a sophomore outside hitter, was Army's only bright spot, collecting 12 digs and four kills.

UMass defeats Siena College 15–6, 15–12, 15–8

On day two of the UMass Invitational, the Minutewomen rolled over the Siena Saints. Rivera once again led UMass with 16 kills, and three service aces. She also collected ten digs. Nolan also emerged as an offensive force with 11 kills and 14 digs.

"We worked real well as a team," said Nash, who amassed 12 kills to go along with 12 digs herself.

"Siena was a tough team, and we played well," said Kenny.

Siena's junior setter Rochelle Travers played well en route to being named to the All–Tournament team.

UMass defeats Hofstra 15–8, 15–7, 16–14

In the final matchup of the tournament, two teams with 2– 0 records clashed. UMass came out on top, soaring past the Flying Dutchwomen.

The last game of the match was a thriller featuring a UMass comeback after being down 8–14.

"It really helps our mind set to be able to come back like that, but we have to be good enough so that teams don't put us in that position," said Kenny.

Sky turned in her third impressive performance, totalling 15 kills, 15 digs and six total blocks.

"We started to play more focused, and more comfortable," Sky said of the comeback.

Rivera and Nolan tallied 16 kills a piece, and Nash led the team with 16 digs. Junior setter Cass Anderson also played well collecting 42 assists, and a total of 112 for the tournament.

UMass defeats Boston College 15–13, 15–3, 15–8

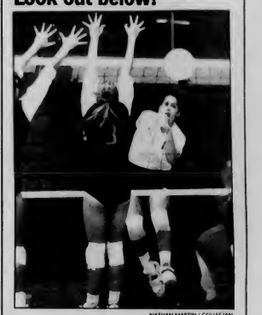
The Minutewomen were given a bit of a scare last Tuesday night as they hosted the Eagles. On the third play of the first game, Nash had to leave with an ankle injury, and UMass was forced to use a five–point run to down BC. Nash returned in the second game, however, and seemed to be the spark the Minutewomen needed, as they cruised to victory in the final two games.

Rivera led the team with 20 kills, while Sky's 11 blocks are the highest of any player since the re–inception of the sport last season.

"I'm ecstatic with the way our team is playing," said Kenny. "These games will prepare us for the A–10's."

The team played in the UConn Tournament last weekend and results were not available as of press time.

Look out below!



NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Newcomer Giza Rivera was the Tournament MVP at the UMass Invitational.

4 Seasons
DISCOUNT LIQUORS
BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE

CHECK OUT THE REST, THEN CALL OR COME TO THE BEST!

Instead of advertising every week, Four Seasons meets or beats most prices advertised in the UMASS Collegian.* By not spending as much money on advertising, we are able to pass more savings onto the consumer!

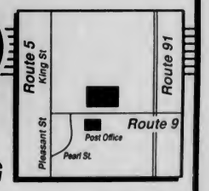
Lite BEER
Miller Genuine Draft
Miller Genuine Draft LIGHT

WE DELIVER

* Items normally stocked

RTE.9 • HADLEY • 584-8174

Blimpie
SUBS & SALADS
584-WABC (9222)
WE DELIVER • FREE PARKING



BLIMPIE COLDS-HOTS

Wheat or Italian Bread – Fresh Baked Cholestrol Free	6"	FOOT LONG
1. BLIMPIE BEST
Ham, Salami, Cappacola, Prosciuttini & Cheese	3.09	4.99
2. ROAST BEEF	3.19	4.99
3. TUNA "DOLPHIN SAFE"	2.99	4.79
4. CLUB Ham, Turkey & Swiss	2.99	4.79
5. TURKEY	3.19	4.99
6. HAM & SWISS	1.99	3.89
7. HAM, SALAMI & CHEESE	2.99	4.79
8. CHEESE TRIO American, Swiss, Provolone	2.89	4.49
*DOUBLE MEAT on a COLD SUB just say "BIGGER BITE" add	1.00	2.00
14. ROAST BEEF & AMERICAN	3.19	4.99
15. TUNA MELT	3.09	4.89
16. PASTRAMI	3.19	4.99
17. STEAK & CHEESE	3.19	4.99
18. MEATBALL	3.19	4.99
19. CHICKEN BREAST	3.19	4.99
20. BLIMPIE BURGER	3.19	4.99

BLIMPIE DRESSING: All Blimpies are dressed with Tomatoes, Lettuce, Onions, Oregano, Oil, and Vinegar AND your choice of Swiss, American or Provolone Cheese

SOUPS & SALADS

SMALL TOSSED SALAD	.99
TOSSED SALAD	1.99
CHEF or TUNA SALAD	3.19
ANTIPASTO	3.19
SEAFOOD SALAD	3.19

BLIMPIE LITES	PITA	SALADS
ROAST BEEF	3.19	3.19
TURKEY	2.99	3.09
SEAFOOD	2.99	3.19
HAM & SWISS	2.99	2.99
CLUB	2.99	2.99

All Lites Dressed with Lettuce, Tomatoes, Onions, Vinegar, and are under 300 Calories

BEVERAGES

SM.	MED.	LG.	BUSTER
.79	.89	.99	1.19

COCA-COLA, DIET COKE, SPRITE, ROOT BEER, ORANGE, HI-C LEMONADE

COFFEE/ HOT CHOCOLATE .75

EXTRAS

EXTRA CHEESE	.35	.70
EXTRA BACON	.50	1.00
HOT or SWEET PEPPERS		FREE
CHIPS (Big Grab)		.79
COOKIE or BROWNIE		.49
PICKLE	Whole .75	Spear .45
CHILI/SOUP	.99	1.49

BLIMPIE BLAST!
GREAT FOR OFFICE PARTIES, PICNICS, BIRTHDAYS and SPORTING EVENTS
3 FOOT BLAST $34.99 SERVES 15-20 PEOPLE
6 FOOT BLAST $64.99 SERVES 30-40 PEOPLE

TRY OUR...
Ordering for the office or family? Calling Ahead gets you one FREE sub with each five you order. (Not Valid with any other offer.) Catering Available.

34 Bridge Street (Across from Post Office)
Northampton, Massachusetts • 584-WABC (9222)

Men's Soccer: At a Glance

"I think everyone else will pick up the slack. Last year, we had a guy that could do it all. Now, the challenge is for the other guys to pick it up. I think we have the people to put the ball in the back of the net."
– SAM KOCH, head coach

Head coach: Sam Koch
Assistant coach: Steve Rammel
Last season: 9–10, 3–4 in Atlantic–10
Starters lost: Randy Jacobs, Justin Edelman, Todd Kylish, Ted Priestly, Matt Edgerly, Chris Merrill, Bob Crane
Captains: Colin Johnson, Mike Doyle
Projected starters: Brian Bianco, Dan Chagnon, Doyle, Joe Jacobson, Johnson, Kevin Martin, Brad Miller, Joel Pittman, Benny Sheally, Dave Siljanovski, Mark Wolf (goalie)
Newcomers: Mike Butler

Men's Soccer hopes for bright season

By Mike Reiss
Collegian Staff

Midway through the first half of its premier game of the season, the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team was locked into a physical battle with visiting Hofstra University at the Richard F. Garber Field.

Hofstra was awarded an indirect kick approximately 35 yards from the goal mouth, and was threatening to break a scoreless tie. With both teams scampering to get into position, the ball was struck in the air, apparently heading for the far post.

But spinning up backwards off his feet, UMass forward Dave Siljanovski thwarted the play. The ball struck off his backside, before landing in the stands.

"The attitude and work rate of the returning players from the spring is tremendous," said Sam Koch, UMass head soccer coach. "We have a focused and determined group coming back that will not accept defeat."

It is individual efforts like Siljanovski's which Koch hopes will ascend his Minutemen to new heights. UMass has already captured the 1994 Kickoff Classic which was held in Amherst at Garber Field.

At first, the team fought to a 0-0 tie with Hofstra, earning the right to advance to the finals via a shootout win (3–1).

In the finals, the Minutemen picked apart Northeastern University, winning 4–1. At the time, Northeastern was ranked ninth in the New England Division I Men's Soccer Poll. Massachusetts was ranked 10th.

Can UMass, which won seven of its last eight games in 1993, carry the success into the 1994 campaign? Can it recover from losing Randy Jacobs, perhaps the most prolific scorer in the school's history? Or Justin Edelman, for that matter, the team's second-leading scorer last season?

"I think everyone else will pick up the slack," Koch said. "Last year, we basically had one guy (Jacobs) that could do it all. Now, the other guys have to pick it up. I think we have those people that can put the ball in the back of the net."

Early returns show Koch is right. Co–captain Colin Johnson took home offensive MVP honors at the Kickoff Classic scoring two hustle goals against Northeastern. Yet, along with the two other goals scored (Mike Butler and Siljanovski), even more impressive was the team's constant offensive pressure.

Koch said a main reason for the pressure was the play of the Massachusetts midfield. "You win the midfield, you usually win games," Koch said.

With Johnson and fellow co–captain Mike Doyle leading the way, few will contest that this midfield is one of the best in New England.

"Colin makes things happen," Koch said. "He's a buzzer."

"Mike is a great director. The one that makes sure everything is going the way it should. Mike is the eyes of the team, a great distributor," Koch said.

Defensively, UMass trots out a head–strong unit, backboned by the bruising 5–10 Dan Chagnon. Chagnon, a junior, is often marking the opposition's top scoring threat. "[He is] a tough, gritty kid," Koch said.

Four competent goalies, seniors Mark Wolf, Eric Gruber, Brian Hurley and sophomore Brackie Reyes, have battled it out for the starting goalie position. "Wolfie's the man," Koch said.

"He's improved a great deal. He controls the 18–yard box well. Because of a couple of his big stops, we were able to advance to the finals (in the Kickoff Classic)."

Brian Bianco, Karstin Bremke, Hossein Giahi, Joe Jacobsen, Kevin Martin, Joe Maruca, Brad Miller, Joel Pittman, Leo Scheinkman, Benny Sheally, Alex Sodbinow and Tashi Tshering round out the 1994 roster. Steve Rammel, a former professional soccer player, will be an assistant to Koch.

"We have two real positives from last season to build on this year," Koch said. "First, winning seven of our last eight games. And second, having an excellent spring season."

The building has already begun. And for the 1994 Massachusetts men's soccer team, the construction is molding itself into a winner.

SPORTS INFORMATION

Men's soccer hopes to rebound after a disappointing season last year.

If it ain't broke, we don't fix it
MONRO MUFFLER/BRAKE
mufflers • brakes • shocks • springs • alignments
tires • front wheel drive experts
Hadley: 360 Russell St. 586-0892
Northampton: 326 King St. 586-3266
Chicopee: 461 Memorial Dr. 594-9161
Wilbraham: 1971 Boston Road 543-8027
W. Springfield: 777 Riverdale St. 739-3860
90 days same as cash!

Worldwide lifetime guaranteed
Mufflers 25%off
Manufacturer's list
☐ No appointment necessary!
☐ Free written estimates
Coupon Special
Monro Muffler Brake
Oil, lube & filter $16.99
Includes up to 5 quarts Kendall motor oil, new Kendall oil filter, chassis lube and free undercar inspection. Available for most vehicles. Please call for an appointment. Additional charge for filters on some vehicles. Coupon valid through 10/22/94 7504
40,000 mile limited treadwear warranty from $37.95
☐ Many other sizes and prices available.
Free brake inspection any time!
With no obligation on your part. We only make repairs with your permission. We only recommend repairs if they are necessary.

Yes, times are tough. I can't even reach into my pocket and get a decent size ball of pocket lint. The other day I looked under my couch cushions and found only four bottle caps. Yes, sometimes you have to scrape a little.
COLLEGIAN
"SCRAPE NO FURTHER"

Tickets to all the best shows available from:
The Northampton Box Office
In 413: 586-8686 / In U.S.: 800-THE-TICK
VISA / MASTERCARD / DISCOVER
TICKETS NOW ON SALE FOR:
BELA FLECK, ANI DIFRANCO, CHUCKLEHEAD, SHAWN COLVIN, PAVEMENT, SUSAN WERNER, JOHN CALE, LUSCIOUS JACKSON, CHEAP TRICK, THE SPECIALS, BRUCE COCKBURN, PETER WOLF, AND MORE...
ALL COMING THIS AUTUMN THROUGH THE NORTHAMPTON BOX OFFICE
A Service Charge Applies to All Phone Orders

KRETE Pizza - Restaurant
RESTAURANT • BEER AND WINE
Free Delivery (Limited Area)
586-8255
331 Russell St./Rte.9, Hadley
18" LARGE CHEESE PIZZA $5.99 or two for $10.99 plus $1.50 for each item. Not to be combined with any other offer. Expires 12/31/94 • KRETE 586-8255
BUY ANY CALZONE GET 2nd 1/2 PRICE! Equal or Lesser Value. KRETE 586-8255. Not to be combined with any other offer. Expires 12/31/94
BUY ANY 3 GRINDERS AND GET THE 4th FREE. FREE SODA W/ANY GRINDER. KRETE 586-8255. Not to be combined with any other offer. Expires 12/31/94

GREG'S AUTO BODY
"WHERE QUALITY ALWAYS COMES FIRST"
• Collision Repair Specialists
• Rental Cars Available
• Insurance Work
Continental Collision Repair Systems
Division of GMG Enterprises inc
Registered Repair Shop #PS1560
665-3989
Rt. 5 & 10, So. Deerfield

Spirit Haus
Refrigerator Rentals
256-8433
253-5384

Attention Undergraduates
Sport Studies 191 A
Sport in Popular Culture
is open to all undergraduates (excluding Sport Management majors). The Fall 1994 Registration Guide incorrectly states that this course is only open to Sport Management majors.
The course examines the similarities and variance between how sport functions in comparision with how society functions. Utilizing films and literature topics such as race relations, heroism, violence and future growth are examined and contrasted.
The course is offered on Wednesdays from 3:00 - 5:30 p.m. with Proffessor William Sutton. You may register for the course through telephone registration. If you have any questions, please feel free to call the Sports Studies Department at 545-0441.

TOWN OF AMHERST
LSSE Leisure Services and Supplemental Education FALL JOBS IN AMHERST
POSITIONS AVAILABLE
Swimming Instructor ($5.67 - $6.57/hour)
Life Guards ($5.14 - $5.95/hour)
Tennis Instructors ($10.01 - $11.59/hour)
Tennis Assistant ($7.90-$9.15/hour)
Weekend Facilities Supervisors ($5.92 -$7.93/hour)
Timekeeper/Scorekeeper ($5.37 - $7.19/hour)
Youth Basketball Officials/Supervisors ($5.92-$7.93/hour)
Volleyball League Officials ($12.00/match)
Clerical Assistants ($4.90 - $5.67/hour Work Study Only)
Special Events Program Assistant ($4.90 - $5.67/hour)
Volunteer opportunities are available.
Work Study and Non-Work Study positions are available.
Job information and applications are available at Amherst Leisure Services, Bangs Community Center, 70 Boltwood Walk, Amherst (near Bananarama) or watch for us at the UMass Campus Center Concourse. The preferred application deadline is Friday, September 16th. For additional information please call Amherst Leisure Services at 256-4065.

Women's Soccer:
At a Glance

'Our strength is that we are a team, we have probably five or six All–America candidates but we may not end up with any.'
–JIM RUDY, head coach

Head Coach: Jim Rudy
Assitant Coachs: April Kater, Briana Scurry
Last season: 17–3–3, NCAA Final Four Starters lost: Colleen Milliken, Briana Scurry, Courtney Smith, Amy Trunk, Paula Wilkins
Captains: Heidi Kocher, Melissa Mitchell
Projected starters: Kocher, Mitchell, Erin Lynch, Rebecca Myers, Nicole Roberts, Rachel LeDuc, Danielle Dion, Amy Powell, Sandy Shimogaki, Julie Magid.
Newcomers: Dion, Erica Iverson, Tina Lightning, Elizabeth Rutherford, Polly Hackathorn.

Minutewomen have a young look

By Candica Flemming
Collegian Staff

Last year was an amazing one for the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team. The Minutewomen finished with a 17–3–3 record, were the Atlantic Ten and regional Champions, and they made it to the NCAA Final Four before bowing out to the eventual National Champion, North Carolina.

This year UMass' goal, according to Head Coach Jim Rudy, is to make the playoffs.

"Our goal is to make the playoffs, play well enough, win the games we need to make the playoffs, and hopefully host some playoff games. I think that has got to be the key. I mean, there are so many teams in it now, and it's getting so hard to get there," Rudy said.

UMass has some holes to fill, due to the graduation of key players. The biggest loss is All–American goalkeeper Briana Scurry, who is currently on the United States National Soccer team, where she was the MVP of the Chiquita Cup.

Also missing from last season is All–American Paula Wilkins, as well as Colleen Milliken, Courtney Smith, Sarah Goddard, Amy Trunk and Sherry Keenan.

Leading the way for the Minutewomen this year will be senior co–captains Heidi Kocher and Melissa Mitchell.

Kocher is one of the best defenders in the country, and last year produced highly on the offensive side, scoring 13 points with four goals and five assists.

The other two positions on defense will be filled by sophomore stopper Erin Lynch, and junior Nikki Ahrenholz. Freshman Erica Iverson will be getting a lot of playing time as well.

"[Erica] Iverson is doing quite well," Rudy said. "She's playing a little bit older than her years."

Mitchell was a transfer last year from Radford College in Virginia, and proved to have no problems fitting in. She was the Minutewomen's fourth–leading scorer with 20 points (eight goals, four assists) and was named to the Atlantic 10 All–Tournament team.

Alongside Mitchell in the forward positions are juniors Nicole Roberts and Rachel LeDuc. The forwards are the most experienced on the team and the three combined for 29 goals last season.

Roberts was a 1993 Honorable Mention All–America. She had a team–high 12 goals and seven assists for 31 points last year. LeDuc, who scored the game–winner against University of Connecticut last year to send UMass into the Final Four, was an All–Atlantic 10 selection scoring 24 points on nine goals and six assists.

In the midfield, UMass has Rebecca Myers, who scored 31 points (tied for the team–high with Roberts) on 11 goals and nine assists last year. She was also named the 1993 Atlantic 10 Rookie of the Year. Along with that award Myers was named to Soccer America's All

ARAM COMBAN/COLLEGIAN

Sophomore Rebecca Myers was the star against Rhode Island netting a hat trick.

Freshman Team, Soccer New's All–America Team, and this year is one of the top ten sophomores in the country according to College Sports magazine.

Joining Myers in the midfield will be sophomores Julie Magid, Sandy Shimogaki and Amy Powell. Magid

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 14

SOCCER AMERICA WOMEN'S COLLEGIATE TOP 20

1.	North Carolina	2–0–0
2.	Portland	0–0–0
3.	Duke	1–0–0
4.	George Mason	2–0–0
5.	Notre Dame	2–0–0
6.	Stanford	1–0–0
7.	William & Mary	2–0–0
8.	Massachusetts	2–0–0
9.	Santa Clara	1–0–1
10.	Dartmouth	0–0–0
11.	Virginia	2–0–0
12.	Hartford	2–0–0
13.	Washington	1–0–1
14.	Washington State	2–0–0
15.	Connecticut	1–1–0
16.	St. Mary's (Calif)	2–0–0
17.	Creighton	1–0–0
18.	SMU	1–1–0
19.	Maryland	1–1–0
20.	Central Florida	1–0–1

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Heidi Kocher is a senior captain and an A[illegible] America candidate.

Minutewomen start season on right foot

By Candica Flemming
Collegian Staff

The fifth nationally ranked University of Massachusetts women's soccer team has started out the season on a high note with two straight wins over Boston College and University of Rhode Island.

On Saturday afternoon, the Minutewomen were in West Springfield hosting the Boston College Eagles in the season opener for both teams.

UMass	2
BC	0

The game was scoreless until the 29:40 mark of the first half when All–America candidate Nicole Roberts scored the game winning goal unassisted. Roberts scored after Erin Lynch's 20–yard shot hit the crossbar and rebounded to her. From two yards out she scored past the Eagles' goalkeeper, Karen DeVoe.

UMass scored their second goal with 5:09 left in the game. Senior All–America candidate Heidi Kocher scored from 35 yards out into the lower right corner of the net.

The Eagles did have a chance to score with 33:18 left in the second half when senior Katie McMahon had an open net, but hit the left post from 15 yards away. That miss turned out to be the biggest play of game.

Freshman goalkeeper Danielle Dion had a solid game in her debut making eight saves to record her first collegiate shutout.

UMass	6
URI	0

This was the first Atlantic Ten matchup for the Minutewomen, and they showed URI why they were the favorites to win the A–10 title.

The Rams could not keep up with UMass from the start of the game. The tone was set when Rebecca Myers scored on an assist from Nicole Roberts one minute and 30 seconds into the game.

The Minutewomen went on to score five more goals with Myers leading the way with a hat trick. All of Myer's goals came in the first half at 1:30, 13:40 (assisted by Erin Lynch) and 20:00 (assisted by Roberts).

Melissa Mitchell also scored in the first half for the Minutewomen the 10:30 mark. The goal was assisted by Heidi Kocher.

The second half was a lot like the first half of the game. The Minutewomen scored two more goals to make the final score 6–0. Freshman Elizabeth Rutherford scored her first collegiate goal. It was assisted by freshman Tina Lightning. The sixth and final goal was tallied by Rachel LeDuc with an assist from Polly Hackathorn.

Rudy said he was pleased with his younger players performances, but he felt that the team as a whole "duffed off" when they had the lead in the second half.

"The fourth goal broke their back," Rudy said.

Freshman goalkeeper Dion once again was impressive in the net with another shutout. She made five saves on seven shots from the field.

The Minutewomen took their 2–0 record (1–0 in the Atlantic Ten) into Saturday's game at Garber Field against the Providence Friars.

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact Step Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycles
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080

Hot • Sizzling • Hot • Sizzling • Hot • Sizzling • Hot • Sizzling • Hot • Sizzling • Hot • Sizzling • Hot
Continuous Exotic Dancing
Race St. Pub
Shower an hour, the only one in western Mass. You have to see it to believe it.
Open Mon-Wed 4p.m. til 1:30 a.m. ThurSat 12p.m. til 2 532-1422
Hot • Sizzling • Hot • Sizzling • Hot • Sizzling • Hot • Sizzling • Hot • Sizzling • Hot • Sizzling • Hot

Health Education
If you are looking for information on Alcohol, Sexuality, Stree Management or just about any health related topic, visit us in room 250 at UHS. We have written information on many topics and offer workshops and counseling as well.
Check your mail! The Fall issue of Healthwatch will arrive at the end of September.
Special Note To R.A.'s: Watch for info on obtaining Safer Sex Supplies.

Come Clean With Us!!
Speedwash
11 Pray St. Amherst • 549-1665
Open 24 Hours
Drop-off service available:
Mon. & Sat. 10am-6pm
Tues. 2pm-10pm
Wed. & Thurs. 4pm-10pm
Fri 3pm-10pm
South Towne Commons Laundromat
479 West St. South Amherst
Open 7 days/week, 7am-10pm
Regular Wash only $1.25
Dry - one quarter for 7 1/2 minutes

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS CLUB
More than 25 aerobics classes a week!!
The Area's Most Complete Club • 256-6446
90 Gatehouse Road
"Off Rt. 9 2 miles East of Town Center"
• PVTA bus route to Rolling Green •
• pool • aerobics • aqua-aerobics •
• steps • nautilus • racquetball •
• free weights • jacuzzi • sauna •
• massage • bikes • tennis •
• rowers • treadmills •
Join now for our 15 week Semester Special ($169) & get a free HFC T-Shirt!

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
University Health Services
Amherst, MA 01003
545-2671
An open letter to the UMass Student Community from the Director of UHS Eye Care Program, Fall 1994
Frederick H. Bloom, O.D.
Director, UHS Eye CAre Program
My name is frederick Bloom. I graduated from the University of Massachusetts in 1971 and the New England College of Optometry in 1975. I am very proud of the program and high quality eye care delivered to the over 80,000 individuals at the UHS Eye Care Program over the last 19 years.
I have been on the teaching faculty of the New England College of Optometry. Recently I co-authored an article with Dr. Abel, a UHS physician, that was published in a national optometry journal. I am also credentialed in diagnostic ocular pharmaceuticals by the Massachusetts Board of Optometry.
Services include:
• Complete optometry examinations
• Reduced rates on spectacle frames and lenses from local participating opticians
• Emergency eye care
• Comprehensive contact lens service
Our staff takes great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.
Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Care Program over the years has been consistently excellent.
"I invite you to use the eye services at UHS"
EYE CARE PROGRAM
Convenient Hours and Camus Location
CALL 549-2671 EXT 244

Football: UMass At a Glance

"When it comes right down to it, that's all that anybody cares about — whether we shut every team out or we give up 40 points, all we want to do is win."
-Minutemen DL BRIAN CORCORAN

Mike Hodges

Head Coach: Mike Hodges — 3rd Year (15–6 in career)
Offensive Coordinator: Doug Berry — 4th year
Defensive Coordinator: Jerry Azzinaro — 1st year
1993 Season: 8–3
Starters Lost: Offense: 7 — LG Bill Durkin, C Andy LeBlanc, RG Phil Hallard, TE Steve Dernbowski, TB John Ichnson, FL and KR Eric Thimas. Defense: DE and LS John Kromenhoek, OLB Mario Perry, OLB Scott Assencoa, SS Tim Lambright, FS Matt Rajotte.
Captains: DT Ben Alberts, FB Rene Ingoglia.
Projected Starters: Offense: SE Kevin Burgoine, LT Dan Markowski, LG Mark Zych, C Mark Shalala, RG Todd Tinker, RT Joe Sabella, TE Mark Stefanski, TB Frank Alessio, FB Rene Ingoglia, QB Andrew Mc Neilly, FL Matt Read, PK Eric Oke, KR Tony Williams. Defense: DE Brian Corcoran, DT Ben Albert, DT Silas Burke, DE Vernard Fennell, OLB Trejo Rust, ILB Mike Valentino, OLB Roger Kolterz, CB Brian Parker, SS Jason Mumford, FS Jason Tudryn, CB Tony Williams, P/KO Justin Reimer, LS Ben Albert, PR Darryl Thomas.
Newcomers: LB Elvis Abellard, Brooklyn, NY; OL Matt Alegi, Germantown, MD; DB Legista Beckford, Ossining, NY; DB Kary Blackwell, Queens, NY; QB Anthony Catterton, Orlando, FL; QB Doug Clark, Springfield, MA; DB Tony Gugliuzza, Metarie, LA; TB Richie Harrison, Melrose, MA; OL Mimnaugh Hill, Somerset, NJ; RB Matthew Jordan, Derry, NH; RB Anthony Palmer, Winthrop, MA; RB Jim Pizano, Exeter, PA; LB Khari Samuel, Framingham, MA; WR Mike Smith; East Orange, NJ.

Depth the key to football success

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

A productive summer, indeed.

Each spring, the University of Massachusetts football team prepares for the upcoming season with a series of practices and intrasquad scrimmages.

It is a time for the players to showcase their abilities and prove their worth, months before preseason camp begins in the fall. It is a time for the coaches to get a close look as to what to expect for the upcoming season. And as for the spring of 1994, it went...well...not so well.

"Last spring, we had some problems with the way that we practiced," said Minutemen head coach Mike Hodges. "It shouldn't have been a surprise because we had so many new guys involved."

Now, it's the fall, and it's football season. The problems that arose during spring ball have somewhat diminished, and the new guys are what Hodges termed "the proverbial bigger, stronger and faster," as well as more experienced. Needless to say, Hodges is extremely pleased with the improvement made between the two seasons.

"We have had an excellent preseason, we've really practiced well. We learned how to practice last spring because, I'll tell you what, they came back in great shape. As a team, we have come back ready to play," Hodges said.

Here's a look at the Minutemen...

Offense... The big story about the offensive side of the Massachusetts attack is the quarterback situation. The Andrew McNeilly–Vito Campanile battle as to who was going to be the starter on opening day is done.

The choice has already been made. Unfortunately, the choice was easy, as sophomore Campanile injured his right knee in a preseason scrimmage [see related story] and could be out for the season. Regardless, McNeilly, a junior, has the ability to run the option offense, as his 14–5 career record proves.

The question is whether either of the two freshman quarterbacks, Anthony Catterton and Doug Clark, can handle the role as a possible backup. Right now, it is a must for McNeilly to stay healthy, since both backups are untested.

The backfield, a strong point for the Minutemen in recent years, continues to carry the offense. Junior All–American candidate and co–captain Rene Ingoglia, a converted fullback, leads the attack, as he led the conference in rushing 233 carries for 1,285 yards, (third highest in Massachusetts history) last season.

The starting tailback will be sophomore Frank Alessio (132–521 yards), who has remarkable speed. Alessio should take over where graduated John Johnson [889 yards] left off. Also in the mix will be senior David Smith, junior Rob Drapeau and senior Clark Ramos. That is not to mention Syracuse transfer Ron Brokington and talented freshmen backs, including Anthony Palmer.

"Our recruiting class is excellent," Hodges said. "They are guys that will help the football team this year. They have really helped us, as far as team speed. That was one of our goals for our recruits, and we did that."

Obviously, the Minutemen are knee–deep in talented running backs. With Ingoglia's tough, up–the–gut style and Alessio's explosive running to the outside leading the rushing attack, the depth will prove to be the key factor come crunch time.

"We're not going to be a two–back offense," Hodges said. "What we did last year with Frank [Alessio] and Johnny Johnson just opened my eyes. I'm convinced that when Frank had his eight or ninth carry of the game instead of his 25th or 30th, he had that extra step to run by those guys to win a football game."

"We'd like to keep that. It's a definite advantage," Hodges said.

The offensive line was hit hardest by graduation. Gone are three first team All–Yankee Conference players, offensive guard Bill Durkin [a consensus All–American], center Andy LeBlanc, and OG Phil Hallard. Still here are starting tackles Joe Sabella and Dan Markowski. The respective senior and sophomore veterans will anchor a line consisting of sophomore center Mark Shalala and guards Todd Tinker, a senior, and sophomore Mark Zych. Big losses from 1993, yet strong returnees for 1994.

"There's no way you can replace those three guys," Hodges said. "They were four–year starters, all of 'em, and great players. We have to find guys that know what they're doing, and will give us their best effort on every snap. Our experienced backfield should take some pressure off of them."

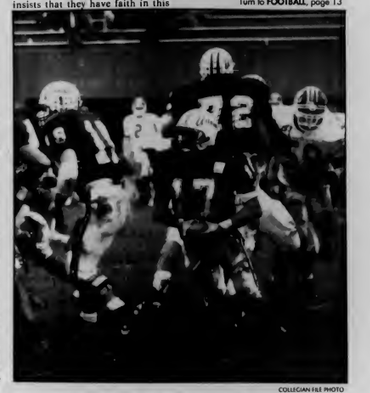
As for the receiving corps, McNeilly will look to junior Kevin Burgoine, senior Matt Read, sophomore Darryl Thomas, and sophomore Zach Clark. Senior Mark Stefanski will take over the reins of tight end left by departed Steve Dernbowski. Though the offense is built around the backfield, the coaching staff insists that they have faith in this group.

Defense... As much depth as the backfield has on the Massachusetts offense, there may be more on the defensive line. There's senior All–American candidate Brian Corcoran, who registered 12 sacks to lead the Minutemen last season. There is junior Vernard Fennell and senior Silas Burke. Also, there's senior co–captain Ben Albert, as well as Ken Bello.

Stacked from top to bottom, this defensive front alone garnered 33 sacks between them last year. Add to the bunch redshirt freshman Jeron Alston, whom Hodges says is "every bit as good as all of those guys."

The experienced defensive line coming back does not reflect the

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 13



COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO
Sophomore quarterback Vito Campanile (17) suffered a knee injury prior to the season and may be out for the year.

Ground game led by Ingoglia

By Anthony Guido
Collegian Staff

Rene Ingoglia may be the most feared running back in the Yankee Conference. Though he is known for his punishing runs, he remains the reluctant superstar on the University of Massachusetts football team.

"I wouldn't trade him for any running back in the Yankee Conference," said Coach Mike Hodges.

The junior co–captain running back is a candidate for the Walter Payton award (top Division I–AA player) as well as an All–American hopeful. Ingoglia led the Yankee Conference in rushing with a 116.8 yards per game average, finishing 14th in the nation.

"I really don't have any goals other than a championship ring. If I go out and run hard like I can, and we play as a team, everything else will take care of itself," Ingoglia said.

Last season Ingoglia was switched to fullback right before the season began, and he thrived. He led the Minutemen with 233 carries for 1,285 yards, the third highest total in school history, good for a 5.5 yard average.

"Last year I was switched to fullback a week before the first game. Now I'm more comfortable, bulked up a little bit more and I've learned more about the position," Ingoglia said.

The 5–foot–10–inch, 205–pound back posted seven 100–yard games on the ground. Ingoglia's bulldog style was dominant at the goal line, scoring 14 touchdowns.

"I compare myself to a shooter in basketball. When we get close to that goal line, I want the ball in my hands," Ingoglia said.

One of the biggest keys to Ingoglia's success will be a revamped offensive line. Center Andy LeBlanc and guards Bill Durkin and Phil Hallard have graduated, potentially creating a problem for an up–the–middle power runner.

"I will miss those guys, they were great. The new guys in camp have done well; they're going to get the job done," Ingoglia said.

"The new starters on the offensive line have looked good in practice, but you just don't know how they'll be until we get in game situations," Hodges said.

There will be no change in running style. Ingoglia will play the straight–ahead power running style.

"We have a smash–mouth team, we're still going to go right at you," Ingoglia said.

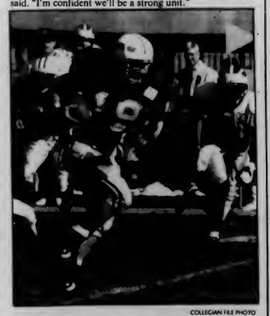
UMass' offense again plans to be based on the ground game with Ingoglia leading the charge. He is No. 6 on the all–time school rushing list, needing less than 300 yards to move into the second spot. With a healthy last two seasons, Ingoglia should break Garry Pearson's record of 3,859 yards.

"I'd want to carry the ball 50 times a game if it was possible. It depends on the situation. I do want the ball all the time," Ingoglia said.

Ingoglia remains undersized for the fullback position. However, the coaching staff credits his strength and determination in becoming a good blocker as well as a dominant runner.

Quarterback Andrew McNeilly will look for Ingoglia out of the backfield, as he was the leading receiver out of the backfield for the second straight year, averaging over 12 yards per catch.

"I feel real comfortable working with Andrew (McNeilly), we are always on the same page; we came in as freshmen together. He's improved on his passing; our offense is well ahead of last year's at this time," Ingoglia said. "I'm confident we'll be a strong unit."



COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO
Fullback Rene Ingoglia powers the Massachusetts running attack.

Line to lead defense

By Arthur Stapleton Jr.
Collegian Staff

A bunch of big, tough, mean, nasty guys who do whatever they can to get the football.

Ask University of Massachusetts defensive line coach Ted Roof who he wants as his players and he will tell you just that. Roof, in his first season with the Minutemen after coaching for four seasons in Division I at Duke University, inherits the deepest unit on the entire Minuteman squad.

The Minutemen will look to fill the void left by linebackers Mario Perry and Scott Assencoa, who were two major factors in the team's pass rush; the two had four sacks each in 1993. Roof said he is slightly concerned about the vacancies which may result in some of his best pass rushers facing double–teams.

"We're always looking for ways to combat [double–teams], but at the same time, I feel really good about the people we have playing," said Roof.

"Obviously, [UMass] has a great tradition because they've had some excellent players here in the past. These guys will pick right up where they left off."

With its top five players returning for the 1994 season, including senior All–America candidate Brian Corcoran and senior co–captain Ben Albert, the defensive line will be looked upon by its teammates to lead by example.

"Any good defense starts up front," said Massachusetts Coach Mike Hodges. "Those guys are warriors and play the game like it should be played."

"Everybody has to pull their own weight, but at the same time, people are looking to these guys for leadership. I think they'll do a good job providing it," Roof said.

"Of course you expect the defensive line to be dominant because we have three seniors, but everybody has their role to play," said Albert, "and we're just going to feed off one another."

Albert is the starter at right tackle, a position at which he tallied 33 tackles and five sacks last season. According to Roof, Albert arrived at camp in great shape, physically and athletically.

Corcoran said that he believed Albert more than deserved to be named co–captain with fullback Rene Ingoglia.

"Nobody outworks Ben; there's no question about that. Every once in a while I'll be dragging my butt, and I turn around and look at Ben," said Corcoran.

COURTESY UMASS MEDIA RELATIONS
All–America candidate Brian Corcoran anchors the Minuteman defensive line.

"Ben's a great leader. Nobody on the team came back in better shape this summer," said Roof. "He's worked extremely hard, he's lost some weight, and he's one of the most improved players between last spring and right now."

"I just want to do whatever it takes to help the team win," said Albert. "If it means not making one tackle or making ten tackles, whatever has to be done for us to win I'm going to do it."

Senior Silas Burke lines up next to Albert at the left tackle after moving from his natural position of linebacker his freshman year. Hodges said a move from linebacker to defensive line works because, even though it takes away size (Burke is 6–foot–1–inch, 248 pounds), it adds speed to the pass rush.

Burke recorded six sacks last year, third on the team, along with 38 tackles.

Junior right end Vernard Fennell is a true sack specialist for the Minutemen, finishing second on the team

Turn to DEFENSE, page 13

McNeilly to head UMass option offense

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

They were excited. They were confident. They were satisfied. And then, the unthinkable happened, eight days prior to the first snap of the opening game.

The University of Massachusetts football coaching staff spent the last spring as well as this summer getting their two quarterbacks, junior Andrew McNeilly and sophomore Vito Campanile, ready for the season.

They watched the progress of the two quarterbacks during the practice, and marveled at the improvement. They said they were confident that both QB's could handle game–time pressures. In fact, they were so pleased about both McNeilly and Campanile, that they had not chosen the starter just a week before the opener against Richmond on Sept. 10. And then, it happened.

The unthinkable was an injury.

Campanile, who was just as much of a candidate for taking the opening snap as McNeilly, injured his right knee in a Sept. 1 intrasquad scrimmage. In a Boston Globe interview, team physician William Lohrer described the injury as "ligament and cartilage damage to the right knee." Lohrer also said that the knee damage could put the Franklin Lakes, N.J., player out for the season.

One play on that afternoon scrimmage put a rather large crimp into the Minutemen game plan. Having two experienced field generals was something that Head Coach Mike Hodges, Offensive Coordinator Doug Berry, and the rest of the staff, were ecstatic about.

For the first time in three years, Massachusetts was starting a season without an untested freshman quarterback, as McNeilly started his freshman year. When McNeilly went out with an injury last season, the freshman Campanile started the last four games. This year was different.

"Since I've been a head coach, we have looked at our quarterback as, 'Don't lose the football game for us.' Now, for the first time, we can look at our quarterback, whoever it is, and say, 'help us win the game,'" Hodges said before the Campanile injury.

Now, it's a bit different.

Does this mean the team is in disarray? Not really, because they do still have the talented McNeilly, who N.J., player out for the season.

Berry sees a new and improved McNeilly heading into this season.

"The thing you notice with Andrew is he has improved for two reasons, I think," Berry said. "One is the competition factor he was receiving from Vito made him better. The other reason is that he's 21–years–old now. He's a man. He's not just out of high school.

"His maturity level is up there, and he's showing great leadership around shirted guys, so they are not as far along as they might be. We've got some catching up to do," Hodges said.

Obviously, the key is for McNeilly to stay healthy. McNeilly injured his knee last season which put him out of commission for the final four games last season. The Melrose, Massachusetts native must remain injury–less this season for the Minutemen to achieve success, since he is now being asked to shoulder the quarterbacking duties.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO
Andrew McNeilly (9) will look to quarterback the Minuteman offense to a championship season in 1994.

Turn to OFFENSE, page 13

Yankee Conference greets new season

By Anthony Guido
Collegian Staff

Last season, the Yankee Conference expanded to a 12 team, two division format. The great traditional rivalries lived on, and new division races increased excitement.

Boston University surprised all and ran the table en route to the NCAA playoffs. Three teams qualified for the playoffs, with UMass narrowly missing out. Several of the first–year YanCon teams flourished to create a competitive atmosphere. The 1994 season promises to be even tighter as the conference should again send three teams to the playoffs.

New England Division

1. Boston University (12–1, 8–0 YanCon in 1993) — The Terriers figure to repeat as division champs, but don't look for another perfect conference record. Last year's squad was unheralded; this time around BU will not be able to sneak up on teams.

QB Robert Dougherty, last season's conference player of the year, returns to pilot BU's potent run–and–shoot offense. The offensive line returns intact, however a replacement has to be found for the graduated Zack Burwell (1,300 yards rushing), with no candidates stepping forward. The Terriers will again go as far as their defense can take them, which should mean a return trip to the Division I–AA playoffs.

2. University of Massachusetts (8–3, 5–3) — See related story.

3. University of Connecticut (6–5, 5–3) — The hype around the Huskies centers on the hiring of Skip Holtz as the new coach. Holtz promises that the team will have a winning attitude and a wide–open offense. The defense appears to be in shambles, and this is only the first year of the rebuilding process.

Wideout Monte Nowden (52 receptions for 756 yards) and running back Wilbur Gilliard (1,099 yards rushing, 17 touchdowns) will put plenty of points on the board in the new offense. The trouble will be stopping opponents. UConn has lost it's top six tacklers to graduation and should be even more vulnerable than last season.

4. Maine University (3–8, 2–6) — The Black Bears will field their strongest team in years with 15 starters returning. Coach Jack Cosgrove has all his skill position players back, including scrambling QB Emilio Colon.

Linebacker Ross Fitchorn will continue to gain recognition as one of the most intimidating players in the conference.

Maine looks for consistency on the offensive line to buy time for Colon and open holes for leading runner Steve Knight. The Black Bears will be a dangerous opponent for everyone, capable of pulling a few upsets.

5. University of New Hampshire (6–5, 4–4) — The Wildcats are among the many conference teams with uncertain QB situations. Coach Bill Bowes will again go with Jim Stayer, after benching him last season following game six.

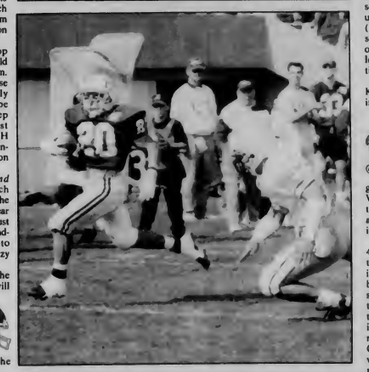
With the graduation of UNH's top two receivers, the passing attack could again be a problem. The strong defense returns virtually intact, and will be enough to keep them in most games. If UNH solves some offensive problems, finishing in the upper half of the division could be possible, but not likely.

6. University of Rhode Island (3–8, 1–7) — Second year coach Floyd Keith continues to rebuild the URI program. The Rams again appear to be fighting an uphill battle with just eight returning starters. A season–ending knee injury in spring practice to last year's leading rusher Frantzy Jourdain won't help matters, either.

Yankee Conference Rookie of the Year Chris Hixson returns and will again look to WR Bobby Apgar (40–744), the fourth leading receiver in the conference last season. The young, inexperienced defense will improve, as will the team, throughout the season.

New England
1. Boston University
2. Massachusetts
3. Connecticut
4. Maine
5. New Hampshire
6. Rhode Island

Mid–Atlantic
1. William & Mary
2. Delaware
3. James Madison
4. Villanova
5. Richmond
6. Northeastern



Mid–Atlantic Division

1. College of William & Mary (9–3, 7–1) — The Tribe had a remarkable debut in the conference last year, losing only to Delaware. Standout QB Shawn Knight will challenge Dougherty and RB's Rene Ingoglia (UMass) and Daryl Brown (Delaware) for conference Player of the Year honors. The same cast is back that averaged 38 points per game last season while only allowing 17.

LB's Greg Applewhite and Jason Miller will lead one of the most opportunistic defenses in the YanCon. Everything points towards the Tribe having just enough to finish ahead of Delaware for their second straight division crown.

2. University of Delaware (9–4, 6–2) — The Blue Hens had the 4th ranked offense in the nation last season but have many questions for the upcoming year. Star RB Brown (246–1,469) returns for his senior season without Delaware's top three offensive lineman. Last year's three leading receivers are lost to graduation as well.

The QB spot is unclear as well with Keith Langan and Leo Hamlett fighting for the spot. On the defensive side of the ball, opponents averaged over 28 points per game last year.

The Blue Hens will struggle at first, beginning with tough road games at William & Mary and Villanova. A fourth straight trip to the playoffs is possible if a passing attack can be coupled with NFL–caliber Brown.

3. James Madison University(6–5, 4–4) — Considered by some to be the team to beat in the division. With the Initial YanCon season under their belt, the returning 18 starters will be set to make a run at the top. One of the deepest teams in the conference, the Dukes will wear down opponents in the fourth quarter with the combination of Steve Agee and Mike Cawley. JMU is another team which will not be taken lightly this season; a repeat of last year's record is likely.

4. Villanova University (3–8, 1–7) — The Wildcats again will be the wildcard of the conference. Last year's squad was banged up all season, finishing in the cellar. Villanova returns an experienced defense led by lineman Chris Curtis and Nate McIntyre.

Talk of advancing to the I–A level has subsided, causing some to question the commitment to the football program. 'Nova can end up in the basement again or as high as third. Having William & Mary University, University of Delaware, and University of Richmond at home will help then reach the .500 level.

5. University of Richmond (5–6, 3–5) — The Spiders will feature one of the youngest teams in the conference led by a great backfield combination. Ully Scott is coming off two consecutive 1,000 yard seasons, and figures to graduate as the all–time leading rusher in school history. Fullback Jon Strashensky is a strong blocker and solid runner.

Richmond will live and die with the run, huping to keep it's young defense off the field. A QB must step forward to replace graduated star Greg Lilly. Neither Jason Gabrels nor Joe Elrod were impressive replacing the injured Lilly last season. The schedule isn't favorable for a rebuilding team, look for the Spiders to slip a bit.

6. Northeastern University (2–9, 2–6) — "No team has any more talent than we do," boast confident Co–Captain LB David Atwood and company, but can they back it up? Some improvements have been made, like dropping the ineffective run–and–shoot offense for a conventional two–back set. QB Clarzell Pearl threw for 12 touchdowns a year ago, but with 11 interceptions.

The new offense should help Pearl, as will the return of RB Kevin Williams, who missed most of last season due to injury. The Huskies alternated many close losses with blowout disasters last season.

NFL season in full swing

Ken Norton, Jr. is exactly what critics claimed Reggie White was when he left the Philadelphia Eagles via free agency two years ago. Many cried how White was prostituting himself, selling out to the highest bidder no matter what team he ended up on.

Norton, after playing an integral part of two Super Bowl championship clubs with the Dallas Cowboys, jumped ship and signed on with the San Francisco 49ers, the consensus pick to dethrone Dallas in the NFC. When speaking of free agency in the world of sports, one cannot mention the word loyalty, because it has lost all of its meaning.

If Norton decided to leave the Cowboys because Owner Jerry Jones did not offer him his market value, then all the power to him. However, this was not the case, as Norton left Dallas for more money and a chance to pump up his already–inflated ego by leading the Niners to a Super Bowl.

Norton's actions in the first Monday Night Football contest of the season brought about memories of Muhammed Ali before his fight with Ken's father. After a routine tackle of Los Angeles Raiders' running back Greg Montgomery, Norton turned to the Candlestick Park crowd, raised his arms in the air and waited for an anointing of sorts from the San Francisco faithful.

Arthur C. Stapleton Jr. on the NFL

It's even worse when Norton says in an interview that he will flatten Cowboys' star running back Emmitt Smith if he gets the chance, mimicking his former teammate's Reebok commercial — "Hi, I'm Ken Norton. Nice to meet you."

Pump up that ego, Ken.

* * *

The 49ers were the big winners of the off–season flea market, signing such names as Norton, Richard Dent, Gary Plummer, Rickey Jackson and Toi Cook, in order to bulk up their glaring weakness: defense. Despite his age, Dent still recorded 12.5 sacks last season on an overachieving Bears' defense. Pass rushing skills are instinctive and diminish slightly each year, not all at once.

Take a guy like Dallas' Jim Jeffcoat — he started his career amidst the hoopla of Tom Landry, persevered through the late 1980s on the worst team in football, and in the 1990s, still possesses, along with two rings, the skills to sack the quarterback.

Jackson proved in the season opener that he has something left, sacking Raider QB Jeff Hostetler twice; however, the additions of Plummer and Cook don't add up to much. Plummer, unlike Dent, is not a pass rusher and doesn't have the lateral quickness to make things happen in this, his 85th season in the league.

With the quality of receivers in the NFC, San Francisco needed all the help they could get in its secondary, but Cook wasn't the player who could provide it. Maybe if the Niners would not have signed Cook, they'd still be in the running for a real D–back, Deion Sanders.

Thanks to their lack of quality depth in the secondary, the 49ers will suffer against teams like Dallas, Detroit and Green Bay — franchises which have talented wide receiver corps; this is exactly the reason San Francisco will have a tough time in the playoffs and will not make the Super Bowl.

* * *

Detroit's Herman Moore has been a blossoming superstar over the past two seasons and should develop into one of the best along side ex–Minnesota wide–out Anthony Carter and ex–Dolphin quarterback Scott Mitchell. For the first time in franchise history, the Lions boast a potent and balanced offense, in which Barry Sanders may not be the focus of the opposing defense

Turn to NFL, page 13

The Sports Network
NCAA Division 1–AA Top–25 Poll

1. Marshall Thundering Herd
2. McNeese State Cowboys
3. Northern Iowa Panthers
4. Montana Grizzlies
5. Youngstown State Penguins
6. Central Florida Knights
7. Troy State Trojans
8. Idaho Vandals
9. Georgia Southern Eagles
10. Boston University Terriers*
11. Stephen F. Austin Lumberjacks
12. Delaware Fightin' Blue Hens*
13. Mid Tenn. State Blue Raiders
14. Howard University Bisons
15. Southern University Jaguars
16. Tennessee Tech Golden Eagles
17. Western Carolina Catamounts
18. William and Mary Tribe*
19. Western Kentucky Hilltoppers
20. Pennsylvania Quakers
21. Eastern Kentucky Colonels
22. Alcorn State Braves
23. Grambling St. Tigers
24. Montana State Bobcats
25. Massachusetts Minutemen

* denotes Yankee Conference team
 denotes non–conference opponent

Nebraska strong, Holtz is a baby

Anthony Guido on College Football

The grand old game has begun its 125th season filling every Saturday in the fall with highlights, superstars and controversy.

The usual list of suspects exists when talking about the top ten teams in the nation. With a definitive national championship game still not established, it's frustrating to think that again we will not have a decisive champion.

How does Florida score 70 points in its first game and still drop from No. 1 in the AP poll? It makes as little sense as the AP poll usually does. Quarterback Terry Dean silenced his critics by tying an NCAA record with seven first–half touchdown passes.

The Gators have neither the defense nor the ability to run the clock needed to go through Florida State and the rugged SEC season without multiple losses.

Last season coach Tom Osborne and Nebraska came within a late field goal of being champion. The Huskers have the defense, desire, and most importantly, the schedule to go undefeated in the regular season. Another trip to the Orange Bowl seems likely, and NU finally might be able to win the big one behind Heisman hopeful QB Tommy Frazier.

The only stumbling block for Nebraska could be a date with the Big Eight Conference foe Colorado. The devastating running duo of Kordell Stewart and Abdul Salaam will pile up the yardage. No one has a tougher schedule than the Buffaloes. The Coalition poll (for all its worth) hopefully will reward CU for doing things like adding Miami as a fill–in game as opposed to Cupcake U.

Quarterback Ron Powlus played one good game against Northwestern of all teams, and everyone has him in the Hall of Fame with two Heisman trophies. This can only happen at Notre Dame, wearing the uniform number of Joe Montana and Rick Mirer.

It will be running back Lee Becton's season to shine in South Bend. Powlus' hype may even hold Becton back from serious Heisman contention.

Notre Dame again will play a soft slate of opponents, playing only three schools who pose a threat. ND has handled Michigan and Southern Cal the past few years, but a November grudge match in Orlando against Florida State should be a dandy, knocking the Irish from the top.

Those Seminoles do appear to be in disarray. The countless scandals over the summer will no doubt wreck havoc on team chemistry. Bobby Bowden has held the ship together aboss as well as the Titanic was.

Expect FSU to drop one or even two games before November. Winning the ACC should again be no problem. Revenging last year's sole loss will be this year's "game of the century."

Sports Illustrated's college football preview was such a joke. First of all, picking Arizona as the No. 1 team in the land. I was a huge supporter of the Desert Swarm defense last season, but the offense is still anemic.

The 'Cats lost star running back Chuck Levy to the NFL, putting even more pressure on QB Dan White. Arizona barely beat an average ACC in Georgia Tech in its opener. The Pac–10 conference is loaded this year with great offenses, and upsets will be frequent.

Second, if FSU is only the tenth best football team in the land, does that include some NFL teams?

Also, Tennessee at nine and Boston College anywhere near the Top 25 were insane picks. BC's new coach Dan Henning (nice track record) and his ridiculous one–back offense is a nightmare.

There are seemingly hundreds of candidates in the race for the Heisman trophy. Michigan's Tyrone Wheatley will miss at least the first two games due to injury. Even more importantly, the Wolverine offensive line is banged up;

Turn to COLLEGE FOOTBALL, page 13

Men's tennis strives for improvement

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

Improvement is on the top of Coach Judy Dixon's list of expectations for the University of Massachusetts men's tennis team heading into the 1994–95 season.

Dixon enters her second year coaching men's tennis hoping her team will improve through experience and depth. Six players are returning and two transfer students will help Dixon as she takes the team into one of its tougher schedules.

After a one-year hiatus, senior Tim Lipsky is returning to UMass, and is the favorite to take over the No. 1 spot at singles left by Kasper Vaala. Dixon is pleased with his experience he adds to the team.

"Lipsky is a great team leader and competitor," Dixon said. "He is a possible one or two spot singles player."

Following close behind Lipsky, sophomore Ankur Baishya should move into the No. 2 singles spot. Baishya, who posted a 6–9 singles record and a 3–9 doubles record, was the only recruit on last year's team.

Dixon feels that the 3–6 spots are up for grabs. Returning seniors Bill Bochnak, Greg Hsaio and Keith Murray bring experience to the positions, but freshman Keith Kellogg has seemed to impress Dixon.

"Kellogg is an excellent singles player," Dixon said. "He is also strong in doubles."

Juniors Darrin Tow and Eric Peters are expected to improve and two transfer students, Justin Lynn from Bergen Community College and Joshua Freeman from the Coast Guard Academy, bring experience and depth to the team.

Dixon is careful not to set expectations too high. The coach is taking into consideration that without a scholarship program for Men's tennis, there is little incentive for highly recruited high school players to come to UMass.

"We actively recruit. We get about 50 applications, but I'm up from with them and tell them that we do not have any scholarships," Dixon said. "It narrows the field down to about 15."

"Kids who need the money that scholarships provide have to go elsewhere," Dixon said, pointing out that scholarship money did not prevent last year's team from being successful.

"Last year the men finished higher than three school's that did offer tennis scholarships," Dixon said. "This year I am hoping to improve the program so I can recruit kids with incentive other than money."

The men have seven dual matches this fall. The major part of their schedule is in the spring. The men begin their season Sept. 16 at home against Wesleyan College.

AKAMI COMSTAN/COLLEGIAN

Darren Tow is a sophomore who plays singles and doubles.

First-year faces boost women's tennis

COLLEGIAN STAFF PHOTO

Lesley Watts is a junior who is an excellent doubles player.

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

Watch out, Michigan, because Head Coach Judy Dixon and the women's tennis team at the University of Massachusetts have their own version of the "Fab Five."

A strong recruiting year has brought five incoming freshman to an already solid UMass women's tennis team. Dixon's work is cut–out for her, but the job of mixing talented newcomers with experienced Division I players is one of the most enjoyable problems she will face.

"This is the biggest year for UMass women's tennis," said Dixon. "This is truly the year that we get put on the map. I couldn't be more excited."

The women are looking at the toughest schedule in the team's history. They will face three nationally ranked teams including Temple, Boston University, and Rutgers. In addition to perennial powers Colgate and Cornell.

Last year Dixon and the women's tennis team tied for fourth place at the New England Championships, and finished the year in sixth place in the Atlantic 10 with an overall record of 11–6. This year Dixon wants nothing more than improvement.

"This year I am looking to win the New England's, and finish at least fourth or fifth in the A–10's," Dixon said.

Dixon will be faced with the challenge of preparing five recruits, all freshman, who have a chance to play their first year against nationally ranked teams.

"This is my team," Dixon said. "I came to UMass a year and a half ago, and this is the first full recruiting year I have had."

Returning to the team as a junior, Liesl Sitton is a possibility for the number one slot of singles.

Sitton was strong overall last year, leading the team with a 15–2 record in singles matches and 10–0 record in doubles. Sitton placed second at the New England Championships last fall, and this summer competed in Virginia with some of the nation's top college players.

The number two position in the singles slot may be filled by sophomore Liz Durant. Her 1993–94 results were only rivaled by Sitton's. Durant finished the year with a 13–4 singles record and went undefeated, 12–0, in doubles matches.

Durant's competition for the number two slot may come from any one of five freshmen. Heading the class is Caroline Steele. Steele decided to attend UMass after becoming the No. 1 ranked high school player in the state of Kentucky.

Following close behind Steele are Noelle Orsini and Svetlana Goredeskaya. Dixon sees Orsini vying for the second or third position. Dixon is also optimistic about Goredeskaya, who originally is from Russia and has only been in America for two years.

Dixon sees the rest of the positions up for grabs between freshman Amy Sidran, Shari Rosenthal, and senior Mary Edwards.

The women's first test will be a home match against Wesleyan on Sept. 16. Dixon feels it will help prepare the women for their match the following day against the University of Hartford, a team they have never beaten.

University of Massachusetts 1994–1995 Men's Basketball Schedule

Thurs., Nov. 17	Turkey Jr. National Team	7:00 p.m.
Fri., Nov. 25	Arkansas (@ Springfield CC)	7:30 p.m. ESPN
Sat., Dec. 3	Kansas (@ Anaheim)	1:00 p.m. NBC
Thurs., Dec. 8	Pittsburgh	TBA
Sat., Dec. 10	@ Maryland (Baltimore CC)	2:00 p.m. ABC
Wed., Dec. 14	Princeton	TBA
Sat., Dec. 17	Western Kentucky	5:00 p.m. ESPN 2
Tue., Jan. 3	West Virginia (@ Springfield CC)	8:00 p.m. A–10
Thurs., Jan. 5	@ St. Louis	9:20 p.m. ESPN
Sat., Jan. 7	@ LaSalle (Atlantic City)	TBA
Tue., Jan. 10	@ St. Bonaventura	TBA
Thurs., Jan. 12	Rutgers	8:00 p.m. A–10
Sat., Jan. 14	Pennsylvania	9:00 p.m. ESPN
Thurs., Jan. 19	@ Rhode Island (Providence CC)	7:30 p.m. Prime
Sat., Jan. 21	Temple	1:00 p.m. ABC
Tue., Jan. 24	@ Duquesne	8:00 p.m. A–10
Fri., Jan. 27	@ West Virginia	8:00 p.m. ESPN 2
Mon., Jan. 30	St. Bonaventura	7:00 p.m.
Wed., Feb. 1	St. Joseph's	8:00 p.m. Prime
Sat., Feb. 4	@ George Washington	Noon A–10
Tue., Feb. 7	@ Rutgers	8:00 p.m. ESPN
Sat., Feb. 11	@ Southwestern Louisiana	4:00 p.m. ESPN
Tue., Feb. 14	George Washington	TBA
Thurs., Feb. 16	Duquesne	TBA
Sun., Feb. 19	Louisville (@ Worcester Centrum)	1:30 p.m. ABC
Thurs., Feb. 23	@ Temple	9:30 p.m. ESPN
Sat., Feb. 25	@ St. Joseph's	Noon A–10
Tue., Feb. 28	@ [illegible]	Rhode Island [illegible]
Sat., Mar. 4	Atlantic 10 Tournament	[illegible]
Mon., Mar. 6	(@ Palestra, Philadelphia)	[illegible]
Thurs., Mar. 9	Championship Game

(@ Site of highest remaining seed)

Tennis:

At a Glance

UMass

Head Coach: Judy Dixon
Assistant Coach: Dan Rosenberg
1993 Record: Women 11–6, Men 8–10
Returning players: Women: Mary Edwards, Pam Levine, Sonnybelle Martinez, Stacey Scheckner, Kathy Schmidt, Liesl Sitton, and Lesley Watts Men: Sasha Bluestone, Bill Bochnak, David Bradley, Kevin Hicks, Greg Hsiao, Keith Murray, Eric Peters, Darren Tow, Joe Twer, and Kasper Vaala
Probable starters: Women: Edwards, Elizabeth Durant, Levine, Martinez, Scheckner, Schmidt, Sitton, Amy Stoff, and Watts Men: Ankur Baishya, Bluestone, Bochnak, Bradley, Hicks, Hsiao, Murray, Peters, Tow, Twer, and Vaala
Newcomers: Women: Durant and Stoff. Men: Baishya.

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS
Don't Miss The ACTION
GET THOSE FORMS IN BY
Flag Football (M/W/C).....9/19
Soccer (M/W).....9/19
Co-ed Softball.....9/20
Ice Hockey (M/W).....9/28
Track & Cross Country (M/W).....9/28
For entry forms and info 545-2693 545-0022
LATE ENTRANTS SHOULD CHECK FOR EXTENSIONS IN BOYDEN 215

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center
More than 450 Beers.
The Largest Selection Of Micro-Brewed & Imported Beers In The Area.
A Wide Variety of Fine Wines.
Over 40 Single Malt Scotches.
Specialty Kegs in Stock. (Cold Plates Available)
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
"Your Full Service Party Source"
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt.9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt.9E
VISA - MASTERCARD - DISCOVER Accepted

Pain reliever / Fever reducer
INDICATIONS: For the temporary relief of minor aches and pains associated with the common cold, headache, toothache, muscular aches, backache, for the pain of menstrual cramps, and for reduction of fever
SUMMER'S OVER.
Thank goodness there's Advil.® Advanced medicine for pain.*
Pick up your free sample at The University Store.

High expectations for UMass hoops

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

Are they ready to take the next step?

The excitement surrounding the 1994–95 Massachusetts basketball team has been building for some time. After a successful campaign a year ago with a team that featured no seniors, the expectations of what this year could be are as high as the program has ever seen.

"The expectation level is higher than it has ever been," said John Calipari. "This year it is going to be almost impossible to meet the expectations, short of winning the national title."

Excited fans are not the only ones that expect great things from UMass. Dick Vitale has chosen the Minutemen as his pre–season No. 2, and Boston Herald Columnist Gerry Callahan devoted a summer column to UMass and its National Championship chances. Calipari knows no matter how good his team is, there are no guarantees in the tournament.

"What comes into play there is being lucky, getting a good draw, and staying healthy," Calipari said. "There are so many things in the mix to advance to the Final Four and to try to win the National Title."

The road to that potential title is a long one. The schedule is the toughest the Minutemen have ever played. After opening the season against defending National Champion Arkansas, it does not get much easier. They have ten games on the schedule against teams that played in March Madness.

"I want to have everybody see," Calipari said. "Every fan is going to see, because we're not doing it against PoDunc A&M, were doing it against Arkansas, Kansas, Pitt and Maryland. We have no easy wins."

With a deep and talented team, Calipari stresses the importance of unselfishness.

"Either we play together with chemistry or we get beat," Calipari said. "The crux of it is going to be the chemistry. Will guys accept roles. Will guys step back from all the ego and say, 'what do I have to do to help this team win?'"

Four of the A–10's top players were selected in June's NBA draft, seemingly leaving a void in the conference for top talent. Calipari disputes the idea that the loss of some marquee players will create a less competitive Atlantic 10.

"We lost Jim McCoy and we won the league. We lost Tony (Barbee) and Harper (Williams) and we won the league," Calipari said. "It is the ones who you have in the program. St. Joe's is going to be much better than everybody thinks. GW is going to be good, Rhody [URI] is going to be pretty good and the other teams you just don't know."

The Minutemen will be the favorite though. They have a chance to win an unprecedented fourth straight A–10 title. The last time a team other than UMass won the conference, Derek Kellogg was a senior in high school.

> The expectation level is higher than it has ever been. This year it is going to be almost impossible to meet the expectations, short of winning the national title.
> –John Calipari

"The holes are filled," Calipari said. "We have good guards. We've got pretty good frontcourt players. We have good leadership. We have great depth. It's there for this team. That's all you can ask."

Front Court: The Minutemen have one of the nation's deepest front lines, with eight players likely to see action.

After spending his summer representing the United States at the Goodwill Games in Russia, senior co–captain Lou Roe will be counted on to carry a share of the scoring and rebounding load as well as being a leader.

If his 32 point performance against Maryland was the sign of things to come, sophomore Marcus Camby could emerge as one of college basketball's premier centers.

Donta Bright and Dana Dingle will likely share the majority of the time at the small forward spot with Rigo Nunez also seeing action.

After sitting out last season due to NCAA Proposition 48 regulations, Tyrone Weeks will finally join the Minutemen.

"He is a strong physical kid, and a hard worker," said Calipari. "He will add to our rebounding and our defense."

Backcourt: Returning starters Kellogg and Mike Williams will be expected to lead a young group of guards. Sophomores Edgar Padilla and Carmelo Travieso, and freshman Andre Burks will all compete for playing time in the backcourt.

"I know we have great players," Calipari said. "Do we have a great team? No. Will we have a great team? That's my job, and I think they're capable."

Calipari's fear is that his team will listen too much to the early praise.

"We have to guard against embracing success. In our case it's remembering what got us here," said Calipari. "We need to just play harder than the opponent and attack the rebounding on both ends of the floor. We're a great defensive team, a blue collar team."

Shooting, both outside and free throws, hindered UMass' chances last year.

"What we've got to improve on is shooting the ball," Calipari said. "Whether it be from the foul line or the perimeter, we have to shoot the ball better. We have to work at getting each other good shots."

How good are they? Midnight Madness is only 35 days away.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Sophomore center, Marcus Camby and the Minutemen hope to reach new heights this season.

UM recruits make grade

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

Without them, the 1994 Massachusetts basketball team was already deep, but with the addition of freshmen Andre Burks and Inus Norville, they are loaded.

It went down to the wire, but both recruits met the NCAA minimum eligibility requirement and will be in uniform.

The 6–foot–9–inch Norville will add depth to what appears to be an already strong front line. An addition to last years returnees will be sophomore Tyrone Weeks, who sat out last season after failing to meet the Proposition 48 requirements.

Both players played for former Minuteman Mike Byrnes at Hargrave Military Academy in Chatham, Virginia.

Calipari believes that two recruits' success on the exam will be a morale boost for them.

"They did two things making the score," Calipari said. "They worked their tails off. Their confidence level and their self esteem is back. That's important for them. Forget basketball, it's about them."

Burks made his local debut playing for the New Orleans squad at the Boston Shootout. The 6–foot–1–inch point guard saw limited action in the tournament because he had been taking a summer class at UMass instead of practicing with the team. When he did play, he put on a show for the crowd at Boston University with some nifty passing.

Without question though, the shootout crowd will most remember Burks for the slam dunk contest. At only 6–foot– 1–inch, Burks outdunked several players as much as eight inches taller than him.

In the preliminary round of the competition, Burks tossed the ball off the back wall, caught it and dunked it, prompting a standing ovation from the Shootout Crowd.

"You'll see a lot," Burks said. "You'll see different things, a lot of dunking, a lot of threes. I shoot the three from anywhere."

Burks has his sights set on being the starting point guard.

Turn to RECRUITS, page 13

Lou Roe shines in Goodwill Games

Senior Minuteman forward impressive in exhibition versus The Dream Team II

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

If there was any question about whether Lou Roe was among college basketball's elite, he took a step toward silencing them.

Roe spent part of his summer in Russia representing the United States on a college all–star team at the Goodwill Games in St. Petersburg.

In addition to Roe, the team featured some of college basketball's top players including Cherokee Parks, Shawn Respert, and Jerome Allen.

In the opening game against Argentina, Roe scored thirteen points, the second highest on the team en route to an 83–71 victory over Argentina.

The U.S. dropped their next game to Russians, as the home team edged the U.S. 77–75.

The highlight of the tournament for Roe was in the third game when the U.S. pounded China 99–80. Roe led the team with 19 points and six rebounds.

The team went on to finish third and capture the bronze medal.

Following the tournament the team returned to the U.S. to serve as the practice squad for the Dream Team II, which was preparing to compete in the World Games in Toronto, Ontario. The two teams competed against each other on national television at the end of the practice session.

The Dream Team promised to provide their crowd with a display of fancy passing and rim–rocking dunks, but it was Roe that had the game's best dunk.

After teammate Alan Henderson missed a shot, Roe leapt through traffic for a put–back dunk over Dream Teamer Reggie Miller.

On the home front, UMass Coach John Calipari is pleased at how Roe has improved his game.

"He's moved his game out on the floor a little bit," said Calipari. "He's improved his perimeter skills which was the big key this summer. What Lou has to do is say 'I'm going to rebound, I'm going to score on the inside, but now I can shoot some threes and make plays on the break.'"

Despite his new–found skills, Calipari believes that Roe's rebounding and inside game is what will lead him to the NBA.

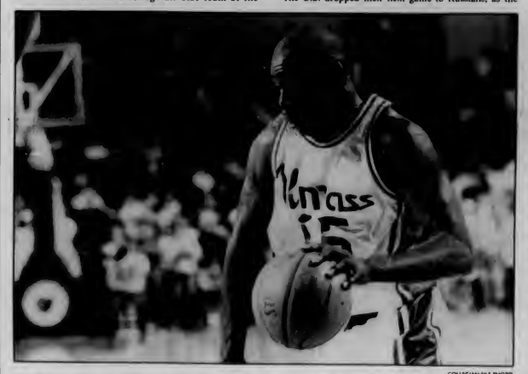
"He hangs his hat on his ability to go to the glass and be a warrior," said Calipari. "He relies on his ability to rebound above the rim, to make plays in traffic, to be hit and still make the big shot. You have to hang your hat on what carries you and why NBA scouts are watching you to begin with."

Calipari compares Roe's rebounding ability to the best in the business.

"He could be another Dennis Rodman," said Calipari. "He could be a guy that goes into the league and gets 12 rebounds a game. You know Lou's going to rebound."

Roe, in addition to Marcus Camby and newcomer Tyrone Weeks, should dominate the board night in and night out.

Roe enters the 1994–95 season as a favorite to capture the Atlantic 10 Player of the Year Award.



COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

After a summer of representing the United States in the Goodwill Games, Lou Roe is back to lead the Minutemen.

RESERVE OFFICERS' TRAINING CORPS

GET MONEY FROM YOUR UNCLE INSTEAD.
Your Uncle Sam. Every year Army ROTC awards scholarships to hundreds of talented students. If you qualify, these merit-based scholarships can help you pay tuition and educational fees. They even pay a flat rate for textbooks and supplies. You can also receive an allowance of up to $1000 each school year the scholarship is in effect. Find out today if you qualify.
ARMY ROTC
THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE.
No Obligation to Enroll!
For More Information:
Contact Captain Paul Guelle
545-2321

Immigration Law
Hans & Curran, P.C.
30 Years of Experience in Immigration Law
1163 Main Street Springfield, MA 781-6370
13 Old South St Northampton,MA 584-3232
50 Congress St. Boston, MA (617)722-0043
Free Consultation for Five College Students/Faculty

TOTAL FITNESS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST Aerobics | BEST Machines | BEST Prices
KEISER, NAUTILUS, STAIRMASTERS
CYBEX VBE, NORDIC TRACK, OLYMPIC FREE WEIGHTS
Hi & Lo, Step, Funk, Yoga, Slide, Bweroise
Amherst Athletic Club
Rt. 116, South Amherst
256-0080

XC has inexperience

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

The 1994 University of Massachusetts women's cross country team will have to overcome injuries and inexperience if it is to duplicate last year's third place finish at the New England Championships.

The Minutewomen have a couple of injuries to key runners, and the majority of runners are freshmen and sophomores.

UMass senior captain Kerry Aker has been bothered by physical problems and it is unkown at this time if she will be able to run this year.

Also injured is sophomore Katie Greenia who is having knee and foot difficulties. She has been working with the trainer and it is unkown if she will be able to compete either.

Junior Jen Weager is another question mark. She has had lower leg problems, and took time off during the summer to get healthy, but it is still unknown if she will be able to run this year.

A fourth injury for the Minutewomen this year is sophomore Jen Barry. Barry has been feeling very fatigued, and it is feared that she may have mononucleous.

Head Coach Julie LaFreniere feels that the youth of the team could be a problem but she thinks the team will fare well.

"I think we certainly will be respectable, but the thing that worries me a little bit is the inexperience and the youth," said LaFreniere. "But a lot of times that's when you do your best."

The other captains for this year are seniors Julie Moreau and Cheryl Lyons. They will be looked upon for leadership and guidance.

"Moreau is a lot better than she was when she first came back this year," said LaFreniere. "Lyons looked great [in last Tuesday's workouts]."

The top runner on the team is once again sophomore Melissa Langevin. Langevin had an outstanding season last year in her rookie season, garnering four Freshman of the Week awards but narrowly losing the Freshman of the Year award. Langevin had a knee problem at the end of the cross country season last year that caused her to miss the indoor and outdoor track seasons.

"She's [Langevin] in better shape now than she was a year ago," said LaFreniere. "She's coming back real strong, she looks good. She's the top runner right now."

If that is true, get ready for a tremendous sophomore year by Langevin.

Sophomore Molly Dunlap is another runner who should have a good year. In the workouts last Tuesday, Dunlap did "an outstanding job and has come back more experienced," according to LaFreniere.

One runner who came back to school in great shape, pleasing her coach very much was sophomore Kristin Donaldson.

"[Kristin] Donaldson has come back a new woman. I can't say enough about how she went back to Alaska and worked her butt off. She is a totally different person."

"You don't know what shape your kids are going to come back in. You can have a lot of disappionments if they don't do what they need to do, and I don't feel like that happened with this core."

There are three freshmen who should make an impact right away. Rebecca Donaghue, according to LaFreniere, is a "hard worker with a lot of heart – a real team person." The other two, Kirsten Bringardner and Christy Martin, look very promising.

Other runners who look to make an impact are Jennifer Del Colle, Kristen Kroger, Heather Boussy, Bonnie Davis, Maureen Forsyth, Deborah Frenkel, Kim Hargrave, and Mariska Pierce.

"They [the team] are not very experienced, but to me they are going to run with a lot of heart, a lot of guts, and a lot of courage," said LaFreniere. "And as long as you have those ingredients you don't have to have the best athletes in New England. I am very happy with there attitudes."

The team's goal, as always, is to win the A–10s. If evcrything stays in place, this should be possible.

"If they can hold together and keep progressing as a team, and if they are smart and take care of themselves; if they are smart and they want it, I think they do have a shot at the A–10s."

ARAM COMJEAN/COLLEGIAN
Sophomore Melissa Langevin should be the top runner again for the Minutewomen.

Men's Cross Country aims for A–10 title

ARAM COMJEAN/ COLLEGIAN
Men's cross country hopes to build off last year's experience and move to greater hieghts.

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

In the fall season at the University of Massachusetts, there are teams that you can count on to contend for their conference championships. In 1994, men's cross country Coach Ken O'Brien hopes to add his team to the list.

After finishing third in the Atlantic 10 Championships behind West Virginia and St. Joseph's a year ago, O'Brien feels his team can contend for its first ever Atlantic 10 crown.

"I'm optimistic about the season, based on several things," said O'Brien. "We have a lot of kids returning from last year's team. Last year's team was kind of a traditional year for us. We had some pretty good talent, but a lot of those kids hadn't been in a position of responsibility before.

"They had their year of responsibility in 1993 and got some experience. I'm excited about this team because even though it is still relatively young, there is a little more experience than there was on last year's team."

The future is bright for UMass cross country as well, because there is only one senior on this year's squad.

O'Brien hopes to have his top seven runners established by the second half of the season, in time for the championship meets.

"I'd like to improve on every one of our performances from last year," said O'Brien. "I'd like to win the Atlantic 10. We've never won it. It's a great cross country conference. We've always been the bridesmaid, finishing second or third to a great team.

"We'll have a real tough task because West Virginia only lost a couple of guys and St. Joe's only lost one."

O'Brien hopes to have a front runner or runners to emerge.

"Our third man on any given day could be any one of our 14 runners," said O'Brien. "I have to give the nod, based on last year's experience to Ted Towse and Ethan Nadeau as our top runners."

The men's cross country team opened their season at the Central Connecticut Invitational on Saturday.

O'Brien will look to co-captains senior Rick Copley and junior Ted Towse to lead the team.

Women's Cross Country:
At a Glance

"If they can hold together and keep progressing as a team, if they're smart and take care of themselves, and if they want it, I think they do have a shot at the A–10's."
–JULIE LaFRENIERE, head coach

Head Coach: Julie LaFreniere
1993 record: 5–0
Runners Lost: Kim Liljeblad, Kelly Liljeblad, and Kristin Diggs.
Captains: Kerry Aker, Cheryl Lyons, and Julie Moreau.
Returning runners: Aker, Jen Barry, Kristin Donaldson, Molly Donkap, Katie Greenia, Melissa Langevin, Cheryl Lyons, Julie Moreau, Mariska Pierce and Jen Waeger.
Newcomers: Kirsten Bringordner, Jennifer Del Colle, Rebecca Donague, Kim Hargrave, Kristen Kroger and Christy Martin.

Men's Cross Country:
At a Glance

'I'd like to improve on every one of our performances from last year. I'd like to win the Atlantic 10. We've never won it. It's a great cross country conference.'
–KEN O'BRIEN, head coach

Head Coach: Ken O'Brien
Co-Captains: Rick Copley, Ted Towse
Starters Lost: Kevin Greenhalgh, Craig Cormier
Key Returners: Ted Towse, Ethan Nadeau, Rick Copley
Newcomers: No new recruits

CONTACT LENS SERVICE
At The University Health Services

We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.

All fittings are done by an eye doctor with experience in contact lens care and in solving contact lens problems.

Unlimited follow-up visits are available to you under the UHS Eye CAre Savings Plan at no additional cost.

Reduced costs on contact lenses are available to you under the UHS Eye Care Savings Plan.

If you tear or damage a contact lens within 45 days of receiving it, we will replace it for you at no extra cost.

Same day replacement of contact lenses in many cases due to our large in house inventory.

Contact lenses can be mailed to you at no extra charge for postage.

Convenient hours and on-campus location.

Free sample start-up solutions, as available.

Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Care Program over 19 years has been

"I invite you to use the Eye Services at UHS."

Frederick H. Bloom, O.D.

uhs
Eye Care Program
University Health Services
Call 549-2671 ext 244

WELCOME BACK from The Big Guy
KEGS BEER BALLS
BIG GUY LIQUORS
Lots of Specials
"We're Big On Friendly Service... Come In And See Us!"
Next to Superior Pizza
549-3555
25 Montague Center

Haircuts only $15.00
(Long Hair $2.00 extra)
Including shampoo & Drying
Regency Hairstylists
189 North Pleasant Street
Downtown Amherst
253-9526

Are you interested in writing for the sports page?

There will be a Collegian sports staff meeting on Tuesday, September 20, at 7 p.m. in the Collegian offices, located at 113 Campus Center Basement. Anyone interested in writing for the sports page is welcome. There are fall beats available, no experience necessary.

Football

continued from page 8

returning group of linebackers, as All–Conference Mario Perry and Scott Assenchoa are now a part of Minutemen history. Despite the small reconstruction, they do have sophomore middle linebacker Mike Valentino, as well as junior Roger Kotlarz and senior Trejo Rust taking over on the outside. Also seeing time at linebacker will be sophomore punter Justin Reimer, who played some defensive back last season.

You want talented, athletic players at cornerback? No need to look much further than junior All–American candidate Breon Parker and senior Tony Williams. Parker picked off seven passes to lead the Minutemen, while Williams led the way in forced fumbles with three. The best cornerback tandem in Division I–AA? Quite possibly.

"We have got two experienced corners [Parker and Williams] that I wouldn't trade for anybody," Hodges said.

As for the safety position, the Minutemen cannot replace a guy like former free safety Matt Rajotte. However, junior Jason Tudryn has steadily improved. Junior Jason Mumford is a safe bet to start at strong safety, while sophomore Brian Mooney should see some playing time.

College Football

continued from page 9

injuries crippled both the team's and Wheatley's chances last year and are threatening to do it again.

If you want big running totals, turn to Penn State's Ki– Jana Carter (210 yards in opener). Carter makes everything look so smooth as one of the many weapons Joe Paterno has on offense.

Wheatley has virtually no shot of piling up the totals Carter or Washington's Napoleon Kaufman will. Think Ty regrets his decision not to turn pro?

Two wide receivers figure to be in the five of next year's NFL draft. UCLA's J.J. Stokes and Ohio State's Joey Galloway (now suspended for two games) are magnificent talents, each with the chance of scoring 20 touchdowns this season. Unfortunately, the Heisman has evolved into a quarterback award, and, at least this year, there are many deserving candidates

The ability of potentially great QB's this season is astounding. You want to run the ball, look to Frazier or Stewart of the Big Eight. Like to throw the bomb, then you have Georgia gunner Eric Zeier, Dean, and the raw Powlus.

You want the high percentage system QB, look to Stanford's Steve Stenstrom, USC's Rob Johnson, or UCLA's Wayne Cook. Don't forget about the unknown star, Steve "Air" McNair at tiny Alcorn State. McNair puts 56 points on the board and loses in the opener.

Right now the best of the bunch is Zeier, only his mediocre team can hold him back. The same holds true for Stenstrom, giving a huge edge to Frazier, the closest thing to last year's winner Charlie Ward.

Look for the Orange Bowl to be the closest thing to a title game, with Nebraska knocking off the giant monkey from it's back against either Colorado or Notre Dame. Zeier will edge Frazier for the Heisman. Lou Holtz will cry and everybody will listen. Some things will never change.

Defense

continued from page 8

with seven last year.

It was his first as a starter, and included two multi–sack games against Maine and Rhode Island.

Corcoran returns as the left end and as the deadliest threat to sack the quarterback.

The 6–foot–2–inch, 245–pounder has amassed 164 tackles and 17 sacks in his previous two years as a starter, including a team–high 12 last season for minus 82 yards.

Junior Ken Bello and redshirt freshman Jeron Alston, along with junior David Dakin, will challenge for playing time on the defensive line.

As far as the goals for the 1994 version of the defensive line?

"To win," Albert said.

"When it comes right down to it, that's all that anybody cares about — whether we shut every team out or we give up 40 points, all we want to do is win," Corcoran said.

"Sounds good to me," said Roof.

recruits

continued from page 11

"The point guard they have (Derek Kellogg) is real good, but I don't think he has the [athletic ability] to do the things I can do," said Burks. "He (Kellogg) said to me that as long as we're winning, he was willing to sit on the bench and watch."

Also playing in the Shootout was Fall River shooting guard Jeff Caron, who will try to make the Minuteman as a walk–on.

Caron had an impressive high school career, but the fact that he was only 5–foot–11–inches as a shooting guard kept him from earning any Division I scholarship offers. Caron hopes to make the most of his chances at UMass.

"I'm excited," said Caron. "If I make it, I'm a good shooter and a smart player. I plan on working hard and pushing the other guards."

Information from the Greenfield Recorder was used in this story.

Ever wondered how a newspaper is made?

When this group of WEBELOS Boy Scouts visited the Collegian production office last week, they didn't know much about newspapers. Within ten minutes, they had put together an ad on our computers, printed it and pasted it up.

If you're interested in newspapers and would like to join our staff – or would just like to see how the Collegian gets put together – drop by our offices at 113 Campus Center. We couldn't give the scouts a position on our staff, but if you're an undergraduate you can start getting experience – today!

Offense

continued from page 8

the football team. He's just bringing so much more to the table."

As for McNeilly, his thoughts are not on the QB situation. His outlook is not one of nervousness for the upcoming season. His goal is plain and simple.

"Our goal is to win a championship," said McNeilly. "If we have to win eight or nine games (in the regular season) to do it, fine. Our number one goal is to win a championship.

Despite the hardships that Hodges and Co. are facing at the moment, they are aware of the basic adjustments the team has to make.

"Whenever anyone gets injured, two things have to happen. The person going in has to be ready to go, and do the best he can," Hodges said. "And everybody else has to pick up a lot of slack. That's all.

"We're in that situation right now. Andrew has to take some pressure off the men. He's been around. The kids played in 17 football games for us. We've asked him to do more and more each year, and he's going to have to continue to do so this year."

The game plan for the Minutemen attack will stay the same. Run first, throw if needed. Same as the last two years, the same will be expected this year.

"From what you have seen in the past, if we're able to establish the running game, that's what we'll do," Berry said. "If we need to throw, or want to throw the ball, we are certainly capable of doing that as well."

Despite the setback that has occurred, one thing is for certain – if McNeilly or whoever is ready to go and they do the best they can, and if everyone else picks up the slack, the season should be a successful one for this Minuteman football team.

Confidence.

Assurance in a player that takes the snap on each offensive play of the game can be pretty beneficial for the coaching staff, to say the least. And coach Mike Hodges is confident of his quarterback situation with Andrew McNeilly and Vito Campanile.

So confident, that the decision of who was going to start the first game of the season at Richmond was made six days prior to it. Obviously, Hodges has faith in both field generals.

Whichever QB is on the field for the Minutemen, according to Hodges, will have to adjust to the UMass game plan — not the other way around.

"We're going to run our offense, and see which quarterback runs it the best. (In preseason), we've run the option, we've thrown the ball, but we don't change either the run game or the passing game.

"If one becomes an immediate established starter and the one that plays a majority of the time, certainly we'll tailor some of the things to what his best abilities are. Right now, it doesn't affect our game plan at all, regardless of who the quarterback is."

As to who the starting quarterback is, let's put it in the plainest of terms. If Massachusetts has a passing offense, odds on the opening snap would be to strong–armed Campanile. If your game is the option offense, give it to McNeilly. Hodges' offense is the latter, so McNeilly is his starter.

McNeilly, a two year starter including the first seven games of the 1993 season before bowing out the final four games to a knee injury, has the starting position to lose. The junior was 66–136 (.485) for 808 yards (as well as 64 carries for 298 yards) before injuring his knee in a practice prior to the Northeastern game.

Did you get your Collegian today?

(Well, yeah, you're reading one so you found it somewhere...)

Look for our convenient distribution boxes, located in Amherst and Northampton. The Collegian. We're everywhere.
Still looking? Call 545-3500 or come to 113 Campus Center and we'll help you out.

Learn How To FLY!
Private Pilot Ground School Starting in Sept

Five College Flying Club
Discounted Rates
Close By Experienced Instructors
NEW ENGLAND AIR CONNECTION
Northampton Airport
(On the bus line)
If you've been interested in flying, now is the time to join us. Explore aviation and enjoy the skies. For more information, call Tim or Rahat at 584-1860

HELCATS
JOIN THE PACK RIDE WITH DEATH
THE COLLEGIAN

Air Force ROTC
CAN YOU HEAR OPPORTUNITY KNOCKING?

800,000 Students in America graduated without a job in 1994
DON'T BE A STATISTIC!
Guarantee your job after graduation. Ask about the unique opportunities & scholarships in Air Force ROTC. UMASS Campus, Dickinson Hall, Room 201, M - F
Call (413) 545-2451 Today!

NFL

continued from page 9

every series his team has possession of the ball.

• • •

Jimmy Johnson made his regular season debut as a studio analyst for Fox's NFL coverage during the New York– Philadelphia game and impressed with his unbiased analysis of the Cowboys. At first it seemed as though Johnson would take the opportunity to slam his former organization, picking Dallas to meet the Raiders in the Super Bowl, then saying they would lose because of interference by Jones.

However, Johnson backed off later in the telecast, talking honestly about topics like Barry Switzer's chances with the Cowboys and Troy Aikman's development from a rookie quarterback to a Super Bowl MVP.

If he decides to remain in the booth, Johnson should prosper like another championship coach who was forced out, Mike Ditka. The ex–Chicago coach deserves a lot of credit for his critiquing of the Bears and his replacement, Dave Wannstedt. He went so far as to say that Chicago, with its improved running attack and underrated defense, could challenge in the NFC Central.

• • •

The Buffalo Bills have suddenly gone from a Super Bowl contender to one of the weakest teams in the vastly improving AFC East after their opening defeat at the hands of the New York Jets in Orchard Park. Buffalo could possibly be the mirror image of the two–time defending champions in Major League Baseball, the Toronto Blue Jays.

With the most talent in the division and quite possibly the most balanced defense in the AFC, Buffalo may find that the pressure of going to a remarkable fifth–straight Super Bowl too much to overcome, finding itself hovering just above mediocrity.

Despite its poor showing in the season opener against Dallas, the Pittsburgh defense is the most talented in the AFC. With a gamebreaker–like cornerback Rod Woodson in the mix, the Steelers can make a run at dethroning the Bills as league champions. Consistency on offense is a must, yet Woodson is one of the few players in the NFL who can turn a game in Pittsburgh's favor every time he is near the ball, whether it is on a blitz, in coverage, or on special teams as the league's best kick returner.

Arthur Stapleton Jr. is a Collegian columnist.

Water Polo

continued from page 4

look solid once again.

"I hope those three newcomers can contribute successful playing time to the team," Yarworth said. "I think these guys can help us. Everyone on the team has been working real hard with three–a–day's the past three weeks."

While Massachusetts sets its sights on a return to the NCAA's and an Eastern Region crown, optimism is the buzz word in the pool. Yet the missing piece to another successful season may very well be team defense, which, up to this point has been under the microscope of Yarworth.

"This team has to learn that it is defense that wins championships. And right now, these guys are working hard at that. But we've still given up a few soft goals in the pre– season," he said.

Massachusetts, with its whole team not yet intact, fell to No. 11 Bucknell and No. 14 Navy in the pre–season. Both games came down to the wire.

"That shows me we're ready to go," Yarworth said.

To the NCAA's? Not yet, but a return trip sure looks promising.

Women's Crew gains official recognition

Coach Deitz has high hopes for first year Varsity team while search for athletes continues

By Jody King
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts has a new women's team. Sort of.

The women's crew team, which in the past has been considered a club sport, has officially been granted varsity status by the University.

There will be no more struggling to come up with money for uniforms and equipment. These women will now have all the privileges of other varsity athletes. But that is not all they will get. Along with their new status comes changes in expectations, pressures and attitudes.

New coach Jim Deitz attributes the past performance of the existing team as a large factor in the school's decision to upgrade the team, which in 1991 was the small college National Champion.

"What these women have done in the past was a catalyst for the decision. Of course there will be added pressure for the women on the existing team, but this is also a major opportunity for in-coming woman athletes," Deitz said.

According to Deitz, 99 percent of women rowers have never rowed before college, and that statistic is consistent among women who go on to row for the U.S. National and Olympic teams.

After a phone call from a prospective new rower who asked Deitz if he allows walk-on try-outs, he said he plans to tap into the large resource of students at the University. He is hoping to bring in 250-300 new women to experience the sport this year and, no doubt, discover unknown in-house talent.

"There is a great base of students here to build from," Deitz said. "This is the sport of walk-ons. It's the only collegiate second chance for women athletes who have the athletic background and the aerobic base but maybe not the skills or the height or whatever that is needed to play another sport in college."

Deitz sees the job as a challenge, and at the same time as an amazing opportunity to build the program from scratch. This is a similar task to what he did at the United States Coast Guard Academy. Deitz was head coach for the past nine years for the highly successful men's heavyweight eight, as well as the head of the overall program that included four assistant coaches and over 90 athletes.

Deitz's resume includes membership on almost every U.S. National team from 1967 to 1983, including the U.S. Olympic teams in 1972, 1976 (when he was captain), and in 1980. He has also been a member of seven World Championship teams.

"The search committee has found an excellent guide for our women's crew team. Jim is very well respected throughout the nation," said Bob Marcum, UMass Athletic Director.

This fall, the team will row five varsity head races and three or four novice races in order to broaden the aerobic base of the athletes and to physically prepare the team for the spring season.

The most prestigious, and by far the most showcasing event for the young team will be the Head of the Charles in Boston toward the end of October, which typically draws more than a quarter-million fans. Coach Deitz hopes to quickly become the Massachusetts team to watch at this one- day event.

The team is competing right now in Division II-III and has the goal of competing at the Division I level. Division I schools have their own organization called the Women's Sprints. Deitz said UMass is planning on petitioning to become one of the 18 schools in this elite group, after having heard unconfirmed reports that a few schools currently in the Division may be stepping down.

"I have the confidence that I can build this program. We want to be rowing with Radcliffe College, the University of California and University of Washington. I think everyone looks at UMass as a sleeping giant in the northeast," Deitz said.

Jim Deitz is the one to wake them up, and this is the time.

■ women's soccer

continued from page 7

was injured for part of the 1993 season, playing in only 16 games, and starting 11. She managed to score two points on two assists. Powell was a two-sport star last year playing both soccer and softball, but will now concentrate on soccer. Last year she played in 17 games, starting five. Shimogaki started in 17 of the 22 games she played in and scored five points on one goal and three assists.

Elizabeth Rutherford, Tina Lightning and Polly Hackathorn are three newcomers who should be getting a lot of playing time.

To fill the huge void left by the graduation of Scurry, Rudy will be looking to freshman Danielle Dion and sophomore Nancy Kieser. Dion and Kieser have battled it out and Dion has come out on top for now.

"Both worked very hard in the preseason," Rudy said. "Right now the nod goes to Dion, by a little."

Whoever is in goal, Rudy wants them to make a name for themselves and try not to fill Scurry's shoes.

Dion and Kieser have had the pleasure of working with Scurry who will be helping the team this year as a student assistant.

Rudy believes that the team's biggest strength is that it works as a team, not as individuals. UMass needs to play as a team to win games.

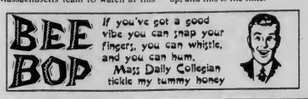
"Our strength is that we are a team, we have probably five or six All-American candidates, but we may not end up with any," Rudy said.

UMass is picked as the favorite to win the Atlantic 10. But they will be challenged by George Washington and Rutgers University.

Overall, Coach Rudy believes his team, although very young and very small, has a chance to have another great year.

"We have a small squad this year, so we can't afford any injuries. We have nine of 16 on the roster who are freshman and sophomores, so it is a little bit different look, but this team has some serious potential. They're a nice team and they play for each other," Rudy said.

Sure I'm important!
For one thing I own my own socks. Yes, you could call me a regular "Do-it-yourselfer." I love organizing my socks. Yes, it is one of my few joys. I know MANY things about my socks. I'd tell you about them... but I don't know you very well.
You may have germs.
COLLEGIAN
PLEASE REMOVE SHOES BEFORE ENTERING



BEE BOP
If you've got a good vibe you can snap your fingers, you can whistle, and you can hum. Mass Daily Collegian tickle my tummy honey

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycles
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

Students Save at
THE CLUB
Tennis & Fitness Center

Semester Membership	Was	Now
1 - Semester	$160.00	$145.00
2 - Semester	$240.00	$215.00

Membership Includes Unlimited Fitness & Aerobics
Ask about Special Student Tennis Rates
659 AMHERST RD., SUNDERLAND 549-3638

Open Everyday Until 2:00 a.m.
Downtown Amherst
ANTONIO'S
É SEMPRE BUONA
Welcome Back Students
50 Flavors to choose from !

NEW IN AMHERST
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Traditional Chinese Cuisine
Relax and enjoy yourself at our beautiful newly remodeled facility including our Sunny Greenhouse.
"Largest Chinese Restaurant in Hampshire County"
PLENTY OF FREE PARKING
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK • 11:30AM-10PM
FRIDAYS & SATURDAYS TILL 11PM
351 Northampton Rd. • Rte.9 • Amherst
Corner of Rte.9 & University Drive • 256-8800

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS!!
Charlie's tavern
AMHERST, MASS.
Since 1978
DRINK SPECIALS
16oz. Bottles of Budweiser $1.99
Jumbo Jim Beam and Coke $1.95
Giant 22oz. Drafts!!
Over 40 Kinds of BREWED & MICROBREWED BEER
FOOD SPECIALS
9:00PM to Midnight
Monday - 10¢ Mozzarella Sticks
Tuesday - 10¢ Mild or Hot Buffalo Wings
Wednesday - 25¢ Pizza Slices OR 1/4# Popcorn Shrimp for 99¢
Thursday - 10¢ Chicken Nuggets
Open 11 am - 1 am 7 days a week • Kitchen open 'til midnight
1 Pray Street Behind Bank of Western Mass - Amherst
Game room with 3 pool tables • 4 TV's with satellite sports cable channels
Including our NEW 48 inch Big Screen TV
MC • VISA • AMEX Accepted • 549-4140

1994 UMass Fall Season Athletic Schedules

Women's Cross Country
Sept. 10 at New Hampshire....12:00 p.m.
17 CONNECTICUT and MAINE....12:00 p.m.
24 at Vermont with Boston University....12:00 p.m.
Oct. 8 Paul Short Invitational at Bethelhem, PA....10:00 a.m.
22 New England Championship at Boston, MA....12:00 p.m.
29 Atlantic 10 Championship at Morgantown, WV....10:00 a.m.
Nov. 12 ECAC Championship at Boston, MA....11:00 a.m.
Home meets held at Totman Field

Men's Cross Country
Sept. 9 at Dartmouth Invitational....11:00 a.m.
17 vs Iona, Maine and Northeastern at Boston, MA....11:00 a.m.
24 at Vermont with Boston University....11:00 a.m.
Oct. 8 Paul Short Invitational at Bethelhem, PA....10:00 a.m.
22 New England Championship Boston, MA....1:30 p.m.
29 Atlantic 10 Championship at Morgantown, WV....10:00 a.m.
Nov. 12 IC4A Championship at Boston, MA....11:00 a.m.

Men's Water Polo
Sept. 10 at Cambridge Invitational
17 EWPA Varsity North Division Tournament University
vs. Queens....1:30 p.m.
vs. Iona....6:30 p.m.
24-25 at Navy Invitational
29 BOSTON COLLEGE....6:00 p.m.
Oct. 1 EWPA Varsity North Division Tournament at Fordham University
vs. Merchant Marine Academy...12:00 p.m.
vs. St. Francis....3:30 p.m.
vs. Fordham....8:30 p.m.
5 at Harvard....8:00 p.m.
8-9 at Villanova Tournament at Villanova University
vs. Princeton....10:00 a.m.
vs. Queens....1:30 p.m.
9 Championship Round....TBA
15-16 EWPA Varsity North Division Tournament at UMass
15 vs. Harvard....11:30 a.m.
vs. M.I.T....5:00 p.m.
16 vs. Boston College....10:00 a.m.
vs. Brown....1:30 p.m.
21 vs. Air Force....4:00 p.m.
22-23 Baldy View Tournament at Claremont, CA
29-30 EWPA Varsity North Division Playoffs at Brown University
Nov. 5-6 Eastern Championship at Harvard University
25-27 NCAA Championship at Long Beach, CA
Home matches played at Amherst College

Women's Soccer
Sept. 3 vs Boston College....W 2-0
7 at Rhode Island*....W 6-0
10 PROVIDENCE....2:15 p.m.
16 at Rutgers*....7:00 p.m.
18 at Temple*....1:00 p.m.
24-25 UMass Classic, Amherst, MA
24 UMass vs. Central Florida....12:00 p.m.
UConn vs. William & Mary....2:15 p.m.
25 UMass vs. William & Mary....12:00 p.m.
UConn vs. Central Florida....2:15 p.m.
Oct. 1 vs Santa Clara....5:00 p.m.%
at Santa Barbara, CA
2 at Santa Barbara....4:00 p.m.%
6 at Yale....7:00 p.m.
9 COLGATE....1:00 p.m.
12 HARTFORD....3:30 p.m.
15 at George Washington*....4:00 p.m.
18 DARTMOUTH....3:00 p.m.
22 at Connecticut....3:00 p.m.
26 VERMONT....2:30 p.m.
28 at St. Bonaventure*....3:00 p.m.
30 at Cornell....1:00 p.m.
Nov. 4-6 Atlantic 10 Tournament at UMass
% West Coast Time
All Home games played at Garber Field

Men's Soccer
Sept. 3-4 Kickoff Classic, Amherst, MA
3 Northeastern vs Niagara....8-0
UMass vs Hofstra....0-0
UMass 3-1 in shootout
4 Consolation Game
Hofstra vs Niagara....9-0
Championship Game
UMass vs Northeastern....W 4-1
7 at Boston University....L 1-0
10 TEMPLE*....12:00 p.m.
14 at Connecticut....7:00 p.m.
21 NEW HAMPSHIRE....3:30 p.m.
24 at Rutgers*....7:30 p.m.
28 HARTFORD....3:30 p.m.
Oct. 1 ST. JOSEPH'S*....1:00 p.m.
7 at West Virginia*....7:30 p.m.
9 at George Washington*....2:00 p.m.
12 PROVIDENCE....7:00 p.m.
at Zott Park in Chicopee, MA
15 at Maine....1:00 p.m.
19 at Dartmouth....3:30 p.m.
22 at Rhode Island*....1:00 p.m.
25 HOLY CROSS....3:00 p.m.
28 ST. BONAVENTURE*....3:00 p.m.
30 at Philadelphia Textile....1:00 p.m.
Nov. 4-6 Atlantic 10 Tournament at Rutgers University
All home games played at Garber Field

Women's Tennis
Sept. 16 WESLEYAN....3:00 p.m.
17 HARTFORD....10:00 a.m.
18 VERMONT....10:00 a.m.
20 HOLY CROSS....3:30 p.m.
24 vs. Maine....10:00 a.m.
at New Hampshire
25 at New Hampshire....11:00 a.m.
27 PROVIDENCE....3:00 p.m.
29 CENTRAL CONNECTICUT....3:00 p.m.
Oct. 5 at Connecticut....3:00 p.m.
6 at Rhode Island....3:00 p.m.
15-16 New England Championship at University of Vermont
21 at Army....3:00 p.m.
22 RUTGERS....12:00 p.m.
28-31 Rolex Championship at Philadelphia, PA
All Home matches played at Upper Boyden Courts

Men's Tennis
Sept. 16 WESLEYAN....3:00 p.m.
22 at Fairfield....3:00 p.m.
23 RHODE ISLAND....3:00 p.m.
27 at Providence....3:00 p.m.
28 at Connecticut....3:00 p.m.
Oct. 4 at Springfield....3:00 p.m.
7 VERMONT....3:00 p.m.
Nov. 3-7 Rolex Championship at Princeton, NJ
All Home matches played at Upper Boyden Courts

Field Hockey
Sept. 7 at Boston College....W 3-0
10 NEW HAMPSHIRE....1:00 p.m.
14 at Providence....3:30 p.m.
21 YALE....3:30 p.m.
23 at Temple*....3:30 p.m.
25 at Rutgers*....1:00 p.m.
28 NORTHEASTERN....3:30 p.m.
30 vs. Richmond....7:00 p.m.
at Old Dominion
Oct. 2 at Old Dominion....2:00 p.m.
5 SYRACUSE....3:30 p.m.
9 vs. North Carolina....1:00 p.m.
at Westfield State
11 MAINE....3:00 p.m.
15 at Rhode Island*....1:00 p.m.
16 vs. James Madison....1:00 p.m.
at Boston College
20 BOSTON UNIVERSITY....3:30 p.m.
23 at Connecticut....1:00 p.m.
29 ST. JOSEPH'S*....12:00 p.m.
Nov. 1 SPRINGFIELD....3:30 p.m.
4-6 Atlantic 10 Tournament at St. Joseph's University
All Home games played at Totman Field

Volleyball
Sept. 2-3 UMass Invitational, Amherst, MA
2 vs Army....W, 3-0; 1-0
3 vs Siena....W, 3-0, 2-0
3 vs Hofstra....W, 3-0, 3-0
6 vs BOSTON COLLEGE....W, 3-0, 4-0
9-10 UConn Tournament, Storrs, CT
9 vs. UConn....7:00 p.m.
10 vs. LaSalle....1:00 p.m.
vs. Fairleigh Dickinson....7:30 p.m.
16-17 UMass Classic, Amherst, MA
16 UMass vs. Brown....4:00 p.m.
Hartford vs. Yale....6:00 p.m.
UMass vs. Delaware....8:00 p.m.
17 Hartford vs Brown....10:00 a.m.
Yale vs. Delaware....12:00 p.m.
UMass vs. Hartford....2:00 p.m.
Brown vs. Delaware....4:00 p.m.
UMass vs. Yale....6:00 p.m.
20 at Northeastern....7:00 p.m.
30 DUQUESNE*....7:00 p.m.
Oct. 1 ST. BONAVENTURE*....4:00 p.m.
4 RHODE ISLAND*....7:00 p.m.
7 at Temple*....6:00 p.m.
8 at Rutgers*....5:00 p.m.
14 at George Washington*....7:30 p.m.
15 at West Virginia*....7:00 p.m.
20 at Rhode Island*....7:00 p.m.
25 at Harvard....7:00 p.m.
28 RUTGERS*....7:00 p.m.
29 TEMPLE*....5:00 p.m.
Nov. 1 FAIRFIELD....7:00 p.m.
4 WEST VIRGINIA*....7:00 p.m.
5 GEORGE WASHINGTON*....7:00 p.m.
8 at Holy Cross....7:00 p.m.
11 at St. Bonaventure*....7:00 p.m.
12 at Duquesne*....7:00 p.m.
18-20 Atlantic 10 Tournament at Duquesne University
All Home matches played at Curry Hicks Cage

Football
Sept. 10 at Richmond....1:00 p.m.
17 at Holy Cross....1:00 p.m.
24 MAINE@....1:00 p.m.
Band Day
Oct. 1 RHODE ISLAND@....1:00 p.m.
Homecoming
8 at New Hampshire@....12:30 p.m.
15 at William & Mary@....1:00 p.m.
22 at Delaware@....1:00 p.m.
29 BOSTON UNIVERSITY@....12:30 p.m.
Parents' Day
Nov. 5 NORTHEASTERN@....12:30 p.m.
12 YOUNGSTOWN ST....12:30 p.m.
19 CONNECTICUT@....12:30 p.m. All Home games played at Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium

*Atlantic 10 Conference match @Yankee Conference game

IF YOU'RE NOT RECYCLING YOU'RE THROWING IT ALL AWAY.

Bring Your Buddies to BUBS
AMHERST RD., SUNDERLAND • 548-9630
MON - TH 5-9:30 • FRI-SAT 5-10 • SUN 4-9:30
BEST VALUE IN TOWN
And PIG OUT IN STYLE!"

BE A TEACHER. BE A HERO.
Call 1-800-45-TEACH.

THE DOVE'S NEST
Rt. 116 Sunderland • 665-7969
Open Mon-Sat 6am - 3pm
Sunday 7am - 3pm
THIS WEEK'S SPECIAL
French Toast $1.09
w/ Bacon, Ham, or Sausage $2.09
Add 2 Eggs + 80¢

Dental Service at UMASS
Visit the Lubin Dental Clinic on the ground floor of the University Health Services
Hours: Weekdays, 8 am to 5 pm
Cost: Reasonable rates and some procedures covered by insurance
Call 545-2400 for appointments and information
Comprehensive services from cleanings to root canals. We will help you submit insurance claims.

MICHAEL'S
Billiards and Sports Bar
AMHERST, MA
POOL $3 per hour All Day
UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT
60" BIG SCREEN TV
NEW PRICES
NEW HOURS Mon-Thurs 2-1am Fri-Sun 1-1am
Next to Hunan Garden
Route 9 East, Amherst, MA

TOTAL FITNESS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST Aerobics
BEST Machines
BEST Prices
KEISER, NAUTILUS, STAIRMASTERS
GRAVITRON, TREADWALL, BIO & LIFECYCLES
CYBEX UBE, NORDIC TRACK, OLYMPIC FREE-WEIGHTS
Hi & Lo, Step, Funk, Yoga, Slide, Bowrobics
Amherst Athletic Club
Rt. 116, South Amherst
256-0080

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

UM

Fall 1994

Season Preview

Tuesday, September 13, 1994

Super seven streak in women's volleyball

Volleyball on a hot streak — the Minutewomen are off to their best start since 1988, winning their first seven matches (Sports, page 10).

UMass student flies to the top of his class

Senior Gregory Tolmoff will fly for NATO as one of 100 ROTC graduates chosen to join the U.S. Air Force. See story on page 3.

Sweet Sugar and more to whet your whistle

Dinosaur Jr.'s new album is average – Trax-on, Trax-off reviews new Dinosaur Jr. and Sugar releases (Arts and Living, page 6).

Extended Forecast

30 percent chance of showers this morning, becoming partly breezy and partly cloudy this afternoon. Expect dry weather the next few days as highs reach into the 80s.

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 75 LOW: 60	HIGH: 70 LOW: 50	HIGH: 80 LOW: 50

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 2 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Wednesday, September 14, 1994

UMass journalism professor seeks federal government post

By Kelly Spang
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts journalism professor Ralph Whitehead, a top candidate for a high-level position within the U.S. Department of Labor in Washington, D.C., sees his opportunity within the federal government as a source of recognition for the University.

Whitehead, a 21-year veteran of the journalism department, is among six other candidates under consideration to become an assistant secretary overseeing the Office of the American Workplace.

"Harvard and MIT [Massachusetts Institute of Technology] have sent a lot of faculty members and graduates to Washington in the last couple of years," Whitehead said. "If I am appointed it will be the first UMass faculty member to get that kind of recognition."

University officials said they believe Whitehead will be the first faculty member from the University to be appointed to high-ranking federal position.

In particular, Whitehead was pleased about the recognition that his candidacy has brought to the journalism department.

"The journalism department is small but every member of the department brings distinction to the whole department," he said. "My leave will hopefully be one sign of what remarkable things have emerged here."

Labor relations and the changing work force has been a focus of Whitehead's research and studies. He said he has spent the past 25 years writing about the changes in the workplace and also spent the past five years looking at how companies have dealt with the recession and recovery.

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

After 25 years of studying the American work force, journalism professor Ralph Whitehead has been invited to apply for a high-ranking post in the federal government.

"He has expertise in the complex living and changing in the labor market and the work force, primarily in the continual growth which implies social changes," said Howard Ziff, chairman of the journalism department. "These imply Ralph has a really overwhelmingly strong grasp of the issues."

The Office of the American Workplace is a newly created division of the Department of Labor, created by U.S. Labor Secretary Robert Reich about a year ago. The mission of the office, according to Whitehead, is to encourage corporations and unions to adopt policies which will enable workers to earn more and companies to increase productivity.

Whitehead said he was asked in

Turn to WHITEHEAD, page 2

Polymer research dept. nets $7 million grant to benefit undergrads

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

The National Science Foundation (NSF) awarded the University of Massachusetts polymer science department a five-year, $7 million grant that will help finance a new research center and open opportunities for undergraduates.

The grant, which will help fund the new Materials Research Science and Engineering Center, is the largest NSF award ever made to UMass and is one of the few five-year grants the NSF is offering this year, according to Art Clifford, editor of the Science Notes newsletter.

The Silvio O. Conte National Center for Polymer Research on Governors Drive should be opening sometime in November, according to University officials. The center has been under construction for three years.

New opportunities will open to undergraduates through the research center by allowing them to work in the labs and become more involved with the department, said William MacKnight, head of the polymer science department.

Most polymer science education has been offered only in graduate school.

The grant will further studies on polymeric materials, which are progressively replacing materials such as metals, glass and ceramics.

Currently, over half of the nation's chemists and chemical engineers — more than three million people — work in polymer-related fields. The industry presently contributes over $100 billion annually to the gross national product, according to the polymer science and engineering department at UMass.

"There were more opportunities for grants created this year, but the money wasn't increased, which changed the competition," MacKnight said.

Although it was difficult to find a grant this year, the department was still successful, in part because the NSF was looking for individual interaction and outreach to minorities and women, which are points that the department tries to focus on, MacKnight said.

Twenty-four faculty members drawn from five UMass departments: biochemistry and molecular biology, chemical engineering, chemistry, physics, and polymer science and engineering.

Support will also be granted for the participation of approximately three postdoctoral fellows, 21 graduate students and 12 undergraduates.

Six undergraduates will be invited from nearby women's colleges — Mount Holyoke and Smith — and six minority students will be recruited through the New England Board of Higher Education as well.

According to the Aug. 22 issue of Chemical and Engineering News, UMass ranked 24th nationally in federal support for chemical research and development last year.

Clinton signs bill to "roll back tide" of violence

By Carolyn Skorneck
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton, in an elaborate White House outdoor ceremony, signed a $30 billion crime bill today and proclaimed it would "roll back this awful tide of violence" in America.

Surrounded by members of Congress and mayors from both political parties along with police officials, Clinton said a sense of bipartisanship allowed passage of the hotly disputed measure.

"The American people have been waiting a long time for this day," he said, enacting legislation that had been in the works for six years.

"In the last 25 years, half a million Americans have been killed by other Americans," he said. "In the last 25 years, crime has been a hot political issue used too often to divide us." Despite the toll of violence, Clinton said, "still some people in this town tried to keep this day from happening. But today, at last, the waiting ends. Today, the bickering stops, the era of excuses is over."

"From this day forward, let us put partisanship behind us and let us go forward, let us roll up our sleeves and roll back this awful tide of violence and reduce crime in our country," he said. "We have the tools, now let us get about the business of using them."

Security for the ceremony was tight the day after a small plane crashed on the White House lawn and came to rest against the presidential mansion. The pilot was killed in the crash, and the wreckage was removed Monday.

The ceremony was delayed about 20 minutes as mayors and police chiefs and others on the guest list of

Turn to CRIME, page 6

Two months, $1M goal for United Way annual fund drive

By Andrew Ferguson
Collegian Correspondent

The Hampshire County Chapter of the United Way will begin its annual fund-raising campaign toward a goal of $1 million.

The campaign will begin with a kick-off breakfast this morning at the University of Massachusetts William D. Mullins Center at the University of Massachusetts. More than 150 people are expected to attend, representing an estimated 2000 volunteers.

The campaign will continue for the next two months.

This year's goal of $1 million would be a 4 percent increase over last year's, according to Donald Southwick, chairman of the fundraising campaign and president of Blair, Cutting and Smith Insurance Agency. He said he believes $1 million is a reasonable goal.

Planning for the event began in January with a cabinet of 30 to 40 people who met on a bi-monthly basis, according to Southwick. A peer group met with each agency earlier this year to determine the agency's needs.

"This is not only a two-month effort," said Southwick. "It is a 12-month effort."

Southwick said successful fundraisers begin with community leaders. Participation this year will include figures such as University of Massachusetts Chancellor David K. Scott, Amherst College President Tom Gerety and Hampshire County Sheriff Bob Garvey.

"The best thing about this campaign is the money donated stays in the Valley," Southwick said. "It doesn't go through the national office or anywhere else. It remains here."

The money will be split among the 26 United Way agencies in Hampshire County.

Donations come from individuals, small businesses and major firms. Phone solicitations and direct mailings are the main fund-gathering methods. A presentation including a United Way video is also given to major firms, according to Amy Porter, marketing director of the Hampshire County chapter of the United Way.

There is also a Key Club, consisting of people who donate $1000 or more. The club is made up entirely of private citizens and is expected to donate approximately $150,000 this year.

Southwick's insurance agency raised over $2,000 in an office drive, which they intend to donate to the United Way.

Turn to UNITED, page 2

UMass ends restrictions on South African investments

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

With the end of apartheid, the University of Massachusetts has eliminated its policies restricting investments in South Africa.

UMass decided to drop the restrictions after South Africa elected Nelson Mandela the country's first Black president.

University President Michael K. Hooker announced last semester that the University would begin investing in the South African economy.

"I am pleased to state that the University of Massachusetts has eliminated all of its restrictions on investment in South Africa," Hooker said in a press release.

The state of Massachusetts economically boycotted South Africa, while other states retained their ties as a type of protest against apartheid, according to William H. Wright, spokesman for the UMass president's office.

UMass also stopped all investments in South Africa in the mid-1980s in protest of apartheid. Now, the University is reinvesting in the country in support of the democratic changes which have occurred in the last year.

"UMass was one of the leaders in declaring strict sanctions against such investment during the apartheid regime and we are proud to be among the first institutions to reverse that policy now that democratic, free elections have been held successfully in South Africa," Hooker said.

The decision was supported by the Board of Trustees and took effect May 1, according to the press release.

"UMass, the president and the Board of Trustees are supporting the advent of free elections and the ability of all their citizens to vote," Wright said.

In January, Hooker had indicated that he would closely watch the development of a final constitution and free elections in South Africa prior to making a final decision to lift the ban on investments.

> "UMass is supporting the advent of free elections and the ability of all their citizens to vote."
> –William H. Wright

Shortly after South Africa held the country's first election in which Blacks could vote, Hooker made the announcement that the University's policies on restrictions would be dropped.

By eliminating the policies, UMass is supporting the South African economy, according to Wright.

"The University is doing what it can, as an entity, and a consumer to help support the South African economy," he said.

Mandela has been urging investors and companies to renew their business dealings in South Africa to build its economy.

Although UMass dropped its policies on restrictions, Wright said it will take time for the South African economy to adjust to the changes happening within the country.

"South Africa still has a long way to go to prove its economy," he said.

Although Massachusetts was one of the first states to stop investing in South Africa, UMass is just one of many colleges and universities to reinvest in the country.

As of June 1, nearly all of the 50 best-endowed colleges and universities had begun removing their restrictions, according to a survey by the Investor Responsibility Research Center. The center monitors corporate policies for institutional investors.

During the time before and after Mandela's election as president, dozens of institutions began shedding their policies and investing in South Africa.

Hooker's decision to change the University's policy affects the UMass Treasurer's Office, the UMass Foundation Board of Governors and any other institutions whose investments policies and procedures affect UMass.

U.S. invasion of Haiti supported by 17 nations

By George Gedda
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Seventeen countries, including three NATO allies, Israel and far-off Bangladesh, have pledged a combined minimum of 1,500 troops to assist a U.S.-led invasion of Haiti, the State Department said Monday.

Meanwhile, Republican leaders said Congress should debate a resolution authorizing the commitment of U.S. forces to an invasion.

And Pentagon officials announced that, as part of an ongoing buildup, two aircraft carriers are being readied to carry troops and special forces into Haiti, should an invasion be ordered.

Secretary of State Warren Christopher said the commitments of the 17 countries are a "strong indication of the resolve of the international community to join us in seeking the restoration of democracy in Haiti."

The administration has been pushing hard to recruit troops to join American forces in liberating Haiti after three years of military dictatorship. Current planning calls for the deployment of about 20,000 U.S. troops.

The 17 countries, some of which had been announced previously, are: Antigua and Barbuda, Argentina, The Bahamas, Bangladesh, Barbados, Belgium, Belize, Bolivia,

Turn to HAITI, page 6

Anything for free food

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

The American Red Cross is continuing its blood drive today and tomorrow in the Student Union Cape Cod Lounge.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed each Monday, Wednesday and Friday. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Wednesday, Sept. 14

Poster sale — Sponsored by WMUA, Student Union Ballroom, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Book-buying — The Textbook Annex is open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Library tours —University Library, 10:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Information: 545-0150.

Blood drive — Student Union Cape Cod Lounge, 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Services — Eve of Yom Kippur, Chabad House, 3 p.m. For early morning "Kapparot" service call 549-4094.

Pre-Yom Kippur meal — Hillel House, $6.50, $2.50 with Hillel activity card, 5 p.m. Reservations required: 549-1710.

Services — Candle lighting and Kol Nidre, Chabad House, 6:42 p.m. Information: 549-4094

Services — Kol Nidrei-Yom Kippur, free, Student Union Ballroom, 7 p.m. Information: 549-1710.

Meditation/yogic postures — Campus Center Room 805-9, 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Information: 253-9553.

Film — Maverick, $2, Campus Center Auditorium, 7 p.m., 9 p.m. and 11 p.m.

Auditions — For Mask Dance: Journey Within, Mount Holyoke College Lab Theatre, 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Auditions — For Escape From Happiness, sign-up outside Fine Arts Center room 112, auditions in FAC Curtain Theater, 7 p.m. to 11 p.m.

Auditions — For Sheila's Day, open call, Smith College Theater Building TI09, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Auditions — For The Bitter Tears of Petra Von Kant, Mount Holyoke College Lab Theatre, 7:30 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Evening Service — Chabad House, 7:45 p.m. Information: 549-4094.

Thursday, Sept. 15

Poster sale — Sponsored by WMUA, Student Union Ballroom, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Book-buying — The Textbook Annex is open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Yom Kippur services — Followed by Break-the-Fast meal in Commonwealth Room, free, Student Union Ballroom, 10 a.m. Reservations required: 549-1710.

Yom Kippur morning services — Chabad House, 10 a.m. Information: 549-4094.

Blood drive — Student Union Cape Cod Lounge, 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Library tours — University Library, 10:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m.

CBS College Tour — Campus pond lawn, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Meditation/yogic postures — Franklin Patterson Hall Lounge, Hampshire College, 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.

Yom Kippur afternoon services — Neilah and shofar, fast ends at 7:44 p.m., free, Chabad House, 5:30 p.m. Information: 549-4094.

Auditions — For Escape From Happiness, Fine Arts Center Curtain Theater, 7 p.m. to 11 p.m.

Country dancing — Tracy and Company, $2, Campus Center Auditorium, 8 p.m. to 12 p.m.

Friday, Sept. 16

Book-buying — The Textbook Annex is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

CBS College Tour — Campus pond lawn, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Library tours — University Library, 10:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Information: 545-0150.

Shabbat candle lighting — Chabad House, 6:38 p.m. Information: 549-4094.

Film — The Remains of the Day, Mount Holyoke College Gamble Auditorium, $2.50, 7 p.m. and 9:30 p.m.

Shabbat services — Hillel House, 7 p.m. Information: 549-1710.

Film — Mean Streets, Amherst College Campus Center Theater, $1.75, Amherst College Campus Center Theater, 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Comedy — Janet Chaseman with folk singer Linda Perroncel; $3 to $5 donation. Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Cafe. The Hatch, Student Union, 8 p.m.

Film — Reality Bites, Mount Holyoke College, Skinner Green, 9 p.m.

Saturday, Sept. 17

Shabbat services/Torah reading — Followed by communal lunch, Chabad House, 10 a.m. Information: 549-4094.

Fair — First Alternatives Economics Fair; music, food and tables. People for Co-ops and Collectives, First Church, Northampton, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Information: 586-1654.

Book-buying — The Textbook Annex is open from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Lecture — "Intervention: What's at Stake?" Paul Farmer, a physician who has been working in Haiti, Campus Center Room 140, 1 p.m.

Film — A Fish Called Wanda, $2.50, Mount Holyoke College Gamble Auditorium, 7 p.m. and 9:15 p.m.

Film — Mean Streets, $1.75, Amherst College Campus Center Tehater, 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Dance — Chinese Dance Troupe, free, Amherst College Buckley Recital Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Observatory observing — Free, Amherst College Wilder Observatory, 9 p.m.

Dance party — Wild Video Dance Party, Mount Holyoke College Chapin Auditorium, Mary Woolley Hall, 10 p.m.

Whitehead

continued from page 1

July to apply for the position. He said he hopes to know if he will have the job by October. At this point, he and his family do not have any plans to relocate if Whitehead is appointed. He said if he is given the position, he will travel to Washington, D.C. during the week and travel back to Amherst on the weekends.

Before Whitehead was asked to become a candidate for the position, he said he was a consultant for the labor department to incorporate what he had learned throughout his studies and what the labor department has learned in its research.

If appointed, Whitehead has a few areas of focus for the new position, in particular what he termed the "front line worker," who he said is the person actually doing the work.

Through his travels, Whitehead said he has tried to tell the stories of the workplace throughout the front line workers.

Whitehead said he sees two crises in the American workplace. The first crisis is that many people believe there are too many "dumb workers" in the work force. The second crisis he said exists is that of "dumb jobs," which he defines as "jobs designed to ignore or suppress what a worker knows or can readily learn."

Whitehead said he would like to reduce both the number of "dumb" workers and jobs.

With the recession, Whitehead said there are many changes throughout the workplace, many taking place from the top of an organizational structure down. Whitehead said he was interested in bottom-up changes in structure.

"I would like to find ways to encourage bottom-up changes to reach up to connect with the top-down changes," he said.

Regardless of whether or not he is appointed, Whitehead has taken a leave of absence, which begins at the end of this week, in what he called a "gamble." If he is not appointed, the professor said he will be working as a consultant until the spring semester.

Whitehead said that not teaching will be a big adjustment. "Short of traveling to outer space, this is the most profound change I could experience," he said. "Students are a pleasure to deal with. People you deal with in the national government are tough-minded and demanding. The hours are long."

With the first day of classes, students filled the journalism office to find a new class in replace of Whitehead's classes. Ziff said the department is doing everything possible to accommodate students in rearranging their schedules if necessary.

United

continued from page 1

The reason so many are willing to help the United Way, according to Southwick, is "because it touches people in so many ways.

"It really says something about businesses, that they really do want to be contributing members of society."

Southwick said he has been involved in the United Way since his graduation from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst 20 years ago. Southwick's family has attended the University for four generations, beginning with his grandparents and continuing to his own two children.

His father was a UMass professor for 40 years.

The two-month campaign will end with a victory breakfast where the official total will be announced.

Correction

In yesterday's article on the tuition and fee freeze, Student Government Association President Mirran Raphaely's statement concerning the last freeze was incorrect. According to the University News Office, both tuition and fees remained unchanged from the 1974-75 school year to 1975-76.

Also, the cover photo for yesterday's Collegian was taken by staff member Christopher Ragusa. No credit was listed with the photograph.

The Collegian regrets the errors.

Department of Germanic Languages & Literatures
510 Herter Hall 545-2350
OPEN CLASSES
All German languages courses, elementary to advanced

German 304, AT	Berlin to Hollywood TuTh 11:15 - 12:30 W 6-9 p.m.
German 365, AL	Scandinavian Mythology MWF 1:25
Danish 190A	Hans Christian Andersen TuTh 1:00 to 2:15

All Courses TAUGHT IN ENGLISH

USTRAVEL
At the Campus Center
Your Complete Travel Planning Specialist
• Domestic & International Airline Reservations
• Hotel, Rental Car & Rail Reservations
• 24 Hour Emergency Service
• Free Ticket Delivery
• Group Travel Specialists
• Escorted Tours
• Discounted Cruises
• Discounted Vacation Packages
Featuring Maestro™ the revolutionary automated reservation system which continually checks prices to secure the lowest fares available.
545-1700 545-2900
Over 700 Offices Worldwide

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS!!
Charlie's tavern
Since 1978
DRINK SPECIALS
16oz. Bottles of Budweiser $1.99
Jumbo Jim Beam and Coke $1.95
Giant 22oz. Drafts!!
Over 40 Kinds of BREWED & MICROBREWED BEER
FOOD SPECIALS
Monday 10¢ Mozzarella Sticks
Tuesday 10¢ Wild or Hot Buffalo Wings
Wednesday 25¢ Pizza Slices OR 1/4# Popcorn Shrimp for 99¢
Thursday 10¢ Chicken Nuggets
Open 11 am - 1 am 7 days a week • Kitchen open 'til midnight
Game room with pool • Patio
including our NEW 48 inch Big Screen TV

1-800-COLLECT®
Intramural-Recreational SPORTS
UMASS INTRAMURAL SPORTS

VOLLEYBALL
MEN'S, WOMEN'S, CO-REC
ENTRIES DUE
September 26 - October 5
LOCATION
215 Boyden
PHONE
ext. 2693/0022

SOCCER
MEN'S & WOMEN'S ENTRIES DUE
September 14 - 19
LOCATION
215 Boyden
PHONE
ext. 2693/0022

Sign-up Today! FOR INTRAMURAL SPORTS

1-800-COLLECT®
Save The People You Call Up To 44%.*
*Versus AT&T operator-dialed three minute interstate calls

Senate focuses for fall semester

By Ben German
Collegian Staff

The Graduate Student Senate enters the fall semester focusing on a variety of issues, including minority graduate student recruitment and the struggle to keep tuition down.

"I think [the tuition freeze] is a great victory," said GSS President Prasad Venugopal in an interview yesterday, "[but] more needs to be done in terms of rolling back the fees.

Venugopal also hopes this fall will bring the continued expansion of the Graduate Women's Network's "Peer Monitoring Program," which has grown significantly since its creation two years ago. Today the program uses over 100 peer counselors.

The GSS also plans to concentrate this fall on working to increase minority graduate student enrollment, particularly in the "hard" science departments. Venugopal wants to see the Office of Minority Graduate Student Recruiting be able to offer students teaching assistant and research assistant positions to enable them to fund their studies without fear of losing fellowship money.

"We're aiming at departments that haven't been successful," said Venugopal. "There should be aggressive recruiting to admit African-American graduate students and employees. The University should put forward money to make sure they are funded when they are here."

The GSS is also looking into the creation of a handbook for graduate students detailing degree requirements in different fields, administrative policies and academic ethics. They also hope to bring the guide into the information age by making it available by computer.

Venugopal has also expressed concern over the lack of a GSS representative on the Chancellor's Task Force on Jewish Awareness and Anti-Semitism. He believes a GSS representative should sit on the force because the GSS has been involved in events of concern to the campus' Jewish community.

The GSS helped fund last semester's Louis Farrakhan visit, an event which sparked debate due to concerns over Farrakhan's alleged anti-Semitism.

"One aspect of openness and dialogue should be to consult with governing bodies on campus," said Venugopal.

The GSS begins its semester coming off a spring term which ended with a contentious, bitter election for the senate's four elected positions.

The election prompted the senate's election committee to recommend a written code of conduct be drafted for next year's election and that this year's committee should have the authority to reprimand candidates if they decide wrongful conduct has occurred.

UMass ROTC pilot Tolmoff is real–life 'Top Gun'

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Air Force ROTC program is seeing one of its members soar to the top of the national class.

UMass senior Gregory Tolmoff ranked within the top 3 percent of all cadets nationwide pursuing pilot slots in the U.S. Air Force and is ascending to high altitudes despite the fierce competition.

Tolmoff, a junior operations management major, is one of 100 members of the national Air Force ROTC chosen this year to move on to fly for the Air Force after graduation.

He will be flying on behalf of NATO upon graduation.

"I'm on top of the world right now," Tolmoff said. "I've always wanted to do this. I worked pretty hard for it, wanted it, hoped I got it, but wouldn't have been surprised if I hadn't."

Tolmoff spent his summer in Texas successfully completing the Air Force Enhanced Flight Screening Program, designed to test potential pilots' abilities to withstand the pressure of flying an aircraft. He ranked number one in his class.

"They want to test your hand–eye coordination, make sure you're not going to throw up once you get up there and make sure you're not afraid of heights," Tolmoff said.

In passing the program, he gained approval for enrollment in undergraduate pilot training, a one– year post–graduate class where he will have the opportunity to get hands–on flying experience.

He will then go on to participate in the Euro– NATO Program, which involves pilots from all over the world.

Because the U.S. Air Force is considered one of the most advanced in the world, officers from all different countries come to train beside American officers and all of the participants eventually end up working for NATO, Tolmoff said.

The Air Force is implementing a "draw–down" because of military cut–backs, said Major Cherly Koren of the UMass Air Force ROTC.

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN
Senior Gregory Tolmoff, one of 100 students chosen to fly for the U.S. Air Force after graduation, is ranked among the top 3 percent of his peers nationally.

"There are people leaving the Air Force, fewer planes flying and fewer recruits, but they always need new pilots," she said.

Next year 200 slots will be open and the year after there will be 400, but this year is by far one of the most competitive for post–graduate pilot slots, Koren said.

"Mr. Tolmoff has shown us that there is definite potential there," Koren said.

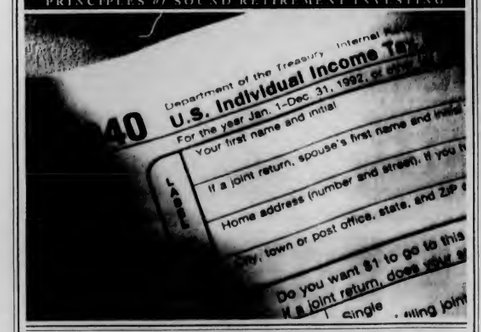
TOTAL FITNESS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST Aerobics BEST Machines BEST Prices
KEISER, NAUTILUS, STAIRMASTERS
GRAVITRON, TREADWALL, BIO & LIFECYCLES
CYBEX UBE, NORDIC TRACK, OLYMPIC FREE-WEIGHTS
Hi & Lo, Step, Funk, Yoga, Slide, Bweroise
Amherst Athletic Club
Rt. 116, South Amherst
256-0080

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Brooke the Law
Brooke the Law
READ HER PEPPA TAPE FLIRTS, LOVE QUOTES

Auto Reverse Double Deck!
Access to Sound
ONKYO TAR-W312 CASSETTE
Sale $209.
Sound&Music
Millbank Place • 351 Pleasant Street • Northampton
584-9547 • VISA & MasterCard accepted

Get A Life with Jesus Christ
John 5:12
A UMass RSO since 1984
Alliance Christian Fellowship
BIBLE STUDY
DISCIPLESHIP
OUTREACH
PARTIES
RETREAT
MORE INFO CALL
MARK 256-4625
PAULINE 549-1930
TIMEOUT FELLOWSHIP
FRIDAYS • 7 PM
CAMPUS CENTER

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING



Department of the Treasury Internal
40 U.S. Individual Income Tax
For the year Jan. 1–Dec 31, 1992, or
Your first name and initial
If a joint return, spouse's first name and initial
Home address (number and street). If you h
City, town or post office, state, and ZIP
Do you want $1 to go to this
If a joint return, does your Label single filing joint

UNFORTUNATELY, THIS IS WHERE PEOPLE ARE PUTTING TOO MANY RETIREMENT DOLLARS.

Every year, a lot of people make a huge mistake on their taxes. They don't take advantage of tax deferral and wind up sending Uncle Sam money they could be saving for retirement.

Fortunately, that's a mistake you can easily avoid with TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs not only ease your current tax-bite, they offer a remarkably easy way to build retirement income—especially for the "extras" that your regular pension and Social Security benefits may not cover. Because your contributions are made in before-tax dollars, you pay less taxes now. And since all earnings on your SRA are tax-deferred as well, the money you don't send to Washington works even harder for you. Down the road, that can make a dramatic difference in your quality of life.

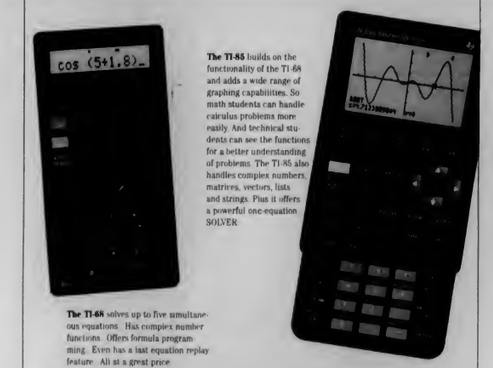
What else makes SRAs so special? A range of allocation choices—from the guaranteed security of TIAA to the diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity—all backed by the nation's number one retirement system.

Why write off the chance for a more rewarding retirement? Call today and learn more about how TIAA-CREF SRAs can help you enjoy many happy returns.

Benefit now from tax deferral. Call our SRA hotline 1 800-842-2733, ext. 8016.

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.™

CREF certificates are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800 842-2733, ext. 8016 for a prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money.



The TI-85 builds on the functionality of the TI-68 and adds a wide range of graphing capabilities. So math students can handle calculus problems more easily. And technical students can see the functions for a better understanding of problems. The TI-85 also handles complex numbers, matrices, vectors, lists and strings. Plus it offers a powerful one-equation SOLVER.

The TI-68 solves up to five simultaneous equations. Has complex number functions. Offers formula programming. Even has a last equation replay feature. All at a great price.

Get Serious.

Engineering, math or science major? Serious stuff. Get a TI-68 Advanced Scientific or TI-85 Graphing Calculator from Texas Instruments. They're designed for students and professionals and recommended by professors.

Get the serious functionality you demand at a price you can afford. Try a TI-68 or TI-85 at your local TI retailer today, or for more information, call 1-800-TI-CARES.

EXTENDING YOUR REACH™
Texas Instruments

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Gunley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Position vacant Black Affairs Editor Position vacant Women's Issues Editor
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Position vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Jim Roode Circulation Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Eric Abenaim Subscriptions Manager
Evelyn A. Delfenio Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Kelly Spang News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Nathan K. Martin Photography Editor Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

The campus needs an overhaul

Jacob W. Michaels

Last year, my first at the University of Massachusetts, I couldn't help but notice all the cynicism toward the administration and maintenance that existed on campus. I used to think it was all unfounded, but I have come to see the light.

I was headed to breakfast before my last final on a rainy day. I walked down the long hill from Orchard Hill to Worcester Dining Commons, my umbrella keeping me dry, my stomach growling in anticipation of its final filling at UMass for a few months.

I reached the bottom of the paved road, only to encounter the stairs that descended the final few yards to the entrance of the D.C. These stairs had been roped off for a while because one side of them was broken, presumably making them too dangerous to use. Then, after the yellow tape had been ripped off a few times, maintenance took the time to put a number of sawhorses and orange webbing around the stairs, effectively blocking them.

Daunted, I looked at the muddy trail next to the stairs that had become the new way down the hill. I could see it would be slippery, but there was no other choice. I started down and was almost at the end before the inevitable happened. I slipped and landed in the wet mud right on my butt.

Soaked and dirty, I hoped that the pain would fade and that I hadn't broken my tailbone. I ate my breakfast and headed off to my final in Herter. On the way I passed by the Campus Center where the Physical Plant had been working all spring to plant trees and shrubbery. Already distracted from my fascinating review for the final, I couldn't help but wonder how much time they'd spent on the trees. They looked nice and all, but they hadn't prevented me from falling down. Perhaps if they planted the trees on the hill we could use them to slow our descent.

Upon my arrival at Herter, early for my final, I happened on two employees of the Physical Plant. They were very busy removing chairs from the room where my final was scheduled. Mentioning this to them, I was told that they knew it but they had to do the work that their supervisors assigned. They finished removing the chairs and headed off to do some other work. — I believe it was to paint a room at the other end of the hall.

When the time came for my final, all the students grabbed the chairs I had just seen removed and proceeded to return them to the room. While I can't vouch for the students who left after me, I know that neither I nor anyone who left before me brought their chairs back out. I assume the two workers I had spoken to before just had to do it again.

I went home after that final and didn't give much thought to the stairs. After all, it wouldn't take more than a day to fix, and surely the high and mighties at the Physical Plant would realize that these stairs were important. I should have known better.

Soon after my return to campus this semester, I left my cubicle in 113 Campus Center and headed to Orchard Hill to get to my room. I was walking toward Worcester D.C. when I saw them. The same stairs, still covered with sawhorses and orange netting, with the dirt path next to it just waiting for the next rainy day.

Jacob W. Michaels is a Collegian staff member.

The ever–changing face of Catholicism

Peter J. Orvetti

The recent uproar over the Vatican's refusal to discuss abortion and contraception at the United Nations population conference goes far beyond Cairo. It is just another event in the decline of the world's oldest organized Christian faith. What occurred in Cairo was more than just a restatement of traditional Roman Catholic doctrine by the Pope. Rather, it was a mortar shell against the liberal elements who are now in a state of full revolt against Rome.

Call it the Catholic Revolution. Under the rule of Pope John Paul II, the Vatican has become increasingly political — and conservative. But this conservative Holy Father, much like those conservative Soviet elements who tried to remove liberal Mikhail Gorbachev from power in 1991, is finding out that freedom is addictive.

As recently as the 1950s, American Catholics and Catholics worldwide relied on the papacy for guidance in not just religious and spiritual matters, but also in matters of public policy. This reliance was so great that some non– Catholics in this country feared that the election of John F. Kennedy as president would bring the White House under the control of Rome.

This changed in the 1960s. In Rome, a progressive new pope saw that the dogmatic, Latin–based Church was sure to lose its followers in the years to come. Thus began the most sweeping reforms in the Church's history: Vatican Council II. A few years later, American morals would change with the sexual revolution and the decriminalization of abortion.

When the papacy reverted to conservative hands under the activist John Paul II, the revolution began in earnest in the United States. But unlike the crises and splitting of the Church in the sixteenth century that led to Martin Luther's foundation of Protestantism, this revolt was based on civil disobedience: that is to say, papal disobedience.

There were no theses posted or creeds ripped apart. Instead, American Catholics remained — and still remain — in the Church's fold. The difference is that now the members are simply Catholics and no longer Vaticanists. While American Catholics still go to church and believe Catholic religious teachings, a majority now rely on their own moral judgment. The pope is out of the picture.

With many American Catholics pro–choice and a majority admitting to the use of birth control, the Vatican is in trouble. For unlike the old days, papal condemnations have been ignored. In America, Rome has seen a silent rebellion.

In just the first years of this decade, pro–choice Catholics protested their pope's visit to the United States while other increasingly critical American Catholics looked upon it skeptically. Also, the Vatican ordered American churches not to use girls as altar servers; when even their own priests ignored the command, the Vatican quietly okayed the process in order to save face. Now in Cairo, the Pope has made a last–ditch attempt to keep moral control over the Church.

Will we see a schism erupt? No, probably not. But Rome is learning that every day Catholics are making up their own minds about moral issues. This, of course, is far more threatening to the papacy than a Lutheresque schism; at least then, those followers who remained were still under the Pope's control. Even Rome now sees that it is the Vatican, and not the laity, that must be flexible with the changing times. American Catholics are not prepared to return to a male–dominated organization where both legal abortion and safe birth control are considered sins.

As for John Paul himself, he is the last great voice of pre– Vatican II Catholicism. His successors will set the Roman Church's course: modernization, or extinction.

Peter J. Orvetti is a Collegian columnist.

Notes from the Campus Center Basement

Darienne Hosley & Nathan Crick

For the uninitiated, this space is usually filled each week with snide, cheap potshots — typically aimed at the administration — made from our safe haven in the recesses of the Basement. Hence the name. Get it?

But the Daily Collegian is always evolving. We are becoming more user–friendly and changing our name to the Alliance of Student Newspaper Power, and will soon be giving out pins that say SMILE to cure all the ills of the world. We care.

The first target: all the lame professors who skipped the first day of school. A fair number of our colleagues tromped all over to get to their classes and were stood up. No professor. No syllabus. No goodbye note. Not even a rose on the nightstand.

The University seems concerned about recruitment. . . . They should get in touch with those Greek marketing directors. What's so catchy about a bloated turtle on North Pleasant Street? Guys, you're supposed to be on the cutting edge. Ninja turtles are gone, gone, gone. Go for a bloated Power Ranger, or maybe a bloated — um, life–like Rush Limbaugh.

It was quite a sight to see students staring at a concrete wall in the Campus Center basement yesterday. Yes, there was once a television there but it mysteriously disappeared over the summer. However, if you want to simulate the experience of watching the wall, simply flip on your TV to any Housing Cable channel. The effect is virtually the same.

For erotic excitement, however, more is to be seen tuned to the hot streets of Amherst, where that lovely French vocation is played out in excruciating detail every afternoon. If only I had the front row seats in Antonio's! Sometimes I feel soooo ashamed that I don't possess the gumption to be fondled in public. I am so alone.

Of course, it would be more productive to just learn to kiss the chancellor. Think of it, $15,000 for the family and a fancy office and all the letterhead stationery anyone can handle just for being a heck of a pal. Sometimes pals just don't get enough in this world. We should all get cushy appointments, especially since we care, after all.

A basket of fruit goes out to journalism prof Ralph Whitehead. We're keeping the very expensive bottle of wine for ourselves, so we can drown our sorrows during what was supposed to be class time with Ralph. If he wants us to forgive him, he should replace the missing sofa in the journalism office.

What a pal.

Darienne J. Hosley and Nathan Crick are Collegian columnists who both have cushy newspaper jobs.

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

TO WHAT DO I OWE THE PLEASURE, DEAN RUSHMEMEYER?
SIR, IT'S ABOUT THE REMEDIAL COURSES...
THE KIDS WHO HAVE TO TAKE THEM FEEL STIGMATIZED. THE REMEDIAL LABEL MAKES THEM FEEL BAD ABOUT THEMSELVES...
I WAS WONDERING IF WE COULD RE-NAME THEM "INTRODUCTORY" COURSES. REMEDIAL ENGLISH, FOR EXAMPLE, WOULD BECOME ENGLISH 101. AND ENGLISH 101 THEN BECOMES 201, AND SO FORTH.
YOU MEAN, COURSE INFLATION?
YOU MAKE IT SOUND UGLY, SIR. THESE KIDS ARE IN PAIN!

Opinion/Editorial

THERE YOU ARE! I MEAN THERE YOU ARE.
BIG STICK
TOLES
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND
©1994 THE BUFFALO NEWS
NOW, WHAT ELSE? OH YEAH, THE CARRYING PART

Where everybody knows your name

Nathan Crick

Written in November of 1993 in Norwich, England:

The narrow cobble–stoned alleyway led down a slope and would have disappeared into the darkness if not for the yellow streetlight which stood sentry at the end. The buildings seemed to rise up for miles as their hard stone exteriors pressed in on either side.

We followed the lane to the end and emerged in what seemed to be beneath the city, as the street led underneath a stone archway where the cars of the main road continued to drive over. And nestled partially under the bridge, continuing until it reached the corner of the towering black building, was a dank–looking place covered with cement and painted a dull green, complete with tough wire screens covering the windows. Banneman's.

The fireplace blazed peacefully inside, and we managed after 10 minutes to acquire some unstable stools around an old cask situated in front of the fire. The walls were all bare stone and a corridor led to two other rooms beyond, all which held warped wooden tables and a random selection of old torn chairs and oaken stools. We waded through the harsh Scottish accents and ordered our pints from the bartender with the goatee.

Edinburgh loomed at night like the tales out of Jekyll and Hyde from which the story was based. The buildings rose up 10 stories with narrow lanes of darkness between them. The castle lay on top of a rocky crag in the middle of the city, and towering over it all was the skeleton of an ancient volcano where we climbed and looked over the hazy city in the cool afternoon.

Yet for all its fascinating monuments and buildings and streets, the place I would return to would be that pub called Banneman's which lay hidden in the bowels of the city and would intimidate anyone who wasn't advised to go there by a native. There is something about these places called pubs that really grown on you even in their apparent simplicity. What are they, after all, besides a bar without the barstools, waitresses and loud music?

It is really the way the British view the pubs that makes them significant. They are the places you go to meet a friend, to talk about your troubles, to celebrate your achievements, or to simply be in an atmosphere where you feel part of something. It is part of what holds communities together, and many define their towns by the quality of their pubs. The new Irish guy on our floor lives in a town of 10,000 people, and they have close to 100 of these darkened ale houses. He could not imagine living in a town in the states without a decent pub, and in my short experience, I can see what he means already.

I can see because it is in pubs that you can get a sense of the culture of the city or area. You are surrounded by talking, laughing, bustling people and on a busy night cannot help bumping into dozens of them and making at least a polite apology or casual conversation with half of them. It may be trivial, but at least it's interaction. I've known people who have spent half the night talking with some random patron who wanted nothing more than to talk to someone.

I wondered for a time why this tradition never really caught on in America, but I've watched Americans and seen how they associate with those around them. We as a people are very individualistic and private, which in itself would not be so bad if we weren't so suspicious and fearful of one another. Americans are all very polite and happy to talk to people, but only if we are sure they are not staying for very long and won't invade our precious security.

We don't go alone to bars, we don't sit and read books in bars, we don't make friends in bars. Instead we stay in our tight little groups, shifting in packs, making lots of noise, and hitting on each other with pubescent flirting. The music we blare out the jukebox covers our responsibility to speak and think, leaving us instead to drink and shuffle and stare. Then we can stumble out drunk to go home, where we can sit alone in our rooms and be safe from the world.

Nathan Crick is a Collegian columnist.

Take me out to the picket line

Caleb Cochran

Tony Gwynn hits .400! Matt Williams hits 62 home runs! Cleveland wins the World Series!

Of all these scenarios, only the third is even remotely possible now because of the Major League Baseball players' strike that began Aug. 12. Before the strike, Gwynn was hitting in the .390s, Williams was within striking distance of Roger Maris' coveted record, and even the perennial cellar–dwelling Indians had a shot at the playoffs. While the strike has taken a bit of fun out of the summer and early fall, the attitude of both the players and the owners has created apathy among even the biggest fans.

"I don't even care anymore," is a phrase I have heard from many of my sports–crazed friends in the past few weeks. Indeed, the sports world is surviving fine without the boys of summer.

With college and NFL football now both in full swing, attention has turned from blossoming superstar Ken Griffey Jr. to rookie sensation Marshall Faulk, from ageless wonder Cal Ripken to recovering veteran Dan Marino.

The college ranks give us yet another reason to forget about baseball. Notre Dame's young quarterback Ron Powlus put on a clinic in his first start for the Irish, giving the sports world yet another young lad to worship. The stories of the injured Tyrone Wheatley, the damaged Florida State program, the soon–to–begin Heisman watch — all of these will make us soon forget about the squandered baseball season.

Baseball players are, far and away, the most spoiled and overpaid of all the athletes in the four major sports leagues (MLB, NBA, NFL, NHL). The salaries of the players continue to skyrocket at a pace far ahead of the other leagues. The NBA has already installed a salary cap (which baseball players will not even hear of), and the league has not only survived, but with the exception of last year's Houston–New York finals, become the most exciting and popular league of them all.

Perhaps the most frustrating aspect of the strike is the fact that players who had chances at making history this year don't even care that this chance has been taken away from them. If I were Matt Williams or Tony Gwynn or Greg Maddux (a virtual lock for a third consecutive Cy Young Award), I would think twice about supporting a work stoppage.

Maybe this is selfish, but I think this attitude is far more productive than the even more selfish and greedy attitude of the entire Players' Association. I mean, when Gwynn gets on national television and says he has no problem with supporting the strike, why should the average fan care about the plight of the players? No player has hit .400 since Ted Williams in 1941, and if Gwynn doesn't feel ripped off because of the strike, neither do I.

Baseball, contrary to popular opinion, is no more sacred or religious than any other sport. Perhaps in the days of Stan Musial, who said that the players cared too much about the game to even consider a strike, this was the case. In 1994, however, baseball should no longer be hailed as the national pastime, but rather as the arrogant, money–grubbing disgrace it has become.

Caleb Cochran is a Collegian columnist.

Letters welcome

The Daily Collegian editorial desk welcomes letters to the editor. Submissions must by typed and no longer than 400 words to be considered for publication.

All letters must include the writer's name, address and phone number for verification purposes. All letters are subject to editing for grammar, clarity, accuracy and length.

Columnist applications are also being accepted. Interested writers should speak with Editorial/Opinion Editor Tracy Monahan at the Collegian office, 113 Campus Center.

A meeting for new and returning staff members will be held Monday, Sept. 19 at 7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center. Columnist applicants should bring a sample column to the meeting.

Arts & Living

Sugar sweetens up latest release

Sugar
File Under: Easy Listening
Rykodisc

You can't accuse Bob Mould and the boys from Sugar of false advertising. While their latest release, File Under: Easy Listening, doesn't exactly drift into Neil Diamond territory as the group would like to lead you to believe, it does mark somewhat of a departure for the band.

Mould, who has pretty much pioneered the torment–ridden distorted pop that bands such as Superchunk make a healthy living imitating, has finally seemed to have lightened up a bit. If 1993's angst tour de force Beaster was an aggressive onslaught of pent up rage, then the boys must have vented it from their system because File Under: Easy Listening is about as user–friendly as Mould gets.

The tormented lyrics and half–screamed/half–sung vocals Mould was so fond of during his Husker Du days and self– indulgent solo period have all but vanished. In its sadly missed place instead are 10 nicely polished pop gems that glisten almost as much as they rock.

Don't let the layered distortion stuff fool you, folks, this goes down as sweet as candy. But as one quickly learns, too much sugar and one is bound to get a belly ache. Which unfortunately is what happens to this album about mid–way through.

Since Mould essentially writes from the same songbook (multi–layered vocals, clean distortion, subtle guitar hooks), many of the songs seem to become a tad redundant by the album's end, watering down many of the excellent songs contained here. Unlike the band's debut record Copper Blue, which hung together so nicely due in part to Mould's shifting moods, File Under: Easy Listening tends to get stifled by its own desire to be buoyant.

There is absolutely no denying Mould's pop–writing genius. His ability to turn a catchy tune is second to none, only this time around a little dose of his old temperamental side might have given the album a bit more of the sour side that once tasted so good. B (Matt Audette)

Dinosaur Jr.
Without a Sound
Sire/Reprise

Next to the Pixies, Dinosaur Jr. has been the Valley's most successful export into the country's music scene to date. Where You Been, their 1992 release, was a brilliantly crafted album that augmented lead singer/guitarist J. Mascis' depressing vocals with just the right mix of strange guitar noise and orchestration to create an eerie feel.

Where You Been put Dinosaur Jr. on the brink of commercial success and left listeners waiting for the sequel. Unfortunately, Without a Sound does not measure up to what some may expect from the Dino crew. With a more stripped–down approach in hand, Mascis still provides us with some great hooks to sink our teeth into, as "Feel The Pain" and "Yeah Right" leave you humming for an hour afterward.

The main problem is that the cuts with the more catchy riffs often don't stick around and the songs with less memorable melodies repeat until you beg for mercy. This

Turn to TRAX, page 6

Exhibit details memorial to a lost friend

Hampden Gallery features charcoal series on cycle of AIDS

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

Human suffering is often hard to watch, but often times it is in viewing suffering that we are able to identify and find compassion for people that we would normally ignore. Artist Michael David created Bearing Witness out of this compassion.

The Hampden Gallery will be featuring artist his series of charcoal drawings from Sept. 27 to Oct. 14.

The Residential Arts Program invited the Boston artist to display his series which reflects the artist's personal experience of bearing witness to the somber drama of a friend's death from AIDS.

The exhibition is a perfect way to bring AIDS awareness to both the University and the Amherst community. With thousands of people contracting HIV and AIDS each year, it is important to understand the message David is conveying through his work.

Bearing Witness is presented as a series, beginning with the entrance of the patient into his hospital room and concluding with an empty bed.

David explained his reason for drawing the patient without any physical flaws in a recent interview with One In Ten.

"I deliberately didn't include wounds or any kind of scarred tissue. There's a kind of idealization going on. They [the drawings] weren't meant to be a political statement about AIDS; they were about the loss of a friend, about the experience of losing someone you love."

–Michael David

David's 26 figurative works illuminate the last six months of his friend's life. They reveal a man tormented by the disease, tossing and turning, unable to find rest.

It illustrates the awfulness of the disease and the helplessness loved ones feel when they see someone they care about in pain.

"It was a difficult time. I had lost, and was losing, several friends to AIDS," David said.

"I felt the need to focus myself. I locked myself in my studio and before I knew it, I'd done 30 drawings."

The artist wanted people to be able to connect with the feeling of loss, pain and love through simple lines, stark colors and simple images.

David is a graduate of Boston University, where he received a master of fine arts degree in painting. Prior studies were at Brandeis University and Skowhegan School of Sculpture. He taught at Boston University, the Museum of Fine Arts, the Art Institute of Boston and Worcester Art Museum.

David is the recipient of numerous awards and grants, including a New England Foundation for the Arts grant in printmaking and a Massachusetts Artist Foundation Fellowship in drawing.

Hampden Gallery is located in Hampden Commons, in the Southwest Residential Area at the top of the horseshoe turn off University Drive.

Residential Arts is a program of the Fine Arts Center, sponsored in part by the UMass Arts Council and Cultural Enrichment Fund.

Interested in Writing for Arts & Living?

Please come down & fill out an interest sheet.

Also attend the Arts & Living Staff Meeting Thursday 9/22 at 7:30 p.m.

$129/Semester

Co–Ed FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA Co–Ed

The Valley's Leading Weight Training Facility
175 University Drive • Amherst • 253-3539

WALKING DISTANCE

EARTHFOODS CAFE

is a student-managed, collectively operated vegetarian restaurant located in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union Building.

We are open from 11:00 am - 3:00 pm Mon - Fri starting September 19th.

AND WE'RE HIRING!!!

We're looking for a diverse group of responsible work study and non-work study students to fill close to 15 worker-management positions. A 2 semester commitment is required of all applicants.

Applications are available in the CSB Office beginning September 13th and are due back by Thursday, September 22nd by 12:00 noon.

A genius figured it out– HP built it in.

- The HP 48G has built-in equations, functions, and menus to guide you through complex calculations.
- Access over 300 built-in equations.
- Push a button, choose from a pull-down menu, and fill in the blanks. Entering data is that easy.
- View 3-D graphs.
- Perform algebra and calculus operations on equations before entering values.
- Enter and see equations like they appear on paper.
- Work with different units of measure. The HP 48G will convert them for you. So, enter inches, centimeters, yards, and feet, together in one equation — it'll convert them.
- You'll quickly learn to operate it!

Pull-down menus guide you through problem-solving smoothly and quickly. Push a button, select an entry from the pull-down menu, and fill in the blanks.

- Check it out at your college bookstore.

The HP 48G graphic calculator gives you a whole lot more for a whole lot less than you think. Compare — the HP 48G fits your budget.

HEWLETT PACKARD

IF YOU HAVEN'T YET, NOW IS THE TIME!

Register now through September 26 for over 200 evening credit courses and noncredit workshops.

University of Massachusetts/Amherst
Division of Continuing Education
Goodell Building
545-2414

A quality education at affordable prices

■ Crime

continued from page 1

about 2,000 jammed beside reporters waiting to be cleared onto the White House grounds.

Sitting beside Hillary Rodham Clinton, and mentioned by both Clinton and Vice President Al Gore, were survivors of some crime victims: Stephen Sposato, whose wife was killed when a gunman invaded the San Francisco law firm where she was working; and Marc Klaas, whose daughter Polly was kidnapped and killed. Both lobbied strongly for the bill — Sposato focusing on the ban on assault-style firearms and Klaas on putting third-time felons in prison for life. A career criminal is awaiting trial in that case. Clinton signed the bill with several pens and handed the first two to Sposato and Klaas.

By signing the bill, Clinton said, "We together are taking a big step toward bringing the laws of our land back in line with the values of our people."

"We will finally ban these assault weapons from the street that have no purpose other than to kill," he said.

But he told his audience that "even this great law. . . cannot do the job alone. By its own words it is still a law. It must be implemented by you. And it must be supplemented by you."

"Even when we put a new police officer on your block, the officer can't make you safe unless you come out of your home and help the officer do his or her job."

Clinton said that in the coming months, he and Gore would hold forums on crime around the nation, leading up to a meeting next year at the White House on ways "to implement the crime bill properly."

"We intend to continue the fight," he said.

Gore singled out for praise the Republicans in the House of Representatives who worked out a compromise when the bill was blocked by a procedural move early last month. And he praised the Republican senators who bucked their party leaders to allow the bill to overcome a different procedural block there.

■ Haiti

Continued from page 1

Dominica, Guyana, Israel, Jamaica, The Netherlands, Panama, St. Vincent, Trinidad and the United Kingdom.

The non-U.S. personnel would be sent to Haiti after the initial invasion force — virtually all U.S. personnel — establishes a "secure environment."

Other officials said the actual contributions of the 17 probably will exceed 1,500, mostly military forces and police.

Speaking to reporters at the State Department, Christopher said the administration, in seeking to reinstate deposed President Jean-Bertrand Aristide, is pursuing the same goal sought by President Bush.

But Republicans, while favoring that goal, generally have opposed to the use of American force to achieve it.

■ trax

continued from page 5

is very evident on tracks such as "I Don't Think So" and "Even You."

The songs on Without a Sound are more on the ballad side and these cuts are the highlights of the album. Tunes like "Outta Here, Mind Glow" and "Seemed Like The Thing To Do" make up for the lack of orchestra bells and timpani by utilizing acoustic guitars to get the depressing feel often portrayed in Mascis' lyrics.

However, speaking of lyrics, the view of slacker love, rejection and self-pity pretty much ran its course on Where You Been. This fact causes a lot of the lyrics this time around to sound a bit forced and unsubstantial. The way Mascis tries to describe feelings and then gives up with an "I don't know" wears thin.

The result of listening to this album leads me to the conclusion that the direction Mascis has taken is obvious. However, it also leads me to a question: Where does he go from here? C+ (Michael MacLean)

True Math.

You don't have to be a calc professor to see you could save more with AT&T True USA℠ Savings.

It's true—if you live off campus, AT&T True USA℠ Savings really could save you more. Just look up your average monthly long distance bill on the chart, and see for yourself.

Now here's why. AT&T's and MCI's basic rates start off about the same. Then, with Friends and Family, MCI advertises 20% off your long distance calls, but—here's the catch—only if they're to MCI users who are also on your calling circle list. Truth is, two-thirds of most Friends and Family members' calls aren't to those selected people. So the average discount you end up seeing on your bill is only 6%.* Not the 20% you expected.

AT&T True USA℠ Savings is a whole lot simpler. Spend $25 a month, and we'll subtract 20% off your bill. The full 20%—not some conditional percentage. Spend $75 a month, and we'll take 30% off. You can save on calls to anyone, anytime, anywhere in the good old U.S. of A. No restrictions. No calling circles. No disappointments.

So take a good look at the chart (you can ask a math major for help) and check out who's saving you what. We think you'll find you could be saving a lot more with AT&T. Call 1 800-TRUE-USA.℠ And get all the savings you expect.

1 800-TRUE-USA℠

AT&T. Your True Voice.℠

AT&T

* Discount off MCI basic rates. Friends & Family provides an extra discount on qualifying calls.
 Discount off AT&T basic residential rates. Available in most areas. Certain exclusions apply.

© 1994 AT&T

Ad Council

DRUNK DRIVING DOESN'T JUST KILL DRUNK DRIVERS.

Nicholas Esposito, killed Oct. 18, 1989 at 4:45pm.

Next time your friend insists on driving drunk, do whatever it takes to stop him. Because if he kills innocent people, how will you live with yourself?

FRIENDS DON'T LET FRIENDS DRIVE DRUNK.

The Collegian

We're here for you!

Send Editorial columns and letters for the Editor to

113 Campus Center

545-3500

Racism discussion slated for Sept. 22

Famous scientists from around nation to attend conference

By Heather Redfern
Collegian Staff

Racism will be the topic of discussion as part of a two-day conference organized by the social psychology division of the psychology department on Sept. 22 to 24.

Top scientists in the field of racial relations will take part in the conference titled "Racism, the Problem and the Response: Seven Social Psychologists Speak Out," to share their knowledge of interaction between Black and White Americans with university students.

"We are lucky to have these people," said psychology professor Susan Fiske. "They are famous in their field."

Fiske, who focuses on stereotyping in the social psychology division, organized the conference with the sponsorship of the Chancellor's Multicultural Advisory Board.

The tentative schedule for the conference, which will be held in the Campus Center Auditorium, is as follows:

On the evening of Sept. 22 at 6 p.m., Thomas Pettigrew of the University of California at Santa Cruz will hold a discussion on intergroup prejudice and discrimination occurring on college campuses in Massachusetts.

On Sept. 23 beginning at 12:15 p.m., three speakers will cover the topic, "Racism, the Problem."

John Dovidio of Colgate University will discuss the unconscious negative feelings towards African Americans and other minority groups from those who generally endorse principles of fairness and justice.

Audry Murrell of the University of Pittsburgh will concentrate on how the identification with ingroups fosters racism.

David Sears of the University of California at Los Angeles will examine how racism operates in the political arena through policies and candidate choices.

With the close of the conference on Sept. 24, "Racism, the Response," will be the final topic addressed.

Jennifer Crocker of the State University of New York at Buffalo will speak on how the targets of racism can protect their own self-esteem by attributing the unjustified negative feedback to prejudice.

Patricia Devine of the University of Wisconsin at Madison will focus on how targets of racism stereotyped as having poor intellectual capacity can conform to that stereotype by performing below their actual level of education.

Fiske, who encourages faculty to integrate this conference into present-day courses as an outside activity, said the more students can learn about racial differences, the more comfortable they will be in different settings.

"The 21st century is going to be a multicultural century for the country," said Fiske. "Students will be most successful when able to deal with those different from them."

Oriented toward undergraduates, Fiske encourages graduate students and University staff to attend the conference.

New fire alarm systems installed in dormitories

By Heather Redfern
Collegian Staff

In an effort to upgrade the quality of fire safety in residence halls on campus, staff members from the University Department of Environmental Health and Safety (EH&S) along with staff from Physical Plant and Housing Services were busy this summer installing two new computerized fire alarm systems in Crabtree and Thatcher residence halls.

As part of a 10-year project, EH&S is slowly working to install the new fire alarm systems in all residence halls on campus.

According to Fire Prevention Officer David Beaudin, each fire alarm system costs approximately $90,000, with the price varying with the size of the building.

At the present time, Wheeler, Greenough, Leech, Lewis, Hamlin, and Mary Lyon are the only residence halls on campus without the updated systems.

"The new fire alarm systems will improve the safety for all students in residence halls," said Beaudin.

In compliance with the Americans With Disabilities Act, the new system offers students more protection with updated audible and visual alarms as well as more sensitive smoke detectors.

Beaudin said the modernized computers within the new fire alarms enable the systems to monitor themselves when dirty as well as minimize the number of false alarms previously caused by irritants such as dust particles.

"The new fire alarm systems will improve the safety for all students in residence halls."

–David Beaudin

Beaudin attributed the decrease of false alarms in residence halls on campus during the past few years to both the updated computer systems and increased educational efforts making students more aware of the danger of false alarms.

Beaudin said there has been a steady decrease in false alarms in the past few years.

Last year 59 false alarms on campus were recorded, compared to 97 false alarms the previous year.

Beaudin said those who take part in a malicious false alarm endanger the community and risk facing a heavy penalty.

Although there is no direct financial fee to tend to a false alarm, Beaudin warned that the act can endanger those truly at risk.

"While fire apparatus is tied up with a false alarm, a real call for a fire might come in," Beaudin said. "Then fire workers are delayed to get to the real fire."

In the state of Massachusetts, students may be fined up to $5000 and serve up to one year in jail if proven guilty of participating in a malicious false alarm.

"If we have consistent false alarms in the residence halls, people eventually are not going to react," said Beaudin.

Beaudin said a student caught ignoring a fire alarm while inside a residence hall will have to present his or her case to the student judicial system.

"A lot of times, guilty students are referred to work on an educational program such as hosting a fire safety program in their residence hall," said Beaudin.

In addition to updating the fire alarm systems, EH&S continues to test fire pumps, sprinklers and service approximately 8,000 fire extinguishers on campus.

Former U.S. treasurer going to jail for tax evasion

By Harry F. Rosenthal
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A former U.S. treasurer whose signature is on the paper money in practically every American's wallet was sentenced to four months in prison today for tax evasion and obstruction of justice.

Catalina Vasquez Villalpando was sentenced by U.S. District Judge Thomas F. Hogan for her guilty plea to three felony counts, which also included conspiring to hide income from her former employer while she served as treasurer during the Bush administration.

"I can find no basis to excuse your conduct," Hogan told the woman whose signature appears on all U.S. paper money printed between December 1989 and April 1994.

Hogan said the high office Villalpando held imposed even more of a burden to obey the laws.

After she completes her prison term, Villalpando will be placed on supervised release for three years, including four months of home detention overseen by a probation officer.

Speaking in a tearful voice barely heard in the courtroom, Villalpando told Hogan "I'm embarrassed" to be present for the sentencing. "I hope you will find it in your heart to take what I owe society in some sort of community service," she said. The judge did order Villalpando to perform 200 hours of community service after her release.

Villalpando pleaded guilty in February, rather than stand trial. She acknowledged obstructing an independent prosecutor's investigation of the Reagan-era influence-peddling scandal at the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

She could have been sentenced to five years of prison and a $250,000 fine on each of the three felony convictions.

Hogan was faced with conflicting views of the degree of her cooperation with the Justice Department and the Independent Counsel's Office. The Justice Department claimed she did "nothing to advance the ball" in their investigation.

Justice Department lawyer Jonathan P. Rusch said Ms. Villalpando lied repeatedly in all phases of the department's investigation. Only this year, he said, "did she finally admit wrongdoing." But Robert P. Warren, of the office that is conducting a continuing investigation of the HUD scandal, said, "she has been entirely truthful. . . she has not dissembled with us."

The woman admitted in court she reported 1989 taxable income of $161,983, while her real taxable income was $329,884 and that she thus evaded $47,013 in federal income taxes.

She also admitted conspiring to conceal during her confirmation proceedings from the Senate, the Treasury and the Office of Government Ethics that she was continuing to receive financial benefits from her former employer, Communications International Inc.

"One day, I decided to sell my car and all my belongings, and buy a motorcycle like Peter Fonda in that motorcycle movie. To get the most people to see my ads, I placed a Collegian Classified. The responses were overwhelming, so I checked to make sure people were calling about my ad.

"Then I saw an ad for a job in Alaska canning fish for a living. I thought that was pretty cool so I applied.

"Needless to say, I got the job. Now I'm rollin' in the big bucks, all thanks to the Collegian."

Collegian Classifieds
They really work.
545-3500

Sure I'm important!
For one thing, I own my own socks. Yes, you could call me a regular "Do-it-yourselfer." I love organizing my socks. Yes, it is one of my few joys. I know MANY things about my socks. I'd tell you about them... but I don't know you very well.
You may have guess.
COLLEGIAN

AUTO REPAIRS Major and minor specializing in Alfa and Toyota Landcruiser.

• MATCHLESS MOTORS •

Featuring 10-point winter inspection Sept. / Oct. $5.00, including:
All four brakes, E-brake, under hood fuel levels, battery voltage, belts, hoses, antifreeze, exhaust system, wheel bearings, CV joints, tie rods, ball joints, lights, and set 4 tire pressures. First come, first served, please allow approx. 1 1/2 hours.

Rt. 9 Belchertown 413-256-4993 Ed Cook, Prop.

SEMESTER MEMBERSHIP only $109

The GYM

AT MOUNTAIN FARMS MALL
Rt. 9 - Hadley • 584-2175

Graduate Women's Network

Graduate Women's Network
CORDIALLY INVITES
all graduate women
TO A RECEPTION
ON SUNDAY, THE 18TH OF SEPTEMBER
NINETEEN HUNDRED AND NINETY-FOUR
FROM SEVEN TO NINE O'CLOCK IN THE EVENING
at the Campus Center
10TH FLOOR
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS
AMHERST, MASSACHUSETTS
R.S.V.P. (413) 545-5312

STeVeN wRIgHT
LIVE IN CONCERT
THURSDAY
SEPTEMBER 29, 1994
8:00 PM
SPRINGFIELD SYMPHONY HALL
SPRINGFIELD, MA
$19.50 Reserved
Tickets at all Ticketmaster locations, the Civic Center Box Office, Filene's - Holyoke Mall, Movies & More - Chicopee, Main Music - Springfield, Video Galaxy - Enfield, all Connecticut Filene's or charge by phone at 733-2500 or 787-6600

Get Your Hair Cut ON CAMPUS!
University Barbers
Hours:
Weekdays
8am-4:45pm
Sat. 8am-1:45pm
No Appointment Necessary
549-0123

26 YEARS 1968 1994
THE PUB
Fun, Food & Spirits
TONIGHT
THE ART STEELE BAND
BLUES
• "A DIFFERENT TYPE OF BLUES BAND." HOLYOKE TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
• "AN ECLECTIC PASSIONATE BLUES MIXTURE." "A MUST SEE." BRATTLEBORO TOWN CRIER
• "'STEELE' YOURSELF FOR SOME GREAT BLUESY 'ART'" UMASS DAILY COLLEGIAN
15 EAST PLEASANT·AMHERST

LSAT +7.5
GMAT +72
GRE +214
MCAT +6
Small Classes, Documented Highest Results, Guaranteed.
413 584-6849
Course Sites:
Mt. Holyoke College, Smith College, Williams College, MCAT - Umass.
THE PRINCETON REVIEW
We Score More
ETS and Princeton University are not affiliated with The Princeton Review

Three possibilities identified in crash of USAir Flight 427

By Claudia Coates
Associated Press

CORAOPOLIS, Pa. — Federal investigators have identified three possible causes of the crash of USAir Flight 427: The right engine went into reverse, it came loose, or brakes were unevenly deployed.

A key engine mount piece was found today but the discovery didn't immediately settle the question of whether the engine came loose.

Investigators believe something may have caused the plane's right wing to rise, forcing the plane to roll to the left and go out of control, National Transportation Safety Board member Carl Vogt said Monday.

"We want to examine everything that might have caused the right wing to rise," Vogt said.

The Boeing 737-300 dropped from 6,000 feet Thursday and nose-dived into a wooded ravine at 300 mph, killing all 132 people on board.

The NTSB and the Boeing Co. will create computer models to see if one of the three scenarios would cause a 737-300 to behave the way Flight 427 did, Vogt said.

The Federal Aviation Administration has proposed requiring that more than 1,000 Boeing planes with the same brand of engine as the USAir plane be given an additional lock to keep thrust reversers from engaging prematurely.

Crews have hauled about half the wreckage — seven truckloads full — to a hangar and were arranging the pieces in the shape of the plane.

Investigators also were looking for the pilot of a corporate jet who may have been in a good position to see Flight 427 during its final moments, Vogt said.

Searchers today found the right engine's rear mount. Unlike the three other engine mounts, it had been separated from the wing and engine, supporting a theory that the right engine might have come loose.

Vogt said investigators will have to try to determine whether that rear mount came off during flight or when the plane hit the ground.

A second scenario could be that the spoilers, panels on the wings that can be raised to help control a plane's direction or act like brakes to slow it, may have deployed unevenly, Vogt said. A third possibility is that the plane's right engine somehow went into reverse. The thrust reverser, which helps stop a plane once it has landed, was found deployed on the right engine. It's possible that the impact of the crash knocked it into the deployed position.

Collegian Meeting

New and returning business, graphics and news staff

Monday, Sept. 19
7:30 p.m.

Campus Center Basement

Sure I'm important! For one thing I own my own socks. Yes, you could call me a regular "Do-it-yourselfer." I love organizing my socks. Yes, it is one of my few joys. I know MANY things about my socks. I'd tell you about them... but I don't know you very well.
You may have germs.
COLLEGIAN
PLEASE REMOVE SHOES BEFORE ENTERING

"Simplify, simplify."
Henry David Thoreau

"Hey, that's not a bad idea."
AT&T

AT&T Universal MasterCard.
The credit, cash and calling card. All in one.

The AT&T Universal MasterCard. No annual fee—ever. Access to cash at over 350,000 locations. Plus an AT&T calling card. Because life should be contemplated. Not complicated.

Call 1 800 438-8627 to request an application.

Look for Face Stuff at The AT&T Universal MasterCard Table

AT&T

200 Throbbing Watts!
Audio by Onkyo TX-SV940 Receiver
Sale $289.
Sound & Music
Millbank Place • 351 Pleasant Street • Northampton
584-9547 • VISA & MasterCard accepted

EMERGENCY MEDICAL TRAINING
BY
HUMAN SERVICES TRAINING CONSULTANTS, INC.
PART TIME EVENING CLASSES START SEPT. 19, 1994
CALL UMASS CONTINUING EDUCATION
545-0474

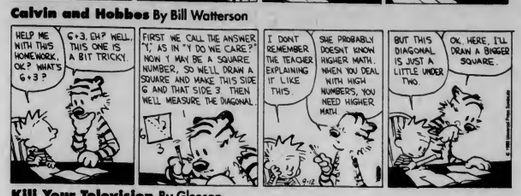
STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycles
Biocycles
Treadmill

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT DEADLINE FRIDAY, SEPT. 23
GRANTS FOR:
● Visual Art & Design
● Literature, Theater, Performance Art
● Film & Video
● Music
● Artistic components in multicultural programs
PROPOSALS ARE ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS
Applications, guidance & information: Student Activities Office or the Arts Council
101 Hasbrouck
545-0202

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

OK CALVIN, LETS CHECK OVER YOUR MATH HOMEWORK.
LET'S NOT. AND SAY WE DID.
YOUR TEACHER SAYS YOU NEED TO SPEND MORE TIME ON IT. HAVE A SEAT
MORE TIME?! I ALREADY SPENT TEN WHOLE MINUTES ON IT! TEN MINUTES SHOT, WASTED! DOWN THE DRAIN!
YOU'VE WRITTEN HERE: 8+4=7. NOW YOU KNOW THAT'S NOT RIGHT.
SO I WAS OFF A LITTLE BIT. SUE ME
YOU CANT ADD THINGS AND COME OUT WITH LESS THAN YOU STARTED WITH!
I CAN DO THAT. IT'S A FREE COUNTRY! I'VE GOT MY RIGHTS!

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

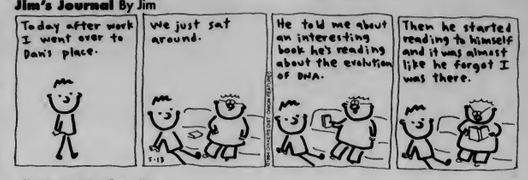


HELP ME WITH THIS HOMEWORK, OK? WHAT'S G+3?
G+3, EH? WELL, THIS ONE IS A BIT TRICKY.
FIRST WE CALL THE ANSWER "I," AS IN "I DO WE CARE?" NOW I MAY BE A SQUARE NUMBER, SO WE'LL DRAW A SQUARE AND MAKE THIS SIDE G AND THAT SIDE 3. THEN WE'LL MEASURE THE DIAGONAL.
I DONT REMEMBER THE TEACHER EXPLAINING IT LIKE THIS
SHE PROBABLY DOESN'T KNOW HIGHER MATH. WHEN YOU DEAL WITH HIGH NUMBERS, YOU NEED HIGHER MATH
BUT THIS DIAGONAL IS JUST A LITTLE UNDER TWO.
OK. HERE, I'LL DRAW A BIGGER SQUARE.

Kliil Your Television By Gleeson

What did you do this summer?
Oh I just hung out relaxed, watched T.V. worked.
Blah Blah Blah Blah Blah Blah Blah
I went outside... for some inspiration
Tell me you didn't plug into the drug of the nation!
or I'm coming to your place to kill it.
Don't watch Channel ZERO

Jim's Journal By Jim



Today after work I went over to Dan's place.
We just sat around.
He told me about an interesting book he's reading about the evolution of DNA.
Then he started reading it himself and it was almost like he forgot I was there.

Jim's Journal By Jim

I got woken up by music and pounding on my ceiling again today.
Once every few seconds the pattern of the pounding changed, and it was in rhythm to the music.
I figured it was somebody in the apartment above mine doing aerobics.
I couldn't imagine getting up so early and doing aerobics.

TOTAL FITNESS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST Aerobics BEST Machines BEST Prices
KEISER, NAUTILUS, STAIRMASTERS
GRAVITRON, TREADWALL, BIO & LIFECYCLES
CYBEX UBE, NORDIC TRACK, OLYMPIC FREE-WEIGHTS
Hi & Lo, Step, Funk, Yoga, Slide, Basercise
Amherst Athletic Club
Rt. 116, South Amherst
256-0080

HUGE SAVINGS
AT THE NEW SALVATION ARMY
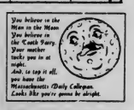
SUPER
THRIFT STORE
STUDENT DISCOUNT
EVERY THURSDAY
ON CLOTHING
50% OFF WITH ID
159 N. Pleasant St.
Amherst, MA • 253-4747



You believe in the Man in the Moon. You believe in the Easter Bunny. Your mother tells you so at night. And so say it all, you have the Massachusetts Daily Collegian. Looks like you're gonna be alright.

Spirit Haus
Refrigerator Rentals
256-8433
253-5384

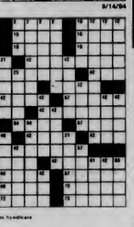
Daily Crossword

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Pile up
6 Treads the boards
10 Writes a postscript
14 Compel
15 Chute opener?
16 Oil-rich land
17 Divided
18 Roman poet
19 Small change
20 Buyer's incentive
22 Attempt
24 Water-skater
25 Finals
27 Canter lead-in
30 Audition goal
31 Sot's early position
33 Wrest
35 Turns thumbs down
37 "The Velvet Fog"
40 "— for a Heavyweight"
42 Settles up before-hand
44 Sidestepped
45 Designated spaces
47 Red deer
48 Vrbi's meaning
50 City on the Humboldt
52 Famed French marshal
53 Family member, for short
56 Trainers
58 "— of Zenda"
60 Global hot spot
64 Pro —
65 Developed
67 Pyrex's daughter
68 Powerful mite
69 Weight-watch
70 Resembling a misery
71 U. Maryland athlete
72 In a different manner
73 Monthly payments

DOWN
1 In the distance
2 Be a party pooper
3 Bedouin
4 Bit of paper
5 Hunting dog
6 Gl's address
7 Fred Flintstone and others
8 Threefold
9 — smith: burden
10 Redames' beloved
11 Axle/transmission connector
12 Runyon
13 Bergen dummy
21 Merry hastily
23 Excite
25 Andean animal
27 Goofs
28 Citrus cover
29 Harsh probe
32 Former Iroish
34 Obligations, of a kind
36 Word with hot and cold
38 Gold dig
39 MacDonald's co-star
41 Potato type
43 Does a lawn job
46 Reparation
49 Resort to trickery
51 Cicero, e.g.
53 Jack of rhyme
54 Funous
56 Perfume ingredient
57 Cut closely
59 Coarse homony
61 Has — oar
62 Lifter's littlest
63 Singing brothers
66 Tiny

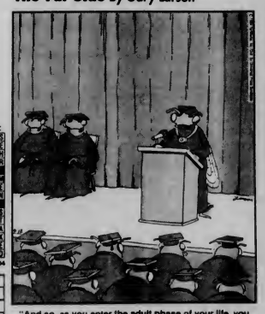
ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



9/14/94

© 1994 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

The Far Side By Gary Larson



"And so, as you enter the adult phase of your life, you will thank God that these past 17 years of being stuck in the ground and unable to move are over. ..."
Congratulations, cicadas of '94!"

Your Horoscope

By Joane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You need to obtain additional information before signing a contract. Take a peek behind the scenes. A special appearance is required in connection with an organization.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Frequent interruptions are likely today. A personal relationship is still strong despite a brief period of discord. Astonishing news is a source of great pleasure.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Contractual agreements are in the spotlight. Trust your own judgment. A gracious and diplomatic approach is essential when dealing with an elder statesman. Express you views but show that you are also willing to listen.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Someone may be trying to pick a fight. Be mature; squabbling will only compound an error. Ignore anyone who makes jealous comments. Handle financial matters yourself if a family member is irresponsible.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A platonic relationship suddenly changes course. An office romance can cause trouble at work - be very discreet. Be careful not to accidentally throw out important papers. A hobby could produce into a income. Showcase your talents.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Tend to your family responsibilities before putting any new irons into the fire. Romance enjoys highly favorable influences. Look for more than a physical attraction. Enjoy a night on the town with special friends.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Making light of your talents and contributions is a mistake. Accept compliments gracefully. Various conflicts could be unfolding over land or marriage. Be patient. Discuss a recent misunderstanding in a calm manner. Say "no" to additional debts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Show initiative now and potential employers or investors will come to you. The romantic outlook brightens for those who are unattached. Be careful not to go overboard when clothes shopping. Travel is best postponed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Your niceness could backfire if other people take advantage of it. Ask for money owed to you. A neighbor will help with a child-care problem. Let your spouse know what is really wrong. Talk helps.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Routine activities and chores should go more smoothly this week. Married couples may be tempted to argue over unimportant matters. Try to avoid quibbling. Constant squabbles will undermine even the strongest relationship. Be a mediator.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Try not to feel if the week gets off to a somewhat slow start. Loved ones are stacking on the bright side now, and you should follow their lead. Stand up for your principles.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Maintain a low profile today and keep any family problems to yourself. The atmosphere at home will become less strained if you exercise more diplomacy.

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Three Cheese Pizza	Baked Chicken
Hamburger	Corned Beef/Cabbage
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Three Cheese Pizza	Tofu w/Snow Peas
Golden Burgers	Baked Chicken

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Darienne J Hosley
Copy Editor.....Caleb Cochran
Photo Technician.....Nathan Martin
Production Supervisor.....Sandy Bogage
Production.....Kori B. Carter, Joshua Grey

Quote of the Day

"Friends do it too."

—Kathy Ireland
Melrose Place

PLANNING TO OBSERVE YOM KIPPUR?

MAKE SURE TO NOTIFY INSTRUCTORS WELL IN ADVANCE
if you will miss classes. If you experience any difficulties, please contact the department head or call the Ombuds Office at 545-0867

Attention Undergraduates

Sport Studies 191 A
Sport in Popular Culture

is open to all undergraduates (excluding Sport Management majors). The Fall 1994 Registration Guide incorrectly states that this course is only open to Sport Management majors.

The course examines the similarities and variance between how sport functions in comparison with how society functions. Utilizing films and literature topics such as race relations, heroism, violence and future growth are examined and contrasted.

The course is offered on Wednesdays from 3:00 - 5:30 p.m. with Professor William Sutton. You may register for the course through telephone registration. If you have any questions, please feel free to call the Sports Studies Department at 545-0441.

Classifieds

- 20¢ per word per day for students
- All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
- Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ACTIVITIES

Free bridge lessons. UMass Bridge Club & lessons free book free T-shirt Weekly Thur 4:6pm Start 9/22 Blaisdell Otno 5-8411

CHRISTIANS

Alliance Christian Fellowship adds value and balance to your UMass education. We're committed to personal discipleship training, outreach and spirit filled fellowship and fun. FRIDAYS Timeout Fellowship 7pm Campus Center

C A S H. FOR COLLEGE

Do you need $$$ for college??? We have the solution. Guaranteed results. Write to Corporate Scholarship Service, 7 Oakhurst Terrace East, N Reading, MA 01864 for free details

COMPUTERS

UX Computers & Associates whole economy. Parts including memories, drives, cards and more. Free estimates. 549 4387

FOR RENT

For rent one room in a big new house. See it to believe it!!! Call Brian 253-7748

Fridge rentals 253-9747 free delivery

Two rooms in private home. $300 each per month. Kitchen privileges. Mother/vegetarian preferred. Laundry, parking, furnished 549 4863

FOR SALE

Designer clothing for women. Thrift shop prices. Will deliver 413-323-8824

Furniture, drapes, rugs etc. Cheap. Call 549-1579

IBM compatible XT computer with printer, mouse, software. Greaty cheap. $340 or be 253-7872

Macintosh computer Complete system including printer only $500. Call Chris at 800 289-5685.

POSTER SALE Biggest and best selection. Choose from over 2000 different images. ROCK, OLD MASTERS (Monet, Dali, Van Gogh, Picasso, Esther Merkins, Wyeth, and hundreds more). MOVIE POSTERS, 70'S, SPORTS, SCENIC LANDSCAPES, MUSIC, DANCE, SMILING, PERSONALITIES (Einstein, James Dean, Marilyn Monroe, and others!). TRAVEL, HUMOR, ROMANCE, PHOTOGRAPHY (Esther Ansel Adams and others!) MOST IMAGES ONLY $8, $7, AND $8 each! See us at STUDENT UNION BALLROOM on MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 12TH THROUGH FRIDAY SEPTEMBER 16. The hours are 9 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. This sale is sponsored by WMUA 91.1 FM.

Solid oak triple dresser Excellent condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253-9354

Sony stereo components 80 watt receiver/ amplifier $700. Dual cassette deck w/ dual record $100. 5-disc changer $175. Remote that controls all, plus pair of Technics 150 watt speakers. Call 548 8853

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass and jewelry repairs, great earrings, gifts from glass to gold, custom designed jewelry. Silvercase Designs 264 N Pleasant St Amherst 253 3324

HELP WANTED

$363.00. Sell funny college T-shirts. Profit $363.00. Risk free. Choose from 19 designs. Free catalogs 1 800 700-4750

Babysitter/ mother's helper in Amherst. Sat. and/ or Sun. mornings. $3.00-17.00. Infant experience, car, non-smoking. $5/hr. Call Robin 253-0660 8am-5pm please.

Boston Globe subscriptions delivery and marketing help wanted. Marketing 1st three weeks, flex hours. Delivery am all semester. All well paid! Call 259 1071

Cruise ships now hiring earn up to $2000+/ month working on cruise ships or land tour companies. World travel. Seasonal and full time employment available. No experience necessary. For more information call 1-206 634 0468 ext C50011

Jobs for the environment /Grassroots political organizing. Earn $40-80/day. Very flexible hours/ casual atmosphere. Call Alex 256 8434

Kitchen help and delivery persons wanted, nights and weekends, must be able to work 25 hours a week, apply at D.P. Dough

Part time manager trainee Firestone needs assistant manager. Flexible work schedule/20-25 hours/week. Call Frank in Northampton at 586 1581 ($6/hour)

Receive up to 788.500 dollars in 18 months! For your amazing free report call 413 525 0480 Mon-Fri 8am- 5pm

Resort jobs earn to $12/hr. and trips. Theme parks, hotels, spas, + more. Tropical + ski location destinations world wide. Call (708) 572-0150 ext P5001

Responsible childcare companion for 11 yr old boy at our home in Leverett one eve a week plus some evenings. Need car 549 9057

Spring Break '95. Sell trips, earn cash and go free!!! Student travel services is now hiring campus representatives. Lowest rates to Jamaica, Cancun, Daytona and Panama City Beach. Call 1-800 648-4849

Telefund in Ashley, where else can you sit around, talk on the phone, and earn $5.50 per hour? Great experience, flexible hours call 545-3509 or stop by our office in the basement of Memorial Hall.

Tennis/fitness club seeks babysitter for up to 18 hrs per week. $5 per hour plus free club membership. Phone Mike or Sonny at 549 3638

Wanted!! America's fastest growing travel company seeking individuals to promote trips Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida! Earn free travel, fantastic pay 1-800 426-7710

Workstudy position available $5.50 15 hrs/wk. Flexible office work for public foundation. Call Nancy at Peace Development Fund 256 8305

Workstudy positions available in Sport Management. Macintosh computer skills and office experience preferred. Apply at 1 Curry Hicks 5-0441

PINOCCHIO'S

Hiring drivers full or part time. Call 256 4110 or stop by 30 Bothwood Work. Ask for Bob

ROOM WANTED

Attention students! Anyone who has a single in the Central area and would like to switch for a single in the Southwest area, please call Cheryl at 546 1398

SERVICES

Model search. The 1994 Glamour Models national model search continues. Local test shoots now being conducted by First Impressions Photography. Beginners and experienced models. Males, females, all categories welcome. 617 573 0387

WANTED

Attn. Drama and medieval performers 2 UMass alumni seek medieval performer, jugglers, armourer to oversee games of skill and inspire guests at their local 15th century wedding. Please have costume and desire for a good time. Bill/ Irene 584 4703

Campus representative Kodak products saving break trips "guaranteed" best prices + incentives. Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica, S Padre + Florida. We handle the bookkeeping. You handle the sales. Call 1 800 222 4432

Sports

UM captures UConn Classic, stays undefeated

Women's volleyball team continues best season opening since 1988's 9-0 start

By Brian Perillo
Collegian Correspondent

STORRS, Conn. — The University of Massachusetts women's volleyball team continued its winning ways this past weekend, taking first place at the 1994 Connecticut Classic tournament in Storrs.

The Minutewomen defeated host University of Connecticut, Fairleigh Dickinson, and LaSalle to improve their record to 7-0 and continue their best start since opening 9-0 in 1988. Possibly even more impressive than their sparkling record is the fact that UMass has won all seven of their matches in three straight games, making them 21-0 in games played this season.

"The whole team worked hard and played together," Assistant Coach Tina Grutsch said.

Massachusetts' junior middle blocker Rachel Sky was named Tournament MVP and junior setter Cass Anderson and sophomore outside hitter Dionne Nash were named to the All-Tournament Team.

UMass defeats UConn 15-7, 15-1, 15-12

"The UConn game should be a good assessment of where we are," said Coach Bonnie Kenny a week ago.

if that is so, then UMass is already further along than expected.

The Minutewomen came out strong in the first game against the 5-0 Huskies and were able to hand UConn its first loss of the young season.

"Everyone was on (their game). if only one player wasn't, then this would have been a lot tougher," Grutsch said.

Massachusetts was led by sophomore Giza Rivera's 14 kills and Sky and Anderson's 16 digs a piece. Two freshmen, outside hitter Lesley Nolan, who collected nine kills and 11 digs, and middle blocker Leigh Ready, whose 8 kills went along with a .438 hitting percentage, made a big impact for the Minutewomen.

UMass defeats Fairleigh Dickinson 15-3, 15-11, 15-6

The Minutewomen opened up day two of the Connecticut Classic by stifling the Friars. UMass upped its record to 6-0, while FDU dropped to 3-4.

Sky and Ready combined for only one attack error in collecting nine kills each to lead the team. Sky's .563 hitting percentage led UMass.

"Rachel did a great job, worked hard and was consistent," Grutsch said.

Junior Beth Cabral also excelled for UMass. The defensive specialist tallied 10 digs to lead the team and served two aces.

UMass defeats La Salle 15-7, 15-2, 15-1

Massachusetts sailed by the Explorers in their final game en route to the tournament title. UMass jumped to a perfect 7-0, while La Salle fell to 1-7.

The Minutewomen used 12 kills by Rivera and 14 digs by Nolan to ice the victory. Sky, in being named tournament MVP, had five blocks and 12 digs to her credit.

Ready hit for a .636 percentage with seven kills, while Nash had her third solid game, collecting six kills, six digs, and three service aces.

Anderson, who along with Nash was on her way to the All-Tournament team, recorded 27 assists in the game, giving her 90 for the three tournament matches.

"The mood is positive, but the team hasn't forgotten where they came from," Grutsch said.

CHRISTOPHER RAGUSA / COLLEGIAN

The UMass volleyball team continued its success, improving its record to 7-0 last weekend, their best start since 1988.

UConn went 2-1 to finish second in the tournament, FDU was 1-2, and La Salle was in the cellar at 0-3.

The Minutewomen host the UMass Classic Tournament this weekend when Brown, Delaware, Hartford and Yale travel to Amherst.

Sports Briefs: Langevin shines

Langevin breaks UNH course record: University of Massachusetts sophomore Melissa Langevin broke the women's cross country course record, completing the 5000- meter course in 18:12 and leading the Minutewomen over the University of New Hampshire on Saturday.

Kristen Donaldson (18:54) and Rebecca Donaghue (19:01) placed second and third for UMass.

The win is the 18th straight dual meet victory for the Minutewomen.

Water polo goes 4-0 at Cambridge Invitational: The No. 12 UMass water polo squad won all four of their games at the Cambridge Invitational on Saturday.

The Minutemen defeated Boston College (19-6), Brown (16-4), Harvard (16-12) and Johns Hopkins (19-14) to improve their record to 4-3.

John Luviano scored five goals in the victory over Brown while freshman Marc Staudenbauer scored seven goals against Johns Hopkins.

Water polo returns to action this Saturday at the Eastern Water Polo Association tournament at Brown.

Men's cross country captures Central Connecticut Invitational: Led by Ted Towse's first place finish, UMass won the Central Conn. Invitational Saturday.

There were six Minutemen among the top ten finishers as Towse, Jonathan Way (third), Rick Copley (fourth), Matthew Behl (seventh), Michael Macieko, (eighth) and Marc Buffone (tenth) all ran well for Coach Ken O'Brien's squad.

The Minutemen will compete against Iona, Maine and Northeastern at 11 a.m. this coming Saturday.

Six UMass athletes honored by Atlantic 10: After a very successful week, UMass athletes captured six of the 12 weekly conference awards.

On the strength of her four goals in the first two games, All-America candidate Danielle Borges won the field hockey Offensive Player of the Week. Teammate Hilary Rose earned the Defensive Player of the Week after recording two shutouts.

The Central Connecticut win captured the men's cross country Performer of the Week for Towse, while Langevin's record-setting performance earned her the women's award.

Two UMass rookies made strong showings in their first week as well.

Forward Mike Butler won men's soccer Freshman of the Week honors after leading the Minutemen in scoring during the first week with two goals and two assists.

Leigh Readey, a middle blocker on the undefeated UMass volleyball team, was named Freshman of the Week after a strong performance in the Jammin' Connecticut Classic.

Borges, Rose shine in Minutewomen field hockey wins

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

Undefeated in the Megan Donnelly era.

The University of Massachusetts field hockey team has started their new coach's season off on a positive note with 3-0 victories over Boston College and New Hampshire.

UMass	3
BC	0

In the victory over BC, senior co-captain Danielle Borges showed the fans at the newly renovated Alumni Stadium why she is an All-America candidate.

After playing in the shadow of Tara Jelley and Jenn Salisbury last year, Borges has emerged in her first two games this year.

Against the Eagles, Borges scored all three of the Minutewomen's goal to clinch their first victory of the season.

"She's really stepped up," Donnelly said. "She feels like it's her time. She's a senior. She's a captain. She wants to lead the way."

"I've felt good so far," said Borges. "I've just had a lot of opportunities to score. I was a little hesitant the past couple of years, but this year I feel I can step up and be a leader."

Sophomore goaltender Hilary Rose collected her first shutout of the year but was not tested much.

In their home opener against New Hampshire, however, Rose needed to be at her best as the Wildcats were tough early. As usual, she was up to the task.

"I prefer to have a busy game than a not-so-busy game," Rose said, "because then you can get a roll going."

The Wildcats got 15 shots against Rose, including six penalty corners, but they could not solve the UMass goalie.

"Thank God for Hillary," said Donnelly. "She's so strong back there. We're so used to her being so good that we're not finishing on defense. She's the best goalie in the country."

When it appeared that the Minutewomen were on their heels, Borges came to the rescue.

She outran a defender chasing down a clearing pass and beat the New Hampshire goalie to give the Minutewomen a 1-0 lead.

Less than five minutes later, a mental error by UNH goalie Shayne Medico led to a Kyle Rothenberger goal to put the game out of reach.

Freshman Amy Ott added insurance with her first collegiate goal at 38:58 to close out the scoring.

"I think she [Amy] is seeing that she can play at this level," Donnelly said. "I think she is going to be very much like Kyle was last year."

Despite the victory, the Minutewomen were disappointed with their performance.

"They were upset because UNH got corners against them. Never mind goals, they don't even want to allow someone in the circle," Donnelly said.

"We had a couple of lapses," said senior midfielder Colleen Duffy. "At least we know we have the offense to win the games, even when we lapse."

Donnelly expects more from the Minutewomen as the season progresses.

"We're headed in the right direction, but we're not close to being where we can be," she said.

The Minutewomen will travel to Providence today to take on the Lady Friars.

Men's soccer seeks revenge in 63rd match with Huskies

By Ted Kottler
Collegian Staff

One year later, University of Massachusetts men's soccer coach Sam Koch still laments last season's 1-0 loss to the University of Connecticut.

Tonight at 7 p.m. on the same Connecticut pitch, his side may redeem itself in the 63rd meeting between the seventh- ranked Minutemen (2-1-1) and fourth-ranked Huskies (2-1- 0). (Rankings based on the ISAA New England Division I Men's Soccer Poll.)

"They got one by us, and we weren't really ready," Koch said of last year's game. "We had three really good chances that we didn't finish, so tomorrow we've really got to try to finish."

Guys named Mike have been finishing for Koch, though one, Mike Butler, has barely begun his career in Amherst. The freshman striker from West Springfield and Suffield Academy scorched a 30-yarder into the back of the net against Temple, opening the floodgates to a 4-0 triumph over the Owls on Sept. 10, UMass' latest contest.

Butler later earned an assist and was honored with the Atlantic-10 Freshman of the Week award for his efforts. Butler leads UMass with two goals and two assists for six points.

"Right now [Butler's] a heck of a player, and in two years he'll be even better," Koch said.

Senior co-captain/midfielder Mike Doyle netted two goals against Temple, no small feat considering he scored only once in 1993.

While UMass has forged a balanced attack in its four contests (Colin Johnson also has two goals), UConn's offense is potent but top-heavy. The Huskies have made keepers' heads turn 11 times in only three matches, but senior Erik Barbieri nailed four and sophomore Steve Chirgwin three.

"[UConn's] very organized, very disciplined," Koch said. "They're somewhat predictable, but technically very sound." Anyone could figure the Huskies will try to send as many through balls as possible to Barbieri, who has scored 25 goals in just over three seasons, and UMass' German import Karsten Bremke will mark him.

That task would ordinarily belong to Dan Chagnon, heir apparent to Todd Kylish, but Chagnon will handle sweeper's duties tonight in Joe Jacobson's absence, as he is observing Yom Kippur. Benny Sheally will likely lend a hand to Bremke.

UMass takes one week off before facing third-ranked New Hampshire next Wednesday. The interim, which will feature an Alumni Game on Saturday, is welcome to Koch.

"It's a break that we definitely need," Koch said. "We've got two really good tests [versus UConn and UNH]."

Koch may not have to worry about his team's performance away from home. Though he expects a crowd of roughly 5,000 to fill Willow Brook Park (3,332 attended UConn's home opener, a 7-1 dismantling of lowly St. Francis), UMass got nothing but praise for its showing in its first road contest, a 1-0 loss at Dickerson Field to regional No. 1 Boston University, conquerors of defending national champion Virginia. That 3-2 win might qualify as one of this fall's most shocking results on the whole college slate.

Corner kicks: During last season, marked mostly by disappointment, Randy Jacobs' ascent to the top spot on the UMass goals-scored chart was clearly the brightest highlight. Alas, the dead ringer for Atlanta Braves' pitcher Tom Glavine donned a cap and gown last spring, and though goals haven't been terribly scarce thus far in '94, every team needs a true striker.

According to Koch, sophomore Dave Siljanovski of Pompton Lakes, New Jersey is on his way to approaching Jacobs' total of 40 career goals.

"He has tremendous ability," Koch said of his highest returning scorer (4-0-8). "I think you're going to see him excel in the next couple of years."

The Minutemen scrimmaged reduced, rotating squads on a shortened field yesterday, and senior goalkeeper Mark Wolf drew applause from Koch during one streak of great saves.

Women's soccer wins over Providence with Magid, Roberts and LeDuc goals

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

The potential of the 1994 women's soccer team is unlimited.

This was most evident during a 10-minute spurt in Saturday's afternoon matchup with the Providence Lady Friars at Richard Garber Field.

UMass	3
BC	0

The game was scoreless until the 67:58 mark when senior forward Nicole Roberts scored unassisted off a rebound of a shot by junior Rachel LeDuc that went in and out of Providence goalkeeper Jody Bjergo's hands, giving Roberts just enough time to put it in.

That goal spelled the beginning of the end for the Lady Friars.

The Minutewomen were obviously the dominant team. It was just a matter of putting it all together and putting the ball into the net.

Once that happened the floodgates opened.

"I guess coach said it best," said Roberts. "When we want one, we can play."

Three minutes later sophomore Julie Magid scored unassisted from 20 yards out for her first career goal.

"Julie Magid accelerated," said Coach Jim Rudy. "I thought it was a Quester ball [World Cup ball] the way it took off, it started going. I said, 'nah, nah,' but then all of the sudden, whoosh, it was like afterburn."

LeDuc finished off the scoring with a header off a corner kick from teammate Heidi Kocher at the 78:59 mark.

CHRISTOPHER RAGUSA / COLLEGIAN

Women's soccer retained the No. 1 regional ranking by beating Providence last weekend.

"I can't say our front people had a particularly good game until they caught fire," Rudy said. "But then you saw the potential of this team. This team can flip and play, but they're young."

UMass' defense continued its domination, allowing only three Providence shots. The Minutewomen have not given up a goal so far this season in their three games.

Freshman Danielle Dion got the start in goal for UMass but once again was not really tested due to the stellar play by the defense.

"It was a sort of lackluster first half, 60 minutes," Rudy said. "I was a little disappointed considering we were at home, and this is our field."

In those first 60 minutes UMass had many great opportunities to score.

Both LeDuc and Rebecca Myers took shots from about 20 yards out that Bjergo made great saves on.

Another great opportunity took place when Sandy Shimogaki made a great pass to Melissa Mitchell, but the shot just missed.

Providence also had a couple of opportunities in the second half within five minutes of each other but could not come up with the score.

"This team can do better than what they did," said Rudy. "The fronts were disappointing but when they woke up and got their goal, it just all started clicking."

The Minutewomen are currently ranked No. 1 in the Northeast region in the coaches' NCAA Division I poll and No. 5 nationally in the women's Division I ISAA Top 20 poll.

UMass improved to 3-0 (1-0 in the Atlantic 10), with the win and next plays at Rutgers University on Friday and Temple University on Sunday, both A-10 matchups.

ATLANTIC 10 STANDINGS

Men's Soccer

A-10	PTS	Overall		PCT.
1. Massachusetts	1-0-0	3	2-1-1	.625
Rutgers	1-0-0	3	2-2-0	.500
3. George Wash.	0-0-0	0	0-3-0	.000
Rhode Island	0-0-0	0	3-0-0	1.000
St. Bonaventure	0-0-0	0	0-4-0	.000
St. Joseph's	0-0-0	0	1-2-1	.375
7. Temple	0-1-0	0	0-1-0	.000
West Virginia	0-1-0	0	2-1-0	.667

Women's Soccer

1. Massachusetts	1-0-0	3	3-0-0	1.000
Rutgers	1-0-0	3	1-2-0	.333
Temple	1-0-0	3	1-2-0	.333
4. George Wash.	0-0-0	0	2-1-0	.667
5. Rhode Island	0-2-0	0	0-2-0	.000

Field Hockey

1. Massachusetts	0-0-0	0	2-0-0	1.000
Rhode Island	0-0-0	0	0-2-0	.000
Rutgers	0-0-0	0	1-2-0	.333
St. Joseph's	0-0-0	0	0-2-1	.167
Temple	0-0-0	0	2-2-0	.500

Volleyball

A-10	PCT	Overall		PCT
1. Duquesne	0-0	.000	4-3	.571
George Wash.	0-0	.000	5-2	.714
Massachusetts	0-0	.000	7-0	1.000
Rhode Island	0-0	.000	3-3	.500
Rutgers	0-0	.000	1-5	.167
St. Bonavent.	0-0	.000	2-4	.333
Temple	0-0	.000	4-3	.571
West Virginia	0-0	.000	4-4	.500

Sports Notice:

There will be open tryouts for field hockey on Sept. 15 at 2:30 p.m. at Totman Field. Please call 545-4092 prior to tryouts.

There will be a meeting for cheerleading tryouts this afternoon at 5 p.m. at Curry Hicks Cage.

For more information contact Kevin Thompson at (508) 620-9440 or Thor Bjorn at 545-0810.

Undergraduate football season tickets will be available for pickup starting today from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Curry Hicks Cage box office with valid ID.

There will be a meeting for anyone interested in joining women's crew on Sept. 15 in Maher Auditorium. Tryouts will be Sept. 19 to 24.

There will be a UMass Media Relations staff/student meeting on Sept. 15 at 5 p.m. in Boyden 255. All students that worked last year and those that were contacted about working this year should be present at this meeting. If there are any questions, contact Michelle Wilson or Lamar Chance in the Media Relations Office at 545-2439.

UMass dance team auditions Sept. 18 in Curry Hicks Cage at 11:45 a.m. For information, call Jessi Miller at 549- 5172.

Anyone interested in men's JV club lacrosse contact J. Diell at 545-6353.

Baseball fans bid an early farewell

Acting Baseball Commissioner Bud Selig (left) announced yesterday that the 1994 baseball season is officially over. (Sports, page 16).

The Big E puts the "f" in fun

The biggest fair in the Northeast will feature everything from livestock to country and western star Willie Nelson. (column 1 and Page 9)

Napalm Death hits Northampton

Northampton's Pearl Street Nightclub will get a dangerous dose of heavy band Napalm Death on Saturday. (Arts and Living, page 7).

Extended Forecast

Sunny, high near 70. North wind five to 15 miles per hour, becoming east by afternoon. Increasing cloudiness overnight, low in the 50s. Expect more clouds as the weekend progresses.

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 72 LOW: 50	HIGH: 75 LOW: 50	HIGH: 71 LOW: 55

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 3 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Thursday, September 15, 1994

No alternatives left for U.S. in Haiti crisis

By Terance Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON - President Clinton declared Wednesday the United States has "exhausted every available alternative" short of military invasion to oust Haiti's military rulers. "They're going to leave one way or the other," he warned, even as American warships sailed toward Haiti.

Sounding angry and determined, Clinton said there was still time for the military leaders to leave on their own. "They do not have to push this to a confrontation," he said in an interview with The Associated Press and other news agencies.

However, he underscored American resolve to restore democracy to the impoverished country. "The United States must not be in a position to walk away from a situation like this in our own back yard," Clinton said.

Clinton's warnings came on the eve of an Oval Office address to build support for his policy, heavily opposed in Congress by Republicans and Democrats alike. Polls show an overwhelming majority of Americans also are opposed to an invasion.

"I am concerned about that and I am sorry that the polls are the way they are," Clinton said. Nevertheless, he said, "I believe it is the right thing to do. It is very important for us to resolve this matter."

"I am very angry," he said, that Haiti's military reneged on a promise to leave voluntarily and persisted in what he said were widespread human rights abuses.

Sifting through graphic pictures of blood-spattered victims, Clinton blamed the military for the deaths of orphans, church people and others and accused them of using rape as a political weapon.

He declined to say whether he would set a firm deadline by which the military rulers must leave. "I'll have more to say about that tomorrow night," he said. "But I don't want to talk about any specific date.

"All I can tell you is that the time is at hand."

"It seems to me that we have literally exhausted every available alternative and the time has come for those people to get out of there," Clinton said.

As Clinton spoke, two American aircraft carriers, the USS Eisenhower and USS America, were steaming toward Haiti carrying thousands of combat forces. Defense Secretary William Perry said U.S. forces were nearly in place for an invasion.

The carriers could be off the coast of Haiti by the time of Clinton's 9 p.m. EDT Thursday speech if they travel at full speed, Pentagon officials said.

Turn to HAITI, page 9

What a heffa!

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Dan Brielman and Fill Fitzgerald relax outside an animal barn at the Big E fairgrounds yesterday (see related story, page 9).

3 new officers join UM police force

Murray, Booth and McGrath join the Public Safety team

By Darienne J. Hosley
Collegian Staff

Three new officers — including a current student and an alumnus — have been appointed to posts in the University of Massachusetts at Amherst's Division of Public Safety.

John McGrath and Peter Murray joined the force as police officers in May following a 17-week training program at the Municipal Police Officer's Academy in Agawam.

The third officer, David Booth, is currently enrolled in the Academy.

Chief of Police John Luippold said the three are filling previously vacant positions among the 51-member staff. Two more positions may open in the coming months, he said.

Murray, 28, is working full-time as a police officer while he completes his thesis for a master's degree in regional planning.

He holds a 1989 bachelor of science degree in criminal justice from Northeastern University. A former resident of Ashland, Murray now lives in Amherst.

Pelham resident Booth joined the University in 1980 and has been a security officer on campus since 1985.

McGrath graduated from the University with a bachelor of arts degree in legal studies and went on to work in the Hampshire County Sheriff's Department. A native of Norwood, he lives in Amherst.

According to Luippold, Public Safety develops a new pool of candidates for openings every two years.

"Last spring we developed a new pool of candidates," he said. "These were hired off of the old pool."

About 450 people applied for a written test in April. Luippold said the level of interest in job openings had remained fairly steady; the 1992 test attracted about 500 applicants, and the 1990 process drew 400.

The written test narrowed the field to less than 300 who participated in an agility test in early June.

Future openings will be filled by finalists from this most recent application process, Luippold said.

Clinton signs crime bill amid heavy debate

By Ben Geman
Collegian Staff

The struggle to pass crime legislation was completed Tuesday as President Clinton signed the $30 million omnibus crime bill into law at a White House ceremony.

The bill provides for more police and prison construction and expands the number of federal crimes punishable by death. The new legislation also contains a provision requiring life in prison without possibilty for parole for criminals convicted of three drug trafficking or serious felonies — the so-called "three strikes and you're out" rule. Over $6 million will go toward crime prevention programs.

Also included in the bill is a ban on 19 types of assault weapons. The passage of the ban, contested by several House and Senate Republicans, is widely viewed as a major defeat for the National Rifle Association, which had vigorously lobbied against the provision.

University of Massachusetts sociology professor and criminologist Roland Chilton said yesterday that while some of the bill's provisions are useful, others will do little to prevent crime in the United States.

According to Chilton, a heightened police presence adds to a sense of public security regardless of the extent to which criminal acts are actually deterred.

"You have to ask yourself, 'would it be useful to have more cops on the streets?'" said Chilton. "It it makes people feel better, than it is worthwhile.

Jon Simpson, another criminologist in the UMass sociology department, said people's expectations for the amount of crime deterred shouldn't rise too high because a large number of violent crimes involve people who know one another and commit violent acts outside of the view of police.

Chilton also said the "three strikes and you're out" provision is problematic because it keeps people incarcerated after they're still dangerous.

"While it sounds good, it really just creates a problem we'll have in ten or 12 years if we lock large numbers of people up. We'll have overcrowded prisons," Chilton said.

Chilton, who served on the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice in 1966, also warned the expansion of the number of crimes punishible by death is unlikely to reduce overall crime.

Big E launches $7M, three–year improvement

By Andrew Ferguson
Collegian Correspondent

Being the largest fair in the Northeast is not enough for the Eastern States Exposition, so the Big E recently announced an almost $7 million, three-year improvement plan.

The $6.5 million capital improvement plan is divided into two phases. Phase One, which cost $3.5 million, was completed a couple of weeks ago and involved the renovation of the area behind the Coliseum. The improvements included new, wider blacktopping, extensive landscaping, better lighting, new restrooms, and new food services areas.

Phase Two entails the completion of the Agricultural Complex.

The new Food Court area will have eight food concessions, and offers spacious open-air dining which will include 50 new picnic tables with umbrellas. The new area is capable of seating over 400 people.

The new area is built in place of seven older concession buildings.

The Food Court itself will offer everything from gourmet coffee and ice cream sundaes to New York style deli sandwiches. Among various meal options are deep-dish pizza and complete chicken dinners on a daily basis.

Phase One also included an upgrade of the Big E's amusement park, which was regraded and re-paved. A new "Kiddieland Area," located next to the Magic Midway, was created to give children a special ride area.

Planters full of shrubbery will beautify the area as well as provide seating along the south side of the fairgrounds. A total of 900 feet of new planters was added.

The old racetrack, formerly on four different levels was regraded to one level and re-paved. The crash wall of the track was demolished and rebuilt. Over 80 percent of the materials, including cinderblock, brick, blacktop and topsoil were recycled and used in the reconstruction.

Over 6,400 tons of asphalt paving was used in the reconstruction. The one-and-one-half-inch thick paving runs for more than 2.3 miles.

A large amount of Phase One construction is underground, with close to one mile of drainage pipe, and over one mile of sewer pipe added. Another mile of water pipe was added to accommodate the new facilities.

Many other small renovations took place on the fairgrounds: various painting projects worth over $100,000 were completed; electrical improvements along Commonwealth Avenue totaled $30,000; almost $75,000 worth of electrical substations were added around the fairgrounds.

New fencing along the property line was added, and old or damaged sections were replaced. The final touch was the addition of new, red canopies over all of the permanent concessions buildings, a project which accounted for $100,000.

Out-Right Happy

REBECCA PETERSON/COLLEGIAN

Jed Jankowski ('96), Alison Fleming ('97) and Diana Townsend ('97) boast winning smiles to win fans and new members of the UMass Outing Club.

On–campus 911 calls now make off–campus hospital care an option

By Kelly Spang
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts students and other members of the University Health Services will be taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton rather than the University Health Services in the case of those emergencies where "911" is called, according to University officials.

Ambulance service, provided through the Amherst Fire Department, will transport all emergency patients to Northampton as mandated by a memorandum from the Massachusetts State Department of Emergency Services, according to the University Health Services Medical Director Thomas McBride.

"If someone calls 911, they are entered into the 911 system and have to go to a place defined as a hospital," he said.

While McBride said the University Health Services offers many of the features of a hospital, not all the services are available. The Commonwealth system of emergency care is now requiring that all 911 calls be treated at a hospital.

However, McBride is encouraging students to call Health Services before calling 911 to see if the University can accomodate in the type of care needed before an ambulance leaves the patient in Northampton.

"Logic and economics speak to the fact that if it is not a life-threatening emergency, call us first," he said.

McBride said, in the past, the Amherst Fire Department would transport students to Health Services if there was not a life-threatening emergency.

With the new mandate, McBride said if a student calls Health Services before 911, arrangements may be made to find transportation to the center if the individual is unable to transport for him or herself.

"Don't misunderstand. Hospitals should take care of major emergencies," McBride said. "But we can take care of minor traumas. We been doing it for many years."

The University health insurance offered to students will pay for any trips to Cooley Dickinson Hospital, according to McBride. However, he said if there is a heavy flow of traffic to the hospital, all health insurance offered by the University will likely increase to pay for the added expense of running to Northampton.

Over half of the UMass students have some other form of health insurance in addition to the University insurance, but McBride said many insurance companies and HMOs will

Turn to 911, page 9

'New' Democrat opposing Weld in race for governor

By Ben Geman
Collegian Staff

Mark Roosevelt, the front-runner heading into Tuesday's Democratic Party gubernatorial primary, has modeled himself as a moderate "new democrat" in preparing for an uphill battle against incumbent Governor William Weld in November's gubernatorial election.

Roosevelt, a 38-year-old, four-term state representative from Beacon Hill, has staked out moderate positions on issues such as welfare and crime, recently attacking Weld for being "soft" on criminals.

"Saying Bill Weld is tough on crime is a joke," said Roosevelt in a press release late last month. "This is a governor who said he would 'reintroduce prisoners to the joys of bunting rocks' and would take their televisions away from them. No rocks have been busted, they now have cable television, and at least 10 percent of all inmates have been introduced to the joys of collecting welfare."

Roosevelt embraces a centrist position on welfare issues, stressing themes of "personal responsibility" and noting that welfare programs should offer a "helping hand, not a handout."

His proposals for changing the current welfare system include a one-year time limit for recipients to find employment, after which they will face a 25 hour per week community service requirement in order to continue receiving benefits.

Roosevelt also advocates the extension of health care benefits to welfare recipients who find jobs that do not provide health care.

"My plan is based on a simple premise. We will say to all able-bodied welfare recipients: the more you do to help yourself, the more we'll do to help you," said Roosevelt in a press release last week.

Roosevelt, who has won the endorsment of local state representatives Ellen Story, D-Amherst, and Nancy Flavin, D-Easthampton, has pledged to financially support public higher education in Massachusetts if elected. In campaign literature, Roosevelt has proposed strengthening ties between universities and local economies through tailoring curricula to match the needs of local businesses.

Improving the quality of public schools has been a major campaign theme for Roosevelt. While co-chair of the Education Committee, Roosevelt helped write the education reform law passed in June 1993.

The law ensured schools in poorer communities not properly funded by property taxes receive a base amount of money apart from property tax revenues. Also included

Turn to ROOSEVELT, page 9

Cevallos to help with learning programs

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Provost Patricia Crosson recently appointed a professor of Spanish and Portugese languages and literature to the post of faculty advisor to the Provost.

Francisco Javier Cevallos received the appointment to this two-year position because of his experience and direct work with the faculty, Crosson said.

The position involves temporary work and concrete short term goals, according to Cevallos.

Some of Cevallos' goals and duties will be to prepare reports relating to education, coordinate a series of discussions on "teaching and learning" for next semester and to oversee a new column in the Campus Chronicle that will focus on "teaching and learning."

Some of Cevallos' goals and duties will be to prepare reports relating to education, coordinate a series of discussions on "teaching and learning" and to oversee a new column in the Campus Chronicle that will focus on "teaching and learning."

Cevallos will represent the Provost on the Academic Priorities Council and work with faculty committees concerned with undergraduate curriculum, he said.

His main focus will be working on "figuring out and implementing a new teaching and learning program," Crosson said.

"Although we do work with graduates, we're primarilly concerned with undergraduates."

Crosson said that the attention has been directed towards undergrads as a result of the new grad dean tending to graduate student affairs.

Crosson became provost in August. She holds the position on an interium basis for two years. She was previously a faculty member of the School of Education.

She said she feels that it is a good idea for the Provost to have faculty members on short-term assignments to help with issues, activities and to get a good faculty perspective.

Cevallos has taught Spanish and Portugese at UMass for ten years and said that, although it is not in his job description, he is "very committed to multicultural and diversity issues."

His first administration job consisted of three years as the secretary of the faculty senate, and once his two-year position with the Provost ends, he plans on returning to teaching.

"I hope to make a positive change and contribute to undergraduate education at the University," Cevallos said.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Thursday, Sept. 15

Poster sale — Sponsored by WMUA, Student Union Ballroom, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Book–buying — The Textbook Annex is open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Yom Kippur services — Followed by Break–the–Fast meal in Commonwealth Room, free, Student Union Ballroom, 10 a.m. Reservations required: 549–1710.

Yom Kippur morning services — Chabad House, 10 a.m. Information: 549–4094.

Blood drive — Student Union Cape Cod Lounge, 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Library tours — University Library, 10:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m.

CBS College Tour — Campus pond lawn, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Meditation/yogic postures — Franklin Patterson Hall Lounge, Hampshire College, 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.

Yom Kippur afternoon services — Neilah and shofar, fast ends at 7:44 p.m., free, Chabad House, 5:30 p.m. Information: 549–4094.

Auditions — For Escape From Happiness, Fine Arts Center Curtain Theater, 7 p.m. to 11 p.m.

New members meeting — Alliance for Student Power, Campus Center room 917, 8 p.m. Information: 665–3471.

Country dancing — Tracy and Company, $2, Campus Center Auditorium, 8 p.m. to 12 p.m.

Friday, Sept. 16

Poster sale — Sponsored by WMUA, Student Union Ballroom, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Book–buying — The Textbook Annex is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Library tours — University Library, 10:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Information: 545–0150.

Shabbat candle lighting — Chabad House, 6:38 p.m. Information: 549–4094.

Film — The Remains of the Day, Mount Holyoke College Gamble Auditorium, $2.50, 7 p.m. and 9:30 p.m.

Shabbat services — Hillel House, 7 p.m. Information: 549–1710.

Film — Mean Streets, Amherst College Campus Center Theater, $1.75, Amherst College Campus Center Theater, 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Comedy — Janet Chassman with folk singer Linee Perroncel; $3 to $5 donation, Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Cafe. The Hatch, Student Union, 8 p.m.

Film — Reality Bites, Mount Holyoke College, Skinner Green, rain moves to Mary Woolley Hall Chapin Auditorium, 9 p.m.

Saturday, Sept. 17

Shabbat services/Torah reading — Followed by communal lunch, Chabad House, 10 a.m. Information: 549–4094.

Fair — First Alternatives Economics Fair; music, food and tables. People for Co–ops and Collectives, First Church, Northampton, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Information: 586–1654.

Book–buying — The Textbook Annex is open from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Lecture — "Intervention: What's at Stake?" Paul Farmer, a physician who has been working in Haiti, Campus Center Room 146, 1 p.m.

Film — A Fish Called Wanda, $2.50, Mount Holyoke College Gamble Auditorium, 7 p.m. and 9:15 p.m.

Film — Mean Streets, $1.75, Amherst College Campus Center Theater, 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Dance — Chinese Dance Troupe, free, Amherst College Buckley Recital Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Observatory observing — Free, Amherst College Wilder Observatory, 9 p.m.

Dance party — Wild Video Dance Party, Mount Holyoke College Chapin Auditorium, Mary Woolley Hall, 10 p.m.

Sunday, Sept. 18

Sukkah building/brunch — Hillel House, 12 p.m. Information: 548–1710.

Concert — "Winds Take Flight," Massachusetts Wind Orchestra, donation, Smith College John M. Green Hall, 3 p.m.

Planetarium show — Free, Amherst College Bassett Planetarium, 3 p.m. Information: 256–6234.

New student social — Hillel House, 7 p.m. Information: 549–1710.

Graduate women's reception — Graduate Women's Network, 10th floor Campus Center, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Information: 545–5312.

Film — Mean Streets, $1.75, Amherst College Campus Center Theater, 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m.

YOU CAN MAKE A DIFFERENCE.
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is accepting applications for the following paid positions:
MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS EDITOR
BUSINESS EDITOR
BLACK AFFAIRS EDITOR
DEVELOPING NATIONS EDITOR
WOMEN'S ISSUES EDITOR
Editors will be in charge of recruiting staff, organizing coverage of their communities and bringing issues of concern to the entire University community to the pages of the Collegian, the largest college daily in New England.
For more information and an application, contact Managing Editor Arthur Stapleton Jr. by calling 545–0719 or stopping by the Collegian office, 113 Campus Center Basement.
Applications are due Friday, Sept. 23.
The Collegian is an Equal Opportunity Employer

EMERGENCY MEDICAL TRAINING
BY HUMAN SERVICES TRAINING CONSULTANTS, INC.
PART TIME EVENING CLASSES START SEPT. 19, 1994
CALL UMASS CONTINUING EDUCATION 545-0474

$00 Throbbing Watts!
ONKYO TX-SV940 Receiver
Sale $289.
Sound&Music
Millbrook Place • 151 Pleasant Street • Northampton
584-9547 • VISA & MasterCard accepted

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycles
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

The Perfect Roommate.
Meet the roommate who'll stay up all night to help you write your papers, spell check and file your work, and provide video game excitement during a study break. The Apple Macintosh Computer—productive, user-friendly systems you can afford to buy or rent. Visit us today in our downtown Northampton location and discover the most productive colleagues on campus.
YES is the Answer
58 Main Street • Northampton • MA • 413-585-0007
YES COMPUTERS

Spirit Haus
Refrigerator Rentals
256-8433
253-5384

For once, a cut in educational spending that actually helps students.

Macintosh® Performa® 636 8/250 with CD-ROM, Apple® Color Plus 14" Display, AppleDesign® Keyboard and mouse.

Apple® PowerBook® 150 4/120.

Power Macintosh® 7100/66 8/250 with CD-ROM, Apple® Multiple Scan 15 Display, AppleDesign® Keyboard and mouse.

With Apple's special low student pricing, you can get a terrific deal on Macintosh,® the best-selling personal computer on college campuses today. You can choose the affordable Macintosh Performa,® which comes complete with lots of powerful software to help get you through college. You can also choose the portable Apple® PowerBook® or the Power Macintosh®— the world's fastest Mac.® And because Macintosh is still the easiest personal computer, you won't have to dig through complex manuals. Plus, with low student pricing, a Mac is as easy to afford as it is to use. All of which makes it the ideal time to discover the power all college students need. The power to be your best.® Apple
POWER through it.

UNIVERSITY STORE
Campus Center
545-2619
Mon.- Fri. 9a.m. - 5p.m.
Sat. 11a.m. - 3p.m.

Talk to Apple Representatives & see the latest MACINTOSH PRODUCTS Sept. 27 & 28, on the concourse in front of the U Store.

© 1994 Apple Computer, Inc. All rights reserved. Apple, the Apple logo, Macintosh, Macintosh Quadra, Performa, PowerBook and "The power to be your best" are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. AppleDesign, Mac and Power Macintosh are trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc.

Americans benefit from reorganization

WASHINGTON (AP) - A year into President Clinton's government reorganization effort, Americans are seeing the benefits, he said Wednesday.

Clinton, in a White House ceremony, praised the streamlining effort headed by Vice President Al Gore, saying it had saved the government $47 million in the first year.

"The benefits are being felt the way they ought to be felt," he said, "by the American people."

Clinton said savings achieved through the program will pay for his crime bill

A status report Gore presented to the president said the savings were achieved primarily through the elimination of 71,000 jobs. Gore, in a later roundtable with reporters, acknowledged that the program is drawing a less-than-enthusiastic reception from some middle management workers.

Some of that group, he said, "might be worried about it" because that's where cutbacks are taking place. Unions, which represent rank-and-file workers, have been strongly supportive. Gore said the ratio of employees to managers in the private sector is about 15-1, in high-performing companies often as high as 75-1, and in federal government, 5-1.

"That doesn't make sense."

The vice president said he wants to change that ratio, though he has set no specific goal.

"A lot of middle managers make the government run, and I'm not targeting them as individuals or as a group ... but that group is too large and we need to change that and we will."

Gore's "reinventing government" program has languished in near-obscurity since it was unveiled amid much fanfare last year and Gore followed it with an appearance on David Letterman's late-night television show.

In the report, the administration points out what it said were achievements during the last year in slimming down the federal bureaucracy, simplifying purchasing and saving money.

Gore's National Performance Review last year made 384 recommendations it said would save the government $108 billion over five years.

A recent appraisal by the Brookings Institution, a Washington-based think tank, said the reorganization made little progress in its first year.

The research group said the endeavor focused so closely on short-term savings that government bureaucrats - the people most needed to make the plan succeed - were alienated.

Gore's status report paints a much different picture, asserting matter-of-factly that government is "starting to cost less." "The president and Congress have enacted legislation to cut the deficit in half, eliminate wasteful programs and shrink the federal work force to its lowest level since John F. Kennedy was president," it says. "Across government, agencies and employees have found creative new ways to save money and operate more efficiently."

As of Sept. 1, Congress had enacted $47 billion of the projected savings, the report says, and an additional $16 billion in estimated savings were pending in congressional conference committees.

High school students get a taste of college

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

High school students have the opportunity to take college-level courses at the University of Massachusetts this fall and have them paid for by the state.

The Dual Enrollment Program allows eligible 11th and 12th graders the option of taking courses that are not available in the curriculum in their high schools, said Winifnred Stone, senior policy analyst to the Secretary of Education.

The $500,000 program is only offered to students attending public high schools in Massachusetts. It is designed to make sure that advanced courses are available to them, regardless of their current socio–economic level.

"Some students may need more advanced classes that public schools don't offer," Stone said. "They may need occupational classes or classes in the arts, music or foreign language."

"It's not meant to serve as an alternative to high school; we make sure the high school doesn't offer the course before we do anything and we don't finance remmedial, pre–college courses."

Students who participate have a grade point average of 3.0 or better, and are highly recommended are eligible to participate, Stone said.

"Any local school kid may be able to participate," Juan Kabon, director of Admissions at UMass, said. "We decide on the basis of available space, the way they do with continuing education."

The state will pay UMass $155 per credit, a reduced rate compared to the rate charged to actual college students. The rate is composed of tuition expenses and fees specially developed for the participants in the program.

The state will pay community colleges $75 per credit and state colleges $105 per credit.

"They pay less than what we charge for tuition, but more than what community colleges charge," Kabon said.

Although students are responsible for their own transportation and books, there are some schools and colleges that are working together to try help fund these essentials, Stone said.

"It becomes a problem in places like Western Mass., where public transportation is not readily available," Stone said. "It all gets dealt with on a local level."

The program stems from former President George Bush's "Goals 2000" plan, which promises to offer high school students the knowledge and skills they need to progress after graduation, Stone said.

The notion of Dual Enrollment is not a new one. Many colleges have been offering courses for years. The difference is that this program is state– funded, Stone said.

In the past, high school students took college courses and either paid the cost of regular fees or had the college waive the fees altogether.

Some were more innovative, like Middlesex Community College, which worked at getting industry to sponsor high school students, Stone said.

"It's not meant to serve as an alternative to high school; we make sure the high school doesn't offer the course before we do anything and we don't finance remmedial, pre–college courses," Stone said.

There is no recruiting process going on, Kabon said. "We're not pushing it; word gets around quick and we don't need to."

Classes are being offered to high school students at the UMass campuses in Amherst, Boston, Dartmouth, and Lowell, as well as at the UMass Medical Center in Worcester.

Balancing Act

REBECCA PETERSON / COLLEGIAN
Chloe Grubbs–Salem explores gravity outside the Lederle Graduate Research Center while dad and eternal graduate student Daniel awaits on the sidelines.

Eating Disorder Programs • 1994/95
Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Treatment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.

Friends and Family Group
Single session for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Mondays (except holidays) 4:30-6:00 p.m. Campus Center Room Number posted by elevator.

Peer Health Connections
A confidential phoneline for help around eating disorders - yourself or someone you know. 549-2671, ext. 168.

MIKE'S WESTVIEW
WELCOME BACK STUDENTS!
BEER OF THE WEEK
ROLLING ROCK BOTTLES 1.25
WEEKLY AT MIKE'S
MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL
FREE BUFFET 9 PM
TUES NIGHT SPAGHETTI & MEATBALLS
$2.50 FROM 6 TO 9 PM
DON'T MISS OUR
ALL YOU CAN EAT FRIDAY BUFFET
FOR $1

TOTAL FITNESS
WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
AEROBICS: Funk, REEBOK STEP, Hi/Low, Boxercise, Yoga
STRENGTH: Keiser Air Power, NAUTILUS, Olympic weights, GRAVITRON, The Treadwall
CARDIO: STAIRMASTERS, LifeCycles • LifeRower, Treadmills • BioCycles, Climb Max • NordicTrack, TrueClimb• VersaClimber
SEMESTER SPECIAL
$139 four months
Amherst Athletic Club | 460 West St. | South Amherst 256-0080

BELL'S Pizza HOUSE
27 YEARS 1967 1994
DINE-IN OR TAKE OUT
PIZZA • LARGE & MEDIUM
GRINDERS • SPAGHETTI
SALADS • (CHEF, TOSSED & GREEK)
549-1311
HOURS DAILY 11AM TO ?
Delivery, Call Delivery Express 549-0077
65 UNIVERSITY DRIVE • AMHERST

4 Seasons
DISCOUNT LIQUORS
BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE
CHECK OUT THE REST, THEN CALL OR COME TO THE BEST!
Instead of advertising every week, Four Seasons meets or beats most prices advertised in the UMASS Collegian.* By not spending as much money on advertising, we are able to pass more savings onto the consumer!
* Items normally stocked
WE DELIVER
RTE.9 • HADLEY • 584-8174

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne I. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Ganley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaelis Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Position vacant Black Affairs Editor Position vacant Women's Issues Editor
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Jim Roode Circulation Manager
Stephen C. Campbell Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Eric Abenaim Subscriptions Manager
Jacob W. Michaelis Jewish Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Evelyn A. Delerus Multicultural Affairs Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Kelly Spang News Editor Mami E. Hellier Editorial Production Manager
Nathan K. Martin Photography Editor Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

The complexity of Americana

Being an American is a quirky sort of thing. It's a brand of sorts, as if we were all a bunch of cattle grazing in a meadow in between the Pacific and Atlantic oceans. It's who you are, and what you belong to. Not until you are pulled over by the Hungarian police without your passport do you realize just how important this brand is. Going to Europe without your American ID is like going to the Gobi desert without water and sunscreen.

And still, at other times, this brand is much like that tatoo of your ex-boyfriend's name blazen across your arm — something you'd rather have forgotten. Not until you are sitting among a group of drunken Americans singing the Star Spangled Banner in the middle of a British pub, do you realize how embarassing it can be.

E.C. Thomas

Being an American is confusing, powerful, wonderful and well, down right strange. We're not the most complex individuals on the planet, yet we seem to have a knack for creating conflicting images of ourselves.

For instance, we are undoubtedly the most powerful nation on this earth. We can invade countries and take out another government on a moment's notice. And yet we are obsessed with two animated boys who play frog baseball, and have the limited communication skills of "this sucks" and "that's cool."

In general, we are a group of party seekers, whether it be in a pub or a park, we can talk to anyone and are always just looking for a good time. However, our cities are in turmoil because we can't live on the same block with one another.

Telling someone you're American becomes difficult when you're trying to avoid the dozens of adjectives that immediately ignite in a stranger's head. It's a startling thing to learn what people perceive you as. Sometimes it is rather funny, like listening to the interpretation of your "accent" (most sound like John Wayne on acid), or trying to come up with an intelligent answer to the popular question: "Why do all Americans wear baseball hats?" And other times, it's disappointing and sad, like hearing that Americans are out- going, friendly people, and in the same breath that we all live at zip code 90210. I met a young woman in a Cornwall pub, who, after she found out I was an American student, asked if I carried a gun to school. . .and she wasn't kidding.

It's this terrifying notion that, as soon as you say you're American, someone will immediately think they know what you are all about. You become so insecure and protective that most of the time you try to keep your language to yourself. Which, for the first months of traveling, became very frustrating.

I shouldn't be ashamed of who I am, I kept telling myself. I started becoming more and more defensive of America. I'd get into arguments in class about everything from American foreign policy to American film directors in Hollywood. I was the tangible, living form of the fourth of July.

Anything and everything said about America, I took personally. Which, after a while, became plain ridiculous and quite frankly, exhausting. And then I realized, people were going to think whatever they wanted to, no matter how much I argued, or how many times I walked away. Trying to dispel the collective image of Americans was impossible. More importantly, during all of these judgement calls, opinions and images, I had clouded my view of my own country and replaced it with some fairy tale world bred of defensiveness and frustration.

There is no disputing that Americans are similar. But nor is there any disputing that Americans are vastly, and vividly different either. We live in a nation based on differences. We are a huge mix of countries, colors, religions and classes. Which is certainly not to say that there aren't problems, just that we live in such an amazing, eclectic situation.

No, I don't always agree with our foreign policy, I don't live even near the vicinity of 90210, and no, I don't carry a gun to school; but I can occassionally be caught wearing a baseball hat and watching Beavis and Butthead. I'm American, it's all part of my culture, and I'm proud of it. If people would look past a lot of the international media's image of Americans, they'd realize we are an amazing bunch of people. Strange, but amazing.

E.C. Thomas is a Collegian columnist.

If you're gonna do it, be ready to get hacked on

Nike sells billions upon billions of shoes to the catchy slogan, "Just Do It."

Just do it, huh? It seems like I said that just too much this summer. I just did it when I had that tenth beer, I just did it when I racked up a $150 phone bill. And I paid for it in both incidents. In different ways, of course.

"Just do It" can be a very powerful expression, one that induces inspiration to those trying to achieve something. Running that extra mile, lifting that extra weight, shooting those ten extra free throws. Those who "Just Do It" to excel at whatever it is they are setting out to do are rewarded for the added amount of work they perform. However...

Andrew Bryce

Just doing it in other circumstances can lead to despicable incidents that are unnecessary. And somehow, those are the ones that stick out in my mind in relation to my summer.

My friends and I had blast during the three month sabbatical from school. In some cases, just too much fun.

Nike can have the "Just Do It" phrase. I'll take the "If You're Gonna' Do It, Be Prepared To Get Hacked On." Here are the incidents that fit that phrase to a tee.

My buddy Lee and his voyage — My friends and I went out to a pit some people call a bar. The people there are either between the ages of 18-24 or older than 50. A variety of personalities, indeed, but that's beside the point.

Anyway, Lee got pretty intoxicated, rather unnoticeably, and drove home. He parked his car in the driveway, and walked up to the door. He went to put his key in the door, but it was giving him problems. He figured out that the door was unlocked, and walked inside.

Lee then proceeded to walk to the bathroom, took off his clothes, and threw them in the hamper. He went to the bathroom, flushed the toilet and staggered to his room.

Well, his room...wasn't his room. It was a parlor. After seconds of confusion, he realized his mistake, grabbed his clothes from the hamper, and ran outside to his car.

Lee was not at his house.

In fact, he was three blocks away from his domain, in somebody else's house. Lee finally reached his destination, ran into his own house this time, and prayed for two hours that he wasn't going to get arrested. Trespassing, wearing nothing but his briefs, urinating in the toilet and flushing it, walking around aimlessly in a strange place — and thinking he was in the friendly confines of his own home. Oh, Lee, how amazingly lucky you were not getting caught.

Arguably the funniest and horrific drunken-stupor tale I have heard. Poor Lee hasn't heard the end of it.

Watching OJ driving across Los Angeles in the white Bronco — There I was, watching OJ Simpson, fugitive of justice, riding ahead of a pack of police cars...in that pit I guess I'll call a bar. Anyway, we're all there, beers in hand, watching the OJ ordeal on the television in the corner of the place.

I then looked over to my friend Adam, and said in a rather loud voice, "you know, Adam, we are watching history. In my 19 years of living, I have never seen anything like this."

Adam then took another drink of his beer, turned to me slowly, and quietly said, "Andrew, I wouldn't say that too loud if I was you."

I then disgustingly realized that I just procalimed to the twenty plus people around me, including the owner of the bar, that I was 19-years-old. Dummy up, Andrew.

My friend and his "valid" ID. — An old friend that I grew up with came up to visit me from Florida to hang out for a few days. We went to this club nearby, and it was 18-and-over night.

My buddy decided to utilize this fake ID he had. The thing was ridiculous. My friend is 5-foot 7-inches at the most, and has a full head of hair. This ID said he was 6-foot 3, and the guy in the picture had a receding hairline.

Anyway, to make a short story too long, my friend stood there, hurling insults at the bouncer for not believing that it was really him. We dragged my friend away before the bouncer kicked his butt. He could defend himself about the hair bit, and mention the miraculous hair growth he received by good ol' Sy Sperling. But the eight inches of growth was not worth the surprisingly patient bouncer's time.

Talking the dog down from the window — There my friends and I were, in Newport, R.I. after a night of partying. While walking on one of the main streets filled with bars and gift shops, we saw this dog sticking his head out of a window of the second floor of a house.

With a mass of people on the streets walking to and from the bars and stores, there we were, trying to talk the dog down from the window.

"Don't do it," we were saying, "it's not worth it, c'mon down." You see what I'm saying, we trying to talk the dog down from jumping. I guess you just had to be there, because we got a big kick out of it.

I can just see you reading this, and you probably have the same unamused and puzzled look on your face that the dog had himself. Like I said, I guess you had to be there.

I think that last story I just told basically tells me to end it here. Just remember my phrase — "If You're Gonna' Do It, Be Prepared To Get Hacked On."

It could catch on, and I demand the copywrite.

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

Opinion/Editorial

DON'T WORRY, THE EARTH'S CAPACITY FOR HUMAN BEINGS IS INFINITE.
There's a sucker born every minute.
TOLES
WE CAN SEND THE SURPLUS TO MARS!
AND THEN THERE'LL BE A MARTIAN BORN EVERY MINUTE!

There are just too many students

It's known that the University of Massachusetts is trying to enhance its reputation as an academic institution. But as I enter my sophomore year and I gaze around the campus, the pack has not seemed to change. The academics here are adequate to good — by a national comparison. The problem I have with this university is that I think it accepts more students than it can handle.

David Chan

First of all, who hasn't had a problem with the add/drop registration system? Despite the advancement in technology, it is still hard to register for classes that you want because there are just too many people. How many times have you heard that lady over the phone say, "The section you have requested is overenrolled. Please enter a two digit action code." Action? You call this action? I can't get anything done.

I chose to attend UMass because it has a wide range of curriculum for students to taste. But the reality is, you better be sure of what you want to do, or you'll be playing catch- up. Over the summer, I decided to double major. Keep in mind, I didn't change my major — I just added another one. Usually students who change their majors are set back, but I'm just adding a major, and I'm already in a bind. I won't mention the school (it could be SOM, Engineering, HRTA, CASIAC, etc.) that I'm trying to get into, but I'm having a REALLY hard time trying to get into the classes that I need in order to get into this particular school. There are lots of duds in the classes that I need. The sad thing about these duds is that by October, they'll either drop the classor just never show up. Some loser is sitting in my seat.

I'm working hard to earn good grades but, unfortunately, I can't get into the classes that I need. Many other students here at UMass share this problem. I don't think UMass can handle the number of students that it accepts. Last year, the acceptance rate was over 80 percent. I don't know what you consider high, but to me, 80 percent is very high for a school that is trying to improve its academic reputation. Is this school a business or an institution of learning?

Not only are classes overenrolled, but there are problems with housing as well. I was standing in line at the housing office in Whitmore behind a student, and you wouldn't believe what I overheard. Housing told this poor woman that there wasn't any temporary housing left. She had no place to stay. I guess there's no such thing as temporary housing at UMass.

There are many other noticeable problems around campus. Another one has to do with parking permits. A friend of mine who commutes applied for a C lot sticker last semester. She instead was given a D lot sticker, which is for students who live on campus. But do you know who I feel bad for? I feel bad for the kid who lives in Central or Orchard Hill who needs a D lot sticker but instead got an E lot sticker because some commuting student was given his D lot spot. E lot is really scary at night, I know because I used to have to go there. There are too many students here, and E lot should be made into classrooms.

Is it me or are the lines at the dining commons and Whitmore longer than last year? I can't eat, I can't talk to anybody, I'm always being rushed, and I can't get counseling. Everywhere you look there's a long line. I feel like I should be at Disneyworld. But no one has the right to complain about the long lines at Disneyworld because Disneyworld is a business.

I'm currently on about 20 waiting lists for classes, and there are about 50 kids ahead of me on each of those lists. I don't care what class I'm in anymore, I'll even take cooking; as long as it has three credits.

David Chan is a Collegian columnist.

Remembering the Battle of Britain

Is it just me, or do this year's freshmen look terribly young? This campus has been invaded by baby-faced students. They wander around gawking at the buildings, looking like they have just entered the world's largest mall. The Clearasil coningent has stormed the dorms, and the youth movement looks younger than ever. It is hard for me to believe I was once a dorky 18-year-old. Through a faint, beer soaked memory, I am fairly certain I too was once a dopey freshman.

It was the fall of 1990 when I arrived in the deceptively beautiful city of Madison, Wisconsin. The city's secret? In October, it becomes too cold for ice fishing. I once went to a final exam (after spending 12 straight hours reading Dr. Zhivago cover to cover) in minus 18 degree weather, minus 63 degree wind chill. Moscow was begining to sound like California. But that surprise was to come later.

A.J. Stewart

August in Wisconsin is fairly warm, and I sat by Lake Mendota drinking the first of many beers. I was a thousand miles from home with a week of nothing to do. The school called it Orientation. After seeing my body a week later, I called it Abuse.

I decided to venture fraternity row. I stopped at a house that advertised upside down Mai Tai's. The fraternity had a free bar, which is clearly one of the great inventions of our time. The brothers sat me in an old barber chair, then tilted me back. Alcohol was then poured down my throat. The chair was shoved forward and I felt as though I would surely lose my stomach's contents. I didn't, and the brothers put a gold star on my forehead. I started to feel good about not throwing up, until a girl walked by with twelve stars.

Almost immediately the effects of the alcohol sunk in. A few beers later, I was singing all of Madonna's Greatest Hits and dancing like Pee Wee Herman. I was really cool. Everthing and everyone looked good. Things were going great, until I blacked out. Someone else then played the part of A.J. Stewart. I could only hope he did it well.

The next morning, I awoke in my room and I was barely clothed. Beside me was a new friend, whom I remembered as my next door neighbor. Her name was Britton, and this was most unfortunate. When our "hook-up" made the gossip circles, my beer goggling became known as the Battle of Britain. This was because her face appeared to be made-over via hand grenade. But she was lying in my bed and I was eager to find out why. In high school my sex life was largely self serve, but she wasn't much of an upgrade from that.

When she got up I asked her what had happened the night before. Apparently, Britton had been coming home from another party when she stumbled upon me asleep on a lawn near our dorm. She lifted me up and brought me upstairs. According to her version, nothing much happened. I mumbled a few things about "barbershop quartets," and passed out again. She just didn't bother to go to her room. I guess her roommate was getting lucky.

I was furiously hungover, as many of the new class of UMass students will be this week. They will have a great time. They will puke. They will end up in strange places with strange people. Hopefully, they will be careful to avoid AIDS and pregnancy. But most of all, they will get older and more mature. They won't be losers all their lives. Maybe they will write columns reminiscing about their stupidity. And when they look back, it will be with fondness. To the Class of '98, welcome to college.

A.J. Stewart is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

SGA President defends her speech

To the editor:

Last Saturday I presented a speech to the new students at convocation. The speech has sparked some controversy. I alerted students to some of the unpleasant realities of our campus and informed them that they needed to use their voices if they wanted to make change.

Some administrators, staff and residential assistants are upset because they felt the speech was inappropriate given that the students were new. I would like to share with you why I felt it was important to talk about some of these depressing realities at this event.

Many students, upon arriving here, are not informed about what they may need to do to look out for themselves. Most of us who have been here for more than a year have talked about wishing that someone had told us, upon our arrival, about the realities we would come up against. Unfortunately students learn about the realities on this campus from painful experience. One out of four first year students don't make it back for a second year at UMass. I think this trend should stop. I think that new students need to hear about the unpleasant realities so they will be ready to deal with them.

I do not enjoy giving unpleasant speeches. It is much easier not to tell students that they will have to struggle. But that is not always the truth. My job is to protect students from detrimental actions and unfair policies and not from the truth.

Mirran Raphaely
SGA President

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

YOU WANTED TO SEE ME, SIR?
YES, CAMPBELL. DEAN RUMPLEMEYER WAS JUST IN HERE. SHE WANTS TO DE-STIGMATIZE THE REMEDIAL COURSES BY CALLING THEM "INTRODUCTORY."
WELL, SIR, THEY PRACTICALLY ALREADY ARE INTRODUCTORY COURSES. ALMOST TWO THIRDS OF THE INCOMING FRESHMEN ARE TAKING THEM...
WHAT?
ADMISSIONS SAYS IT'S GETTING HARDER AND HARDER TO ATTRACT KIDS WHO ARE PREPARED. YOU SHOULD GO TO THE FRESHMAN MEET 'N GREET TODAY. IT'S A REAL EYE-OPENER!
REALLY? HOWARD STERN IS MY FAVORITE WRITER, TOO!
ALL THE OTHERS SUCK, MAN!

Student Government Association
Welcomes you to our General Interest Meeting
September 20, 1994
7:30 PM
Campus Center
New and Old Senators alike
come be a part of the Strongest Student Voice on Campus

Student Government
Senate Elections
September 29, 1994
9 AM - 7 PM
Voting Facilitated in all of the Dining Commons, Newman Center & the Hatch
Nomination Papers
Available in SGA Office 420 Student Union Starting Thursday September 15 – Wednesday September 21

Arts & Living

Wheeler Gallery, Grad Lounge exhibit pins, caps and gowns

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

If the doldrums of back-to-school life have you caught in their precarious grip, leaving you with hot flashes and feelings of disillusionment, stop at the Wheeler Gallery and take a breather. Located in Central, the Gallery houses a most visually interesting and creative display of art work.

Nancy Goodpastor's Accessories will be on show from Sept. 22 to Oct. 13. Gallery hours are Mon.-Thurs., 4-8 p.m., and Sundays from 2-5, with an opening reception Sept. 22 from 5-7 p.m.

While many artists attribute their influences to someone like Monet or Renoir, Goodpastor is unique. She attributes most of her artistic talent and ideas to her job as a professional hairstylist. The works that she produces today reflect the inspiration of her "hair works." Each of her subjects have, at one time or another, graced her stylist chair and faced Goodpastor in the mirror.

Her pieces of work are collages constructed from rather eccentric mediums. Clips, rollers and bobby pins have been ingeniously incorporated into a myriad of patterns and swirls. In the Accessories series, the artist explores her subjects with the use of laces, jewelry, paste paper, clay, gold leaf, acrylic and more. The beautifully sculptured frames match the subjects in imagination and craftsmanship.

"This body of work [Accessories] reflects my generations, in costumes. With the development of the pictures, which I see as the face, it only seems fitting to use the frame for the hairstyle. Some come easy while others take time, not unlike the 'haircut to dye for' or the 'haircut to die for.'"

Goodpastor's works are sometimes three dimensional. The artist's works and messages seem to grab you, and the picture reflects the special space that hairdressers share with their clients. They are able to envision the finished product and the beautification the person will undergo. Goodpastor captures this essence or imagination and presents it perfectly.

Wheeler Gallery is located in the Central Residential Area of the University of Massachusetts, near University Health Services. Residential Arts is a program of the Fine Arts Center, sponsored in part by the MASS Arts Council and Cultural Enrichment Fund. For more information call 545- 0680.

If you're into viewing something with a more political edge, go to the Graduate Lounge in the Campus Center to view the Cap & Gown Show by Dectress Neutopia. The Cap & Gown Show will be on display Sept. 13 and will end on Oct. 30 with a closing reception. The conceptual art show uses graduate paraphernalia for graduation ceremonies to criticize the process of higher education in the United States. Neutopia uses collages, material, paints, banners, her own diplomas, and her doctoral cap and gown to get her message about the corruption of higher education across to her viewers.

The artist began as a student at UMass more than a decade ago, and

Turn to EXHIBITS, page 8

COURTESY NANCY GOODPASTOR

"The Princess and the Pea," a work by Nancy Goodpastor

Sleuth captures criminals in a novel way

Mystery highlights the exploits of senior detective, Henrie O

By Calvin Woodward
Associated Press

BETHESDA, Md. — Henrie O is in a league of her own in the fictional world of elderly female sleuths. She drives her sports car fast, cusses a bit and knits intrigue instead of mittens. In a larger sense, however, Henrie O has plenty of company, says her creator, mystery writer Carolyn G. Hart.

Henrietta O'Dwyer Collins represents a generation of women, steeled in their youth by World War II, who populate forgotten shadows of American culture in their older age.

Cerebral and confident under pressure, Henrie O is Hart's tribute to them.

"These are the women who survived the most dramatic and terrifying and horrendous years of this century," Hart said after a book-signing event for her new Henrie O mystery, "Scandal in Fair Haven."

"You look at those women who are now in the late 60s, their 70s and 80s - how can you possibly dismiss them? These are people who have been tested by time."

"Scandal in Fair Haven" is traditional in many ways - murder on a lavish Southern estate, dark secrets in a high-society setting. What sets it apart is its use of a female protagonist in her mid-60s or slightly beyond who is not at all dotty, deferential or spinsterish.

A Miss Marple for the '90s, some reviewers called her after Henrie O made her novel-length debut in "Dead Man's Island." This year, the book won Hart her second Agatha mystery award.

Agatha Christie's Jane Marple was frail, polite and famously perceptive - a woman who, in one typical passage, "averted her eyes from the garden, and picked up her knitting." Not that she missed a thing.

In contrast, Henrie O, a retired newswoman, snaps that "I don't waste time, and I don't waver between choices," and she finds she sometimes intimidates others.

"I have a Roman-coin profile, dark hair silvered at the temples, jet-black eyes that have seen much and remembered much, and an angular body with a lean and hungry appearance of forward motion even when at rest."

Eyes that see and remember. It's a recurring theme in the two Henrie O novels and in Hart's conversation over iced tea in a Bethesda cafe, her warm face framed by short-cropped hair. Hart, 58, of Oklahoma City, is best known for her continuing "Death on Demand" series, featuring two young sleuths who, for all their lighthearted qualities, lack the accumulated wisdom of age.

"This does give me an opportunity to provide more of an appraisal of life, to realize the complexity involved in life that you can't do with younger characters because they're mostly oblivious to it," she says.

"They're too busy living and learning and enjoying to see the permutations that are always involved in relationships."

Apart from Jessica Fletcher of "Murder, She Wrote" or the Golden Girls, few spunky elderly women show up on

Turn to MYSTERY, page 8

An intruder lurks in excerpt from 'Scandle in Fair Haven'

Excerpt from Scandal in Fair Haven, by Carolyn G. Hart. Published by Bantam Books:

I reached the open bedroom door with only one telltale creak of the boards.

I've trod a good many dangerous paths in my life. I've learned to look hard at faces.

The old saw instructs that pretty is as pretty does. The converse is equally true. The discontented droop of a mouth, the venal gleam in an eye, the obsequious curve of lips, the angry lift of a chin - oh, yes, faces tell tales. And dangerous men have in common an air of reckless abandon. They are not bound by any rules, man's or God's, and they will kill you without qualm.

I had to see the face of my intruder.

He slumped in the room's single easy chair, his dark eyes wide and staring, focusing on nothing.

His face surprised me. It was slender, almost delicate for a man. It reminded me on tintypes of Robert Louis Stevenson, oval with deepset eyes, a small, gentle mouth, a high-bridged nose. In his mid-thirties. Despite the bristly stubble fuzzing his cheeks, my intruder had a thoughtful, civilized, almost professorial look. But he appeared desperately tired. More than that, his face retained a kind of incredulous astonishment, like the single survivor of a road smash surveying the crushed cars and mangled victims.

His long, lean body sagged with despair. He wasn't dressed for the part of a housebreaker. He wore a glen plaid cotton shirt, stylishly pleated khaki slacks, tasseled burgundy leather loafers. But his right trouser leg was soiled, some kind of dark stain. And I had the elusive, teasing sense that I'd seen him somewhere before. Somewhere ...

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT DEADLINE FRIDAY, SEPT. 23
GRANTS FOR:
- Visual Art & Design
- Literature, Theater, Performance Art
- Film & Video
- Music
- Artistic components in multicultural programs

PROPOSALS ARE ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS

Applications, guidance & information: Student Activities Office or the Arts Council 101 Hasbrouck 545-0202

T.G.I'ts FRIDAY
Every Friday:
$2.00 per game (or)
$1.75 per game with a ticket stub from a recent sporting event
LIVE D.J.
Mike Perkins
584-4830
Bring this ad and get 75¢ off of a shoe rental
Northampton Bowl
525 Pleasant St. • Northampton

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycles
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

PHISH
On Sale Saturday
NOVEMBER 3 7:30 pm 6 pm doors $18.50*
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst
Tickets available at the Mullins Center Box Office and all Ticketmaster locations. *An addition service charge will be to and retained by ticket company on all purchases at outlets or by telephone Presented by Tea Party® Concerts.
CALL FOR TICKETS TICKETMASTER (413) 733-2500

IF YOU HAVEN'T YET, NOW IS THE TIME!
Register now through September 26 for over 200 evening credit courses and noncredit workshops.
University of Massachusetts/Amherst Division of Continuing Education Goodell Building 545-2414
A quality education at affordable prices

UMass Arts Council Presents performance interventions at public art sites & courtyards
ArtEventives
September 22
Delight in an Augustan Party Evening at two campus gardens, featuring Vincent Dowling
3:30
Beginning at the Clark Memorial public art piece, delight in early American music & Morris dancers. Enjoy the ambiance – bring a picnic and blanket and supper on the surrounding farms/Berkshire Hills. You will be greeted by notable Clark himself, personified by hearing actor, Walter Cornell of WFCR's "Afternoon Music."
4:45 A Musical Promenade will stroll down Hill Side to...
5:00 the new DeAhna Gardens. Sip cranberry punch, tour the splendid garden space and listen to Sara Songs of Shonnie nan Dana Bears.
5:30 Spotlighting the Dunbar Stage, amateur actor and director, Vincent Dowling from the Miniature Theater of Chester reading "By the Shores of the Berkshire Mountains," a dramatization of Melville's whale story, "The Piazza" by Bernie Greenlee. Reception to meet the artist follows.
Support and assistance for this evening from: UMass Arts Council, Department of Landscape Architecture & Regional Planning, UMass Student Chapter of ASLA, Campus Center Building Services/AV, Fine Arts Center Production Services, Amherst Chamber of Commerce/Book & Picnic Festival, and many other friends.

Weekend promises musical diversity with wide range of sounds

Napalm Death brings vicious brand of metal to Pearl Street

COURTESY MATT AMATO/COLUMBIA

Barney Grenway, Mitch harris, Shane Embury, Danny Herrera and Jesse Pintado make up Napalm Death

By Matt Audette
Collegian Staff

A napalm death is not a pretty sight. So as you can imagine a band blessed with that very name probably creates some of the most disturbingly brutal music around today.

Find out for yourself this Saturday night as Napalm Death, the so-called reigning kings of grindcore, bring their nerve- shattering blasts of sonic torture to the Pearl Street stage.

The band began its musical pillage in the mid-eighties with their harrowing debut, Scum, and quickly established themselves as the fastest band on earth and the progenitors of the now infamous Earache label. After following-up their debut with the pleasantly titled Enslavement to Obliteration the band decided to undergo a maturation process, obviously looking for other means in wrought musical agony on fis fans.

were lucky if they clocked in at 30 seconds) and adding some more (ahem!) musical elements to the controlled chaos, the band landed a major label deal with Columbia Records.

Now with their fifth full-length studio effort Fear, Emptiness, Despair (something tells me these guys don't watch "The Partridge Family" much), the band has returned to cast another dark cloud of confusion and mayhem over the music world.

Bassist and longest-lasting member Shane Embury pretty much sums up the latest album's vibe, "It's a no hope message, and sometimes I think there is no hope." (Whoa!)

With all this, and death metal protegees Obituary co-headlining the whole sha-bang, the night could definitely be the most bone-crunching shows witnessed in sometime. Musical Masochists of the world unite!

Guess what kids! The show is a rare all ages at Pearl Street Nightclub in Northampton on Saturday the 17th. So bring along Mom, Dad and little sis too. Call for ticket info.

Synaesthesia to treat Northampton to mind-numbing rock

By Joshua P. Boyd
Collegian Staff

What a spectacle time this "back to school" period is. You have your back to school parties, your back to school clothes, some sort of back to school attitude and, on Friday September 16 at the Pearl Street club in Northampton, you've got your "Back To School Jam."

Playing at this musical soiree will be two UMass groups, both of which have proven themselves, as far as individual members go, very talented prospects for bigger future successes in the music biz.

Permit me to either reacquaint or introduce you to Synaesthesia and Meristem, both recent staples on the Amherst music scene. Synaesthesia, with five members hailing from the ocean front town of Lynn, Mass. and another from South Boston, have been the biggest story from the wide array of UMass bands. They played the Spring Concert last semester with Buffalo Tom, the Violent Femmes and Taj Mahal, among others.

Synaesthesia played two shows at the Local 186 club in Allston, in the vicinity of Boston, both to great reception, and they've played more than a handful of smaller shows in our own Happy Valley.

Keyboardist of the group, B.J. O'Reilly chuckles when he brings up the topic of a tape he has from when he was 13- years-old, playing with fellow junior-high school age band members Gus Serino on bass, and the Brothers Ray: B.J. on drums and Darrin on guitar. They called themselves Impact then.

Throughout high school they played with then new and current drummer/percussionist Jason McIsaac and an anonymous female singer. In their senior year, after their singer had left, they changed to their current name. Just last year they befriended and brought into their music circle South Boston native, Jason Bain to be a singer.

A little different from Synaesthesia's hard, majestic and sometimes just downright bluesy improvisational jams is Meristem's complete onslaught of physically bruising chords, crying feedback and Cameron Keiber's low, testifying vocals. The band will be going on one year of experience this semester.

They have opened for and shared bills with Synaesthesia before, as both groups of musicians are friends that support each other musically. So, if you're into that music and dancing thing, take a PVTA bus No46 on Friday night, pay the man his five bucks and enjoy!

Friday's show is 18+. The doors will open at 8:30 p.m.

Brooks Williams brings his acousitic melodies to Iron Horse

After spring and summer performances in America and abroad, Brooks Williams brings his acoustic guitar artistry to the Iron Horse Music Hall on Saturday Night, September 17.

Williams is touring in support of his fifth album, Inland Sailor (Green Linnet), which with the support of increased College radio airplay, has been his most successful to date. Often drawing comparisons to Lou Reed, Williams has no problem shifting from more subtle acoustic work to more driving pieces.

Williams has just come off a performance summer, performing seven nights in a row at Ireland's Belfast Folk Festival in August, and playing fifteen times in seventeen nights on a tour of the United Kingdom and France.

Inland Sailor has achieved critical acclaim from such publications as the Washington Post, Acoustic Guitar, New Country, Dublin's Irish News and Pulse! Magazine, published by Tower Records.

With a new album in the works, Williams may be showcasing some more recent material that may appear on his upcoming effort, so be sure to get your dose of some good acoustic guitar work live, because "MTV Unplugged" just doesn't have the same effect.

Brooks Williams will appear at the Iron Horse Music Hall, Northampton, Saturday September 17. For more info call the Iron Horse at 584-0610

— Micheal MacLean

COURTESY ROBERT TOBEY

Brooks Williams

SHOOT FOR THE COLLEGIAN
New photographers are always welcome at the Largest College Daily Newspaper in New England
COME DOWN TO THE COLLEGIAN • 113 CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT
TALK TO NATHAN MARTIN, PHOTO EDITOR

On the day of the apocalypse Gail finally revealed to Bridget that she was the one to steal her "Mrs. Pretty" make-up kit in the 3rd grade.
Mass Daily Collegian
"Make Amends Now"

Six Kinds to choose from
reg. $3.95 ONLY $2
Nightly from 9:30-10:30pm
sizzling plate of nachos
THE PUB
15 E. Pleasant St. Amherst

Bike Sale.
Threshold 259.99 was 299.99
Switchback 259.99 was 299.99
Sycamore 319.99 was 349.99
Hilltopper 369.99 was 399.99
Alite 439.99 was 479.99
Rockville 499.99 was 529.99
Shock Sale
Rock Shox Mag 21 Installation only $19 was $379 was $25
Lock Sale
Kryptonite Locks starting at $29.95
KRYPTONITE
Bicycle World Too
Our Only Business is Bikes
Amherst 253-7722 • 63 South Pleasant St. Northampton • Greenfield 774-3701

AT FACES WE CARRY GOOD QUALITY STUFF FOR YOU TO PUT ON YOUR BODY, OR TO PUT IN YOUR HOME, AT PRICES THAT SEEM FAIR (Y'KNOW – WORTH IT).
MORE LAMPS $9.95
$39.95
BOOKCASES $34.95
MORE CHAIRS
GET BACK TO IT.
MORE TABLES
FROM $7.95
$24.95
MORE RUGS
MORE BEDSPREADS
POSTERS
FROM $9.95
FROM $3.60
Faces
OPEN 7 DAYS
MAIN STREET ~ NORTHAMPTON
EVERYTHING WE SELL IS OF GOOD QUALITY... GOOD ENOUGH FOR US TO SAY "TAKE IT, OR YOUR MONEY BACK." WE PUT ALL THIS IN A PRETTY FRIENDLY ATMOSPHERE IN OUR STORE IN NORTHAMPTON.

New faces, old plots liven up Broadway

By Shawn McDonnell
Collegian Staff

Broadway has a unique way of offering something for everyone regardless of you theatrical taste and style. The following plays and musicals entertained theater hungry masses throughout the summer. If you're still interested in any of them, many of them are still playing for your viewing pleasure.

Blood Brothers: Willy Russell's musical of twin brothers divided by economics is the quintessential English folk musical. This is a fact which producer/director Bill Kenwright has invested much energy to conceal, since Class Pathos doesn't sell to American audiences. He has tried to give Russell's drama–with–songs an air of frivolity.

The current cast is headed by another pop singer (Carole King, replacing Petula Clark), a handsome unknown (Philip Lehl, who proved innocuous when he subbed for David Cassidy this spring), and a third-rate squarejaw juvenile, Ric Ryder.

The entire production has been reshaped around his performance and the changes are damn good. Gone is the cloying cuteness of the scenes set in the brothers' childhood; the shameless mugging and slapstick which made Cassidy so popular in the part. In their place is a startlingly heartfelt performance.

If the ever–increasing strength of Lehl's performance has a drawback, it is that it highlights the hollowness of his co– star, Ric Ryder as the wealthy brother. Mr. Ryder actually seems smaller than himself in a yawningly bland display of somnambulism which keeps him terminally distant from the other actors.

Whatever the cost of Kenwright's sometimes misguided leadership, however, this remains the best musical (if not the best production) to touch Broadway in a decade. A Passion: Stephen Sondheim's sly perversion of the too– popular love–will–conquer–all routine is the story of Soldier Giorgio Pacquetti (Jere Shea), transferred away from his beloved Clara (Marin Mazzie), who develops a friendship with a hideous shut–in named Fosca (Donna Murphy). Fosca falls madly in love with Giorgio, and sends audiences squirming in their seats.

Strangely, though, this twist is not unwelcome. As attractive as Giorgio and Clara are, the refined perfection of their romance seems as meticulous and regimented emotionless as the constant military drills that play out in the background. It is not long before the audience is drawn to Fosca's explosive passions, or after Giorgio turns against Clara and the "sensible arrangement" of her affections.

The unusually honest love story that unfolds from this left many audience members horrified and enraged. It's too bad, because this is Sondheim's best work in years. A

Carousel: Director Nicholas Hytner has done wonderful things with this old R&H chestnut, designing a brooding, sometimes brilliant production intended to bring out the dark side of this famously glossy show. If there is a problem with this approach, it is simply that Carousel doesn't have a dark side. Such indigestible Broadway corn as Billy Bigelow's visit to heaven and the entire Enoch Snow/Carrie Pipperidge romance (Will Parker/Ado Annie revisited) seems particularly absurd when given the solemn treatment of the National Theatre. Still, this staging is better than most — due to Michael Hayden's powerhouse performance as Billy. You won't hear a more touching "Soliloquy" this side of Mandy Patinkin, and that's pretty wonderful in itself. B

Damn Yankees: Jack O'Brien's dumb revival of this bygone baseball musical features a "revised" book, stacked with bad one–liners about Edsels and J. Edgar Hoover is designed to make audiences remember that the show is set in the 1950s. It would be easy to forget, since the physical production looks at times like it was lifted from Cats. The casting is good (too good for a production this bad). The story, about a baseball fan who sells his soul for a pennant win, is harmless enough, but the staging is leaden. The once–amiable Adler/Ross score begins to border on torture by the time the 51st reprise of "You've Gotta Have Heart" rolls around. C–

Kiss of the Spider Woman: Another loser is this Kander and Ebb prison tale about a gay window dresser (now Howard McGillin) and the spooky gal who sings him long, excisable songs. Pop icon Vanessa Williams has taken over the title role from the Biblically–aged Chita Rivera, and she sings with far greater style. Too bad she didn't rewrite the book too. D–

Les Miserables: Craig Schulman has sung the role of Jean Valjean more than anyone in the world, and also (arguably) better than anyone in the world. Certainly his vocals are a match for such other notables as Colm Wilkinson and Gary Morris. But Schulman has the added advantage of being an actor, and the sheer joy of hearing songs such as "Bring Him Home" performed should not be passed up by any Les Miz fan who would otherwise settle for a mediocre road company. A–

Phantom of the Opera: Poor Jeff Keller. After understudying the Phantom for six years, he was finally offered the part on a full time basis this summer... only to be replaced two weeks later. But whatever Keller's supporters think about this, the current Phantom, Davis Gaines, has an impressive voice and presence. He sings "Music of the Night" with gusto. The chandelier still falls, Jeff Keller still waits in the wings, and the money keeps rolling in. B

Cats: Unless you're bringing your kids, you'd do well to avoid this once–fun Lloyd Webber kitty–kai revue, bearing the weight of untalented leading lady Liz Calloway. If you really want to hear the world's worst rendition of "Memory," just wait until Calloway releases another one of her lousy showtunes albums. But for God's sake, stay away from this show! C

Beauty and the Beast: Finally, we come to the hottest ticket on Broadway, an insanely awful live action cartoon. The last time I wrote about this clumsy stage adaption of the Disney film, I pointed out that an animated candelabra sprouting tiny flames is much cuter than a cloying forty year–old in a gold tuxedo setting off a blowtorch. I don't know that I need to say any more. F

Cracked Rear View a southern treat

By Caleb Cochran
Collegian Staff

CRACKED REAR VIEW
Hootie & the Blowfish
Atlantic

You've probably never heard of them, and until I spent three months in the band's town of origin (Columbia, South Carolina) I hadn't either. When I came back north last December, however, I was raving about this great bar band that I discovered and carrying a copy of their independent CD release, Kootchypop.

I had heard rumors that Hootie & the Blowfish had signed on with Atlantic records, but I was hardly holding my breath in anticipation of their new album. It came as a pleasant surprise then when my brother and I came across a copy of Cracked Rear View at the local Sam Goody last month. Now, finally, the rest of America would be able to enjoy the catchy hybrids woven brand of pop that South Carolinians previously had all to themselves.

I had high hopes for Cracked Rear View, and I was not disappointed. A few tunes reappear from Kootchypop, with a touch of acoustic polishing which makes for more of an "unplugged" sound. Among these are "Hold my Hand," a simple plea with a sing–a–long chorus, and "Only Wanna Be With You." While these familiar songs prove pleasing enough, I was more impressed with the tracks Hootie left off of Kootchypop.

Cracked Rear View gets off to a powerful start with "Hannah Jane," an upbeat rocker with catchy riffs and carried by the vocals of Darius Rucker, the heart and soul of the band. Rucker's voice booms throughout the album with a country–influenced sound which complements the band nicely.

Hootie & the Blowfish are a very good band, but their downside, in this, the era of Green Day and Smashing Pumpkins, is that they are not weird, not especially loud, and not even terribly unique in their songwriting.

Another pounding guitar and vocal driven track is "Drowning," an anti–racism message with lyrics that take aim at the state of race relations, especially in South Carolina. Rucker cries, "Why is there a rebel flag hanging from the state house wall?" Once again the band plays competently and cohesively, but it is Rucker who steals the show with his front–the–gut style of singing.

Cracked Rear View is dedicated to the memory of Rucker's mother, and her passing is the subject of at least two songs, "Going Home" and "Not Even the Trees." The latter of which is the best song on the album. Aside from the excessive "sha la la" chorus (didn't Counting Crows' Adam Duritz get enough ragging for this?), "Going Home" is a pleasant enough tune, though a bit more downbeat than many of the aforementioned tracks.

"Not Even the Trees" is a heart–tugging ballad which somehow manages to keep from sounding sappy. The feelings of loneliness and loss expressed by Rucker here are obviously genuine, and the song is lyrically one of the strongest on the album, ending with the painful realization that "No one's listening to me, not even the trees."

Hootie & the Blowfish are a very good band, but their downside, in this, the era of Green Day and Smashing Pumpkins, is that they are not weird, not especially loud, and not even terribly unique in their songwriting. They are talented musicians, from Rucker to guitarist Mark Bryan, bassist Dean Feller, and drummer Jim Sonefeld.

Their sound is not "cutting edge" or "alternative" by any definition, though their sound is a bit different from typical radio fare, if even because it is so simple and radio–friendly.

Cracked Rear View is a valiant debut effort. Led by a brilliant lead singer, Hootie & the Blowfish seem ready to take their South Carolina show on the road. With a bit more lyrical punch to match their instrumental strength, Hootie's next album could really put Columbia, S.C., on the map. For now, however, Cracked Rear View will do just fine. A–

■ mystery

continued from page 6

television, in novels or in commercials, a void Hart believes devalues the generation by making it almost invisible.

With the population getting older and staying more active, however, she feels that is changing. "I think it's going to be a great time to be older."

Hard–boiled American male detectives and genteel British women have long been mystery favorites. But a trio of tough female private eyes has shaken up the club in the last 15 years: Marcia Muller's Sharon McCone, Sue Grafton's Kinsey Millhone and Sara Peretsky's V.I. Warshawski.

Hart says their work made publishers more receptive to the introduction of a strong older woman in a traditional mystery. The author took time while visiting the Washington area to do a benefit for the National Council on Aging, which has been predictably pleased with her depiction of a vigorous retiree.

"I think it's very important for people to realize it isn't age that diminishes human capacity," Hart says. "It's the accident of illness or unemployment or being dismissed by society."

In Hart's world, at least, people dismiss Henrie O at their own risk.

■ exhibits

continued from page 6

unable to find meaningful work within the field. She believes that people will have one of two ideas after viewing her show.

"One will either walk away with a feeling of revolt against the status quo, or revolted by the woman who brought up the dirt about the higher education system."

The Graduate Lounge is located in the Campus Center across from the Blue Wall Cafe at UMass. The Lounge is open from 9 a.m. Monday through Friday.

SEMESTER MEMBERSHIP only $109
The GYM
AT MOUNTAIN FARMS MALL
Rt. 9 - Hadley • 584-2175

PEKING GARDEN
A MANDARIN & SZECHUAN RESTAURANT
Open 7 Days a week
20 % OFF MEALS FRI. AND SAT. EVENING WITH COMEDY SHOW with this ad
Comedy Shows Friday and Saturday at 8:30pm with dinner
Monday -Thursday Dinner Buffet $5.99 Sunday Brunch $6.99
586-1202 VISA FREE PARKING 北京 ON RT. 9 HADLEY MASTER CARD

Get A Life with Jesus Christ John 5:12
Alliance Christian Fellowship
A UMass RSO since 1964
BIBLE STUDY
DISCIPLESHIP
OUTREACH
TIMEOUT FELLOWSHIP FRIDAYS • 7 PM CAMPUS CENTER

100% BEEF
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
Great Burgs! Great Deal!
QUARTER POUNDERS • OPEN YEAR ROUND
585-0241 ROUTE 9 HADLEY MA
PETE'S DRIVE-IN

TOTAL FITNESS WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
AEROBICS: Funk, REEBOK STEP, Hi/Low, Boxercise, Yoga
STRENGTH: Keiser Air Power, NAUTILUS, Olympic weights, GRAVITRON, The Treadwall
CARDIO: STAIRMASTERS, LifeCycles • LifeRower, Treadmills • BioCycles, Climb Max • NordicTrack, TrueClimb• VersaClimber
SEMESTER SPECIAL $139 four months
Amherst Athletic Club | 460 West St. | South Amherst 256-0080

T.G.I.'ts FRIDAY
Every Friday: $2.00 per game (or) $1.75 per game with a ticket stub from a recent sporting event
LIVE D.J. Mike Perkins
584-4830
Bring this ad and get 75¢ off of a shoe rental
Northampton Bowl
525 Pleasant St. • Northampton

Welcome back to lecture halls, all-nighters, pizza breakfasts, and Kinko's.

with this coupon
2½¢ copies
Offer applies to self-serve, black and white 81/2" x 11" copies on 20lb. white bond. One coupon per customer per visit. Not valid with other offers. Good through October 31, 1994 at the Kinko's listed.
kinko's the copy center
AMHERST: 220 N. Pleasant St. 253-2543 Open 24 Hours
NORTHAMPTON: 34 Bridge St. 584-5303 HOURS: 8am to 12

GRADUATE WOMEN'S NETWORK
Graduate Women's Network
CORDIALLY INVITES
all graduate women
TO A RECEPTION
ON SUNDAY, THE 18TH OF SEPTEMBER
NINETEEN HUNDRED AND NINETY-FOUR
FROM SEVEN TO NINE O'CLOCK IN THE EVENING
at the Campus Center
10TH FLOOR
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS
AMHERST, MASSACHUSETTS
R.S.V.P. (413) 545-5312

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS!!
Charlie's tavern
DRINK SPECIALS
16oz. Bottles of Budweiser $1.99
Jumbo Jim Beam and Coke $1.95
Giant 22oz. Drafts!!
Over 40 Kinds of BREAD & MICROBREWED BEER
FOOD SPECIALS
Monday 10¢ Mozzarella Sticks
Tuesday 10¢ Wild or Hot Buffalo Wings
Wednesday 25¢ Pizza Slices OR 1/2# Popcorn Shrimp for 99¢
Thursday 10¢ Chicken Nuggets

Big E boasts many events for fans of all ages

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

The Eastern States Exposition, better known as the Big E, will open its gates to the public on September 16. The fair, located in West Springfield, has been extended by five days and will now span 17 days. A recently completed $3.5 million renovation project has improved the grounds and added a new kids' park.
New food has been added to the menus with the expansion of the food court. Acts vary in interest, including a closing performance by Willie Nelson.
Activities range from pig races to amusement park rides, and hundreds of vendors will be set up to peddle their wares.
NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN
Bruce Brynjarski rinses off his family's concession stand, the Gingerbread House, at the Big E fairgrounds.

Where can you see Willie Nelson sing "On the Road Again," milk a Holstein cow and munch on a few apple fritters, all in the same day?

For seventeen days, starting this weekend, you can do all this and much more at the 73rd edition of the Eastern States Exposition, in West Springfield.

From September 16 to October 2, "New England's Great State Fair" will be open to millions of people looking to do everything from shopping to riding on the Ferris Wheel.

The Big E kicks off opening day with six–time Grammy Award–winning, giant of the polka music world, Jimmy Sturr, who will be playing two free shows at 2 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. on the Miller Genuine Draft Stage.

Highlighting the opening night will be a display of fireworks by Zambelli International at 9:30 p.m.

Fireworks return to the Big E for the first time in decades to help celebrate the first–ever 17–day schedule.

Featured in the Big E concert series is Country and Western star Willie Nelson, who will perform one show at 7 p.m. on Oct. 2.

Other performers playing on the Main Stage – Peabo Bryson, Sept. 17; Louise Mandrell, Sept. 18; Darryl and Don Ellis, Sept. 19–22; Danny Gans, Sept. 23; Pam Trillis, Sept. 24; The Oak Ridge Boys, Sept. 25; Victoria Shaw, Sept 26–29; Michael Doucet, Sept. 30; Suzanne Somers, Oct. 1. Showtimes are at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m.

Also performing at the Big E are Shangri Las, Sept 16–20; The Contours, Sept. 21–26; The Crystals, Sept. 27–Oct. 2. Showtimes are at 12 and 4 p.m on the Main Stage.

There will be a special performance by the 80–member Bethany Assembly Sanctuary Choir and 14–piece Orchestra, on Oct. 2 at 2 p.m. All shows are free with the price of admission.

The Big E Circus, sponsored by Coca Cola, returns under the Big Top Sept. 16–Oct. 2. Mark Karoly is back with his elephant and horseback riding stunts and "circus clown" antics. Karoly will perform daily with an additional show scheduled for Saturdays.

The Pirates of the Caribbean High Dive Show invade the Big E on the North End of the Avenue of States. The Pirates four shows daily are sponsored by Milk Promotion Services.

If you are interested in comedy head for the State Line Gazebo in Storrowtown Village. The slapstick comedy of Disorderly Conduct will entertain crowds Sept. 16–25 and the juggling routine of Bounce & Ooo La La will perform Sept. 26–Oct. 2.

Also performing at the State Line Gazebo on special weekend shows are– Rondinelli's Festival Band, Sept. 17–18; The Land of Yo, Sept. 24–25; Julie & Brownie, Oct. 1–2.

The Outdoor Arena at the Big E will feature Joie Chitwood's Thrill Show, Sept. 16–25. The show includes Hollywood–style stunts, the Chevy Thunder "jet engined" pick–up truck and motorcycle and auto percision driving.

Following the Thrill Show, Scheer's Lumberjack Show will be chopping down performances at the Outdoor Arena, Sept. 26–Oct. 2. The show features speed sawing, pole climbing, log rolling and other events.

The Big E wraps up the 17 days of events on Oct. 1 and 2 with riding and roping at The Big E Championship Rodeo in the Coliseum with two shows on both days.

The Big E will also cater to the kids. A special children's entertainment area will be featured at Mallary Plaza with both farm and exotic animals to feed and pet at Commerford's Petting Zoo, and the characters of McDonald's performing on the McDonaldland Stage.

This year, the Big E's premier exhibit is the White House Replica, located in the New England Center. The Replica, sponsored by Big Y SuperMarkets, is a 20–foot x 60–foot exhibit which models the Clinton White House in minute detail, all the way down to "Socks" the cat.

The Big E also features the the Dromendary Camel Hitch, the only camel team in North America, and the first of its kind since Ringling Bros., Barnum and Bailey hitched a team near the turn of the century. The Camel Hitch can be seen in the Daily Parade near the Giant Slide.

As always, the Big E offers an abundance of food, livestock and merchandise.

The Big E offers New England's finest livestock extravaganza, featuring prize–winning animals from all over the region. Farm–a–Rama features the Chick Hatchery, Clydesdales and 4–H and FFA exhibits.

There will be no trouble finding something to eat at this year's Big E. The Italian Festival, near Flag Plaza, will offer everything from pizza to spaghetti.

The Hofbrauhaus Alpine Festival is perfect for those with a taste for German food and Bavarian entertainment and there is also a new Food Court on the south side of the fairgrounds.

If you are just looking to get a taste of New England, walk the Avenue of States. The exhibits feature replicas of all six state capitols and foods common to each of the six states.

For those fairgoers looking to buy, the Better Living Center offers consumers 120,000 square feet of new and exciting inventions crafts, exhibits and merchandise.

The Big E will host four events in the Coliseum: Eastern States Exposition Horse Show, Sept 16–18 and 21–25; 4–H Horse Show, Sept. 23–25; Pulling Contests, Sept. 26–27; Draft Horse Show, Sept. 28–29.

Other events happening at the Big E include: Daily Parade, 4:30 p.m. beginning at the Avenue of States; Spam Recipe Contest, Sept 26 at 11a.m. in the Trustees Tent; Fleischmann's Date Bread Contest, Sept. 27 at 1 p.m. in the Trustees Tent; The Jeep/Eagle Exhibit, at New England Park; Ice Carving Demonstrations sponsored by Polar Ice Cap; and Magic Midway.

■ 911

continued from page 1

HMOs will not pay for an emergency visit to the hospital for non– emergency care.

McBride said a single trip in an ambulance costs about $200.

Of the 400 annual student ambulance transports in the past, McBride said over 95 percent of those transports were problems that could have been dealt with at health services.

"We are trying to make the best of a situation that doesn't have too much logic to it," McBride said. "We are also trying to save students time and money."

McBride advises students who do not have a major emergency to call the non–emergency number at the University Health Services for medical advise at 549–2671 ext. 229.

■ Haiti

continued from page 1

But important preparations were still under way.

The Pentagon will ask for volunteers from the reserve forces in preparation for action in Haiti, a Pentagon official said. The official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said several hundred people would be needed to bolster the active duty force in specific areas – such as civil affairs, military police, logistic and transportation units.

Calls spread through Congress for the president not to invade, or at the least, to let Congress vote first on the issue.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., who, as chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee receives classified briefings from top military officials, called an invasion a "virtual certainty."

Nunn urged Clinton to present Haiti's military junta with an ultimatum setting a deadline for its members to leave voluntarily. In return the United Nations would supervise free elections before the end of the year and President Jean-Bertrand Aristide would return to Haiti only after those elections.

"I know this is not a perfect solution, but neither is a full-scale U.S.-led military invasion," Nunn said. "There are all sorts of problems with that option which we seem to be heading for, not military problems, not problems in the very beginning but problems once we're there."

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, said there's no emergency warranting such a drastic step as invasion.

■ Roosevelt

continued from page 1

in the law were provisions requiring uniform high school graduation standards and standards for teacher performance.

Recent polls show Roosevelt ahead of other Democratic candidates Michael Barrett and George Bachrach. That the November election is shaping up as a race between a Republican and a centrist Democrat is indicative of shifts in the nation's political beliefs under Reagan and Bush, according to University of Massachusetts political science professor George Sulzner.

"We had 12 years of Republican rule in Washington...being liberal or progressive was a liability in elections," said Sulzner. "The country has shifted to the right politically. Those trends have been reflected at the state level."

Roosevelt supports the death penalty and term limits for legislators, and is pro–choice. He also opposes gambling casinos on American Indian tribal lands, and supported the graduated income tax proposed on the November ballot.

Roosevelt lives in Boston and has earned both bachelor and law degrees from Harvard University. He's the great– grandson of Theodore Roosevelt, the 26th President of the United States.

On the day of the apocalypse Gail finally revealed to Bridget that she was the one to steal her 'Mrs. Pretty' make-up kit in the 3rd grade.
Mass Daily Collegian
"Make America Now"

Designer Cuts Perfumes
Shear Bliss
Full Service Holistic Salon is having a School Daze Special
Free Aromatherapy 8oz. Shampoo with every Color or Perm until October 15th.
Save $11.00 !
What you get with every Shear Bliss Haircut
• Scalp Analysis & Aromatherapy Scalp & Neck Massage
• The cut you asked for
• Natural Shampoo & Conditioning
• Finished style & lesson if necessary
• Purescription
• Men shave consultation/women make-up touch up Tues. - Sat.
253-2322
116 So. Amherst - Accross From Dairy Mart On UMass/Hampshire Bus Line
Stress Relieving Scalp Massage Body & Facial Waxing Holistic Fabulous Facials Nail & Brow Tints Full Nail Service

UNIVERSITY MEN
FRATERNITIES?
Did You Ever Wonder About Fraternity Life?
ΑΔΡ ΑΕΠ ΑΧΡ
ΔΥ ΔΧ ΦΣΚ
ΦΚΣ ΦΜΔ ΛΧΑ
ΠΚΑ ΘΧ ΣΑΜ
ΣΦΕ ΖΒΤ ΖΨ
September 19th - 22nd
MONDAY 8:00 PM - 10:00 PM
TUESDAY 8:00 PM - 10:00 PM
WEDNESDAY 8:00 PM - 10:00 PM
THURSDAY 8:00 PM - 10:00 PM
RUSH EVENTS WILL BE HELD AT EVERY HOUSE ALL FOUR NIGHTS.
During these events you will be able to find out about Fraternity life.
The Academic Aspect
The Athletic Aspect
The Leadership Aspect
The Social Aspect
For Further Information call Greek Affairs or call Taylor/Rush Chairman 549-1409

EARTHFOODS CAFE
is a student-managed, collectively operated vegetarian restaurant located in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union Building.
We are open from 11:00 am - 3:00 pm Mon - Fri starting September 19th.
AND WE'RE HIRING!!!
We're looking for a diverse group of responsible work study and non-work study students to fill close to 15 worker-management positions. A 2 semester commitment is required of all applicants.
Applications are available in the CSB Office beginning September 13th and are due back by Thursday, September 22nd by 12:00 noon.

COUNTRY MUSIC
Pull Your Wagons into the Campus Center Auditorium
8 p.m.
Tracy and Co.
Live!
The Best In Top 40 Country Music Hits
Thurs. Sept. 15
Only $2.00
Sponsored by First Week '94 Student Activities

PLANNING TO OBSERVE YOM KIPPUR?
MAKE SURE TO NOTIFY INSTRUCTORS WELL IN ADVANCE
if you will miss classes. If you experience any difficulties, please contact the department head or call the Ombuds Office at 545-0867

Health care debate coming to Amherst

By Emily Marino
Collegian Staff

The National Health Care debate will be brought to our own neighborhood, thanks to the Amherst League of Women Voters and The Kaiser Family Foundation.

Five-college students are encouraged to participate in "Citizens Voice for Citizen's Choice: A National Satellite Town Meeting on Health Care Reform" Friday afternoon at Amherst College.

From 2-4 p.m. in the Mead Art Center of Stirn Auditorium, students will be able to view and actually participate in a nationally-broadcasted debate about health care reform.

People who wish to participate in tomorrow's broadcast conference should arrive at Amherst College at 1:30 p.m.

Health care policy experts, elected officials, and citizens across the country will discuss the issues facing Congress and the nation in the broadcast, which is sponsored by the League of Women Voters of Amherst and the Kaiser Family Foundation, an independent health care philanthropy.

Joan Flood Ashwell, president of the Amherst League of Women Voters, said that the primary purpose of the local satellite conference is to let participants know where Congress stands on the issue of health care reform in spite of many mixed messages.

"I don't think that anyone really knows what is going on [in terms of health care reform] in Congress," said Ashwell. The organization's president also said that rather than advocate specific legislation, the League of Women Voters hopes to emphasize education regarding health care reform.

Cooperative efforts from both the National League of Women Voters and the Kaiser Family Foundation created an educational fund. The educational fund is, in effect, the "citizen education arm of the League of Women Voters," according to Ashwell.

Attendants of the satellite conference will be able to participate in the town meeting by using a special "1-800" number to ask questions and voice concerns. Health Care Reform information kits will also be distributed, as well as pre-paid postcards to allow participants to voice their opinions to their representatives in Washington.

Ashwell was unsure about the expected turnout, but said that students from all over the Valley, as well as local coalitions that have been actively involved in the health care reform debate were invited to participate.

"In the Valley, this has been a big issue," Ashwell said, and added that the Amherst League of Women Voters has been active in the debate for as many as five years. "I suspect there is more interest here than in other parts of the country."

The Amherst League of Women Voters was founded in 1939 by members of the Northampton league and of an Amherst book club.

The organization has 268 members, approximately 50 of which are men. Ashwell emphasized that the league welcomes any person who is a registered voter in Amherst to join.

The league of women voters is best known for their voter service, as well as campaign support. Ashwell said that the organization is interested in Massachusetts fiscal policy, in the state legislature (they have filed six bills this year, and are waiting for responses), and in the graduated income tax. The league is also currently fighting limited access to ballots.

Scott's task forces tackling ignorance

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

Chancellor David K. Scott is attempting to open communication lines between different special interest groups, rendering the wide array of task forces on campus more efficient.

Scott has been meeting with nine groups representing multiculturalism, diversity and civility. By doing so, he is trying to raise awareness of the activities, concerns and different perspectives of the other specialized task forces at UMass.

"With a multicultural community, there are increased possibilities for misunderstandings, which is why communication is so important," Scott said.

The Chancellor also said, "The best way of advancing the University and making progress with its issues is to build a common agenda."

"There is a general agreement among the groups that the system needs more coherence and direction," Grant Ingle, director of human relations, said.

On July 14, Scott met with the nine group entourage to hear about the recent accomplishments, upcoming projects and agenda's for the next year.

He urged group representatives to offer suggestions on improving relations on such a diverse campus and individuals had the opportunity to voice concerns.

"The meeting involved good questions and interesting discussion," Ingle said. "I think all of the feedback helped everyone learn a lot about what the other groups are doing."

The nine groups that are tending to Scott's attempts to improve relations are: the Strategic Planning Task Force on Diversity an Multiculturalism, the Affirmative Action Advisory Board, Chancellor's Commission on Civility in Human Relations, the Chancellor's Task Force on Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Matters, the Chancellor's Task Force on Jewish Awareness and Anti-Semitism (the newest task force), the Faculty Senate Council on the Status of Minorities, the Faculty Senate Council on the Status of Women, the Human Relations Council and the Multicultural Advisory Board.

The Task Force on Diversity and Multiculturalism stressed that the common goal of all the groups in attendance at the July 14 meeting should be to ultimately have an internalized awareness of multicultural issues.

Scott said the recommendation "mirrored" what he was trying to do.

He is talking about organizing speakers and forums to discuss controversial issues from a variety of different angles, and hopes to hold more meetings similar to the one held on July 14.

In the past, advice and recommendations went forward, but no one ever followed through on them, Ingle said.

By increasing awareness of other groups' activity on campus, Scott foresees less overlap in tasks, a smaller number of task forces and, overall, more efficiency.

Multiple advisory boards have been created without examining the functions of those that are already in existence, Ingle said. This kind of miscommunication causes areas of overlap.

Ingle, a member of the Human Relations Council, said that one of their major objectives is to make sure that information gets networked across the system.

There are some faculty members that are skeptical of Scott's plan, because they feel that members from certain academic disciplines may not agree with the diversity issues at hand, according to the Campus Chronicle.

Scott feels that the more communication there is, the better the chances of a truly intellectual debate.

Events explore wide range of issues

Groups hoping to combat discrimination, abuse

By Emily Marino
Collegian Staff

Several University of Massachusetts organizations are sponsoring conferences, lectures, productions and receptions to kick off another semester of combatting abuse and discrimination.

Through the end of the month, events sponsored by the Chancellor's Multicultural Advisory Board and the Department of Psychology, Everywoman's Center, the Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Studies, the New World Theater and the Department of Women's Studies will explore a number of issues including gay and lesbian life, intergroup relations, racism, stereotypes and self-esteem.

In addition, Everywoman's Center will sponsor a Resource Referral Program, as well as support groups for women who have been sexually abused or raped.

September 19: Today is the application deadline for Counselor/Advocates and Educator/Advocates Against Violence against Women for Everywoman's Center. The 60 -hour, comprehensive training for these positions will be Sept. 24-Nov. 17. Campus and community volunteers are welcome.

September 21: The Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Studies will host Latina comedian and lesbian artist Marga Gomez as part of its new Brown Bag season. Gomez will offer insight into her humor and personal background. Known for her hilarious rhetoric addressing "sexuality, Latina/Latino lore, queer politics, Catholic guilt and an ambition to make the world a more tolerant place," Gomez will speak at noon on the ninth floor of the Campus Center. Check posted schedule for room number.

Everywoman's Center will sponsor the Resource Referral Program, a feminist-based information and referral source for women in the University and Community. Volunteers will provide, up-date and develop information on a rand of topics of concern to women. Applications to volunteer are due today - contact Sandy Mandel in Wilder Hall, 545-0883). Orientation, on-going training and support is provided to volunteers.

The New WORLD Theater presents Cheya, a performance-in-progress featuring the talents of Marga Gomez. Gomez will explore her relationship with her father, a Cuban comedian, as well as satirize minority stereotypes. A discussion will follow the performance. Show runs Sept. 21- 24 at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

September 22: The social psychology division in the Department of Psychology teams up with the Chancellor's Multicultural Advisory Board to present the "Racism, the Problem and Response: Seven Social Psychologists speak out 1994 Conference," today through Sept. 24. Thomas Pettigrew of the University of California, Santa Cruz, will speak on "Intergroup prejudice and discrimination on the campus" at 6 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium.

September 23: John Dovidio of Colgate University will speak about "Racism among the well-intentioned," an exploration of unconscious negative feelings about African Americans and other "minority" groups, that are expressed in subtle, indirect and rationalizable ways. Campus Center Auditorium, 12:15 p.m.

"To identify or not to identify: Preserving, ignoring, and sometimes destroying social identity," will be presented by Audrey Murrell of the University of Pittsburgh. Murrell will discuss the ways in which people come to identify with social groups, what inhibits people from being attached to certain groups and how individuals deal with a threat to their group identities. Campus Center Auditorium, 1:30 p.m.

David Sears of the University of California, Los Angeles will discuss the political arena in which modern racism operates through policy and candidate choices that symbolize racial concerns in "The symbolic politics of racism." CC Auditorium, 2:45 p.m.

September 24: Also as part of this lecture series, Jennifer Crocker of the State University of New York at Buffalo will present "Racism and self esteem." Crocker will discuss the differing reactions to racism, evidence and an explanation. CC Auditorium, 1 p.m.

"The rocky road to positive intergroup relations," a discussion of obstacles to positive intergroup relations and the challenges associated with managing intergroup interactions will be given. Patricia Devine of the University of Wisconsin, Madison will speak at 2:15 p.m. in the CC Auditorium.

The final speaker in this series will be Claude Steele of Stanford University, who will discuss the relation of stereotyping and apprehension of intellectual testing. "Under suspicion of inability: Stereotype vulnerability and intellectual functioning" will be presented at 3:30 p.m. in the CC Auditorium.

September 26: Today is the initial meeting of the Child Sexual Abuse Survivors Support Group, sponsored by Everywoman's Center. The group for adult women survivors of incest and other forms of child sexual abuse meets Mondays from 7-9 p.m., and runs for 10 weeks. Lynne Davis facilitates the free, confidential meetings. Screening interview deadline has passed, but call 545-0800 for more information.

September 28: Author and Producer Warren Blumenfeld will discuss his documentary film Pink Triangle at noon as part of the Program for Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual Studies' Brown Bag series. Check Campus Center posting for room number on the ninth floor.

September 29: Today is the first day that Everywoman's Center's Rape Survivors Support Group will meet. Meeting takes place from 7:30-9:30 p.m., and will run for 10 weeks for adult women survivors of rape. Facilitated by Cat Chapin, LICSW, meetings are confidential. Deadline to join has passed, but call 545-0800 for more information.

September 30: Everywoman's Center presents "In Our Own Image: The Portrayal of Women of Color in the Media." The conference will address the historically sexist and/or degrading images and words used by the Media to portray women of color. The impact of these negative images and words on the lives of women of color, as well as positive attempts being made to change the situation will also be discussed. Call 545-0883 for more information.

Other events related to the Second Annual Reception for Women of Color include the following. Pane' discussion at 1 p.m. in CC room 101; film Yuri Kochiyama: A Passion for Justice shown at 2 p.m. in the CC Auditorium; Keynote speaker Yuri Kochiyama to present in CC room 165 at 3 p.m.; a reception will be held at 5 p.m. in the CC Auditorium, and at 8 p.m. The Queens Garden will be presented (see next paragraph) in Bowker Auditorium.

The New WORLD Theater presents The Queens Garden, a solo urban odyssey about two young lovers taking diverging paths, one as a drug dealer and the other a radical teacher and organizer. Tonight at 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium.

LSAT +7.5
GMAT +72
GRE +214
MCAT +6

Small Classes, Documented Highest Results, Guaranteed.

413 584-6849

Course Sites:
Mt. Holyoke College, Smith College, Williams College, MCAT - Umass.

THE PRINCETON REVIEW
We Score More

ETS and Princeton University are not affiliated with The Princeton Review

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS CLUB

Join now for our 15 week Semester Special ($169) & get a free HFC T-Shirt!

The Area's Most Complete Club • 256-6446
90 Gatehouse Road
"Off Rt. 9 2 miles East of Town Center"
• PVTA bus route to Rolling Green • • pool • aerobics • aqua-aerobics • • steps • nautilus • racquetball • • free weights • jacuzzi • sauna • • massage • bikes • tennis • • rowers • treadmills •

ACCENT

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES
in
Information Systems

We're looking for a few highly motivated people with a strong background in computer-related disciplines who want a career in Information Systems.

If you're the kind of person who is interested in rotational assignments, exposure to senior management, classroom development, and you like the idea of having input into the direction of your career, the ACCENT Program may be the right opportunity for you.

We'll be on campus with Travelers' Financial Management Development Program (FMDP) for:

Undergraduate Business Club's CAREER DAY:
Wednesday, October 12, 1994
INTERVIEWS:
Thursday, October 27, 1994

To be considered, bring your resume to the SOM Placement Office by September 19th or stop by with any questions you have on the ACCENT Program.

The Travelers Insurance Companies
An Equal Opportunity Employer

International

Israelis brace for hot weather on Yom Kippur

By Ron Kampeas
Associated Press

JERUSALEM - The weather's boiling. Politicians are contemplating a wrenching return of territory to Arabs. It seems a particularly apt time for Israelis to turn to fast and atonement. Temperatures in Jerusalem and Tel Aviv soared to the mid-90s, making the prospect of abstaining from all foods and liquids from Wednesday evening through sunset Thursday especially daunting this Yom Kippur.

"I'll drink a lot beforehand," said office manager Miriam Neremberg, 28. "And my synagogue is air-conditioned."

The Jerusalem Post told readers to salt their pre-fast meal to counteract sodium depletion from sweating and quoted a nutritionist warning readers to avoid the trek to the Western Wall, Judaism's most holy site.

An army statement said the military chaplain issued an edict allowing soldiers on duty to drink water because of the heat. Yom Kippur ends the 10 "Days of Awe" launched by Rosh Hashana, the Jewish New Year. The period is set aside for asking forgiveness, with the final day reserved for prayer seeking atonement from God.

"If you haven't asked your fellows for forgiveness by Yom Kippur, the repentance isn't complete," said Rabbi Bezalel Borstein, a teacher at Jerusalem's BMT seminary.

Shimon Baron, secretary of the Elron collective farm on the Golan Heights, said the 350-strong membership usually gathers on Yom Kippur for a mutual "accounting of souls," where members ask forgiveness from one another.

But this year, the settlement took the extraordinary step of organizing a political meeting, after hearing reports Wednesday that they would be the first evacuated under a treaty with Syria. Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin spoke last week of a "slight withdrawal" from the heights.

"We asked the prime minister's office for a denial," Baron said. "They wouldn't give one." He said the settlers could be demonstrating by Thursday night, right after the holiday.

The Golan is closely identified with Yom Kippur because of the 1973 Mideast war, which began on the fast day.

The entire country shuts down on the holiday, with even international flights barred. The army closed Israel to Palestinians from the West Bank and Gaza Strip for 48 hours around the holiday.

Stores throughout Israel were filled with last-minute shoppers, toting bags packed with pre-fast foods and 25-hour candles to honor departed loved ones.

Road links Croatia, Bosnia; symbolizes alliance

ZAGREB, Croatia (AP) - Croatian and Bosnian Muslim leaders, seeking to shore up a faltering federation, agreed Wednesday to open a key road linking Croatia and Bosnia and to create joint municipal authorities in Bosnia.

The measures were part of efforts to ease growing tensions six months after Bosnian Croats and Muslims stopped fighting over territory in central Bosnia.

The federation agreement, signed in March following U.S. prodding, is between Bosnian Croats and Bosnia's Muslim-led government. But neighboring Croatia figures prominently because of its influence on Bosnian Croats.

Little of the agreement has been enacted, due to lingering mutual mistrust. But the accord has opened up Bosnian government territory to shipments of illicit arms through Croatia, vastly improved food supplies and halted the fighting between the two sides.

Serbs, who control about 70 percent of Bosnia, have rejected U.N. peace plans and want nothing to do with the federation. They have sought to merge land they hold with Serb-dominated Yugoslavia, creating a "Greater Serbia."

Fighting in Bosnia broke out in April 1992, after the Serb minority revolted against a vote by Bosnian Croats and Muslims to secede from Yugoslavia. The fighting has left an estimated 200,000 people dead or missing.

Following two days of talks with Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic, Croatia's president, Franjo Tudjman, said the meeting was "a big step forward" in implementing the federation agreement.

In a joint statement, the two delegations, which also included Bosnian Croat leaders, stressed the "strategic interests" linking Croatia, Bosnian Croats and Muslims.

But Tudjman and the Bosnian Muslim leaders apparently did not agree on the issue of exempting Muslim-led Bosnian government troops from an international arms embargo on all former Yugoslav republics.

"We remain firm in our standpoint that the embargo should be lifted," Izetbegovic said, adding "Croatia has the right to their own opinion."

Tudjman said last week he was against lifting the embargo because that would escalate fighting in Bosnia with Serb fighters. The United States has been at loggerheads with key NATO allies over its plans to lift the arms embargo against Bosnian government forces if Bosnian Serbs fail to agree to an international peace plan by mid-October.

Britain and France, which both have large peacekeeping contingents in Bosnia, have said they would withdraw their troops if the embargo is lifted. Russia has also said it would pull out its soldiers.

Before returning to Sarajevo, Izetbegovic told reporters the two sides had agreed to establish joint local authorities for some municipalities within 30 days and to set up district authorities a month later.

They also agreed to open the road from Metkovic in Croatia to Doboj in north-central Bosnia.

Jadranko Prlic, the federation's defense minister, said he would submit a proposal within two weeks outlining defense plans for the federation.

The federation still lacks a functioning government and a unified military command as well as an economic plan and a strategy for repatriating hundreds of thousands of refugees scattered by last year's Muslim-Croat fighting.

U.N. officials fear the federation could collapse if it does not keep moving forward. Tension has increased recently, particularly around Mostar, in the southwest of the republic. Mostar was the scene of fierce Muslim-Croat fighting before the federation accord. Elsewhere in Bosnia, government troops appeared to have gained the initiative in battles against Serbs for control of a northwestern pocket of territory.

IRA prisoners back cease-fire as Protestants turn on each other

By Shawn Pogatchnik
Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland - Senior IRA prisoners in Northern Ireland's top-security prison say they support the group's cease-fire as a lasting step away from violence, but expect political concessions in return.

British Prime Minister John Major said Wednesday he still wasn't sure whether the Irish Republican Army's 2-week-old truce would last. He is seeking firm assurances from Sinn Fein, the IRA's political partners, that the truce is permanent before talks could begin.

Meanwhile, a night of street violence in Belfast between the mainly Protestant police and hard-line Protestant "loyalists" starkly demonstrated how the IRA's gesture has divided sentiments in Northern Ireland's pro-British majority.

Several people were injured and 10 vehicles hijacked and torched late Tuesday in clashes that began after officers separated Protestants and Catholics trading taunts and punches at a court hearing for a Catholic accused of attempting to murder a prominent loyalist.

Protestant political leaders met police commanders Wednesday and complained afterward that heavy-handed police tactics would ensure more violence. Police promised an investigation, but said civilians had been hurt on starting trouble.

Hard-liners within the pro-British Protestant community suspect the IRA, their traditional enemies, must already have won secret concessions from Britain to make them end their 24-year campaign against British rule of the province.

The reality seems to be more complex - that Sinn Fein, long isolated politically, has found faith in a political process that for the first time has won them allies among moderate Catholic nationalists, Irish government leaders and American officials. Sean Lynch, the IRA's commanding officer in the Maze prison southwest of Belfast, said his men want success for the "unarmed strategy," which he said would last "in all circumstances." "The big question emerging now is not does the republican movement intend to keep the peace, but does the British government want peace? What bold and courageous initiatives has it taken to match the truly historic nature of the republican decision?" Lynch wrote in a letter published Wednesday.

The IRA prisoners are influential opinion-formers within republican ranks, and were consulted before the IRA announcement Aug. 31 of "a complete cessation of military operations."

The IRA and Sinn Fein leaders are seeking the early release of their side's prisoners, many of whom are not due for release until well into the next century. Sinn Fein also insists Britain end the 6-year-old ban on broadcasting the voices of IRA supporters. Protesters on Wednesday picketed the offices of the British Broadcasting Corp. and Ulster Television in Londonderry, Northern Ireland's second-largest city, appealing for an end to the ban.

Israel and Syria move closer to an agreement

By Karin Laub
Associated Press Writer

JERUSALEM - Israel and Syria are moving toward an agreement after months of deadlocked peace talks, Israel's chief of military intelligence said in an interview published Wednesday.

"I think that the near future may afford us the ability to bridge the gaps," in positions, Maj. Gen. Uri Saguy, reportedly involved in secret talks with Syria, told the Yedioth Ahronoth newspaper.

Saguy refused to give details or say through which channel the two sides were negotiating. Formal talks in Washington were suspended earlier this year, but Israel and Syria reportedly have established a back channel involving the two nations' ambassadors to Washington, radio said.

An Israeli official confirmed reports Wednesday that Syria has not rejected outright a proposal involving an Israeli troop withdrawal on the Golan Heights in two stages, but that President Hafez Assad attached several conditions Israel found unacceptable. The official spoke on condition of anonymity.

The strategic Golan Heights, captured by Israel in 1967 and later annexed, is the key to any peace between Israel and Syria. Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin has offered to withdraw immediately from a slice of the plateau, to be followed by a three-year testing of normalization, including the exchange of ambassadors and free trade and travel. Only then would the final line of withdrawal be negotiated, Rabin has said.

Uri Dromi, head of the Government Press Office, said Wednesday that Israel's offer included pulling back troops up to 1 1/4 mile from their present position, without uprooting any Jewish settlements. The Syrians, however, insist that at least one Jewish settlement be dismantled in the first stage, according to the government official who confirmed a report by Israel radio.

The Syrians also want withdrawal to be completed within two years, before the next Israeli elections scheduled for mid-1996, the report said. Assad apparently is worried that Israel's hawkish opposition could regain power before the withdrawal is completed, the radio said.

The Syrians said only toward the end of the withdrawal process would they exchange ambassadors, but not allow free trade and travel, the report said.

The Syrians reiterated demands that Israel in the end give back all of the Golan, captured in the 1967 Middle East war. Israeli hard-liners claim Rabin already committed Israel to a complete pullout.

Rabin and other government officials deny the claims.

Asked why Israeli-Syrian negotiations were moving forward after months of deadlock, Saguy said Israel's looming 1996 elections and the progress in its talks with the Palestinians and Jordan convinced Assad it was time to move.

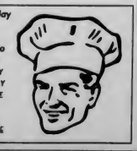
Undergraduate Football Season Tickets
will be available for pickup starting today from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. at the Curry Hicks Cage box office with a valid I.D.

— Eastern Mountain Sports® —
Don't miss the annual EMS Sidewalk Sale!
Save up to 75% off original prices Sept. 15-18 at Eastern Mountain Sports in the Hampshire Mall!
If you love the great outdoors, you won't want to miss the annual EMS Sidewalk Sale. Four area EMS stores have consolidated their clearance goods at our Hampshire Mall location for a spectacular 4-day sale event: While it lasts, take an extra 30% off our already-reduced green-ticket prices on these clearance items--for combined savings of up to 75% off original prices! Included is a terrific selection of rugged outdoor clothing, plus assorted hiking and camping gear. But hurry! Because these are outstanding bargains on clearance items and the best deals will go fast.
Sale Hours: • 9:00 AM - 9:30 PM Thursday-Saturday (free samples of all-natural EMS Backcountry Gourmet food will be given away from 4:00 - 5:00 PM each day) • 12:00 Noon - 5:00 PM Sunday
EMS Eastern Mountain Sports
Hampshire Mall, 341 Russell St. Hadley, MA • Phone: (413) 584-3554

200 Throbbing Watts!

Pioneer
ONKYO TX-SV940 Receiver
Sale $289.
Sound & Music
Mitlwork Place • 351 Pleasant Street • Northampton
584-9547 • VISA & MasterCard accepted

Yes, it's always a fine day for a barbeque. Ahh nothing like the hot coals to cause a man to break down in a fit of hysterical crying. "WHY DIDN'T I LISTEN TO MY MOTHER AND BECOME A DOG GROOMER!!!"
COLLEGIAN
NEVER TOO LATE TO CHANGE



I checked in to the Rusty Nail Motel and asked the owner if he knew of any swinging sushi bar deli joints where I could hook up with a tie of Tuna Meat and Knockwurst on Rye. "The eternal question," he said, "is how to get the mouse out of the bottle." I thanked the wise old man and checked into room six thirty six. I opened up my trail mix corn brown paper bag and pulled out the Collegian. "We put the mouse in the bottle."

READ AND REAP THE SPECIAL VALUES AT...
LIQUORS 44
BEER WINE LIQUORS

Miller High Life SPECIAL $9.99 +DEP 30 PACK-12 OZ. CANS
BUD, BUD LIGHT $12.99 +DEP CASE OF 2-12 PACK BOTTLES
ICE HOUSE $12.99 +DEP SUITCASE 12 OZ. CANS
FOSTER'S LAGER $14.99 +DEP CASE OF 2-12 PACK BOTTLES
HARPOON OCTOBERFEST $4.99 +DEP 6 PACK BOTTLES
SCHMIDT'S & SCHMIDT'S LIGHT $7.29 +DEP CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS
1/2 KEGS ICE HOUSE, BUD, BUD LIGHT, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LIGHT, BUD ICE & LOWENBRAU $39.99 +DEP

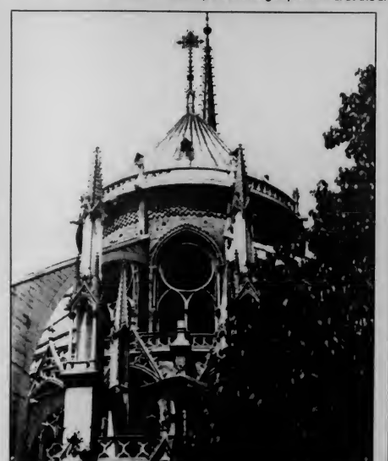
BANDIERA CHARDONNAY & CABERNET SAUVIGNON "Great Value from the Napa Valley" $4.99 750 ML
GALLO WINES LIVINGSTON CELLARS CHABLIS, BURGUNDY, CHEININ, RHINE, RED ROSE, PINK CHABLIS, BLUSH, WHITE GRENACHE, FRENCH COLUMBARD $6.49 3.0 LITERS
RENE JUNOT FRENCH RED & WHITE TABLE WINE $4.99 1.5 LITERS
BERINGER WHITE ZINFANDEL $3.99 750 ML
MARTINI & ROSSI ASTI SPUMANTE $8.49 750 ML
BOONES WINES ALL FLAVORS $1.99 750 ML
BACARDI BREEZERS ALL FLAVORS $3.99 4 PACK BOTTLES

LIQUORS 44 VODKA $8.99 1.75 LITERS
BACARDI BLACK RUM $8.49 750 ML
TANQUERAY GIN $10.49 750 ML
KENNEDY'S BLENDED WHISKEY $9.49 SALE -$2.00 MAIL IN REBATE COST AFTER REBATE $7.49 1.75 LITERS
RON ROBERTO WHITE RUM $10.49 1.75 LITERS
KAHLUA $11.99 750 ML
JUAREZ GOLD TEQUILA $6.99 1.0 LITER

We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St. 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 9/8/94 THRU WEDS. 9/21/94
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Members of the LaNapole Exchange upon arrival at the Brussels International Airport in Belgium

The historic Eiffel Tower



The Notre Dame Cathedral on the Isle-De-La-Cite in Paris

European Vacation

A photo Essay by Suzanne Garb
Collegian Staff Member

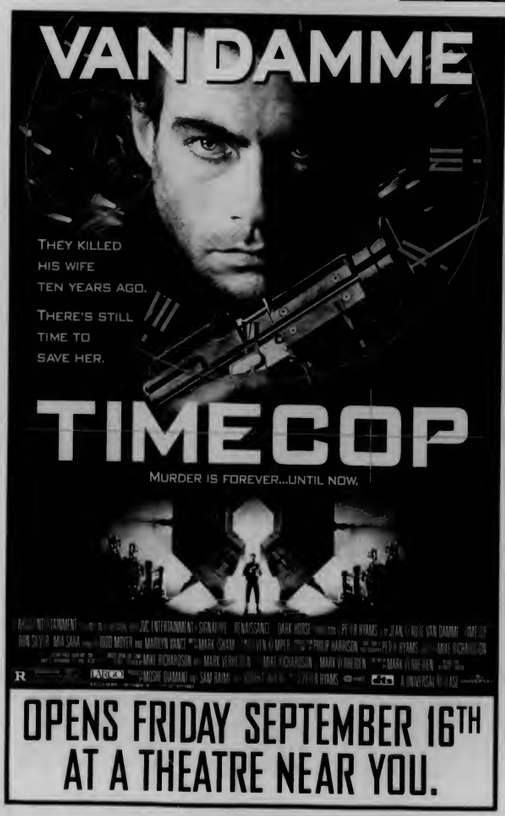
The UMass art department sponsors a biannual trip to LaNapole, France. The students who participated in this adventure in travel were given the opportunity to experience many aspects of the French culture.

The following photo essay captures and presents just a few of the people, places and sights to which the students were exposed. From Lanapole to Paris, the charm of old-world Europe was displayed in everything from the architecture to the people themselves.

The cathedrals and various landmarks displayed were some examples of what made the trip so special.

The Clews Chateau in LaNapole, France

Layout & Graphics by Jennifer Madison



OPENS FRIDAY SEPTEMBER 16TH AT A THEATRE NEAR YOU.

We'll not only change your view from the dorm, we'll change your view of life.

Next semester, what's outside your residence hall window can be more than just an attractive view. When you study abroad with Beaver College, you come to understand another culture in a way no tourist can. Whether you prefer to frequent the haunts of Dublin's famous writers, explore the ancient sites of Athens, sample the plaza nightlife of Guadalajara, devour Sachertortes in Viennese coffeehouses or watch the sun set over Oxford's dreaming spires, the views you'll return with are those you'll remember with your mind, and with your heart. Ask your study abroad advisor about Beaver College programs. For the semester of a lifetime, call for a free catalog today.

Study Abroad with Beaver College
1.800.755.5607

Townes hopes to help UM students

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

In the wake of the complete restructuring of Student Affairs, M. Ricardo Townes has been named interim assistant vice chancellor for campus activities at the University of Massachusetts.

Townes was appointed to the newly created position by Thomas Robinson, vice chancellor of Student Affairs, who created the position when he eliminated the old structure of Student Affairs and implemented a new structure based on clusters.

Robinson said he wanted to appoint someone who shares his "interest in student empowerment and who will support the University's multicultural initiatives," according to a press release.

"I was approached about the job by Robinson, and I spoke with Chancellor David K. Scott," said Townes. "I was later asked to fill the position and start work immediately."

Robinson felt that Townes was well–placed to start working with students and staff immediately on important campus issues and activities, according to a press release.

Townes will head the Campus Activities cluster on an interim basis through June 30, 1995. Even though the job is only temporary, Townes is excited about the opportunity to better serve the University.

"I am pleased that I have been given the opportunies to improve the services the University provides for the students," Townes said.

Townes has been on the UMass staff since 1976, when he was named staff assistant on the Committee for the Collegiate Education of Black and Other Minority Students program. Townes was named assistant director of CCEBMS in 1981. He was named associate dean in the Dean of Students Office in 1987.

Previous to his recent appointment, Townes was the associate dean of academic support services since 1990.

As assistant vice chancellor, Townes is in charge of the Center for Organization Advising and Programing [COAP], an umbrella group for the student activities on campus.

"COAP is just one piece of the Campus Activities cluster, under the new structure of Student Affairs," Townes said.

COAP will include staff working with registered student organizations, student businesses, the craft shop, Union Video, WMUA radio station, the Daily Collegian and student cultural centers.

Townes and his staff will also be involved with the Office of Third World Affairs, the Student Legal Services Center, the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy, Commuter Services and the Housing Resource Center.

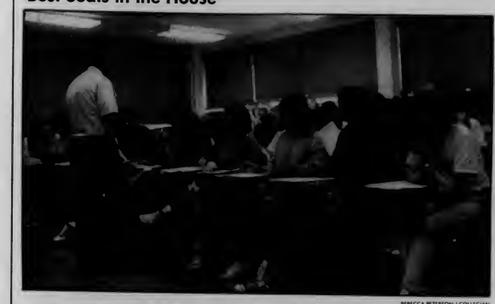
Townes said he feels that his job is to simply work for the students and the student organizations on the UMass campus.

"I see myself as a chief advocate of the organizations that work within the clusters," Townes said.

Townes feels that he is in the position where he can work with students and student organizations to improve the quality of the services UMass provides.

"I think we can be the best University around, in serving students needs," Townes said.

Best Seats in the House



REBECCA PETERSON / COLLEGIAN

The front row of Professor Cheuan's Sociology of Aging class enjoys back to school with a fine view.

Deion close to signing on with Niners

By Dennis Georgatos
Associated Press

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — With the baseball season gone, Deion Sanders wasted no time closing in on a new job with the San Francisco 49ers.

A free-agent cornerback and Cincinnati Reds outfielder, Sanders shopped his services to several NFL teams while idled by the monthlong baseball players strike. On Wednesday, the owners called off the season.

"With his baseball job gone, at least for this season, Sanders was ready to turn his attention to football," said his agent, Eugene Parker.

Sanders told an Atlanta television station he had decided against rejoining the Atlanta Falcons and intended to sign with the 49ers.

In their bid to sign Sanders, the 49ers freed $1.3 million under the salary cap by restructuring the contracts of linebackers Gary Plummer and Ken Norton and safety Tim McDonald.

Club president Carmen Policy said Sanders, a three-time Pro Bowler in five seasons with the Falcons, flew to the San Francisco Bay area on Wednesday. Policy said he hoped to conclude a deal within the next 24 hours.

"There are some very sensitive negotiations going on," Policy said. "We're talking numbers. We're talking incentives. We're talking a variety of things. We're even talking philosophy."

Just two weeks ago, Policy said the 49ers couldn't afford Sanders because of salary-cap constraints. Now he was optimistic the two sides could come to terms. However, he was wary of competing offers.

"We're not in there alone," Policy said. "If I was to stand here and tell you it was done, I would be really acting foolhardy. I don't know what's going on behind the scenes. His coming out here may be nothing more than priming the pump to get Atlanta to really come through with a final offer."

Falcons president Taylor Smith said the team still assumed Sanders would give Atlanta a chance to match the best offer from another club.

"If the (money) is what it's rumored to be ... then I know we can be competitive with that kind of offer," Atlanta coach June Jones said. "Deion knows we want him here, and he knows this is the best fit for what he wants to accomplish."

Should Sanders sign with the 49ers, he would be the sixth defensive free agent added to the team. San Francisco (1-1) earlier added Norton, Plummer, Toi Cook, Rickey Jackson and Richard Dent.

San Francisco coach George Seifert has called Sanders the best defensive back in the game today and players agreed his addition could make a great impact.

"It would only make us better and I'm all for anyone coming here who would make us better," Cook said. "It's all about winning and any player that's going to help us win, bring him here."

McDonald, who was among the players agreeing to renegotiated contracts, added, "Deion's a great player and he brings a lot. He brings excellent man to man coverage skills. He brings a lot of charisma and a lot of excitement and I think he's all business once he steps on the football field."

Sanders had been seeking a long-term, $4 million-a-year deal, but apparently has conceded the NFL's $34.6 million salary cap makes that impossible.

"As always, it's Deion's call," Parker told the Atlanta Journal on Tuesday. "I think he knows what he wants to do. I think he knows where he wants to be and how to get there."

■ Baseball

continued from page 16

While this strike has wrecked the season, it is not yet the longest in history. A 50-day strike in the middle of 1981 led to skewed, split-season playoffs. There was still a World Series, however.

The World Series started in 1903, but was not played in 1904 because New York Giants manager John McGraw thought his team was too good to face the Boston Pilgrims, forerunners of the Red Sox. The Series resumed in 1905 and had been played every year since, although there were some close calls.

In 1918, President Woodrow Wilson's administration ordered an abrupt end to the season because of World War I. As a result, the World Series started the first week of September.

During World War II, baseball executives asked President Franklin D. Roosevelt whether games should continue. Roosevelt responded that America needed baseball, and said to play on. In 1919, there was the Black Sox Scandal. Shoeless Joe Jackson and other members of the Chicago White Sox were accused of throwing the World Series against Cincinnati, and they were banned from baseball for life.

■ Notes

continued from page 16

defensive end Vernard Fennell added three tackles and a QB sack.

Hodges also noted the play of junior free safety Jason Tudryn.

Tough schedule — According to statistics released by the NCAA, Massachusetts has the sixth toughest schedule in Division I-AA. The Minutemen's opponents for the 1994 season finished last season at 67–52–0 [.563]. These same opponents won the most games [67] than any other team's opponents in the country.

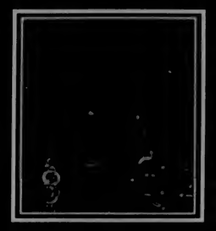
William and Mary romps — Though Massachusetts doesn't take on either Yankee Conference powers William and Mary or Delaware until the sixth and seventh weeks of the season, it couldn't help noticing the Tribe's 31–7 victory over the Fightin' Blue Hens.

"It surprised the heck out of everybody," said Hodges. "Everyone knew William and Mary was going to be good, with QB Shawn Knight and an excellent running back [Troy Keen]. But Delaware is loaded as well. I just don't know what happened."

Anthony's
"The Biggest Stars Shine Only at Anthony's"

Sept 12-17
Mi Mi Miyagi

Sept 19-24
Celeste



18 & Over Allowed!
Monday Thru Saturday
Limited Seating • Positive ID Required

180 FRONT ROW SEATS

Mon-Wed 4pm-2am • Thu-Sat 12 noon-2am
500 New Ludlow Rd. South Hadley, MA
Rt. 91 North to Mass Pike East to Exit 5
left on Rt. 33, turn right across from BigY (413) 536-0502

Scott's LIQUORS
OPEN: Mon.-Sat. 8 A.M.-11 P.M. Tel: 549-2692

LOOK AT THE SAVINGS
SCOTT'S
HAS IN STORE FOR YOU!

ICEHOUSE
24-12 OZ. CANS $12.99 + DEP

NAPA RIDGE WHITE ZINFANDEL $3.99
750 ML

ROLLING ROCK
24-12 OZ. CANS
BAR BOTTLES $12.99 + DEP

BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT
24-12 OZ. CANS $9.99 + DEP

BUDWEISER & BUD LIGHT BEER BALLS $18.99

BACARDI RUM $7.99
750 ML

NEW!! SEAGRAM'S 5 LTR. "BAG IN BOX" COOLERS
SALE PRICE $8.99
MAIL-IN REBATE - 2.00
FINAL COST $6.49

GILBEY'S GIN
SALE PRICE $11.99 1.75LTR.
MAIL-IN REBATE - 2.00
FINAL COST $9.99

BUD & BUD LIGHT 1/2 KEGS $39.99

WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE!
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst
Take-check for your personal check. We now have all Mass Lottery games!
549-2692
Located Next to Victory Super Market

WFSB PRESENTS

Major In Fun

WITH THE

IT'S FUN! CBS COLLEGE TOUR IT'S FREE!

Play games based on your favorite CBS Shows!

NORTHERN EXPOSURE
MURPHY BROWN
THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS
THE PRICE IS RIGHT
CBS SPORTS

Win Hourly Prizes
The excitement builds with hourly drawings awarding cool CBS College Tour stuff!

Enter Our Sweepstakes & WIN!*
Register at our Information Center for your chance to win:

Grand Prize (1) - 12 Day
Switzerland Bicycle Tour for Two
Courtesy Of CBT Bicycle Tours Europe

First Prize (50)
LATE SHOW with David Letterman
Sweatshirts

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS
Library Lawn Pond
Sept. 15
11a.m. - 5p.m.
Sept. 16
10a.m. - 4p.m.
SPONSORED BY: Division of Student Activities

PLUS HOURLY PRIZE GIVEAWAYS!
FREE CBS BOXER SHORTS!
If you're one of the first 10 people who present this coupon at the CBS Information Center at these times: Noon, 1:00 pm, 2:00 pm

©1994 CBS Inc. All Rights Reserved. *No Purchase Necessary. Sweepstakes ends 5/3/95.

Advil AT&T Walt Disney Touchstone Pictures Hollywood Pictures Ford L'OREAL MasterCard SUBWAY Trident

Jim's Journal By Jim

Steve rented "The Big Picture," which is about making Hollywood movies.
He said he liked it because he could relate to it after dabbling in show business.
Tony said, "The closest you've ever come to show biz is watching Entertainment Tonight."
Steve corrected Tony by explaining that he tried writing a script a while ago.

Jim's Journal By Jim

Today Ruth came over and we watched TV.
Later, we went over to Tony's and he was unshaven.
He asked, "How's she lookin'?" referring to his beard.

Jim's Journal By Jim

I went over to Dan's place today.
He showed me an astronomy book his parents got him for his birthday.
"I love astronomy," he said.
He started showing me star charts and stuff and it got kind of boring.

Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

MAN... I HATE STANDING OUT HERE AT THE TEXT BOOK ANNEX FOR 5 HRS. THINGS CAN'T GET ANY WORSE THAN THIS
TEXT BOOK ANNEX
OKAY... NOW IT CAN'T GET ANY WORSE.
OH, OK... THINGS DEFINITELY ABSOLUTELY CERTAINLY WITHOUT A DOUBT CAN NOT GET ANY WORSE THAN THIS HELP
CLOSED
TEXT BOOK
SCHNEIDER

Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

HEY, MOOSEMAN!... I CAN'T SLEEP. I'M ALWAYS TOO NERVOUS TO SLEEP THE NIGHT BEFORE THE FIRST DAY OF CLASSES
UHH... JAKE? CLASSES STARTED 2 WEEKS AGO, COWBOY!
OH, THEY DID?
Z

Classifieds

- 20¢ per word per day for students
- All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
- Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ACTIVITIES

Free bridge lessons. UMass Bridge Club 9 lessons-free book-free T-shirt Weekly Thur 4-6pm Start 9/22 Bluewall Chris 5-4411

Wanted goalie to play intramural ice hockey. Call Dave at 253-7426

BEER TAP SYSTEM 4 SALE

Cold plate with a two tap cooler and a CO2 tank. Great for parties or drunks Call Stephen 253-7498 $325 or b/o

BOXING LESSONS

Recreational and competitive boxing lessons for men and women with retired professional G. Ilyasa Bumpus 549-5752

CHRISTIANS

Alliance Christian Fellowship adds value and balance to your UMass education. We're committed to personal discipleship training, outreach and soul-filled fellowship and fun. FRIDAYS Timeout Fellowship 7pm Campus Center

C.A.S.H. FOR COLLEGE

Do you need $$$ for college??? WE have the solution. Guaranteed results. Write to: Corporate Scholarship Service 2 Oakhurst Terrace- East, N. Reading, MA 01864 for free details.

COMPUTERS

BK Computers & Associates whole systems. Parts: including monitors, drives, cards and more. Free estimate. 549-4362

FOR RENT

For rent one room in a big new house See it to believe it!! Call Brian 253-2746

Fridge rentals 253-9742 free delivery

Two rooms in private home $300 each per month. Kitchen privileges- kosher/ vegetarian preferred. Laundry, parking, furnished. 549-4853

FOR SALE AUDIO/ VIDEO

Stereo equipment: used/ reconditioned, area's largest selection, priced to sell! Also tv's, vcr's, dj/ pa equipment, instruments etc. We buy , sell, trade Call SAV Exchange, 8am-9pm 256-0841

Furniture, drapes, rugs etc. Cheap Call 549-1578

IBM compatible XT computer with printer, mouse, software Greaty shape $340 or b/o. 253-7822

Large couch $100 chair and footstool $50 octagonal coffee table $85 665-8954

Macintosh computer Complete system including printer only $500 Call Chris at 800 289-5665

POSTER SALE Biggest and best selection Choose from over 2000 different images ROCK, OLD MASTERS (Monet, Doh, Van Gogh, Picasso, Escher, Matisse, Wyeth, and hundreds more), MOVIE POSTERS, 3D'S, SPORTS, SCENIC LANDSCAPES, MUSIC, DANCE, SEXING, PERSONALITIES (Einstein, James Dean, Marilyn Monroe, and others), TRAVEL, HUMOR, ROMANCE, PHOTOGRAPHY (Talbot, Ansel Adams, and many) MOST IMAGES ONLY $5, $7, AND $8 each! See us at STUDENT UNION BALLROOM on MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 12TH THROUGH FRIDAY SEPTEMBER 16. The hours are 9 a.m. - 6:30 p.m. This sale is sponsored by WMUA 91.1 FM.

Solid oak triple dresser Excellent condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253-9354

Sony stereo components 80 watt receiver/ amplifier $200 Dual cassette deck w/ dual record $100 5 disc changer $175 Remote that controls all, also pair of Technics 150 watt speakers. Call 546-6857

Toshiba T1200 laptop with mouse + word and star NX-1001 multifont printer Call Alex 549-8114 with best offer

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass and jewelry repairs, great earrings, gifts from glass to gold, custom designed jewelry. Silveriscape Designs 264 N Pleasant St. Amherst 253-3324

FREE

Free hamster with cage looking for a good home! Leave message 6-2307

HELP WANTED

$363.00. Sell funny college T-shirts. Profit $363.00. Risk free. Choose from 19 designs. Free catalogs 1-800-700-4250

Babysitter/ mother's helper in Amherst Sat. and/ or Sun. mornings 8:30-12:30. Infant experience, car, non-smoking. $5/hr Call Robin 253-0660 5pm-9pm please.

Boston Globe subscriptions delivery and marketing help wanted. Marketing- 1st three weeks. Flex hours. Delivery- am all semester. All week paid! Call 256-1071

Cruise ships now hiring earn up to $2000+/ month working on cruise ships or land tour companies. World travel. Seasonal and full time employment available. No experience necessary. For more information call 1-206-634-0468 ext C50011

Drivers wanted Trattoria Geppetto Italian restaurant, 1177 N. Pleasant St. Amherst. Apply in person after 3:00 pm 548-7777

Help wanted drivers needed to deliver Collegian. Pays $35 to $85 per week. Must be available in the morning. Call Jim at 549-2535 or stop by the Collegian office in the Campus Center basement.

Jobs for the environment (Grassroots political organizing). Earn $40-60/day. Very flexible hours/ casual atmosphere. Call Alex 256-8434

Kitchen help and delivery persons wanted, nights and weekends, must be able to work 25 hours a week, apply at D.P. Dough

Part time manager trainee Firestone needs assistant manager. Flexible work schedule/20-25 hours/week. Call Frank in Northampton at 586 1584 ($8/hour)

Receive up to 286,000 dollars in 18 months! For your amazing free report call 413-525-6480 Mon-Fri 9am- 5pm

Resort jobs- earn to $12/hr and tips Theme parks, hotels, spas, + more Tropical + m ountain destinations worldwide. Call (206) 632-0150 ext R50011

Responsible childcare companion for 11 yr old boy at our home in Leverett one eve a week plus some overnights. Need car. 548-9057

Spring Break '95 Sell trips, earn cash and go free!!! Student travel services is now hiring campus representatives. Lowest rates to Jamaica, Cancun, Daytona and Panama City Beach. Call 1-800-648-4849

Telefund is boring, where else can you sit around, talk on the phone, and earn $5.50 per hour? Great experience, flexible hours call 545-2609 or stop by our office in the basement of Memorial Hall.

Tennis/fitness club seeks babysitter for up to 18 hrs per week $5 per hour plus free club membership. Phone Mike or Sunny at 549 3638

Wanted!! America's fastest growing travel company seeking individuals to promote trips Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida! Easy free travel, fantastic pay 1-800-426-7710

Work/study positions available $5.50 15 hrs/wk flexible office work for public foundation. Call Nancy at Peace Development Fund 256-8306

Work/study positions available in Sport Management. Macintosh computer skills and office experience preferred. Apply at 1 Curry Hicks 5-0441

MUSICIANS

Student alumni relations is looking for musicians and singers for a band to play at our activities. For info call Robert/ Karen 5-2317/ 549-2658

PERSONALS

BEAN!
Happy Birthday Catherine
I love you... Matt

PINOCCHIO'S

Hiring drivers full or part time. Call 256-4110 or stop by 30 Bothwood Walk. Ask for Bob

ROOM WANTED

Attention students Anyone who has a single in the Central area and would like to switch for a single in the Southwest area, please call Cheryl at 546-1398

SERVICES

Model search. The 1994 Glamour Models national model search continues. Local test shoots now being conducted by First Impressions Photography. Beginners and experienced models. Males, females, all categories welcome. 617-523-0367

WANTED

Amh. Drama and medieval performers. 2 UMass alumni seek medieval performer, jugglers, armourer to oversee games of skill and inspire guests at their local 15th century wedding. Please have costume and desire for a good time. Bill/ Irene 584-4003

Campus representative Kaplan products spring break trips "guaranteed" best prices + incentives. Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica, S. Padre + Florida. We handle the bookkeeping. You handle the sales. Call 1-800-222-4432

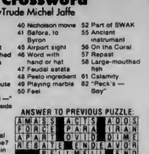
Female roommate wanted to share a large bedroom in a three bedroom condo. Partially furnished. $90 a month. For more info call 256-4988

Daily Crossword
Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 John Quincy
6 Holes in one
10 Health resorts
14 Black or blue
15 Vincent van —
16 Emily of etiquette
17 "It takes —"
19 In addition
20 Poker starter
21 Likely
22 Easy chair
24 Beech or birch
25 Peace plan
29 Easy —
30 Atomized an attacker
32 Strut one's stuff
33 Insurance Co. name
34 "The Raven" poet
37 Three
42 Blushing
43 Mongrel
44 Bay window
45 Bible prophet
47 Those on the lam
48 Wedgwood's black — dinnerwear
51 Babe in the woods
53 Plan of action
54 Make do. with "out"
56 See 51 Across
59 Rattled
60 Part of Revere's instructions
63 "— grand night for singing..."
64 Debt imitate
66 Regions
68 Wolfish grin
67 Lucid, of the Irish
68 Distributes the hand

DOWN
1 Official records
2 It's ducky?
3 Thanks —
4 Speck
5 Sign of a hit
6 Open-mouthed
7 At the same time
8 Nest —
9 Speedier route
10 At intervals
11 "Beer Barrel —"
12 On the plus side
13 Tale
18 Pastry tray item
23 Raw material
24 Mobile home?
26 Abbr. used in old Roma
27 On the lever
28 Enjoy a novel
29 Profit or racket ending
31 Pound sound
34 Ballet bend
35 Head start?
36 Sigmund swimmers
38 Overjoyed
39 Regret
40 Nicholson movie
41 Before, to Byron
45 Airport sight
46 Word with hand or hat
47 Feudal estate
48 Pesto ingredient
49 Playing marble
50 Feel
52 Part of SWAK
55 Ancient instrument
56 On the Coral
57 Repeat
58 Large-mouthed fish
61 Calamity
62 "Peck's — Boy"

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE



8/15/94

By Gorry L. Gaddeo
©1994 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

The Far Side By Gary Larson

Big dogs having fun with helium

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19): After you have studied all available facts and figures, proceed straight to your chosen objective. Associates will tag along. Do not lose faith if an obstacle suddenly appears in your path. Persistence pays off.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You are more apt to drift with the tide than to swim against it. An occasional break from work lets you catch your breath and restore your optimism. Shared spiritual interests create a strong bond.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Friends will be especially important to you this week. Your career could soon take a different direction. Guard against accidents and paperwork slip-ups. Someone you admire shows an interest in your work or ideas.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Keep jointly-owned funds intact, and postpone making new financial commitments. Work harder to boost your income. Flaunting a personal relationship could inflame a competitor. Be discreet. Gambling with hard-earned funds is a no-no.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Material possessions could play an important role as a revision of the family budget is "in-office" is easier than you dreamed possible. A relative shows unusual patience and understanding. Romance beckons tonight. Wear a welcoming smile.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Certain career hopes can be realized now if you avoid haste. Determine to do nothing that could cause personnel problems but an employer. Escaping a romantic trap could be difficult if you drop your guard.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Unexpected suspicions from overseas contacts could make this a profitable week. Share secrets with a trusted loved one. Family harmony is at an all-time high. Older relatives do you a favor. Show your gratitude.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): People or events at a distance could complicate things today. Use the telephone to get the answers you need. Postpone anything time project is solid you are better organized here to continue winning streak.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A blend of friendship and financial success will reward your efforts this week. A member of the corporate sun plays a key role in a business turnaround. Avoid investing in speculative ventures for now. Build savings.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Minor has a direct effect on your spirits today. You may need to include more love in your life. Curb a tendency to take on too much work. Welcome offers of assistance. Trust your instincts when you're drunk.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not be diverted by views that are not in accord with your values. One person's golden dream could be another person's nightmare. Self- discipline and finesse are the keys to success in big business. Don't lick your dog's paws.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If legal advice appears necessary, get some as quickly as possible. Do not forget the mundane, when planning a romantic evening. Find out loved one's favorites and tape them. A favor will be repaid.

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Grilled Sneeze	Roast Beef Au Jus
Chicken Burrito	Broc./Cheese Strudel
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Grilled Sneeze	Hearty Latin Stew
Basics Casserloe Special	Potato Fungus Delight

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Emily Marino
Copy Editor.....Art Stapleton, Jr.
Photo Technician.....Rebecca Peterson
Production Supervisor.....Andrew Davidson
Production.....Dave Gleeson, Mike "Flea Boy" Stern, Olmy Rosenstock

Quote of the Day

"It's all the same to the clam." —Overheard

We Deliver to UMass

Kai Chi 愷琪
Chinese - American Cuisine
Restaurant & Bar

LATE NIGHT DINNER SPECIAL!
UP TO 30% OFF!
Friday, Saturday & Sunday • 9pm - Closing
No other promos apply / Not available for Take Out
Entrees Starting at $4.50
Kai Chi Restaurant
MT. FARMS MALL • RT 9 • HADLEY • 586-2774
Open Sun. - Thurs. 11:30am - 11:00pm
Fri. - Sat. 11:30am - midnight

Get Your Hair Cut ON CAMPUS!
University Barbers
across from the arcade
Hours:
Weekdays
8am-4:45pm
Sat. 8am-1:45pm
No Appointment Necessary
549-0123

"Clem meets the president.... Clem meets Joe the plumber... It's all the same to the Clam..."
COLLEGIAN... To tell the truth, it's all the same to us too.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
is accepting applications for the following paid positions:

Black Affairs Editor
Developing Nations Editor
Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Business Editor
Women's Issues Editor

Editors will be responsible for recruiting staff, organizing coverage of their communities and bringing issues of concern to the pages of the Daily Collegian, the largest college daily newspaper in New England.

New writers are always welcome
Stop by the office...

For more information and an application, copntact Managing Editor Arthur Stapleton Jr. by calling 545-0719 during regular business hours of stopping by the Daily Collegian offices, 113 Campus Center Basement.
Applications are due by Friday, Sept. 23.
The Collegian is an Equal Opportunity Employer

Sports

Baseball done for rest of season

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The baseball season ended today with a fax instead of a fastball.

An extraordinary season, already shut down by a month-long strike, was canceled today along with the World Series in a vote by 26 of the 28 teams.

The decision, which came on the 34th day of the strike by players, was reached in a conference call among the owners led by acting commissioner Bud Selig.

"There cannot be any joy on any side," Selig, the owner of the Milwaukee Brewers, told reporters in Milwaukee.

Gone are the exciting pennant races, the expanded playoffs and the World Series, as well as the hopes of fans who thought the players and owners could resolve their month-long labor dispute. And the game as we know it may never be the same.

The end, though expected, was no less stunning when it came on the 34th day of the players' strike. The enduring game, played more than a century ago by Civil War soldiers, was halted in thoroughly modern fashion: by fax machine.

"This is a sad day," Selig said in the fax. "Nobody wanted this to happen, but the continuing player strike leaves us no choice but to take this action.

"We have reached the point where it is no longer practical to complete the remainder of the season or to preserve the integrity of postseason play," he said.

Baltimore and Cincinnati didn't sign the resolution to cancel the season. Selig said Orioles owner Peter Angelos, while agreeing in principle, wanted changes in the wording of the document. Reds owner Marge Schott, however, refused to go along, saying that perhaps minor league players should be used, Selig said.

For the first time since 1904, there will be no World Series. For the first time since professional baseball leagues began in 1871, a major league season was played with no conclusion. For now, fans will never know whether Tony Gwynn would've hit .400, whether Frank Thomas could've won the Triple Crown or whether the Cleveland Indians might've made the postseason for the first time in 40 years. The strike already had wiped out any chance of Ken Griffey Jr. or Matt Williams breaking Roger Maris' mark of 61 home runs.

"Will the Yankees win or won't they? Will the Mets be able to come back?" said New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, a former Pittsburgh Pirates farmhand. "Will Thomas be able to set a record? Will Jimmy Key be the Cy Young winner? Every time you see him pitch you're thinking about it, and all of the sudden they say to you, 'You'll never know. Because we ended it before the culmination.' That's a wicked thing to do. A really wicked thing."

In the days and weeks to come, fans will be left to wonder when baseball will return. When it does come back, there might even be an entirely new league.

Baseball, so much a part of the American fabric that it survived wars, scandals and even an earthquake, could not overcome a $2 billion battle between owners and players.

"This is a sad day, a disappointing day, and a terrible day," Los Angeles Dodgers manager Tom Lasorda said by telephone from his home in Fullerton, Calif. "When you don't have the playoffs and World Series, this is unbelievable. Who would have ever thought it would come to this?"

Players, meanwhile, said they were willing to continue contract talks and said an agreement by Sept. 26 would have saved the postseason. But the issue of a salary cap, which owners say they need to control salaries that now average nearly $1.2 million per player, remains the sticking point in the negotiations.

"The union refused to bargain with us over costs and took a hard-line position that the clubs would fold as they had in past negotiations," Selig said. "That was a terrible mistake, one for which all of us must pay."

Selig didn't address the issue of future talks.

No negotiating sessions were scheduled between union head Donald Fehr and owners' representative Richard Ravitch. The two sides have met only three times since the strike started, and not at all in the final five days.

Ravitch said the goal was now to negotiate an agreement "without harming next year."

"I think and I hope that Don understands a union leader is supposed to talk about the wages of the people he represents," Ravitch said. "They didn't want to do that. Now they have to. Once you cross that threshold, hopefully we can work something out, whether it's a cap or a tax or a widget."

There was no immediate comment from the union.

AP PHOTO

Baseball's Acting– Commissioner Bud Selig

Selig's declaration follows more than 25 years of labor strife between the players and owners. In December 1975, players won the right to free agency and owners have never completely come to grips with it, leading to a series of strikes and lockouts - eight in all - without precedent in American sport.

"Maybe we've been headed for this for a long, long time," Selig said.

In the past, there was always a commissioner to help steer if not negotiate a settlement. But owners forced out Fay Vincent on Sept. 7, 1992, and said they would not hire a successor until a new collective bargaining agreement was in place.

Turn to BASEBALL, page 13

Minutemen stay positive

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachsetts football team opened up the season with a one–point loss to Richmond, 14–13. There were ups and downs with the result, but there are still ten games remaining on the Minutemen schedule, including Saturday's tilt at Holy Cross [preview on Friday].

Minutemen notes...

The Richmond game — After the University of Massachusetts football team were edged by Richmond 14–13 last Saturday after a blocked extra–point attempt, Coach Mike Hodges said he was pleased by his team's effort. As far as the play of his players, though, Hodges saw it as inconsistent.

"Things went pretty well, but not consistent," said Hodges. "We did have over 200 yards rushing [222 yards], which leads the Yankee Conference right now, so we can run the ball. But we converted 1–13 third–downs. We have to become more consistent."

Hodges did add that he was impressed with the 11–play, 92–yard drive engineered by junior quarterback Andrew McNeilly that pulled his team to within one point, 14–13, with 25 seconds left on the clock. But, again, Hodges added, there were also some mistakes.

"The last drive was fantastic," said Hodges. "Andrew did some great things, but he did make some mistakes."

That was the basic summary of the Minutemen's play last weekend both on offense and defense— some flashes of great play, yet not consistently throughout the entire 48 minutes of play.

The Rene Ingoglia update — The junior All–America running back candidate ran for 129 yards on just 14 carries [9.2 average], and by doing that, went over the 2,000 yard mark for his career [2070 yards]. The 129 yards outgained the entire Richmond backfield by 12 yards.

U&M Minuteman Notes

Despite the loss, Hodges envisions much success in the future if Ingoglia remains sharp.

"I'll tell you what, if Rene averages 130 yards per game, we won't lose that many games," said Hodges.

Right now, Ingoglia is the only running back in Massachusetts football history to average 100 yards or better per game in his career [103.5 yards/game].

Defense strong — The defense is another Minutemen strong point, as they lead the Yankee Conference in total defense. The defense held Richmond to just 227 total yards. Standouts included sophomore linebacker Mike Valentino and sophomore strong safety Brian Mooney, who had 15 and 12 total tackles, respectively.

Senior defensive tackle Silas Burke chipped in with nine tackles [included two tackles for minus–eight yards], and junior

Turn to NOTES, page 13

Minutewomen blank PC

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

Good teams win even when they do not play their best.

Despite a tough game by an inspired Providence squad and some lapses, the Massachusetts field hockey team prevailed over the Lady Friars, 1–0, at Providence yesterday.

UMass	1
PC	0

Natalie Hart's first goal of the season proved to be all the offense UMass needed. On a penalty corner with 14:36 to go in the game, Hart blasted the game–winner past the Friar goalie J. Soterakides. Stick stopper Danielle Borges assisted on the goal.

Hart's goal was a lift for the Minutewomen. After leading the team in scoring last year, it took three games for her to get her first tally.

"It's good for her and for the team to get her on the board," said Coach Megan Donnelly. "She's really been crushing the ball lately."

It has been a rough season for PC so far. They have struggled without graduated All–American midfielder Kathy Guden, who led last year's team. The low point of the Lady Friars' season came in a 5–0 loss at the hands of Connecticut.

Not ready to give up hope though, the Lady Friars set yesterday as their day to rebound. The plan was to upset the No. 6 Minutewomen and turn their season around. They did not count on UMass goalie Hilary Rose.

The sophomore goalie was a savior for the second straight game turning back nine Lady Friar shots, including two penalty corners to protect the one goal lead. The shutout was her third of the season, and her fourth straight regular season blanking. In her 26 game collegiate career, Rose has only given up six goals.

"Hilary and Natalie were outstanding," said Donnelly. "Amy Ott played well and Kyle [Rothenberger] came up big when she had to."

Like the past weekend's contest against New Hampshire, the Minutewomen suffered breakdowns in their game against Providence. There have been flashes of what the team can be, but they have had trouble putting together 70 minutes of consistent play, according to Donnelly.

"There have been too many lapses," said Donnelly. "We got away with one. We very fortunate to be 3–0 and we know it. We've been trying to be to precise. When you play a tough team, you need to go strong."

"We've played well in part. When our backs are against the wall, we've come through."

The Minutewomen have a week off before facing Yale at Totman Field next Wednesday. According to Donnelly, the break will be welcomed.

"We need time to rest up and to start again," Donnelly said. "The whole team needs to get back to basics and to get our intensity back."

Although the first–year coach is concerned about her team's play, she said she is confident that they will be ready for the tough games down the stretch.

"They'll come around," Donnelly said. "It will be there when we need it."

Game Notes: When Hart scored the game's only goal, it was the Minutewomen's first goal on a penalty corner this season. After collecting 22 goals on corners a year ago, the Minutewomen have been in an early drought. In the first two games, UMass was shutout in 21 attempts. They continued to slump yesterday with only one in nine attempts. Donnelly points to the inexperience of the unit and the tough field conditions at Totman (versus New Hampshire) for the problem.

Men's water polo on the road to Brown

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

Expectations, potential and predictions.

When it pertains to the world of competitive team sports, these three key buzz words seem to pop up in any conversation about how a certain team will do.

This scenario holds true in talking about the upcoming test this weekend for the University of Massachusetts men's water polo team. This Saturday, on the campus of Brown University in Providence, R.I., the Minutemen will go head–to–head with Queens College and Iona University in North Division competition at the Eastern Water Polo Association League Tournament.

Expectations, to the eye of the outsider, appear high after finishing last season with a 21–6 overall, and 15–1 EWPA, record, and a final ranking of nine in the Top 25 NCAA Collegiate Water Polo poll.

"This year's team should be just as good, or better, than last season's squad. Of course, with the freshmen we have coming in, we are going to have a different style from last year."

As this year begins, though, signals from Boyden Gym seem to be mixed on the unpredictability of a tough schedule, and the pressure of a pre–season No. 10 rank can bring too high of expectations.

The combination of the loss of top defender and All–American, Tasan Engin, and the uncertainty of freshman recruits along with the return of experienced senior co–captains Javier Gonzalez (15 goals, 30 points in seven games this season) and Adolfo Oliete (11 goals, 17 points) point toward a good–bad resolution.

"This year's team should be just as good, or better, than last season's squad," said Coach Russ Yarworth. "Of course, with the freshmen we have coming in, we are going to have a different style from last year. The teams I have coached have been known not to gel completely until later in the season, anyway."

So, this weekend's round–robin contest, which will eventually establish the top two seedings in the Eastern Championships and bring an NCAA berth, will surely test their up and down 4–3 record this far into the season. A picture of the true makeup of this year's squad hopefully will materialize for Coach Yarworth

"We need to adopt and understand the defensive schemes that we have been working on in practice," explained Yarworth. "Then take that team defense and apply it fully in a game situation."

In the team's first three losses to third–ranked California– Berkeley, 10th ranked Navy, and 11th ranked Bucknell, Coach Yarworth ran a rotation of sixteen players. This Saturday, he stated that he will focus more on his starting six, then look to develop his bench depth along the way.

With better ball control and fewer easy turnovers for the competition, the early season performance of freshman goal scorer Marc Stedenbauer (season high 7 goals in 19–14 win over Johns Hopkins) and the addition of Tasan Engin to his coaching staff, Coach Yarworth feels confident about his team's chances in the EWPA League Tournament.

"They are good quality teams (Queens and Iona), but we should beat them," said Yarworth. "If we had red–shirted Alex Mujica (starting goalie, .625 save percentage) last year, we would be unstoppable."

Note: Due to a ear injury suffered against Johns Hopkins, the men's water polo team will be missing second year man and defensive specialist, Chris Saranchock for the next 2–6 weeks.

Kocher, Mitchell excel in different roles for UMass

Senior co–captains blend their own unique attributes for a winning combination

By Mike Reiss
Collegian Staff

For one, a key is defensive play, and clamping down on the opponents top scoring threats. For the other, a key is running opposing midfielders into the ground, and creating scoring opportunities.

From one end of the field to the other, these two seniors on the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team have contrasting roles. Yet they still share one premier focus — team unity and camaraderie.

"If you're a younger player, you tend to follow these people. A captain is always looked to for leadership."

"If you're a younger player, you tend to follow these people," said head coach Jim Rudy. "A captain is always looked to for leadership. Their roles are critical."

Rudy certainly has two accomplished leaders in the form of senior co–captains Heidi Kocher and Melissa Mitchell. On a team laden with underclassmen, this tandem provides a steady presence with their solid, consistent play.

"Heidi's a total player," said Rudy. "Her defense is very good, but she's also one of our better attackers as well. Our system is set up to get full advantage of that."

"Melissa has an incredibly high work ethic and her mobility is excellent," said Rudy. "Her role doesn't call for a lot of defense, but to play free. She plays the full 90 minutes."

The full 90 minutes is often a tough stretch for opponents matched up against Massachusetts (3–0). The team has more than tripled the opposition in shots on goal, and has yet to give up a goal over its first three games of the season.

This weekend, Kocher, Mitchell and the Minutewomen enter the heart of their Atlantic 10 schedule, visiting Rutgers tomorrow (7 p.m.) before travelling to Temple on Sunday (1 p.m.).

"We take it a game at a time, and don't look look to far into the future," said Mitchell. "These two are tough matches, and if we can come away with wins, it will make us that much tougher later in the season."

Last season, Massachusetts and Rutgers battled to a 0–0 tie at Garber Field, in a game Massachusetts controlled throughout. Massachusetts blanked Temple twice (4–0, 4–0), yet Rudy is anything but overconfident heading into the weekend.

But with Kocher and Mitchell on the field, any coach has to feel a streak of security. Both are All–America candidates, and a main reason why Massachusetts is ranked No. 5 in the nation. Simply put, they are prime–time performers.

"They set examples by what they do," said Rudy. "They aren't really the vocal type, but the type that does it on the field."

And it is that leadership quality which earned Kocher and Mitchell the honor of being selected co–captains for the 1994 season, a post they don't hold lightly.

"Being a captain, you can't just say 'I'm a captain'. You have to lead, and be who you are," said Kocher. "And hopefully, you can do the functions that need to be done from a captain."

Kocher, a four–year starter from Putnam Valley, N.Y., was named to the All–New England and All–Atlantic 10 teams in 1993. Mitchell, who transferred from Ratford University prior to the 1993 season, was selected to the Atlantic 10 All– Tournament team. She hails from Baton Rouge, LA.

"Both are coaches' type players, intelligent on and off the field," said Rudy.

The two both received above a 3.0 GPA in the classroom, and both had double–digit point totals on the field. Impressive numbers, indeed.

Now, as the only seniors on a nationally ranked soccer team, the two deal with more than numbers. It's about intangibles, and other aspects of the game which simply can't be taught.

"To be a very good team, everyone needs to lead," said Kocher.

"Everyone looks out for one another on the team," said Mitchell.

The defender and the forward. Both have different keys to their game, yet they share a common thread in what they feel makes a team successful. It's camaraderie and unity they have already developed.

MIKE REISS/ COLLEGIAN

Senior defender Heidi Kocher (left) and senior forward Melissa Mitchell, co–captains of the women's soccer team, have been instrumental in the team's No. 5 national ranking.

Goooooooooooaaaaal!!!!!!!!!

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Senior co–captain Mike Doyle (pictured here) and the men's soccer team travelled to Connecticut to take on the Huskies last night. Result was unavailable at press time.

UMass to "Parker" on Holy Cross home turf

Breon Parker and the Minutemen will be traveling to Holy Cross to take on the Crusaders this weekend. (Story on page 12).

Big E makes its way to Springfield again

Food, fun, and livestock await eager visitors for the fall season of this most anticipated event (See schedule of events on page 7).

A summer box office scorecard

The numbers are in for a record summer at the movies, and there were a few winners and many losers (Story on page 6).

Weekend Forecast

Today: Mostly cloudy with a chance of a shower. Highs near 70s. Night — partly cloudy and mild. Saturday: Partly sunny, breezy, warmer and more humid. 30% chance of late showers.

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 70 LOW: 60	HIGH: 60 LOW: 40	HIGH: 65 LOW: 50

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 4 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Friday, September 16, 1994

Grad student injured in minor lab accident

GORDON FENWICK / COLLEGIAN

Donald Erickson, director of EHS, surveys the damage in the Chemistry Department at the Lederle Graduate Research Tower after a minor lab accident occured there on Thursday.

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

A man was injured yesterday during a small lab accident in the Chemistry Department at the Lederle Graduate Research Tower at the University of Massachusetts.

Fernando Ferrer, a graduate student working in the chemistry lab was injured performing an experiment, according to Professor Louis A. Carpino, Chemistry Department Head.

Ferrer received lacerations on his arm due to broken glass from the accident, according to Dr Donald Robinson, Director of UMass Environmental Health and Safety.

"The person in the lab received minor injuries as a result of the incident within the fume hood on the experiment he was working on," Robinson said.

Ferrer was taken by ambulance to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton to be treated for his injures, according Donald Erickson, a member of the EHS.

Ferrer received only minor injures thanks to a plexiglass shield which was placed in front of him while he performed the experiment, said Erickson.

"[Ferrer] had a cut arm from broken glass," Erickson said. "Luckily he had a shield in front of him."

All the safety precautions were taken during the experiment, according to Carpino.

The accident resulted in no damage to the chemistry lab other than a few broken beakers, according to Erickson.

The UMass EHS was on the scene to clean up blood after the accident and begin an investigation as to why the incident occurred.

"Our first concern is obviously with the person who was injured," Robinson said. "We are going to review the protocols of the experiment to see exactly what happened, so that it doesn't happen again."

According to Erickson, the accident which occurred in the lab was caused simply by the experiment overheating.

"The vessel [Ferrer] was using for the experiment overheated and broke, it really didn't explode, it just moved a short distance," Erickson said.

The experiment Ferrer was working on involved oxidizing a pyridine and had been carried out many times in the lab, said Carpino.

"This was on a larger scale, but there is no reason to expect that it would overheat," Carpino said. "We are using all the standard oxidation methods."

Carpino explained that the experiment may have overheated because to much material was added to the experiment.

"If there is too much material added at once the heat of the reaction could cause enough force to break the glass," Carpino said. "But, the way we are running the experiment now, that should not have happened."

Ferrer was injured in the chemistry lab earlier during the year, when he had a problem with a similar experiment, said Carpino.

"We had problem with a similar experiment before, last semester," Carpino said. "But, It was a different compound."

Carpino said that the compound that Ferrer used in the experiment should have been easily handled, and he is not sure why the accident happened.

Clinton issues stern ultimatum to Haiti

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON - In a terse ultimatum from the Oval Office, President Clinton told Haiti's military leaders Thursday night, "Your time is up. Leave now or we will force you from power."

Against a chorus of opposition, Clinton used a prime-time address to build his case for an American invasion of Haiti to expel a military regime that stole power and stands accused of 3,000 political murders.

"We must act," Clinton said from the Oval Office.

But he said that the United States' mission in Haiti would be "limited and specific" — to "remove the dictators from power and restore Haiti's legitimate democratically elected government." He said U.S. forces would help train a civilian police force, but would not get involved in rebuilding Haiti.

Clinton said the "vast majority of our troops will come home in months, not years." Upwards of 20,000 U.S. force were mobilized for the invasion.

The president sought to explain why American lives should be risked to restore deposed President Jean-Bertrand Aristide after three years in exile. He noted that more than 20 nations have pledged to contribute to a police force.

Americans overwhelmingly oppose an invasion, according to polls, and there is widespread opposition in Congress among Republicans and Democrats alike. The White House acknowledged Clinton couldn't turn around public opinion with one speech.

"I assure you that no president makes decisions like this one without deep thought and prayer," the president said. "But it is my job as president and commander in chief to take those actions that I believe will best protect our national security interests."

Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, leader of the military junta, cautioned the United States not to invade. In a CBS interview, Cedras said, "I will fight with my people and I am prepared to die."

Administration sources said one final option is to dispatch an emissary to try to persuade Cedras to leave. "It's strictly a tactical decision, whether they think it has any chance," a source said, insisting on anonymity.

In Washington and in the Caribbean, every sign pointed to an invasion within a matter of days. One high-ranking official said an invasion was not likely before Monday.

William Gray, U.S. special envoy on Haiti, said "There will be a firm deadline" for Cedras to surrender power but that it would not be publicly announced "because we're not going to jeopardize American lives and our military in case the multinational force does have to go in."

In forceful, measured words, Clinton said, "The message of the United States to the Haitian dictators is clear: Your time is up. Leave now or we will force you from power."

Twenty American warships ominously shadowed Haiti's coast, and two troop-laden aircraft carriers were on the way, expected to be on station by the weekend.

Following the speech, Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole said "Obviously, we'll support the American forces and hope and pray that nobody is injured."

"Plus, the initial assault may not be too difficult, but then you've got the occupation and the mopping up and continued danger for American young men and women, in some cases," Dole said.

Clinton signed an executive order authorizing the call-up of 1,600 reservists to support the invasion force.

A U.S.-Haiti confrontation would pit the world's mightiest military against one of the weakest. It is widely assumed that most of Haiti's ragtag forces would run from a fight, throwing off their uniforms and trying to melt into the civilian population. The fear is that Americans would become targets of ambush and guerrilla warfare.

Blaming the military rulers for abusing Haitians and driving them deeper into poverty and despair, Clinton said, "I know that the United States cannot and should not be the world's policeman. But we have a responsibility to respond when inhumanity offends our values."

"And we have a particular interest in stopping brutality when it occurs so close to our shores," he said.

Clinton said Aristide had pledged to step down when his term expires in February 1996. Aristide's lawyer, Mike Barnes, said it has always been Aristide's intention to abide by the constitutional schedule.

SGA head defends herself against criticism

Mirran Raphaely responds to questions about her controversial Convocation speech

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

Mirran Raphaely, president of the Student Government Association, caused some controversy with her speech at the Freshman Convocation last Saturday night at the William D. Mullins Center.

Resident Directors, Resident Assistants, faculty, staff and students at the University of Massachusetts attended the Convocation where first-year students received their first official welcome to UMass.

Chancellor David K. Scott and Assistant Professor and Director of the Bachelor's Degree with Individual Concentration program Albey Mahesh Reiner both made speeches, but it was Raphaely who grabbed the audience's attention.

Raphaely passed on the traditional speech, and instead she focused on some of problem areas within the University and how students have the chance to change them. In the opening lines Raphaely set the tone for her message to students.

"You know, I have never given a convocation welcoming speech before. And I know that if this were an Ivy League school that would be a lot easier," Raphaely said in a copy of her speech.

"All I would have to say to you is "this school is great, everybody says so. You are here so by that extension, you are great." Everybody would believe it and go home. Well, UMass is not an Ivy League School," Raphaely said.

Raphaely's speech went on to comment on such areas at UMass as the affordability, the quality of teaching and the power of the student as individuals. Many students saw her comments in a negative light.

"We had just gotten to the school, we don't know anything about the school, and here [Raphaely] is putting the school down," said Belinda Abbruzzese, a first-year student. "She wasn't too optimistic."

Raphaely's speech reportedly came under criticism from the students and faculty, including the Director of the Marching Band George Parks.

Parks refused to comment on the content of Raphaely's speech, but did talk about how he sees UMass.

"Certainly every university and organization has its problems," Parks said. "We should highlight the positives, not the negatives."

Parks feels that by highlighting the positive things at UMass, the school can keep moving forward. He used the UMass men's basketball team as an example of highlighting a strength.

Reportedly, many first year students attending the Convocation attempted to leave.

"A lot of students tried to leave, but there were people blocking the doors," Abbruzzese said. "It wasn't just because they were offended by what [Raphaely] said, they were bored."

Raphaely stressed that she was not trying to offend or shock anyone, just speak the truth.

"My goal was not to hurt people, my goal was to get them ready," Raphaely said. If I had to shock to do that then I guess the success or failure of the speech will be determined by whether the students stand up for themselves or not."

Stupid Human Tricks

GORDON FENWICK / COLLEGIAN

Lisa MacKinney, Coleen Morrison and Chris Mirakian hang out with their new friend at the CBS College Challenge near the campus pond.

Physician to discuss possibilty of invasion

By Kelly Spang
Collegian Staff

At a time when U.S. intervention in Haiti seems almost imminent, there are a few Americans looking into the issues and speaking out.

In particular, Paul Farmer, a physician and author of The Uses of Haiti will be speaking tomorrow at 1 p.m. in room 165 of the Campus Center to discuss the question of "Intervention,...What's at Stake?"

Farmer, a physician at Boston's Brigham and Women's Hospital, also spends about six or seven months a year in Haiti working as a doctor.

Farmer said he intends to discuss U.S. foreign policy towards Haiti and how he believes the media at times obscured the American relationship with Haiti.

In addition, Farmer also said he would like to address what will be the likely outcome after an invasion, which he believes is approaching.

In his relationship with Haitians both in their own country as well as in the United States, Farmer said Haitians tend to be well-informed of the situations and understand the historical context of the present situation.

"I would not blame the Haitians if they were hostile towards someone like me," he said. However, he said the Haitians he deals with as a doctor generally make a distinction between the United States' policy towards their country and individuals in their country.

Because most Haitians have an understanding of the history behind the U.S.-Haitian relations, Farmer said most are skeptical of the United States' intention if an invasion were to occur.

The United States occupied Haiti in 1915.

Farmer said he does not believe a U.S. invasion of Haiti

Turn to FARMER, page 7

Sun will heat two campus buildings

By Geri Sahn
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts is going natural.

After nine years of planning, UMass is well on its way to heating both the William D. Mullins Center and the Boyden Gymnasium by solar heat.

In June, the State Senate approved a $2.7 million bond in the state's budget to help fund the solar heating system project at the University.

Engineering professor Edward Sunderland, who is in charge of designing the project, said the system is ready to go, but they still need more funding from the federal government.

The central solar heating plant will store energy throughout the summer. The heat from the sun will then be kept in one acre of clay located 60 feet underground, near the waste water treatment plant on campus.

The system will be able to provide up to 90 percent of the heat in both of the buildings.

"The energy will be stored in clay that is naturally occurring and available to us," Sunderland said.

"We will put tubing into the clay, and then heat the clay. During the winter, we will pass heated water through the tubes, which will then heat the two buildings."

Senator Stanley C. Rosenberg, D-Amherst, was one of the many people who helped assist Sunderland with the project. He added the $2.7 million capital bond as an amendment to the state's budget.

Representative Ellen Story, D-Amherst, also helped propose the project to the federal government in order to receive funding.

The federal government will be matching the state's funds for the project, according to Rosenberg. The money from the state is ready to be allocated, but Rosenberg said the wait now is on the federal government. Until the federal government acts, the state cannot release its funds, he said.

Sunderland said a benefit to having the solar heating system is the University will save money. Both the Mullins Center and Boyden Gym are currently heated by coal fire through the UMass central physical plant.

It is not yet known when the system will actually begin. Sunderland said they are waiting to receive more funds.

"Before we do anything, we need to wait until funds are intact. The federal government approved part of it, but we still need an additional $3 million," he said. "We don't know how timing is going to play out."

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Friday, Sept. 16

Poster sale — Sponsored by WMUA, Student Union Ballroom, 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Book-buying — The Textbook Annex is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

CBS College Tour — Campus pond lawn, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Library tours — University Library, 10:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Information: 545-0150.

Shabbat candle lighting — Chabad House, 6:38 p.m. Information: 549-4094.

Film — The Remains of the Day, Mount Holyoke College Gamble Auditorium, $2.50, 7 p.m. and 9:30 p.m.

Shabbat services — Hillel House, 7 p.m. Information: 549-1710.

Film — Mean Streets, Amherst College Campus Center Theater, $1.75, 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Comedy — Janet Chassman with folk singer Lince Perroncel; $3 or $5 donation. Lesbian Bisexual Gay Cafe. The Hatch, Student Union, 8 p.m.

Film — Reality Bites, Mount Holyoke College, Skinner Green, in case of rain move to Mary Woolley Hall Chapin Auditorium, 9 p.m.

Saturday, Sept. 17

Shabbat services/Torah reading — Followed by communal lunch, Chabad House, 10 a.m. Information: 549-4094.

Fair — First Alternatives Economics Fair; music, food and tables. People for Co-ops and Collectives, First Church, Northampton, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Information: 586-1654.

Book-buying — The Textbook Annex is open from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Lecture — "Intervention: What's at Stake?" Paul Farmer, a physician who has been working in Haiti, Campus Center Room 146, 1 p.m.

Film — A Fish Called Wanda, $2.50, Mount Holyoke College Gamble Auditorium, 7 p.m. and 9:15 p.m.

Film — Mean Streets, $1.75, Amherst College Campus Center Theater, 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Dance — Chinese Dance Troupe, free, Amherst College Buckley Recital Hall, 7:30 p.m.

Observatory observing — Free, Amherst College Wilder Observatory, 9 p.m.

Dance party — Wild Video Dance Party, Mount Holyoke College Chapin Auditorium, Mary Woolley Hall, 10 p.m.

Sunday, Sept. 18

Sukkah building/brunch — Hillel House, 12 p.m. Information: 549-1710.

Concert — "Winds Take Flight," Massachusetts Wind Orchestra, donation, Smith College John M. Green Hall, 3 p.m.

Planetarium show — Free, Amherst College Bassett Planetarium, 3 p.m. Information: 256-6234.

Meeting — University Fire and First Aid Unit, for returning members, Morrill Science Center N460, 7 p.m.

New student social — Hillel House, 7 p.m. Information: 549-1710.

Graduate women's reception — Graduate Women's Network, 10th floor Campus Center, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Information: 545-5312.

Film — Mean Streets, $1.75, Amherst College Campus Center Theater, 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Monday, Sept. 19

Book-buying — The Textbook Annex is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Opening reception — "Foundation Exhibition: Works from First and Second Year BFA Students," Herter Hall Gallery, 5 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Italian Club — Meeting, knowledge of Italian language not required, Herter Hall third floor lounge, 5 p.m.

Candle lighting — Eve of Sukkot, Chabad House, 6:33 p.m. Information: 549-4094.

Dinner/service — Sukkot Eve, Hillel House, dinner at 6 p.m., service at 7 p.m. Dinner reservations: 549-1710.

Bollywood Project — Recruitment and information night for student volunteers, Campus Center room 168C, 7 p.m.

Lecture — "A Personal Perspective on Creating the Valley Lesbian Community: 1968–present," Pamela Kimmell and Kaymarion Raymond, Campus Center room 917, 7 p.m.

Service — Sukkah, Chabad House, 7 p.m. Information: 549-4094.

Upcoming

Student Leadership Conference — Oct. 2. Open to resident assistants and all members of Registered Student Organizations and businesses. Campus Center and Student Union, Oct. 2, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Register by Sept. 23: 545-3600.

Amherst cops hope to unite town, dept. with new program

By Ben Geman
Collegian Staff

The Amherst Police Department learned Wednesday it will receive state funding to establish a community policing program aimed at forging links between the department and the town.

An $8,272 state grant will fund a program to allow the department to take an active role in preventing crime in the community instead of practicing "reactive" law enforcement, according to the department's grant application.

The application cites several reasons for the department's efforts to establish a community policing program. It says incidences of assault, larceny and drug and alcohol use by teenagers are increasing in downtown Amherst.

Problems with drunkenness, noise and fighting among college students on the streets after the close of downtown bars are cited in the document.

The application also says police need more training in dealing with the increasing cultural diversity of Amherst's neighborhoods and apartment complexes in recent years.

"Traditional police methods, mostly reactive, are often not effective in addressing policing problems in these new neighborhoods. Community-oriented policing will prove particularly effective in these areas," according to the document.

The department's effort to attract state funding for a preventative law enforcement program is due in part to recent cut backs in other areas.

Police department personnel will undergo at least eight to 12 hours of training in "community oriented policing." The training will include problem solving techniques and the formation of relationships with community organizations.

Department members will also, according to the application, "meet with neighborhood residents of both culturally and economically distinct groups."

The department hopes to begin officer training in the first three months of 1995 after selecting a training staff and developing a precise training curriculum between October and the end of the year.

The department is also increasing in size by six officers this year as a result of tax revenues appropriated by the town.

Three of the new officers are in training at the police academy in Agawam until early November and the other three will enter the school in January.

Upon graduation from the academy, the officers undergo six to eight weeks of field officer training by the department.

"We teach them what it means to be a police officer in Amherst," said Amherst Police Chief Donald Maia. "Here, an officer can deal with people more on a one-to-one basis than you can in a larger city. In the city. . . you're dealing with more crime situations and more felony situations."

Maia said the new officers will likely be patrolling on foot, the first time since 1974 Amherst police officers have done so.

The department is also exploring the possibility of bicycle patrols, according to Maia.

Officers will continue to crackdown on under-age drinking and noisy, illegal parties.

"We will be using plain-clothes officers and unmarked cars. We will do what we have to to make sure the students know we're serious about it," said Maia.

Astronauts try out new jet pack for space walk

By Mike Drago
Associated Press

SPACE CENTER, Houston — With their major chores behind them, Discovery's astronauts finally are concentrating on the high point of their 10-day mission - a spacewalk to try out a new jet pack.

Astronaut Susan Helms used the shuttle's mechanical arm to haul a 2,800-pound satellite into the cargo bay Thursday. The satellite, Spartan, had orbited 65 miles ahead of Discovery for two days to study the sun.

With Spartan safely tucked away for the ride home, astronauts Carl Meade and Mark Lee were able to focus on today's spacewalk, the first in a decade that had astronauts venturing into the void of space without safety tethers.

The two were to test a new $7 million jet pack designed as a rescue device, or life preserver, should future astronauts become untethered while constructing a space station.

The plan called for Meade and Lee to take turns with the 83-pound pack, which attaches to the standard spacesuits, and use the unit's 24 tiny nitrogen gas jets to move around Discovery's open cargo bay.

The most dramatic part of the planned demonstration had one astronaut spinning and tossing his fellow spacewalker to see if the jet pack allows him to stabilize himself and fly back to the shuttle robot arm.

Lee was confident the 6 1/2-hour spacewalk would go without a hitch.

"I'm not really nervous. We've trained for lots of different things up here. We get up and we find a few things that are different, but basically what we expect is there," Lee said earlier this week.

"I'm sure I'll be a little bit more nervous that day than I am today, but we're ready to do it."

The last spacewalk without safety tethers was in 1984, when astronauts used a bigger, bulkier jet pack.

Spartan project scientists said Thursday that it would be months before the satellite's data tapes are analyzed, but there were indications the craft functioned as expected.

The $14 million satellite aimed its two telescopes at the sun's corona, or outer atmosphere, to gather information about streams of charged particles, called solar winds, that originate there.

Parking rules toughened up

By Heather Redfern
Collegian Staff

Illegal parking on campus is going to have students reaching deeper into their pockets to pay for the parking tickets with new regulations to be enforced throughout campus.

Parking officials are working to create new means to alleviate traffic congestion on University parking lots, particular in the Southwest Residential Area.

Development of the new parking regulations will be an attempt to provide improved access to those needing to park close to residence halls and University buildings for brief periods of time said Lynn Bradock, Parking Manager of the university Parking Office.

The installation of new loading zones throughout campus will enable anyone with or without a permit, to park for 15 minutes in designated loading zone spaces.

Bradock said individuals must use vehicle flashers while in the designated parking area.

Students who remain in the designated areas past the allowed time period will ,isk a fine and/or having their vehicles towed.

An automatic fine of $50.00 will be given to any students parking without a permit in recently created special enforcement zones.

Presently these zones in the Southwest Residential Area are only in lots 50 and 54.

Both lots will have signs warning students of the consequence of parking illegally.

According to Bradock, students previously parking in these high traffic areas, blocked traffic and deigned parking rights to those with permits.

Access to buildings on campus will also be made easier this year with the development of new vender service spaces.

These designated spots are restricted to university vehicles and outside agencies with a vender permit.

Parking for persons with disabilities will now comply with the Americans with Disabilities Act while providing enlarged spaces.

"Next to the regular handicapped space, a crossed area will be added to provide extra wide space," said Bradock.

Bradock said parking officials will continue to provide parking regulations in an effort to ease parking complications for both students and university staff.

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS!!
Charlie's
Since 1979
tavern
DRINK SPECIALS
16oz. Bottles of Budweiser $1.99
Jumbo Jim Beam and Coke $1.95
Giant 22oz. Drafts!!
Over 40 Kinds of BREWED & MICROBREWED BEER
FOOD SPECIALS
Monday 10¢ Mozzarella Sticks
Tuesday 10¢ Wild or Hot Buffalo Wings
Wednesday - 25¢ Pizza Slices OR
1/3# Popcorn Shrimp for 99¢
Thursday - 10¢ Chicken Nuggets
Open 11 am - 1 am 7 days a week • Kitchen open 'til midnight
Including our NEW 40 inch Big Screen TV.

A genius figured it out— HP built it in.

- The HP 48G has built-in equations, functions, and menus to guide you through complex calculations.
- Access over 300 built-in equations.
- Push a button, choose from a pull-down menu, and fill in the blanks. Entering data is that easy.
- View 3-D graphs.
- Perform algebra and calculus operations on equations before entering values.
- Enter and see equations like they appear on paper.
- Work with different units of measure. The HP 48G will convert them for you. So, enter inches, centimeters, yards, and feet, together in one equation — it'll convert them.
- You'll quickly learn to operate it!

  Pull-down menus guide you through problem-solving smoothly and quickly. Push a button, select an entry from the pull-down menu, and fill in the blanks.
- Check it out at your college bookstore.

  The HP 48G graphic calculator gives you a whole lot more for a whole lot less than you think. Compare — the HP 48G fits your budget.

HEWLETT® PACKARD

— Eastern Mountain Sports®—

Don't miss the annual EMS Sidewalk Sale!

Save up to 75% off original prices Sept. 15-18 at Eastern Mountain Sports in the Hampshire Mall!

If you love the great outdoors, you won't want to miss the annual EMS Sidewalk Sale. Four area EMS stores have consolidated their clearance goods at our Hampshire Mall location for a spectacular 4-day sale event: While it lasts, take an extra 30% off our already-reduced green-ticket prices on these clearance items–for combined savings of up to 75% off original prices! Included is a terrific selection of rugged outdoor clothing, plus assorted hiking and camping gear. But hurry! Because these are outstanding bargains on clearance items and the best deals will go fast.

Sale Hours:
- 9:00 AM - 9:30 PM Thursday-Saturday (free samples of all-natural EMS Backcountry Gourmet food will be given away from 4:00 - 5:00 PM each day.)
- 12:00 Noon - 5:00 PM Sunday

Hampshire Mall, 341 Russell St. Hadley, MA • Phone: (413) 584-3554

Mullins welcomes new director

UMass alumnus brings new life and new shows to facility

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

New Mullins center director Dale Adams poses inside the facility as the basketball team practices behind him.

By Ben Geman
Collegian Staff

Dale Adams, the new executive director of the Mullins Center, believes the facility's status as a top-notch sports and entertainment venue could go through the roof in the coming years.

"We're at the point where within the next one to 1 1/2 years, we should realize the building's potential," said Adams, a 1979 University of Massachusetts graduate with a degree in sports management. "The key for me is to get situated in the position and see how the staff and patrons react to the acts we have coming to the building over the next few months."

Adams should know a thing or two about roofs. While at UMass, Adams once saw an internship in facility management at the Hartford Civic Center disappear when the roof of the building collapsed the night before he was to start working.

Adams instead went to Florida, where his uncle lived, to intern unpaid at the Lakeland Civic Center.

"I left here with $300, worked part-time and came back with one dollar in my pocket," said Adams.

The hard times didn't last. Adams was offered a paid position at Lakeland after he graduated and went on to become the facility's director. He later traveled in Europe, South America and Asia as general manager of Walt Disney's World on Ice.

Adams took over as executive director of the Mullins Center at the end of July after serving for two years as chief operating officer at the Pontchartrain Center, a Louisiana sports and convention facility.

As executive director of the Mullins Center, Adams hopes to book superstars like James Taylor, who will play to the entire 10,500-seat arena on Nov. 16, as well as smaller market acts like the Cranberries.

The Mullins Center can be partitioned into a "theater configuration" to seat as few as 2,000 for bands generally playing to smaller audiences, a feature Adams hopes to use to draw acts to the facility.

"What I'm trying to do is key on acts that are playing theaters in the Boston area. It's definitely something they can schedule into their tours," said Adams.

The new executive director feels the key to the Mullins Center's success will be attracting a broad range of acts and sporting events.

"The more we can do, the better it is for everyone. That's the whole idea. The bottom line is coming up with a mixture that gets people in here," said Adams.

Adams also plans to book acts in the growing country music market and is looking into the possibility of bringing the Western Massachusetts high school basketball championships to the Mullins Center.

In spite of his energy, Adams knows uncertainties abound in the booking game.

"It's a big chess game," said Adams. "Sometimes when you think you've got 'em in check mate, it doesn't happen that way."

Adams, 35, was offered the position of executive director when his predecessor, Lee Eacksilsen, was chosen by the Mullins Center's management company to help coordinate the opening of a new arena in Manchester, England.

In addition to his duties as executive director, Adams teaches in the UMass sports management program.

Network aims to assist grad women

By Emily Marino
Collegian Staff

Balancing course schedules, extracurricular activities and a social life is difficult for many University students. But for many graduate students other problems arise on top of academic overload, such as economic problems, discrimination, lack of health care resources, and issues involving raising a family.

The Graduate Women's Network, a new campus organization, is currently working to ease the on-going difficulty that graduate women incur on a daily basis.

The new organization, which has been in its planning stages for two years, makes its campus debut this Sunday at a reception on the tenth floor of the Campus Center, from 7 – 9 p.m.

All members of the graduate community are welcome to attend the reception. Approximately 3000 invitations have been sent out to members of the campus community who may be interested in the concerns and issues of graduate students and, in particular, graduate women.

"Given the demographics and what is happening in the workforce, and in terms of women returning back to school, a network is something that needs to be set in place so that women feel comfortable while making the transition from school to work and the home," said Flavia Eldemire, the director of the Graduate Women's Network.

Graduate women at the University are no strangers to the myriad of obstacles presented by the world of academia, according to Eldemire.

"On campus there is a trend of having separate academic support service," said the network's assistant director, Shyamala Ivatury, citing groups such as the Collegiate Committee for the Education of Blacks and other Minority Students (CCEBMS) and the Bilingual Collegiate Program (BCP) as examples.

"We hope that this department [the Graduate Women's Network] in the long run can help grad women and returning grad students; help out with child care, and help [them] to manage their lives," said Ivatury.

"You have multiple issues which have never been addressed by this University, or any other university in the country," said Eldemire, who cited the new network as a historic organization to set the tone for colleges and universities around the country.

Eldemire is currently working with Ivatury and Peer Mentoring Program Director (and graduate volunteer) Julia Mahoney on a number of projects to provide academic support, advice, information and resources to approximately 3000 graduate women.

One project hoped to be accomplished within the first year is the Peer Mentoring Program. The program, of which Mahoney is in charge, aims to link incoming graduate students with current grad students who "have been through some of the struggles and are willing to share this information with incoming grad women," according to Eldemire.

Information regarding academics, resources on campus (including career services and health care), and basic survival tips for women who may be unfamiliar to the area and/or climate will be available to graduate women via the new network and its peer mentoring program.

In addition, a nine-part, monthly workshop series incorporating the efforts of such campus organizations as University Health Services (UHS) will tackle contemporary, real issues that affect graduate women today.

Workshop topics include academic support services, harrasment, dissertation preparation, financial management, and health care. Eldemire explained that these are some of the issues that are often women's biggest obstacles in achieving academic success.

"You have discrimination every which way you turn. It's not that you intellectually can't do the work; but it's all the little external things that hinder one from being successful," said Eldemire.

The Graduate Women's Network also aspires to produce a graduate handbook by May.

Housed temporarily in the Chancellor's office, the network is funded by the Graduate Student Senate and the Chancellor's Office. The organization's budget allows for two paid positions, which, according to all three staff members, is simply not enough.

The trio plans to write grants to private companies such as the Mount Holyoke-based Ampad Corporation which has already donated funds, and foundations such as the Ms. Foundation for Women.

The organization also seeks additional funds from the University to increase staff to at least one full-time member and 4–5 teaching assistants.

Long term goals for the Graduate Women's Network include expanding and creating an institutional office of graduate support services. The network would also like to reach out to each of the Five College campuses, as well as the four other campuses of the University of Massachusetts.

The organization was initially housed in the Everywoman's Center, but Eldemire felt that expansion was necessary and contingentt upon separating and building independently.

They have since created a logo, and built up a membership of approximately 100 Peer Mentors and 150 Mentees. New members are welcome, and encouraged to attend Sunday's reception.

For more information regarding the reception, or to RSVP, call 545-5312.

Spirit Haus
Refrigerator Rentals
256-8433
253-5384

!! IBM XT COMPUTERS !!
*Includes monitor, 10 meg hard drive. (printers, modems also available) $168.00!!!
*14 day replacement guarantee.
*delivery available.
call 256-8094

200 Throbbing Watts!

Artistry in Sound
ONKYO. TX-SV940 Receiver
Sale $289.
Sound & Music
Millyard Place • 351 Pleasant Street • Northampton
584-9547 • VISA & MasterCard accepted

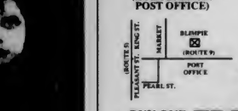
IS YOUR LIFE LACKING INSPIRATION?

Join us for an evening of fun and fellowship.
Campus Crusade for Christ
FRIDAY NIGHT
CAMPUS CENTER
7:00 PM
Room # posted at Information Desk

YOU'RE INVITED

Get A Life with Jesus Christ John 5:12
a UMass RSO since 1984
Alliance Christian Fellowship
BIBLE STUDY
DISCIPLESHIP
OUTREACH
PARTIES
RETREAT
MORE INFO CALL
MARK 256-4625
PAULINE 549-1930
TIMEOUT FELLOWSHIP
FRIDAYS • 7 PM
CAMPUS CENTER

GRAND OPENING CELEBRATION!
OPEN UNTIL 2:00 AM THURSDAY - SATURDAY
Now there's a BLIMPIE® restaurant in your neighborhood!
We fresh slice all our meats and cheeses for the tastiest subs in town.
Come in and enjoy the fresh-sliced difference.
CALL: 584-9222
FREE PARKING
Blimpie SUBS & SALADS
FREE DELIVERY
34 BRIDGE ST. NORTHAMPTON (ACROSS FROM POST OFFICE)



BUY ONE GET ONE FREE *SUB OR SALAD ALL WEEKEND LONG! SATURDAY & SUNDAY, SEPT. 17 & 18
*WITH PURCHASE OF ANY SUB OR SALAD OF EQUAL OR GREATER VALUE. GET A 6" SUB OF YOUR CHOICE. SORRY, DOESN'T INCLUDE DELIVERY.
HELP US CELEBRATE ALL WEEK LONG!
MONDAY 19th - FREE 6" SUB WITH PURCHASE OF ANY FOOT LONG SUB.
TUESDAY 20th - STUDENT DAY - FREE FAMOUS BLIMPIE COOKIE / FRISBEE -TYPE FLYER WITH PURCHASE OF SUB OR SALAD.
WEDNESDAY 21st - FREE BAG OF CHIPS WITH SUB OR SALAD PURCHASE.
THURSDAY 22nd - FREE MEDIUM DRINK WITH FOOTLONG SUB PURCHASE.
FRIDAY 23rd - GRAND PRIZE DRAWING AT 8:00 PM.
GRAND PRIZE - SIX FOOT SUB (1)
SECOND PRIZE - BLIMPIE TEDDY BEAR (3)
FIRST PRIZE - THREE FOOT SUB (1)
THIRD PRIZE - FREE MEAL DEAL (5)
TRY OUR VEGGIE SPECIAL OR CHEESE TRIO!
TRY OUR CATERING!

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Ganley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Position vacant Black Affairs Editor Position vacant Women's Issues Editor
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor Marty E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor John Khachadourian Finance Manager
Position vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Jim Roode Circulation Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Eric Abenaim Subscriptions Manager
Evelyn A. Dickson Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Kelly Spang News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Nathan K. Martin Photography Editor Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Running from innocence

While living abroad I set aside three weeks of my life to travel extensively throughout continental Europe. It was a beautiful spring day and my friends and I had just left Berlin, Germany for one of the hottest destinations in all of Eastern Europe, Prague, the capital of the new Czech Republic.

There we stood on the Charles Bridge, looking out at a beautiful city that had been home to such celebrated people as Mozart and Frank Kafka. As I looked into the deep blue sky, I recall saying "This is not reality." There I was, as an exploratory time of my life, removed from all that I had known. Our biggest concerns are the that time were the places we should eat dinner and where are we going to stay in Salzburg, Austria.

Adam Scott Roberts

The beauty of Prague and every other European capital we visited drowned us in history so rich that we had entered a make-believe world. Yet, upon our return to the States, reality would ring loud and clear.

Our only connection to America was the International newspapers of the USA Today and The Herald Times. Nixon, one of the most telegenic presidents, had just died and another important woman, who helped a mourning nation stand strong when her husband, President Kennedy, had been killed, was now dying herself. The problems in Northern Ireland and the IRA terrorist attacks against the British were continuing and the peace negotiations in Israel were still up in the air. And here I was, it seemed, in never never land swamped by Baroque Churches and beautiful palaces.

And then reality struck. My best friend Scott was nearly killed when two men armed with a gun and knife attacked and robbed him when we got separated accidentally late at night, pulling the rug from under our feet at our time of innocence, where nothing seemed to really matter.

The near death experience awakened me to the realization that the world is not a very safe place and can be quite scary. In fact, my friends and I were not sheltered from any of the world's problems from that moment forth.

All we had was each other. We had to depend upon one another for our own feelings of safeness as we travelled from one country to the next. We were violated in a place where no one spoke English at our time of need. No one could have helped us at this great time of need but each other. Naturally, we decided to head for the airport because Scott wanted to go home, to America, to his home, to where he felt safe.

Instantly, I pondering the thought of letting the robbers rob me and my friends of our "time" on the edge and was too ready to get onto that flight in Prague. However, I realized and thought rationally that I did everything I could do for Scott. I got him a ticket home to America on my credit card because he didn't have a single piece of money or a credit card in his possession.

As Scott, Leslie and I sat in the Prague Airport we began to talk about life and how we had believed that Europe was so much safer than the mean streets of industrialized America. We even laughed because we had been fooled until this very evening.

Finally we were able to get Scott onto his flight home I stopped and said to Scott, "I'm sorry it had to end this way." He looked back at Leslie and he said "I'm sorry too."

At that moment I realized our experience in Prague taught me more about myself and the world than I had ever imagined. The best thing was, I had the greatest, if not the truest, friends in the world with me at this period of maturation and realization. Not often can one say that.

Adam Scott Roberts is a Collegian columnist.

Five years later, it's not the same old story

It's amazing how often in life you end up right where you started.

Five years ago this fall, I came to UMass with my Mom, my Dad, my girlfriend and just about every possession I had managed to acquire in my first 17 years of life packed into the family car. The only thing I knew about the University was that I was to live in a 22-story dormitory named after a former president. I was to have a roommate completely unknown to me, that he was very likely to be homicidal, and that it was the last place in the world I wanted to be.

Derek Milosavljevic

At this point in the story, the writer usually proceeds to tell the reader what a silly boy he was, how his roommate became his new best friend, how he found a lifelong hobby in elevator surfing, and how he plans to name his firstborn son Cavatelli in honor of the fabulous Dining Common dish. Unfortunately, my life never seems to follow situation comedy storylines.

Although my roommate did turn out to be relatively stable and there was one moderately amusing and extremely brain- damaging week of keg parties and boycotting classes in the name of lowering the cost of public education, the semester was largely a bust. Living on the 22nd floor of that 22-story building in a corner room that was roughly 3/4 of the size of the aforementioned family car was certainly not what I had in mind.

After three months of watching three soap operas a day, losing ten pounds due to the D.C. "food", and racking up a long distance phone bill of several hundred dollars, I tucked my tail and my 2.5 GPA between my legs and headed home, vowing never to return again.

Of course, like the prodigal son I did return a couple of years later. Things would be different this time around, I thought. I was a different person — a man. I had lived on the west coast, spent time in the Far East — hell, I had worked on the back of a garbage truck. D.C. food frightened me no more. Only one thing, one place, at UMass still made my stomach turn. I would do anything, meet anyone, go anywhere, except Southwest.

I had nightmares about the place. The towers sprouted arms and legs and chased me around firing lethal chicken pucks at me, fire alarms blaring. No, I would never return to Southwest, under any circumstances.

Living in Sunderland last year, my travel routes were adversely affected by my phobia. Drive to campus by the athletic fields? Not an option, too close to the monsters. Rafters, one of my favorite spots, became much more of a journey than it should have been, since I had to drive uptown on the way.

So this fall, I arrived on campus with my car packed full of about half of the possessions I've managed to acquire in my 22 years of life. Mom and Dad stayed home, the girlfriend has resigned her position, and at my age I should be able to calm any homicidal thoughts from the freshman roommate I might have drawn.

At this point the writer will give you the happy ever after shtick. Sure, the D.C. food hasn't changed much, and there is some mysterious steam machine outside my window which emits something resembling a sonic boom every five minutes or so beginning at about 8 a.m. — several hours before I prefer my wakeup call.

In general, however, Southwest is kinder to me. I go my very own single, moved down a few floors to 15, and pushed the old GPA up nearly a point.

This December when I leave campus for the final time, there will be no vows never to return. The demons have been slain, and the trip to Rafters has been shortened. When I return to Amherst for basketball games, I'll drive by the towers and remember them for what they are to me — the beginning and the end.

Derek Milosavljevic is a Collegian columnist.

So you want to be a columnist?

It's really very easy to get involved in the Collegian. Just gather up your gumption and head full speed for 113 Campus Center Basement. We're all just waiting to meet you.

Right now, the editorial desk is currently accepting applications for columnists for the fall '94 semester. If you are a new writer, come down and pick up an application from the editorial desk.

Fill it out and return it with a sample column. "A sample column," you ask. "What is that?" Well, sit down and pretend your writing something for the editorial page. Aim for between 60–80 lines. Got it? Good.

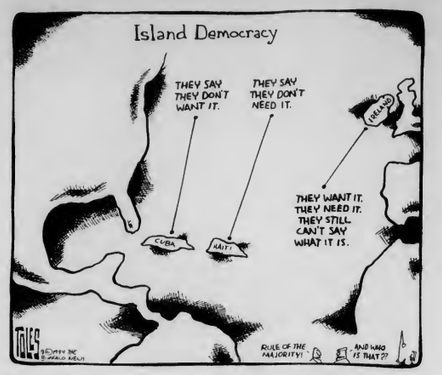
Now, attend the meeting for all interested writers on Monday, Sept. 19 at 6 p.m. at the editorial desk. This meeting is mandatory for all new and returning columnists. If there's a conflict see the editorial editor, Tracy Monahan.

Sample columns will be perused and a schedule of writers for the fall semester will be posted by 3 p.m. on Thursday.

Doonesbury

WELCOME TO WALDEN, SON!
THANK YOU, SIR. GOOD TO BE HERE!
PICKED YOUR COURSES YET?
YES, SIR! I'M IN REMEDIAL MATH, REMEDIAL HISTORY, REMEDIAL BIOLOGY, AND PRE REMEDIAL ENGLISH!
WELL, GOOD LUCK TO YOU, SON.
THANK YOU, SIR! YOU, TOO!
IT'S FINALLY HAPPENED— I'M RUNNING A HIGH SCHOOL.
BUT, A DAMN FINE ONE, SIR!
By Garry Trudeau

Opinion/Editorial



Opportunities in beer, hair loss

At the beginning and end of every semester, there is a percentage of the student body that spends considerable time stressing over what they are going to do with the rest of their life. If you are one of the troubled here are some suggestions:

Personal injury lawyer: Have you been injured at work or in a car accident? Have you been injured completely by your own fault but feel the need to sue anyway? Call the law offices of Vautour, Fisher and Buttafuoco.

Prince of England: Here is an occupation with complete job security. Just think of the benefits. You get your picture taken with scantily clad women in all the focal newspapers. The best seats at Wimbledon and great pay for no work are yours for the taking. The only question is where to get an application.

Matt Vautour

Chancellor of a major New England University: This could be a good job if you don't mind backbone removal surgery.

Jimmy Buffett: Is there any better job in the world? The man is a millionaire for being a beach bum. You only work three months a year singing about being drunk to a crowd full of your drunk followers. Who says you need an album to tour?

Vice President of hair club for men: It doesn't matter if you are balding or not. Just shave your head for the before picture and six weeks later you can tell all the insomniacs and other late night TV viewers all about transplants and weaves and the myths and realities of minoxodil. Not everybody can be a legend like Sy Sperling, but here's the next best thing.

Full time protester: Here's a chance for meaningful (not really) employment, right here in the Pioneer Valley. You can trash mascots, blow whistles at indoor smokers, and let's face it, there's almost always some issue to whine about. Even when there isn't you can always find some excuse to protest the Collegian. Free sleeping arrangements in the Campus Center. Rumor has it that the chancellor even takes you for free lunch at Bertucci's.

Anyone interested, look in the help wanted section under Village Idiot.

Wire Carrier for a Football Coach: The kid that carries Dan Henning's head phone wire at Boston College football games is on full scholarship. Do they recruit for this? There has to be some professional equivalent for this.

New England Patriots' Cheerleader: No intelligence required.

First Lady: You need good judgement and luck to land this position, because there is not a lot of room for error here. (Marilyn Quayle had the same ambition.). If you can get it though, all you need to do is make up catchy phrase like "just say no," and you're a success. If you happen to be married to a former governor of Arkansas, you might even get to run the country yourself.

Late night talk show host: Hey, everyone else has one. It can't be that hard, and judging from some early Jon Stewart shows, there will be a job opening soon.

Beer Taster: Here is a great job if you can get it. This is an occupation that college really prepares you for. Unfortunately there is a long waiting list for an interview.

Sports journalist: Not as easy as it looks.

Matt Vautour is a Collegian Columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Answering rumors

To the editor:

Last Sunday the UMass Cannabis Reform Coalition distributed more than 1,000 handouts to the freshman class at convocation. Since then, there has been a huge level of commotion surrounding our organization. The CRC would like to address some of the complaints and rumors that have come our way.

The main complaint that we have received is that we are encouraging cannabis use. As a Registered Student Organization, we are not allowed to encourage any illegal activity, and we are very conscious of this responsibility. However, unlike many today, we are unwilling to ignore the fact that there are people at UMass who smoke cannabis. In fact, according to the statistics of the past five years (from both sides of the argument), a substantial majority of this year's incoming students will smoke cannabis before they leave UMass.

Many people view marijuana legalization as a simple two- sided argument; our side's theme "Just Get High"; the other's "Just Say No." During our first week of school a perfect example of this kind of thinking happened to our own Student Government President, who mentioned the CRC to freshmen at convocation this past Sunday. Mirran Raphaely is not even a member of the CRC, but just by mentioning marijuana she has been accused of advocating its use. This is unfair and silly. You do not have to think everyone should smoke marijuana in order to want it legal — much less to speak openly about it.

What has upset us even more are the unsubstantiated rumors which have been circulated about the CRC. Several freshmen have been told that they can lose their federal financial aid just by joining the CRC. This is completely untrue, smoking marijuana may be illegal but working to legalize it is not. What is very sad is that these freshmen have not been taught enough about the Bill of Rights to know better than to believe these rumors.

Finally, we would like to address the concerns of people who may have been put out by our flyer "Top ten ways smoking pot beats drinking booze at UMass," because of a statement in it. We did not mean to imply that everyone who drinks recreationally is childish. We were just pointing out the hypocrisy of the drug laws. With all the problems alcohol causes: liver damage, violence and depressive addiction, it seems wrong to us that a drug which is "far safer than many foods we commonly consume" [DEA Administrative Law Judge Francis L. Young, 1990] takes all the flak.

Kristie Matisko
CRC President

The CRC board of officers also signed this letter.

Chancellor on the go

To the editor:

Last year, on Thursday mornings, I held open office hours. These occasions provided an opportunity for students, staff and faculty to tell me directly to their thoughts, hopes and concerns for the University. They were invaluable in helping to shape my own thinking about the future.

This year many people have requested that I try to spend more time visiting units across the campus, which will give me yet another perspective on the tremendous contributions of the people in this institution.

Instead of holding open office hours, I shall use as much of the time as possible to visit units around the campus, to meet people in their offices and workplaces and to see first hand the opportunities and challenges facing the dedicated men and women who continue to make this University a lively, exciting place.

David K. Scott
Chancellor

Catholics respond

To the editor:

I am writing in response to Peter Orvetti's column "The ever-changing face of Catholicism." Orvetti claims American Catholics are rebelling against the Vatican and no longer listen to the Pope on issues of morality. However, in the very next paragraph he says American Catholics still go to church and believe in Catholic religious teaching. If Catholics still attend church and believe in the teachings of the church, how are they rebelling?

The majority of PRACTICING American Catholics do support the moral teaching of the church. Catholics are very prominent in the pro–life movement , while on the other hand the president of "Catholics for Free Choice" (the only pro–choice Catholic organization) has admitted on national television that she is the only member of her organization. Perhaps Orvetti and his friends are rebelling against the Catholic church, but most real Catholics remain loyal to the church.

Patrick Sheridan Central

To the editor:

The reason that Peter Orvetti, most Americans and many American Catholics find themselves at odds with the Pope is that they and he have different goals. America wants to maximize gain and minimize personal suffering. Among its many goals, the Holy Catholic Church wants to provide guidance and enlightment to a struggling world. Sometimes this hurts. The truth can be disturbing to those who have lived without it. You want the Church to "discuss" abortion, contraception and family planning at the Cairo meeting. What you mean is "compromise" her firm position. The Pope cannot "compromise" on abortion any more than a scientist can "compromise" on the validity of physical laws.

The Pope is a teacher. He doesn't want us to follow him blindly. He wants us to understand. Like any good teacher, he demands that we make our own choices and that we make sure the church's teaching makes sense to us. We must strive to learn the reasoning behind the teaching. As an authority, we can trust the Pope. As a guide, we can turn to him when we are lost and confused.

The world is rotting flesh. It's crumbling and decaying all around us, and the Living Church (alongside many individuals) is working to save it. If the earth were a living organism, I think many progressives would want to put it out of its misery. But we say "No. It's not to late, let's try to revive it." All life is sacred and worthy of respect. This is a founding principle of Christianity. The Catholic Church has always and will always speak what she perceives to be the truth, and truth is not negotiable.

Bill Leonard
Senior Research Associate
Department of Physics and Astronomy

Arts & Living

Velvet Crush leads a Noho musical trifecta

Vigilantes of Love, Rosemary Caine round out weekend concert at Pearl Street

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

If you're into pop music with upbeat grooves and snazzy riffs, then be sure to check out Pearl Street this Sunday night. Velvet Crush will join Vigilantes of Love and Rosemary Caine on the infamous Pearl Street stage for your listening pop pleasure.

Velvet Crush is a three member band featuring Ric Menck (drums), Paul Chastain (vocal, bass), and Jeffery Borchardt (lead, guitar).

Before the band signed with Sony on their 550 label with their second album Teenage Symphonies to God, Menck and Chastain each recorded indie records on their own before they met up with through a mutual acquaintance.

Menck described to Sony why he liked Chastain, "All I'm lacking, he made up for and vice versa. I'm incredibly noisy and manic, and Paul is way more calm and mellow and easier to be around. It's a good combination."

This dynamic duo then set about making a few micro–indie singles under names like Springfield, Paint Set, Bag O'Shells and Choo Choo Train.

COURTESY ROB FRASER/SONY MUSIC
Rick Menck, Paul Chastain and Jeffrey Borchardt make up Velvet Crush.

"It took years to really find our voice", Menck explained. "Rock and roll was everything to me and I wanted to be the rock guy so bad. We both did, and for a long time, we tried way too hard. When we stopped trying and just did what we felt like doing, it started to sound good."

With the realization that they had something going, they moved to the East coast and settled in the band's current base in Rhode Island. There Borchardt who recorded a little of his own indie stuff with a mix matched group called Honeybunch.

Borchardt's style fitted perfectly with Menck and Chastain. Thus began Velvet Crush, a name picked because it describes both the hard and soft aspects of the band's style.

Conferring with longtime friend Matthew Sweet (Girlfriend, Altered Beast) Velvet Crush moved on to create their debut record In the Presence of Greatness on the Creation label in the UK and Ringers Lactate in the US. Teenage Symphonies to God however, differs from their debut album.

Produced by Sweet (who also contributed some guitar to a few tracks) Teenage's songs are loaded with lush strings, three chord crunches, wistful ballads, and sharp aggressive melodies.

"In a lot of ways this album is like kissing a part of youth goodbye," commented Menck. "We all turned 30 at about that time and all the songs are like looking around and saying 'what's going on with our lives.' It's the dichotomy between wanting to be eternal teenager and wanting to grow up."

Vigilantes of Love, Velvet Crush and Rosemary Caine will play Pearl Street in Northampton on Sunday, September 18. Doors open at 8 p.m. Show is 18+.

Boyz II Men tops off Billboard singles charts

Weekly charts for the nation's best-selling recorded music as they appear in next week's issue of Billboard magazine. Reprinted with permission.

Top Singles

Copyright 1994, Billboard-Soundscan Inc.-Broadcast Data Systems

1. "I'll Make Love to You," Boyz II Men (Motown)
2. "Stay (I Missed You)," Lisa Loeb & Nine Stories (RCA) (Gold)
3. "Endless Love," Luther Vandross & Mariah Carey (Columbia)
4. "When Can I See You," Babyface (Epic) (Gold)
5. "Stroke You Up," Changing Faces (Spoiled Rotten-Big Beat) (Gold)
6. "Wild Night," John Mellencamp & Me'Shell Ndegeocello (Mercury)
7. "All I Wanna Do," Sheryl Crow (A&M)
8. "Can You Feel the Love Tonight," Elton John (Hollywood) (Gold)
9. "Fantastic Voyage," Coolio (Tommy Boy) (Platinum)
10. "This D.J.," Warren G. (Violator) (Gold)

Video Rentals

Copyright 1994, Billboard Publications Inc.

1. Schindler's List, (MCA-Universal)
2. Four Weddings and a Funeral, (PolyGram)
3. Philadelphia, (Columbia TriStar)
4. On Deadly Ground, (Warner)
5. Grumpy Old Men, (Warner)
6. The Ref, (Touchstone)
7. The Pelican Brief, (Warner)
8. D2: The Mighty Ducks, (Disney)
9. Blue Chips, (Paramount)
10. Intersection, (Paramount)

Video Sales

Copyright 1994, Billboard Publications Inc.

1. Beethoven's 2nd, (MCA-Universal)
2. D2: The Mighty Ducks, (Disney)
3. Thumbelina, (Warner)
4. Playboy Celebrity Centerfold: LaToya Jackson, (Playboy)
5. The 3 Tenors in Concert 1994, (AVision)
6. Ace Ventura: Pet Detective, (Warner)
7. Yanni: Live at the Acropolis, (BMG)
8. Little Rascals Collection, Vol. 1, (Cabin Fever Entertainment)

COLLEGE STUDENTS

GET THE STUDENT VALUE
PACKAGE!

...FOR CHECKING, SAVINGS, CREDIT, AND MORE.

With a BayBank Student Value Package*, you'll get:

- BayBank Student Value Checking* with companion Savings
- The BayBank Card with X-Press Check™ for the best in 24-hour banking and buying convenience including unlimited transactions at BayBank X-Press 24® banking machines
- A BayBank Visa® or MasterCard®
- Reserve Credit overdraft protection with no annual fee*
- CheckView® with no monthly fee

Get your Student Value Package for just $6 a month, or no monthly service charge at all if you're under 19. And the annual fee for a BayBank Credit Card is just $21. Open your Student Value Package today! Visit one of the offices listed below, or call 1-800 BAY-FAST®.

Amherst Office
75 East Pleasant Street

Opening Fall, 1994
Northampton Center Office
144 Main Street

Temporary Northampton Center Office
112 Main Street

Northampton Office
297 King Street

BayBank®

* Credit products are for qualified applicants who are 18 or older. The annual percentage rate (APR) for a BayBank Classic Credit Card is 16.15% based on BayBank's Prime Rate plus 8.4% and is adjusted monthly. Rate effective September 1, 1994.
 To get the BayBank Student Value Package you must provide proof of current student status. Other fees such as transactions at BayBank X-Press 24® machines, non-BayBank ATMs, and designated point of sale terminals are additional.

Equal Opportunity Lender Member DIF

INCENSE • SINGLE EARRINGS • COTTON CLOTHING • AREA RUGS
THE MERCANTILE HAS TAPESTRIES!
AND COOL POSTERS!
JOURNALS • BAGS • POUCHES • JUNGLE SEEDS • TINCTURES • BOOKS • MATS • INCENSE • CANDLES • SUNGLASSES • STONE PENDANTS • BASKETS • BANDANAS
TheMercantile
Northampton
18 Center St 584-1209
Amherst
Carriage Shops 549-1500
Mon-Sat: 10-6 Sun: 12-5 Thurs & Fri til 9

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center

Catamount & Post Road (Porter, Amber, October Fest) $4.69 / Six Pack $17.99 / Case
Poland Spring Vodka 1.75 lite $8.99
Bacardi Amber & Silver 750 ml $7.99
Light Ice 12 pk. cans $6.99
Captain Morgan Coconut Rum 750 ml $9.99 With Free Mug
Bud Dry 12oz cans $5.99 / 12 pack $10.99 / Case
Matador Tequilla 1 liter $7.99
Samuel Adams (Summer Wheat Dark Wheat) $ 4.99 / Six Pack
Island Squeezers Vodka Coolers $4.99 / 4 pack
Sierra Nevada (*Pale Ale, Porter, Stout) $5.99 / Six Pack
Kahula Coolers (mud Slide, Almond Mud Mill, Quaker) $4.75 / 4 pack
All beer plus deposit

Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
"Your Full Service Party Source"
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt.9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt.9E
VISA - MASTERCARD - DISCOVER Accepted

Trying to make sense out of the summer box office

By John Horn
Associated Press

COURTESY DISNEY PICTURES

The Lion King was not only one of the summer's biggest blockbusters, but is on its way to becoming one of the all- time largest moneymakers.

LOS ANGELES — The just-concluded summer film season was Hollywood's best ever, with ticket sales reaching $2.2 billion. A record eight movies grossed more than $100 million - and two, Forrest Gump and The Lion King, collected in excess of $200 million.

The summer record resulted from more admissions and not higher ticket prices, according to box-office analysts. The National Association of Theater Owners says ticket prices have remained steady or declined since 1989. Furthermore, the proliferation of discount "dollar houses" and low price matinees means some moviegoers are paying less than in past years.

The previous summer record was set in 1993, with $2.1 billion in turnstile revenues.

While studio accountants tally the loot from this season's take, the town's moviemakers are pondering the summer's lessons. Some of them are obvious — Joe Montegna is NOT a box-office star — and others more elusive. For despite all the hits, there were several failures.

Here, then, are the lessons of summer:

• Give the people what they want, and put box-office stars in the right roles.

A year ago, Arnold Schwarzenegger hit bottom with the strange fantasy-action-comedy crossbreed Last Action Hero. This year, he starred in a straightforward thriller, True Lies. The result: relatively strong ticket sales, and a rebound for the actor's career.

Bruce Willis, on the other hand, dropped his action-hero status, and his pants, for the sexually themed Color of Night. Everyone stayed away. So what's Willis making next? Die Hard 3.

• Don't let star directors put egos ahead of stories.

Three of the season's biggest bombs — Lawrence Kasdan's Wyatt Earp, Rob Reiner's North and Penny Marshall's Renaissance Man — came from prominent filmmakers who failed to notice their expensive works held no appeal beyond their own imaginations.

Kevin Costner's starring role in the epic Wyatt Earp would seem sure-fire, given the success of Dances With Wolves. But the latter had a compelling story to tell and a point of view. Wyatt Earp had neither and thereby lost a staggering $50 million.

COURTESY COLUMBIA PICTURES

Jack Nicholson may have taken a bite out of Wolf, but the film only took a mild nibble out of the summer box office.

• Tom Hanks, Harrison Ford and Jim Carrey are the hottest stars going.

Audiences loved the story behind Forrest Gump, but if not for Hanks the film never would have been the huge hit it is. Similarly, there were flaws in both Clear and Present Danger and The Mask. But Ford and Carrey's presence carried both films above their problems.

• Derivative movies are among the hardest to make.

Speed, fairly described as Die Hard on a bus, stood out as one of the season's top hits, grossing more than $116 million. The Flintstones, a live-action version of the cartoon, also clicked, netting more than $129 million.

But several other movies that were thinly disguised rehashes of old stories proved disastrous.

The flops included Andre (Free Willy with a seal instead of a killer whale), Cowboy Way (City Slickers in reverse) and Beverly Hills Cop III (a much-delayed sequel).

• Don't let Sony Pictures make or release your movie.

Just when you think the company's Columbia and TriStar studios' reign of error can't get any worse, it does. How's this for a bunch of winners? City Slickers 2, Little Big League, North and Wagons East! There were two mild hits — Wolf and It Could Happen to You — but the losers heavily outweighed the winners.

• Disney's animated films are king - but will that last?

The Lion King's profits cannot be measured by its $264 million box-office receipts alone, since the animated musical is merely the axis for a world of profits, from merchandise to theme-park attractions. The challenge is for Disney to repeat the magic with next year's Pocahontas. Jeffrey Katzenberg, the studio executive behind the animated films, recently resigned, and successor Joe Roth has limited animation experience.

• Art films can still work in the summer.

With highbrow audiences repulsed by lowbrow fare, several quality art films managed to play well despite heavy competition from the big studio releases. The standouts include Eat Drink Man Woman, Barcelona, Widow's Peak and Fresh. The distributors of these independent films used to avoid the summer completely, but now they no longer run for cover.

• Too many movies cannot fit into too little space.

Disney, for one, jammed the summer season with many movies that didn't even last as long as Shannen Doherty's marriage. The here-today, gone-tomorrow Disney list included In the Army Now and Camp Nowhere. It didn't help, either, that critics hated both.

• MGM isn't back. Yet.

The studio's new management is aggressive and determined. Like the old regime, however, their movies aren't popular. The summer was an 0-for-2 bust: Getting Even With Dad and Blown Away both fizzled.

• Hollow hype doesn't work. Word-of-mouth does.

If a movie is not interesting, people will not talk about it. Miramax tried to establish The Advocate as the "year's most controversial movie." What it was: one of the year's most unwatched movies.

Forrest Gump, on the other hand, succeeded not because of Paramount's marketing campaign. People saw the movie, and recommended it to friends.

• Sell what you have.

One week, the advertisements for I Love Trouble made it look like a romantic comedy. The next week, the spots cast the Julia Roberts-Nick Nolte movie as a thriller. Moviegoers didn't know which it was (actually, it was just a mess), and didn't bite.

Good Man, bad flick: Connery's latest film fizzles

By Daniel Pellegrini
Collegian Staff

A GOOD MAN IN AFRICA
with Sean Connery
Directed by Bruce Beresford

Humanity, righteousness, political corruption and Sean Connery. A Good Man In Africa is a unique but ultimately hard to digest story of spiritual earnest in the midst of apartheid, adultery and aristocracy.

British diplomats come to a South African town on a mission to influence a president/civil rights leader to visit Britain for a public address. Among the diplomats is Morgan Leafy, a booze-crazed womanizer who after passing a violent kidney stone in the middle of the night makes his first visit to the aging, wisdom-rich Dr. Murray (Connery).

After this, the plot of the movie is thin. The maid to the British Ambassador (symbolically named "Innocence") is struck by lightning and killed three days before an elderly duchess is to arrive at the house. Problem is, the locals won't allow the body to be touched until a witch doctor comes to remove the "Shangoh" curse that the god of the skies put on her. It then becomes young Leafy's duty to dispose of the corpse, even if that means betraying the locals' faith and religion.

A Good Man In Africa is supposed to be a dramatic farce, a satire on the good and evil of politics in a country plagued with turmoil. Yet, the issue of morality is stressed so potently throughout the film that it's almost too serious to laugh. The film's humor is supplied by all the British diplomats who squander around pompously giving out unnecessary orders, but after a while the director makes it hard to distinguish the characters as funny or just obnoxious.

The "Good Man" in the film is, of course, Connery, the holder of truth and justice. However, he is hardly in the film at all. He plays the angelic-like doctor, constantly bumping in to the success-driven Leafy throughout the film and reminding him of what matters in this world and what is really "good." He is more of a significance than a character though, a metaphor for the rare goodness that can be found through a fog of corruption.

Although the theme of this movie is at full-force throughout the entire hour and forty minutes, it is simple and repetitive. You'll have high hopes during the first half of the movie, thinking the end will be a grand finale tying together an otherwise seamless plot and justifying some pretty plain dark comedy, but the end just shies away with a surprise ending that's neither a climax nor a surprise. C-

Arts & Living Meeting
Thursday 9/22
7:30 p.m.
113 Campus Center

BEE BOP
If you've got a good vibe you can snap your fingers, you can whistle, and you can hum. Mass Daily Collegian tickle my tummy honey

U Mass
Chi Alpha
Christian Fellowship
Weekly Meetings
Friday Evenings at
The Campus Center
Room # posted by the elevators
For more information Call:
Matt 253-0992
Mark 665-5035

CELEBRATING 26 YEARS 1968-1994
THE PUB
Fun, Food & Spirits
Sunday, September 18th
9:30 p.m.
America's Funniest Hypnotist

GEORGE KING
15 EAST PLEASANT-AMHERST

IF YOU HAVEN'T YET, NOW IS THE TIME!
Register now through September 26 for over 200 evening credit courses and noncredit workshops.
University of Massachusetts/Amherst
Division of Continuing Education
Goodell Building
545-2414
A quality education at affordable prices

Get Your Hair Cut
ON CAMPUS!
University Barbers
(across from the arcade)
Hours:
Weekdays
8am-4:45pm
Sat. 8am-1:45pm
No Appointment
Necessary
549-0123

Big E starts 17 days of fun

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Elephants are just part of the many fun attractions at the Big E this year.

Today is opening day at the Eastern States Exposition, kicking off 17 days of fun, excitement and great food. Gates open at 8 a.m. daily. The Avenue of States hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. All other buildings are open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.

The weekend schedule of activities are as follows:

Today will be West Springfield Day at the Big E. Events include: Jimmy Sturr will perform polka today only at 2 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. There will also be a fireworks display at 9:30 p.m. The 50s sound of The Shangri Las can be heard on the Main Stage at noon and 4 p.m. starting today until through Tuesday. The daily parade begins today on the Avenue of States at 4:30 p.m. Joie Chitwood's Thrill Show with Hollywood-style stunts, the Chevy "jet engined" pick-up truck and motorcycle and auto driving will begin the excitement today until Sept. 25 at the Outdoor Arena. The Pirates of the Caribbean High Dive Show will perform four shows daily beginning today at the north end of the Avenue of States. The Big E circus begins under the Big Top with three daily performances and includes elephant and horseback riding stunts. The slapstick comedy of Disorderly Conduct will begin today three times daily until Sept. 25. The Eastern States Exposition Horse Show will continue through Sunday. There will also be a giant pumpkin and squash contest today.

Saturday will be 4-H/FAA Day. The line-up, in addition to the continuing events, will be: the music of the Rondinelli's Festival Band and Peabo Bryson.

Sunday will continue the weekend activities and will also include Louise Mandrell.

Prof gets grants to design computer tutor

By Heather Redfern
Collegian Staff

The move into a computer-based society has brought the creation of intelligent computer tutoring systems into full stream at all educational levels.

University of Massachusetts computer science professor, Beverly Woolf, dedicates her time to developing intelligent tutoring systems, searching for intuitive ways for computers to relate with students.

"These programs truly represent another human working with students," said Woolf.

Woolf, who has 12 years experience working in computerized instructional materials, was recently awarded a share of three defense conversion grants by the Defense Department's Advanced Research Projects Agency (ARPA).

All three grants are part of the government's Technology Reinvestment Project (TRP) and will provide funding for Woolf's work in Computer Aided Instruction.

Woolf's programs have been used by Amherst High School physics students as well as medical students at the University.

A $6 million TRP grant was awarded by ARPA to a group known as East/West consortium, which Wolf helped to assemble.

This group, which consists of the University computer science department, Apple Computer, Houghton-Mifflin, Carnegie Mellon University, University of Colorado, Stanford University and PWS Publishing, will work to market and distribute programs instructing teachers on how to develop academic programs for students.

The University computer science program received $2.4 million of the $6 million TRP grant.

Wolf said this grant will be used to develop authorizing tools in order to assist teachers in rapidly creating educational programs for students.

"We want teachers to be able to do programs on their own," said Wolf.

An additional $2.5 million that TRP awarded to the University computer science program, Worcester Polytech Institute, and the Massachusetts Biotechnology Research Institution will provide funding for the schools' work to form the Massachusetts Bio-engineering Center. The money was also used to develop a system teaching students of bio-engineering updated RNA and DNA information.

Part of this grant will also be used to retrain those involved in defense industries that have been laid off and are looking to enter a new field of biotechnology.

"The field of biotechnology is the fastest growing industry," said Woolf. "There are 140 companies now and there is an expected 20% growth rate by the year 2000."

A final $12.7 million TRP grant was awarded to the College of Engineering and Computer science, UMass Lowell, University of Connecticut, University of Rhode Island, Hanford Graduate Center, Central Connecticut State University, the Connecticut Community Technical college System, United Technologies, Computervision, General Electric, Hasbro, IBM/ISSC, Northeast Utilities, Southern New England Telephone and Raytheon.

These universities and companies will work to build programs to help

turn to GRANTS, page 9

■ Farmer

continued from page 1

will be to improve the democratic situation and said many Haitians are unclear what the intent of an invasion would be.

The Uses of Haiti, the most current of three books by Farmer, was written when he was unable to return to Haiti for a month because of the political unrest. Farmer said the book is in response to the continual killing in Haiti and also to what he said is the media's misrepresentation of the situation.

The introduction of Farmer's book was done by Noam Chomsky, a linguistics professor at the Massachusetts Institute for Technology and an expert in U.S. foreign policy and the role of the media.

In 1993, Farmer was awarded the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation "genius award" in recognition of his work.

As a MacArthur Fellow, Farmer donated the $220,000 award to Partners in Health, a public charity, which established the Institute for Health and Social Justice and the Thomas J. White Prize, which honors a human rights activist working for social justice on behalf of poor communities.

Farmer's speech is free and open to the public and is sponsored by Traprock Peace Center, the UMass economics department and the American Friends Service Committee.

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS...$10.
Yes, it's always a fine day for a barbeque. Ahh nothing like the hot coals to cause a man to break down in a fit of hysterical crying. "WHY DIDN'T I LISTEN TO MY MOTHER AND BECOME A DOG GROOMER!!!"
COLLEGIAN
NEVER TOO LATE TO CHANGE

KLEIN'S ALL ★ SPORTS
EVERYBODY WINS
ANNUAL
EARLY BIRD SKI SALE!
SEPT 15 THRU SEPT 25
Complete X-Country Packages Starting At $89.99
SAVE UP TO 50% ON ALL NAME BRAND SKI CLOTHING
Complete Downhill Packages W/Boots Starting At $279.99
Hampshire Mall, Rt. 9 Hadley

VAN DAMME
THEY KILLED HIS WIFE TEN YEARS AGO.
THERE'S STILL TIME TO SAVE HER.
TIMECOP
MURDER IS FOREVER...UNTIL NOW.
OPENS FRIDAY SEPTEMBER 16TH AT A THEATRE NEAR YOU.

IN MANY COMPANIES IT TAKES YEARS TO PROVE YOU'RE MANAGEMENT MATERIAL...
WE'LL GIVE YOU 10 WEEKS.
Ten weeks may not seem like much time to prove you're capable of being a leader. But if you're tough, smart and determined, ten weeks and a lot of hard work could make you an Officer of Marines. And Officer Candidates School (OCS) is where you'll get the chance to prove you've got what it takes to lead a life full of excitement, full of challenge, full of honor. Anyone can say they've got what it takes to be a leader, we'll give you ten weeks to prove it.
Marines
The Few. The Proud. The Marines.
MARINE OFFICER
If you think you can handle this crash course in management, call Captain Blazis or Master Sergeant Zahn at 1-800-255-8762 for more information. Also look for the Officer Selection team on the Student Concourse September 20 and 22.

■ Parker

continued from page 12

* * * * *

The Minutemen (0-1) are back in action tomorrow to take on the Crusaders (0-1). Last season, Massachusetts trounced Holy Cross 37-7 at Warren McGuirk Stadium.

The Crusaders, who are coming off a 49-3 drubbing at the hands of Army, are led by strong-armed junior QB Andy Fitzpatrick. His number one target is senior split end Shannon Splaine.

Holy Cross also has improved their offensive line, headed by All-Patriot League tackle Tom Claro.

Massachusetts is coming off a disappointing 14-13 loss at Richmond. After an 11-play, 92-yard drive pulled the Minutemen to within one point with 25 seconds, sophomore Eric Oke had his extra point blocked.

Junior fullback Rene Ingoglia led Massachusetts with 129 yards on the ground on just 14 carries (9.2 average). Newcomer Ron Brockington, a sophomore fullback and transfer from Syracuse, scored in his first game as a Minutemen on a four-yard run.

The Minutemen-Crusaders game will be broadcast live on WMUA 91.1 FM. Paul Cacciatore will handle the play-by- play duties, while Arthur Stapleton Jr. will provide color commentary. The broadcast will begin at 12:45 p.m., 15 minutes before kick-off.

■ baseball

continued from page 12

remained in New York, reporting on the negotiations between the players and the owners. Since then, with no end to the strike in sight, Horgan left New York and continued to work on related stories from home. He awaited Selig's announcement on Wednesday so he could write his last baseball story of the season, albeit 18 days early.

"Anybody who has been close to the situation has a general idea of what's going on. The owners [did] everything they can to force what happened [Wednesday], which was closing down the season," Horgan said. "And now they're going to go after the [players'] union."

"Who knows how long this thing is going to go on? The longer it goes on, the better likelihood there is that the players cross the picket line. Once that starts happening, as we saw in the 1987 [National Football League] strike, the union loses its leverage very quickly."

If there wasn't a strike, Horgan would cover the rest of the Red Sox's regular season, then move on to the post-season and eventually the World Series. However, this year is different — no games, no baseball, no stories.

"The end] doesn't really affect my job, but it takes away what I like to do," Horgan said. "It takes away something that is pretty important to me. I'm angry about that as I imagine most people are."

■ soccer

continued from page 12

on-field leader," said Rammel. "Kevin [Martin] missed some of the preseason, but he had his best game. He worked hard on and off the ball and he looked to get behind the defense and be dangerous."

UMass now has until Wednesday, Sept. 21 to mull over this loss and to prepare for their next test, the University of New Hampshire (3:30 p.m. at Garber Field). Their rest period will be interrupted this Saturday when they will scrimmage UMass soccer alumni (2:00 at Garber Field).

Hammel said they will be in for another tough game against UNH, who is ranked among the top three in New England.

"UNH has a great team and it is going to be a tough test, but these are the games that we need to win," said Hammel.

University of Massachusetts home games this weekend

Volleyball

UMass Classic

Friday, Sept. 16

UMass v. Brown	4 p.m.
Hartford v. Yale	6 p.m.
UMass v. Delaware	8 p.m.

Saturday, Sept. 17

Hartford v. Brown	10 a.m.
Yale v. Delaware	12 p.m.
UMass v. Hartford	2 p.m.
Brown v. Delaware	4 p.m.
UMass v. Yale	6 p.m.

Women's tennis

Friday, Sept. 16

UMass v. Wesleyan	3 p.m.

Saturday, Sept. 17

UMass v. Hartford	10 a.m.

Sunday, Sept. 18

UMass v. Vermont	10 a.m.

Men's tennis

Friday, Sept. 16

UMass v. Wesleyan	3 p.m.

Women's cross country

Saturday, Sept. 17

UMass v. Connecticut/Maine	12 p.m.

YOU CAN MAKE A DIFFERENCE.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is accepting applications for the following paid positions:

MULTICULTURAL AFFAIRS EDITOR
BUSINESS EDITOR
BLACK AFFAIRS EDITOR
DEVELOPING NATIONS EDITOR
WOMEN'S ISSUES EDITOR

Editors will be in charge of recruiting staff, organizing coverage of their communities and bringing issues of concern to the entire University community to the pages of the Collegian, the largest college daily in New England.

For more information and an application, contact Managing Editor Arthur Stapleton Jr. by calling 545-0719 or stopping by the Collegian office, 113 Campus Center Basement. Applications are due Friday, Sept. 23.

The Collegian is an Equal Opportunity Employer

Researchers find global warming still a threat

By H. Josef Hebert
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Industrial nations will have to go well beyond their promises at the 1992 Earth Summit if global warming gases are to be stabilized in the atmosphere, concludes an international panel of scientists.

The United Nations scientific panel on climate change Thursday reaffirmed its findings four years ago that without substantially curbing so-called greenhouse gas emissions, there likely will be a significant warming of the planet late in the next century.

But the new group went further and said even the commitments made so far by industrial nations will do little to stop carbon dioxide and other global warming gas concentrations from increasing.

To stabilize carbon dioxide concentrations at even double today's levels of 350 parts per million over the next 100 years can "be attained only (if) .... emissions eventually drop substantially below 1990 levels," the IPPC panel concluded. That's partly because these gases remain in the atmosphere for many years.

Carbon dioxide accounts for about 60 percent of all greenhouse gases. They are so called because like a greenhouse they encase the planet and eventually may cause the Earth to warm 3 to 8 degrees Fahrenheit, causing serious climate and social problems, many scientists believe.

Critics of the global warming theory have argued that the climate models used to make warming predictions are imprecise and that too much is still unknown about the issue to reach firm conclusions.

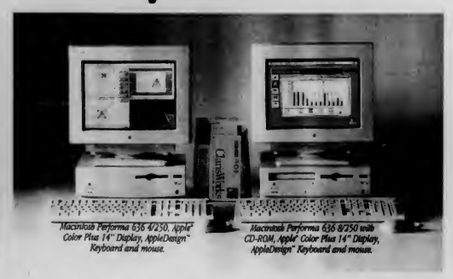
Copies of the report by the Geneva-based Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change were being circulated by various environmental groups in Washington and elsewhere. The panel approved the report Thursday at a meeting in Maastricht, the Netherlands.

"What they've concluded is that carbon dioxide emissions must be reduced to well below 1990 levels to stabilize the atmosphere," said Daniel Lashof, a climate specialist at the Natural Resources Defense Council, a private environmental group.

At the same time, Lashof and other environmentalists said it's not at all certain the United States and many of the other industrial nation's will achieve even the stabilization of emissions promised at the Rio conference. Carbon dioxide comes from the burning of fossil fuels in everything from cars to industrial smokestacks.

Two of the most popular bundles on campus this year.

A distinctively fragrant assortment of wool, denim, rayon and poly-cotton blends.



Macintosh Performa 636 4/250, Apple Color Plus 14" Display, AppleDesign Keyboard and mouse.

Macintosh Performa 636 8/250 with CD-ROM, Apple Color Plus 14" Display, AppleDesign Keyboard and mouse.

Now you can really clean up when you buy a select Macintosh Performa. For a limited time, it comes bundled with a unique new student software set available only from Apple. It's all the software you're likely to need in college. You'll get software that takes you through every aspect of writing papers, the only personal organizer/calendar created for your student lifestyle and the Internet Companion to help you tap into on-line research resources. Plus ClarisWorks, an intuitive, integrated package with a spreadsheet, word processor, database and more. Buy a select Performa with CD-ROM, and you'll also get a multimedia library of essential reference tools. And now, with an Apple Computer Loan, you can own a Macintosh for less than a dollar a day. It's the power every student needs. The power to be your best. Apple through it.

UNIVERSITY STORE

Campus Center
545-2619

Mon.- Fri. 9a.m. - 5p.m.
Sat. 11a.m. - 3p.m.

Talk to Apple Representatives & see the latest MACINTOSH PRODUCTS Sept. 27 & 28, on the concourse in front of the U Store.

Offer expires October 17, 1994, available only while supplies last. © 1994 Apple Computer, Inc. All rights reserved. Apple, the Apple logo, Macintosh, Performa and "The power to be your best" are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. AppleDesign is a trademark of Apple Computer, Inc. ClarisWorks is a registered trademark of Claris Corporation. *An estimate based on an Apple Computer Loan of $1,149.15 for the Performa 636, and $1,882.59 for the Performa 636 with CD-ROM system shown above. Prices and loan amounts are subject to change without notice. See your Apple Campus Reseller or representative for current system prices. A 5.5% loan origination fee will be added to the requested loan amount. The interest rate is variable based on the commercial paper rate plus 5.35%. For the month of August, 1994, the interest rate was 10.10%, with an APR of 11.36%. 8-year loan term with no prepayment penalty. The monthly payment shown assumes no deferment of principal or interest. Students may defer principal payments up to 4 years, or until graduation. Deferment will change your monthly payments. The Apple Computer Loan is subject to credit approval.

Red Cross pumps for more blood

By Matthew Yorrows
Collegian Correspondent

American Red Cross officials are hoping back to school for the University of Massachusetts will get students' blood pumping.

There is a shortage of blood in the area with students being gone all summer, but Colleen Moren, assistant manager of recruitment for the Red Cross, hopes once students settle into their semester routine they will donate.

"The supply will remain low for the next couple of weeks," said Moren. However, she expects the next couple of weeks to be slow for donations with students moving back to campus.

Moren attributes the shortfall of donor turnout to the fact that many people are busy with other things in the first few days of the semester. She also pointed out that most people fail to realize that donating blood saves lives.

Summertime is difficult to maintain a blood supply because school is out and drives are not held when there is no school, Moren said. By the end of the summer, the blood supply is usually low.

Moren said the nationwide blood supply is low, especially the negative types, but both positive and negative blood types are always needed.

Jody Liquornik, a recruitment specialist for the Red Cross, said the Red Cross hopes to collect at least 1500 units of blood per semester from drives at the University.

Donated blood is usually used within a few days of its collection. Cancer therapy, organ transplants and many other surgeries require blood obtained from blood drives. Blood that is donated at the University will be used in hospitals and medical facilities statewide.

Liquornik said UMass is the single largest collegiate supplier of blood from Massachusetts to Maine.

"The students are very generous," Liquornik said.

Approximately 40 blood drives are held each year on campus.

Although donations are normally low so soon after the start of the school year, Liquornik said every donation is important.

"Donating blood is the most important thing you can do," Liquornik said. "Every donation counts."

The next Red Cross blood drive on campus will be held on Sep. 20 and Sep. 21. More blood drives are scheduled for late September and throughout October.

The Red Cross is always in need of groups that are willing to sponsor blood drives. People interested in recruiting projects or staffing desks can contact Jody Liquornik at the Red Cross.

Homeowner must pay damages in accidental exchange student slaying

By LESLIE ZGANJAR
Associated Press

BATON ROUGE, La. — A homeowner was ordered to pay $653,000 Thursday to the parents of a Japanese exchange student who was shot to death in 1992 when he went to the wrong door while looking for a Halloween party.

State District Judge Bill Brown rejected Rodney Peairs' explanation that he thought 16-year-old Yoshihiro Hattori was a lunatic bent on hurting him and his family.

"There is no justification that the killing was necessary to save himself or his family," Brown ruled in a lawsuit filed by the boy's parents.

Peairs, 32, was acquitted of manslaughter last year in the slaying, which reinforced the United States' image in Japan as a land of gunslingers.

Masaichi and Mieko Hattori, who had asked for as much as $850,000, plan to give the money to a foundation they set up in their son's name to foster understanding between the United States and Japan.

"Although the verdict was in our favor, the hole in my heart will always be there forever," Mrs. Hattori said. And in a plea to the American people, she said: "Please decrease the number of handguns as much as possible."

Hattori was shot after he and the son of his host parents got lost while looking for a Halloween party. Hattori was dressed in a John Travolta-style disco costume - a white tuxedo and an open-collar shirt.

The teen-ager, who spoke little English, didn't stop when Peairs shouted, "Freeze!" Peairs opened fire with a .44-caliber Magnum handgun.

Peairs didn't use the "extraordinary care" required by law for using a gun, and neither Hattori nor his host family bears any blame, the judge said.

Interested in practical work experience? The Collegian is always looking for new writers and photographers. Just stop down in at 113 Campus Center or call 545-3500.

Chavis ponders reasons for dismissal

By SONYA ROSS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Benjamin Chavis' face has that dazed look of the suddenly unemployed as he goes over and over what he says is the real reason he was fired as executive director of the NAACP. I was trying to break down the elitism," he said "They didn't think I was going to build up membership that fast. If I was doing something so wild, why did all those people join?"

Nowhere in this self-evaluation is what others believe was his fatal miscue: He signed a $332,400 settlement to resolve sex discrimination claims by former employee Mary Stansel without telling the board of directors and at a time when a $3 million budget deficit threatened to swallow the NAACP whole.

This was part of the "accumulation of things" that Board Chairman William Gibson said helped seal Chavis' fate on Aug. 20, when he was fired for indulging in "conduct inimical" to the NAACP's survival.

In an interview, Chavis dismissed the notion of an accumulation. He is convinced he was fired for trying to take the NAACP away from the civil rights mainstream and out to the cutting edge, to make it relevant again.

"The Stansel lawsuit was used as a ploy," he said. "This is about disagreement in the African-American community about which way the movement should go, should our movement be middle class and mainstream.

"African-Americans were drowning in the mainstream. I was on a rescue mission."

Gibson declined to comment on Chavis' statements, citing Chavis' lawsuit seeking reinstatement for the remainder of his 3-year contract. A court hearing is scheduled for late October, and both sides are trying to negotiate a settlement.

However, Gibson did reiterate the NAACP's intention to stick to the mission stated at its founding 85 years ago by a collection of black and white activists: to remove the vestiges of segregation and exclusion that thwart black progress in America.

"We will continue to pursue it," Gibson said.

For the moment, a rudderless Chavis is pouring his energy into the National African-American Leadership Summit, an effort to unite black activists behind a common agenda. He denies he is trying to rival the NAACP.

Chavis' steps away from the NAACP's middle-class base — and his tendency not to tell his bosses or even NAACP chapters what he was doing — fed fear that he would push integrationists out of the NAACP and fill it with separatists and radicals.

At least two other factors played to Chavis' downfall:

- He endorsed the North American Free Trade Agreement, which the NAACP opposed.
- He said "it was a mistake" to deny Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan a chance to speak at last year's 30th anniversary March on Washington, despite objections from a board member that this would offend the NAACP's Jewish supporters.

But it was contact between Chavis and left-wing activists that made many on the board feel he had gone too far. Without telling the board, Chavis met with about 40 black nationalists to get their perspectives on the direction the NAACP should take.

Chavis insists he gave NAACP officials plenty of notice that he intended to steer the NAACP to the left to address neglected factions of black America.

■ grants

continued from page 7

engineering students learn about the design of essential parts needed to be manufactured, said Woolf.

At the University, Woolf is working with graduate students in the computer science program to complete these programs.

With growing respect for her research, Woolf has been supported in developing a research center here at the University.

The Center For Knowledge Communications, is where Woolf and a staff of 15-20 individuals work to develop and test computerized, tutorial programs.

"We are always interested in sharp students, who want to work in the center," said Woolf.

Students wishing to work in the center can contact computer science secretary Gwinn Mitchel.

BE A HERO
Be A Teacher
To find out how to become a teacher, call 1-800-45-TEACH

Simpson at crime scene

By Michael Fleeman
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Final DNA tests point to O.J. Simpson as the source of at least two drops of blood in a trail leading from the crime scene, and a hair found on one victim's body came from a black person, sources said Thursday.

Meanwhile, Simpson's lawyers are considering calling as witnesses his younger children, including his 8-year-old daughter, who reportedly told police she "heard Mommy's best friend" the night of the slayings.

The genetic test results on two drops of blood, first reported in Thursday's Los Angeles Times, were forwarded to the Simpson defense and confirm preliminary results reported last month by prosecutors, sources speaking on condition of anonymity told The Associated Press.

The sources said there was nothing new in the latest results, which the defense plans to attack as unreliable because of sloppy police and lab work.

Simpson, 47, is charged with murder in the June 12 slashing deaths of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

A hair whose existence was never previously reported in the media was found on Goldman's clothing and matches that of a black person, the sources told the AP. The strand is being analyzed to determine whether it matches Simpson's hair.

But the finding may work in the defense's favor, the sources said, because if prosecutors try to argue the hair is Simpson's, the defense can ask why only one hair was found on the body when presumably the attacker would have lost more in a struggle.

Earlier, authorities said they had found a black person's hairs in a ski cap at the crime scene outside Ms. Simpson's condominium.

The sources also said no final decision had been made on whether to have Ms. Simpson's children, Sydney, 8, and Justin, 6, testify at the trial, scheduled to start with jury selection Sept. 26.

LSAT +7.5
GMAT +72
GRE +214
MCAT +6

Small Classes, Documented Highest Results, Guaranteed.

413 584-6849

Course Sites:
Mt. Holyoke College, Smith College, Williams College, MCAT - Umass.

THE PRINCETON REVIEW

We Score More

ETS and Princeton University are not affiliated with The Princeton Review

Welcome back to lecture halls, all-nighters, pizza breakfasts, and Kinko's.

with this coupon

2½¢ copies kinko's the copy center

Offer applies to self-serve, black and white 8 1/2" x 11" copies on 20 lb. white bond. One coupon per customer per visit. Not valid with other offers. Good through October 31, 1994 at the Kinko's listed.

AMHERST: 220 N. Pleasant St. 253-2547 Open 24 Hours
NORTHAMPTON: 34 Bridge St. 584-5077 6am from the Post Office 8:00 8:30 6am to 12

My eyes teared as I hacked my desert dry cough at the road dust that swirled up from behind the passing semi. Yes, I was lost... a long way from the rotting New York cul-de-sac I had called my home. Why HAD I eaten that moldy bread. Why DID I let that circus bear break my heart.
Mass. Daily Collegian
Wherever you go, There you are!

Auto Reverse Double Deck!

Artistry in Sound
ONKYO TAR-W313 CASSETTE
Sale $209.
Sound & Music
Millbank Place • 351 Pleasant Street • Northampton
584-9547 • VISA & MasterCard accepted

EXOTIC FISH & PET WORLD
49 Russell St., Rt. 9
Hadley - At the Village Barn Shops

586-3362

FRESH WATER FISH
Hundreds of Types In Stock

MARINE FISH
The Areas Largest Selection

A FULL SELECTION OF QUALITY DRY GOODS & SUPPLIES FOR YOUR PET ... AT EXCELLENT PRICES!

REPTILES
A Separate Room Full - Don't Miss Seeing Our Own 14' Python!

SMALL ANIMALS & BIRDS
From Parakeets to The Unusual - Some Already Tame!

OPEN SAT, SUN, MON: 10-6
TUES-FRI: 10-9

Undergraduate Football Season Tickets

will be available for pickup starting today from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. at the Curry Hicks Cage box office with a valid I.D.

LIFE'S A JOURNEY. ARE YOU PACKED?

NO annual FEE,

nationwide ACCEPTANCE

and LOW rates.

Because this is a ONCE in a lifetime trip.

IF YOU DON'T GOT IT, GET IT.™

MEMBER NOVUS NETWORK © 1994 Greenwood Trust Company. Member FDIC

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

DO YOU SUPPORT THE FREE EXPRESSION OF IDEAS IN OUR SOCIETY?
SURE. THAT'S FIRST ON OUR BILL OF RIGHTS
SO YOU WOULD BE AGAINST CENSORSHIP AND THE SUPPRESSION OF IDEAS YOU FOUND DISTASTEFUL RIGHT. YOU'VE GOT TO TAKE THE BAD WITH THE GOOD.
SO YOU WOULDN'T OBJECT TO ME BEING EXPOSED TO ART, MOVIES OR MUSIC THAT SOME PEOPLE THINK IS OFFENSIVE AND SHOCKING. RIGHT?
OK. FIRST LET ME EXPLAIN ABOUT OUR RESPONSIBILITY TO BE CULTURALLY EDUCATED AND ABLE TO MAKE CRITICAL DISTINCTIONS ABOUT YOU'RE STALLING.

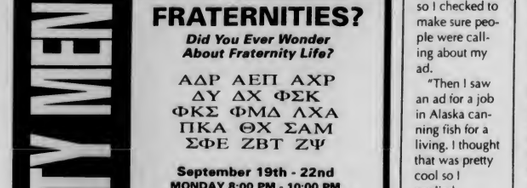
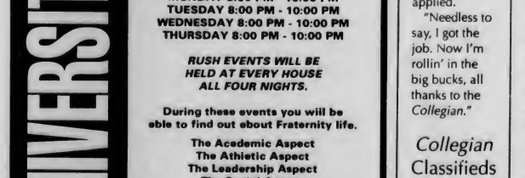
Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson



Jim's Journal By Jim



Today I was hanging out at Ruth's place.
She told me to stay right where I was, and she went into the other room.
She came out with a camera and said, "Say cheese!"
But the camera didn't click, and she couldn't figure out what was wrong with it.

Bruno By C. Baldwin

BRING DAILY WHAT YOU CAN CARRY. ESCAPE THROUGH THE BACK WINDOW. TELL NOBODY. LOSE LIPS SINK SHIPS
HEY BRUNO, JEOPARDY IS ON. WHY DON'T YOU COME DOWN STAIRS AND WATCH IT WITH US
YEAH, COME DOWN AND THROW YOUR DAD MOM AND DAD WHAT THAT COLLEGE IS TRAINING YOU

Bruno By C. Baldwin

MOM, LISTEN... HOW WOULD YOU FEEL IF I TOLD YOU I DECIDED TO DROP OUT OF COLLEGE AND MOVE TO NEW ORLEANS?
HEY DEAR, HOW WOULD YOU FEEL IF WE WASTED EIGHT THOUSAND BUCKS ON OUR DAUGHTER?
BEE, BRUNO, I'M NOT SURE HOW MUCH YOU'VE SAT WE'VE BEEN FOR COLLEGE SO FAR? $8,000.00? IS THAT YOU MEAN?
HI, YES MOM. I DON'T RIGHT NOW, DAD.
WHAT'CHA SLEEP THROUGH THAT STUPID ECONOMICS COURSE OF MADE YOU TAKE?

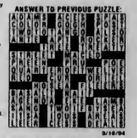
Daily Crossword

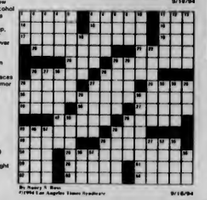
Edited byTrude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Unpaid
5 Game for two
11 Go sunte
14 De Mille ballet
19 Home-run king
18 Clarence or Davis
19 Famous play, with "The"
16 Paleodromic preposition
20 Bombe or brownie
21 Girl watcher
23 Collection of stories
24 "Star" actress
26 Texas shrine
29 Canon cue
30 Tantrum
31 Latvian capital
32 Eft
36 Jazz-band instruments
38 Elliot e Bertie
40 Issue
41 Printing type
42 Popular orphan
44 Alumni
45 Stuffed
48 Sound from the meadow
49 Kind of alcohol
50 Graduate's reward
54 Rock group, with "The"
55 Hudson River fish
59 Poet's contraction
60 Sheepskin
61 Skating places
62 Kind of humor
63 Appointed
64 Brewer's necessity

DOWN
1 Dickie
2 Blue dye
3 Indolent
4 Composer Rorem and others
5 Fine and light
6 "Lost Horizon" director
7 Mona or Gary
8 NOW goal
9 Arlo, to Woody
10 Nettles hate
11 "The Redermaker" sculptress
12 Fr. verde
13 — mode Schen
18 Prefix used by wine lovers
22 Breakfast food
24 Patens
25 Kind of tide
26 Passed easily
27 Singer Horne
28 Incongruity
29 Sprite
30 Rift depot
31 Asian textile fiber
33 Playwright Esprold
34 Drenches
35 Nobelist for lit 1948
37 Mailed beatings
38 Armorial bearings
42 Lady Hamilton e lover
44 Yawn
45 Marry again
46 Clear sky
47 Fake
48 Man, for example
50 Enjoy a restaurant
51 Tony's cousin
52 Impersonal supernatural force
53 Invites
56 Dam org.
57 Edge
58 Dukes visitor: Abbr.

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:





By Nancy S. Kass
©1994 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 9/16/94

Land Without Laughter By R. Maley

Your Horoscope

By Joane Dixon

ARIES (March 21–April 19): An old friend or former associate could unknowingly jeopardize an important deal. Curb your temper. Confiding in your loved ones releases tension. Resist the urge to go on a shopping spree.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20): A good day to socialize with newcomers. An interest in literature or the arts should be pursued. Experts can help you find a commercial outlet for your talents. Romantic vibrations fill the air tonight.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20): Do not expect too much cooperation today. You will have to blaze a new trail on your own. Get a handle on insurance and tax regulations by consulting experts. A legal matter is quickly resolved.

CANCER (June 21–July 22): Agreements signed today could get business back on track. Stay alert to avoid making careless mistakes. Questionable proposals deserve close scrutiny before you reach a decision.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 23): Balancing work with play is a real challenge today. Cooperative effort pays off handsomely at work. A raise or promotion may be in the offing. Expect to receive good news about a personal matter.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22): Check out certain rumors before making a financial commitment. Consult the professionals. A get could play a role in your life, so buy one.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22): You may have been something of a recluse recently. Getting out and about will improve both your outlook and your romantic ex. Confer with mate or partner before accepting or rejecting invitations.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21): A burst of activity at work puts you under special pressure. Be sure to take a midday break. You meet someone who could one day be a valuable contact.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21): Longtime friends can help you form an important new alliance. There may be strings attached. Pay more attention to community affairs. Loved ones need to know your intentions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19): Your efficiency is at a peak today. Financial, legal and insurance matters are in the spotlight. An expert could come up with quick answers. Tend credit card use; there are some alternatives.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18): A new romantic attachment could result from a chance meeting. Cultivate your plans for the future. Remember to bring your glasses when you attend a sporting event this weekend.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20): A bond of affection draws you to someone who is feeling under the weather. A business deal that recently seemed impossible may now become reality. Consider an family members or longtime friends.

Quote of the Day

"It's not a lie, it's a terminal inexactitude."
—Alexander Haig

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Tuna Melt	Chicken Tenders
Tacos	Linguini
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Tuna Melt	Chicken Tenders
Vegetable Tacos	Ratatouille

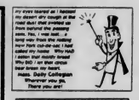
Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Jon Lupo
Copy Editor.....Jacob W. Michaels
Photo Technician.....Gordon Fenwick
Production Supervisor.....Tony Morse
Production.....Marni E. Helfner, Kevin Farrar, Wendy Rae Nutter, Christina Levere

SEMESTER MEMBERSHIP only $109

The GYM

AT MOUNTAIN FARMS MALL
Rt. 9 - Hadley • 584-2175



Sure I'm important! For one thing I own my own socks. Yes, you could call me a regular 'Do-it-yourselfer.' I love organizing my socks. Yes, it is one of my few joys. I know MANY things about my socks. I'd tell you about them... but I don't know you very well.

You may have germs.
COLLEGIAN
PLEASE REMOVE SHOES BEFORE ENTERING

Welcome back to lecture halls, all-nighters, pizza breakfasts, and Kinko's.

2½¢ copies kinko's the copy center

Offer applies to self-serve, black and white 81/2" x 11" copies on 20lb. white bond. One coupon per customer per visit. Not valid with other offers. Good through October 31, 1994 at the Kinko's listed.

AMHERST: 220 N. Pleasant St. 253-2543 Open 24 Hours
NORTHAMPTON: 34 Bridge St., 585-5000 (Across from the Post Office) HOURS: 8am to 12

UNIVERSITY MEN

FRATERNITIES?
Did You Ever Wonder About Fraternity Life?

ΑΔΡ ΑΕΠ ΑΧΡ
ΔΥ ΔΧ ΦΣΚ
ΦΚΣ ΦΜΔ ΛΧΑ
ΠΚΑ ΘΧ ΣΑΜ
ΣΦΕ ΖΒΤ ΖΨ

September 19th - 22nd
MONDAY 8:00 PM - 10:00 PM
TUESDAY 8:00 PM - 10:00 PM
WEDNESDAY 8:00 PM - 10:00 PM
THURSDAY 8:00 PM - 10:00 PM

RUSH EVENTS WILL BE HELD AT EVERY HOUSE ALL FOUR NIGHTS.

During these events you will be able to find out about Fraternity life.

The Academic Aspect
The Athletic Aspect
The Leadership Aspect
The Social Aspect

For Further Information call Greek Affairs or call Taylor/Rush Chairman 549-1409

"One day, I decided to sell my car and all my belongings, and buy a motorcycle like Peter Fonda in that motorcycle movie. To get the most people to see my ads, I placed a Collegian Classified. The responses were overwhelming, so I checked to make sure people were calling about my ad.

"Then I saw an ad for a job in Alaska canning fish for a living. I thought that was pretty cool so I applied.

"Needless to say, I got the job. Now I'm rollin' in the big bucks, all thanks to the Collegian."

Collegian Classifieds They really work. 545-3500

Classifieds

- 20¢ per word per day for students
- All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
- Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ACTIVITIES

Free bridge lessons UMass Bridge Club 9 lessons free book free T-shirt Weekly Thur 6-8pm Start 9/22 Bluewell Chris 5-4411

Wanted goalie to play intramural ice hockey. Call Dave at 253-7478.

BEER TAP FOR SALE

Cold plate with a two tap cooler and a CO2? tank. Great for parties or drunks. Call Stephen 253-7499. $325 or b/o

Recreational and competitive boxing lessons for men and women with retired professional G. Dana Burnpus. 549-5752

CHRISTIANS

Alliance Christian Fellowship adds value and balance to your UMass education. We're committed to personal discipleship training, outreach and spirit-filled fellowship and fun. FRIDAYS 7/mout Fellowship 7pm. Campus Center.

CHRISTIANS

Do you need $$$ for college??? WE have the solution. Guaranteed results. Write to: Corporate Scholarship Service, 2 Dearborn Terrace East, N. Reading, MA 01864 for free details.

COMPUTERS

BK Computers & Associates where systems. Parts including monmitors, drives, cards and more. Free estimate. 549-4362.

FOR RENT

For rent one room in a big new house. See it to believe it!!! Call Brian 253-2746

Fridge rentals 253-9742 free delivery.

Two rooms in private home. $300 each per month. Kitchen privileges. kosher/vegetarian preferred. Laundry, parking, furnished. 549-4853.

FOR SALE

Stereo equipment, used/ reconditioned, area's largest selection, priced to sell! Also tv's, vcr's, d/j/ pa equipment, instruments etc. We buy , sell, trade. Call SAV Exchange 9am-9pm. 256-0941.

Designer clothing for women. Thrift shop prices. Will deliver. 413 223-8624.

Furniture, drapes, rugs etc. Cheap. Call 549-1578.

IBM compatible XT computer with printer, mouse, software. Greaty shape. $340 or b/o. 253-2827.

Large couch $100 chair and footstool $50. octagonal coffee table $85. 885-8954.

Macintosh computer Complete system including printer only $500. Call Chris at 800 289 5685.

POSTER SALE Biggest and best selection. Choose from over 2000 different images. ROCK, OLD MASTERS (Monet, Dali, Van Gogh, Picasso, Escher, Matisse, Wyeth, and hundreds more!). MOVIE POSTERS, 3D'S, SPORTS, SCENIC LANDSCAPES, MUSIC, DANCE, SKIING, PERSONALITIES (Einstein, James Dean, Marilyn Monroe, and others!). TRAVEL, HUMOR, ROMANCE, PHOTOGRAPHY (Talbot, Ansel Adams, and others!) MOST IMAGES ONLY $5, $7, AND $9 each! See us at STUDENT UNION BALLROOM on MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 12TH THROUGH FRIDAY SEPTEMBER 16. The hours are 9 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. This sale is sponsored by WMUA 91.1 FM.

Solid oak triple dresser Excellent condition $75 or b/o. Call Kelly 253-9354.

Sony stereo components 80 watt receiver/ amplifier $200. Dual cassette deck w/ dual record $100. 5 disc changer $175. Remote that controls all also pair of Technics 150 watt speakers. Call 548-0857.

Toshiba T1200 laptop with mouse + world and star NX 1001 multifont printer. Call Alex 549-8114 with best offer.

Watch batteries ear piercing, eyeglass and jewelry repairs; glass openings. gifts from glass to gold; custom designed jewelry. Silverscape Designs 264 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-7324.

FREE

Free hamster with cage looking for a good home! Leave message 6-7301.

HELP WANTED

$363.60 Sell funny college T shirts. Profit $363.60. Risk free. Choose from 19 designs. Free catalogs 1 800 700 4250.

Babysitter/ mother's helper in Amherst. Sat and/ or Sun mornings. 8:30-12:30. Infant experience car, non-smoking. $5/hr. Call Robin 253-0860 9am-9pm please.

Boston Globe subscriptions delivery and marketing help wanted. Marketing 1st three weeks, flex hours. Delivery am all semester. All well paid! Call 259-1011.

Cruise ships now hiring earn up to $700/+ month working on cruise ships or land tour companies. World travel. Seasonal and full time employment available. No experience necessary. For more information call 1-206 634-0468 ext C50011.

Drivers wanted Trattoria Gepetto Italian restaurant, 1177 N. Pleasant St. Amherst. Apply in person after 3:00 pm. 549-7777.

Help wanted drivers needed to deliver Collegian Post $25 to $85 per week. Must be available in the morning. Call Jim at 549-2635 or stop by the Collegian office in the Campus Center basement.

Jobs for the environment /Grassroots political organizing. Earn $40-60/day. Very flexible hours/ casual atmosphere. Call Alex 258-6434.

Kitchen help and delivery persons wanted, nights and weekends, must be able to work 25 hours a week. apply at D.P. Dough.

Part time manager trainee Firestone needs assistant manager. Flexible work schedule/20-25 hours/week. Call Frank at Northampton at 586 1584. ($8/hour)

Receive up to 788 (800 dollars) in 18 months! For your amazing free report call 413-525-6480 Mon-Fri 9am-5pm.

Resort jobs earn to $17/hr and tips. Theme parks, hotels, spas, + more. Tropical + ski location. Destination's world wide. Call (206) 632-0150 ext R5011.

Responsible childcare companion for 11 yr old boy at our home in Leverett one eve a week plus some overnights. Need car 548-9057.

Spring Break '95 Sell trips, earn cash and go free!!! Student travel services is now hiring campus representatives. Lowest rates to Jamaica, Cancun, Daytona and Panama City Beach. Call 1-800 648-4849.

Telefund is hiring, where else can you sit around, talk on the phone, and earn $5.50 per hour? Great experience. Flexible hours call 545-3569 or stop by our office in the basement of Memorial Hall.

Tennis/Fitness club seeks babysitter for up to 18 hrs per week. $5 per hour plus free club membership. Phone Mira or Sunny at 549-3638.

Wanted!! America's fastest growing travel company seeking individuals to promote trips: Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida! Easy free travel, fantastic pay 1 800 426-7710.

Workstudy position available $5.50 /5 hr/wk. Flexible office work for public foundation. Call Nancy at Peace Development Fund. 256-8306.

Workstudy positions available in Sport Management. Must have computer skills and office experience preferred. Apply at 1 Curry Hicks. 545-0041.

MUSICIANS

Student alumni relatives is looking for musicians and singers for a band to play at our activities. For info call Robert/ Karen 5-7317/ 549-3958.

PINNOCHIO'S

Hiring driver, full or part time. Call 256-4110 or stop by 30 Belmont Walk. Ask for Bob.

ROOM WANTED

Amherst students Anyone who has a single in the Centre area and would like to switch for a single in the Southwest area, please call Cheryl at 549-1298.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female roommate wanted to share a large bedroom in a three bedroom condo. Partially furnished. $350 a month. For more info call 256-6966.

SERVICES

Medal search. Feb 1994. Grandpa Moore's regional medal search continues. Face test photos now being conducted by First Impressions Photography. Beginners and experienced models. Moms, females all categories welcome. 617 575 0787.

WANTED

Alan Drama and medieval performers. 2 UMass alumni seek medieval performers/jugglers/ armourer for overseas games of skill and wagers guests at their 1oth century wedding. Please have costume and desire for a good time. Bill/ Irene 584 4703.

Campus representative Fiesta products/ spring break trips "guaranteed" best prices + incentives. Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica, Padre + Florida. We handle the bookkeeping. You handle the sales. Call 1 800 222 4432.

Sports

Parker, Minutemen poised to take on Crusaders

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

Breon Parker has made an impact.

The star cornerback did it on the junior college level at Nassau Community College, and now he is doing it at the University of Massachusetts.

For the Minutemen's sake, Parker will hopefully make the same impact tomorrow afternoon at Fitton Field in Worcester, MA when Massachusetts takes on the Crusaders of Holy Cross at 1 p.m.

As for Parker, he has shaped himself into an All-American candidate after picking off seven passes last season, good enough for third in the Yankee Conference and eighth nationally. Just one year under the Minutemen system, and Parker is considered one of the best in the nation at his position.

Parker likes the preseason accolades, but doesn't get caught up in it.

"I didn't really expect any of this," said Parker. "I just play as hard as I can play. I can't really choose those things, they're out of my power. I just keep it in the back of my mind, and it'll be something to look back on when I'm done.

"At the same time, all of this is because of the other guys, as well."

Parker, who was the Division I-AA and Sports Illustrated Division I Defensive Player of the Week after intercepting three passes and returning one for a TD against Rhode Island last season, no doubt has the athletic ability.

Minutemen coach Mike Hodges knew the 5-foot 10, 180- pound Parker had the athletic strengths when he arrived, and he has seen exceptional improvement in his decision-making in the secondary.

"Breon's an excellent defensive back," said Hodges. "He's playing like a veteran. He's learning to rely not only on his athletic ability, but he's also a smart ballplayer."

Parker sees the difference between the JUCO level to Division I-AA. He has seen it get tougher — and he has adjusted pretty well to it in just over a year and a half of being a Minuteman.

"I remember coming here for spring practice [of 1993], and seeing a difference between the two," said Parker. "In junior college, we just blitzed most of the time, covering one man. Here, you have to watch the tight end, you have to read the other guys as well as the quarterback."

"It took some time, but in spring practice, you learn how to deal with it. Right about now, I'm used to most of it."

COURTESY UMASS MEDIA RELATIONS

Breon Parker is an All-America candidate at cornerback for UMass.

Parker is also getting used to making big-time plays, as well. Hodges recalls how Parker sometimes may play out of position, but ends up making the play on many occasions.

"[Breon] has a knack for making the big plays," said Hodges. "I've been a here a long time, and I have seen a lot of corners, and this guy can really play."

"I really couldn't tell you [what's going on in my mind]," said Parker. "It's just playing, being instinctive, working hard as I can. At the same time, you can't worry about the outcome."

Parker and his main secondary mate, senior Tony Williams, compliment each other. While Parker garnered the most interceptions on the Minutemen last season, Williams tied for the team-lead in forced fumbles with three. Both just step it up a notch at the most opportune times.

"It's like a mirror image," said Parker. "I look over there, and Tony can make the big plays. Somctimes we run over to each other after a big play, or I just look up, and point the finger.

"We just keep each other going."

As far as this season is concerned, Parker knows that practices are key in the Minutemen's success.

"We have a lot of young players, so we're trying to take it practice by practice. After that, we'll worry about the team we're playing next. We cannot afford to look down the line," said Parker.

Turn to PARKER, page 8

Beaten by baseball

By Arthur Stapleton Jr.
Collegian Staff

Sean Horgan should not have been in Amherst last Wednesday afternoon. He should have been in Boston, readying for a trip to Fenway Park.

However, instead of seeing the Baltimore Orioles and the Boston Red Sox play baseball, Horgan was in Rafters having lunch with the chair of the University of Massachusetts journalism department Howard Ziff due to the Major League Baseball players' strike. Only two hours later, MLB's acting-Commissioner Bud Selig called for the end of the season, which included the cancellation of the World Series.

Horgan, the Red Sox beat writer for the Hartford Courant and a 1979 graduate of the University of Massachusetts, reminisced with Ziff, his former professor, about UMass alums Peter Pascarelli and Steve Buckley; simultaneously in Milwaukee, Selig sent a fax which wiped out the World Series for the first time since 1904.

Throughout the strike, fans spent the time arguing about which side was at fault for the strike. According to Horgan, the media was expected to choose sides as well; he said he believed many reporters would side with the players.

"I think the media in general is like everyone else, in that [we] are just disgusted with both sides," said Horgan. "I think if you took a vote, the media would probably come down on the side of the players; but it's a win on points, there's no knock-out here."

When the strike hit 36 days ago, Horgan's role as beat writer suddenly changed from covering a sport to covering labor negotiations. He said it wasn't too difficult to make the transition.

"It's a funny thing about being a sportswriter. Newspapers ask sportswriters to do a lot of different types of reporting," said Horgan, who began his career as a business writer for the Greenfield Recorder, the first of several stops before landing the spot with the Courant. "We're asked to cover games, we're asked to be financial writers [in order to deal with] contracts and franchises, and we're asked to cover labor stories."

For the first two weeks of the strike, Horgan

Turn to BASEBALL, page 8

Men's soccer loses to Connecticut

By Brian Gormley
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's soccer team missed their chance to avenge last season's 1-0 loss to the University of Connecticut, dropping a 2-0 decision to the Huskies Wednesday night.

UConn	2
UMass	0

UConn, ranked fourth in New England, upended the seventh-ranked Minutemen with unassisted goals by Dan Sapieriza at 5:57 of the first half and by Eric Barbieri at 68:06 of the second half. UConn goalkeeper Sloan Spaeth had five saves.

The Huskies improved their record to 3-1-0 while the Minutemen dropped to 2-2-1.

UMass Assistant Coach Steve Rammel said the Minutemen were not able to match the solid play of Connecticut.

"I don't think we played well, not as well as we have and not as well as we can," said Rammel. "Connecticut came to play. They are very predictable, their athletes are very strong and they are, for the most part, fast."

The shutout was not caused by a lack of scoring opportunities. UMass matched Connecticut's 13 shots-on- goal but were unable to convert on these opportunities. Freshman forward Mike Butler had the Minutemen's best chance to break into the scoring column early in the first half, when his shot from 15 yards out glanced just wide of the net.

Rammel said the reason they were unable to convert on any of those 13 scoring opportunities had more to do with UMass having an off night than anything special done by the Huskies. He also said that the team needed someone to step up and lead the Minutemen on a scoring drive.

"Last night we needed a guy to say, 'I'll be the guy, I'll win the game.' We're down 1-0, but there is still plenty of time,'" he said. "We let one slip away, and I hope it does not come back to hurt us at the end of the season."

Rammel did say he was pleased by the play of senior goalkeeper Mark Wolf (six saves), junior defenders Benny Sheally and Dan Chagnon and sophomore midfielder Kevin Martin.

"Mark [Wolf] has been consistent from day one, he is a solid player and he has done everything we have asked. Benny [Sheally] has matured with each game and Dan Chagnon is a winner and an

Turn to SOCCER, page 8

Ineligibility may cause men's tennis to forfeit against Wesleyan College

By Jamie D. Bearse
Collegian Staff

It's already match point against the University of Massachusetts men's tennis team even before the opening serve today at Boyden courts against Wesleyan College.

According to Coach Judy Dixon, three UMass players are ineligible to play today, threatening a UMass forfeit.

Among the three ineligibles is top seed senior Tim Lipsky. Lipsky took the year off last year and took classes in Denmark. According to Dixon, under the new NCAA Clearinghouse eligibility rules, Lipsky's Denmark credits must transfer before he is able to play.

"It's frustrating. I have mounds of paper work that makes it nearly impossible to get ready," said Dixon. "Now I don't know if I'll have enough warm bodies on the team to save a forfeit."

Dixon is not optimistic about a UMass victory over Wesleyan if she cannot get all three of her players eligible by 3 p.m.

"I've already spent too much time on trying to get my players eligible and all the paper work in oppose to getting them ready," said Dixon.

Along with top seed Lipsky, No. 4 seed Justin Lynn, and No. 6 seed Eric Peters are also in danger of having to sit out today's match.

"Lynn is a transfer student stricken with transfer credit problems because he didn't graduate from his community college," said Dixon.

Peters is currently spending most of his time in Whitmore this week instead of on the court trying to get a grade change in order to be eligible to play.

Dixon needs at least 1 out of the 3 players to be eligible to stop a forfeit.

The eligibility crisis has forced the possibility of freshman Kieth Kellog to play today. Dixon will also have to mix match doubles partners in order to have enough teams to play all the matches.

Despite UMass's eligibility problems, the team will have a tough test against Wesleyan that will be decided on the "lower ladder" of the seeds, according to Dixon.

"What will determine if we win will come in the No. 4, No. 5, and No. 6 seeds and the No. 2 and No. 3 doubles," said Dixon.

UMass played Wesleyan for the first time last year squeaking out a close 5-4 victory.

Looking beyond the eligibility problems, Dixon is excited about the upcoming year with a goal of having a winning record. UMass went 8-10 last year finishing th in the Atlantic 10.

This year, Dixon is optimistic of the team being 5-2 by the end of the fall to prepare for a tough spring schedule. Dixon also hopes to finish at least sixth in the Atlantic 10.

"We should have a winning season, they know what's expected of them," said Dixon.

Deion Sanders signs with the San Francisco 49ers

By Dennis Georgatos
Associated Press

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — Deion Sanders went from jobless baseball player to well-paid defensive back yesterday with the stroke of a pen.

Sanders formally signed a one-year, $1.1 million contract with the San Francisco 49ers. He could make an additional $750,000 in incentives.

"This is truly a dream come true," Sanders said at a news conference.

The flamboyant Sanders said money was not much of a factor in his decision, and he accepted less to play for the 49ers.

"Winning was a factor and I know we're going to win in San Francisco," he said. "They've won four Super Bowls. I'm here to make it five."

The signing ended his free-agent tour where it started. San Francisco was the first of several National Football League teams he visited after the baseball strike began Aug. 12. He was playing in the outfield for the Cincinnati Reds until the walkout, and delayed signing an NFL contract until the baseball season was canceled on Wednesday.

Sanders, who took part in a light workout with his new team this morning, appeared at the news conference in a 49ers sweatshirt and shorts.

Sanders will wear No. 21, the same number he wore last season with the Atlanta Falcons.

San Francisco coach George Seifert recalled it was the same number worn by former 49ers cornerback Eric Wright, one of the best defensive backs in the club's history.

"Now Deion is going to take this (number) to new heights," Seifert said.

Sanders said he hoped to play in Sunday's game against the Los Angeles Rams, but added, "We're going to leave that up to the coach here" as he patted Seifert on the back.

In another move, the 49ers signed former Pro Bowl defensive end Charles Mann, who was released by the Washington Redskins. Waived were cornerback Adrian Hardy and defensive tackle Artie Smith, both second-year players.

In their bid to sign Sanders, the 49ers freed $1.3 million under the salary cap by restructuring the contracts of linebackers Gary Plummer and Ken Norton and safety Tim McDonald.

Just two weeks ago, 49ers president Carmen Policy said the 49ers couldn't afford Sanders because of salary-cap constraints. Sanders becomes the sixth defensive free agent added to the team. San Francisco (1-1) earlier added Norton, Plummer, Toi Cook, Rickey Jackson and Richard Dent.

Seifert has called Sanders the best defensive back in the game today. Players agreed his addition will make a huge difference and believe he'll fit right in with the team.

"He's a hard worker and a great talent. A lot of that other stuff is just show," said tight end Brent Jones.

"Deion's a great player and he brings a lot," said McDonald, who was among the players agreeing to renegotiated contracts. "He brings excellent man to man coverage skills. He brings a lot of charisma and a lot of excitement and I think he's all business once he steps on the football field."

"He's another Pro Bowler. You've got to like that," added Plummer. "They (49ers coaches) consider him to be the premier cover corner in the league. Everyone knows it's a big blow losing Richard Dent (to a knee injury), so here's a guy that could add another dimension to your defense."

Collegian picks 25 most important people in sports

Following suit from Sports Illustrated's 40 most important people in sports since 1954, the Collegian sports staff has compiled a list of the top 25 most important people in sports since 1980, the goal being to make it from our generation.

Unlike SI, we have no horses included.

1. Michael Jordan – Considered by many to be the greatest basketball player to ever play in the NBA. He cut his brilliant career short to try his hand at baseball.

2. Earvin "Magic" Johnson – Co-captain of the Dream Team, led the Lakers to five NBA titles in his career.

3. Larry Bird – Resurrected the Celtics championship tradition and helped lead them to three titles.

4. Joe Montana – Led the SanFrancisco 49ers to four Super Bowls. Considered one of the best quarterbacks ever.

5. Wayne Gretzky – Holds every major NHL scoring record, turning the Edmonton Oilers into a dynasty.

6. Nolan Ryan – Major league baseball's all-time strike out leader.

7. Mike Tyson – Flamboyant heavyweight boxing champion. Currently in prison for rape.

8. Carl Lewis – Ruled the sprinting world for a decade and has the most ever wins in the long jump.

9. Martina Navratilova – "Queen of Centre Court." Considered by many to be the greatest women's tennis player ever.

10. David Stern – As commisioner of the NBA, brought league to its greatest heights.

11. Pete Rose – Baseball's all-time hit leader, banned for gambling.

12. Cal Ripken Jr.– Baseball's most consistent shortstop, is approaching Lou Gehrig's consecutive game streak.

13. Jerry Rice – Greatest wide receiver ever. Barring injury he will shatter the record book before he retires.

14. Lawrence Taylor – Redefined linebacker position. Helped lead Giants to two Super Bowls.

15. Walter Payton – NFL's all-time leading rusher.

16. Peter Ueberroth – Baseball Commissioner. President of the Olympic Committee.

17. John McEnroe – Tennis has not been the same since the flamboyant McEnroe called it quits.

18. Jackie Joyner-Kersee – Top heptathalete of all time.

19. Pete Rozelle – Helped raise the NFL into the institutional success that it is today.

20. Mike Krzyzewski – Coached Duke University to back to back NCAA basketball titles in 1991 and 1992.

21. Bill Walsh – Turned 49ers into the "team of the '80's." His offensive scheme is still widely used.

22. Jimmy Johnson – Coached Cowboys to two Super Bowls and the Miami Hurricanes to a NCAA title.

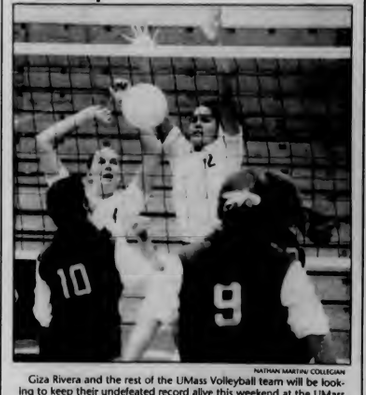
23. Steffi Graf – Dominated women's tennis in '80's and 90's.

24. Mike Eruzione – Scored game winning goal against the Russians in the 1980 Olympics as the U.S. shocked the world to take the gold medal.

25. Bob Costas – Sportscaster of the 1980's and 1990's. Considered one of the best minds in sports journalism.

Any comments on this will be welcomed. Send them with name and phone number to 113 Campus Center Basement.

Heads up!



NATHAN MARTIN/ COLLEGIAN

Giza Rivera and the rest of the UMass Volleyball team will be looking to keep their undefeated record alive this weekend at the UMass Classic.

Sports Notice:

There will be open tryouts for anyone interested in the University of Massachusetts Diving Team starting next Monday night. The tryout schedule is:
Monday, Wednesday and Friday 7–9 p.m.
Tuesday and Thursday 6–7:30 p.m.
For more information, call Guy Pollino 5–1813 or 549–4251.

Holy Cross descimated by UMass Minutemen

Led by the 308 yards from Fank Alessio and Rene Ingoglia, UMass pounded Holy Cross 32-0 for its first win of the year. (Story page 8).

"The streak goes on" for woman's soccer

Two All-American candidates propel Minutewomen to fifth straight win. Women's soccer struts it's stuff once again. (Story on page 8).

Stereolab, Johnston release new records

Stereolab takes pop music in a new direction, while Indie cult hero Daniel Johnston releases his major label debut. (Arts and Living, page 5).

Weekend Forecast

Mostly sunny, high 65 to 70. Northwest wind 10 to 20 mph. Clear and cool tonight, low around 40. Expect sunny and mild weather Tuesday and Wednesday.

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 65	HIGH: 70	HIGH: 72
LOW: 50	LOW: 55	LOW: 55

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 5 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Monday, September 19, 1994

Local schools to address racism

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

A young girl attends Saturday's rally on the Amherst Common to speak out against racism in Amherst public schools.

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

Following an attempted assault on an Amherst Junior High School girl, members of the community and local area met to protest the attack and discuss change.

The Amherst Community of Concerned Parents, Students and Educators held a rally Saturday afternoon to address the issue of racism in Amherst's public schools. There is a history of racial harassment in the schools that have allegedly been neglected by the administration.

"Last year there was a walk-out, too. They told us they'd wait for another incident to happen, and then they'd take care of it," Danielle Lesure, a ninth grade student at Amherst Junior High, said. "You wait for another incident and someone could be dead."

The rally came in response to a racial incident that took place at the Amherst Junior High School last Monday in which an eighth grade student was allegedly strangled.

Officials will not release the student's name.

Dr. Gus Sayer, superintendent of the Amherst-Pelham Regional School District, said the student, a Black Muslim, received several threatening, racist letters over a three day period. The letters consisted of racist material, all were signed "KKK" and one letter had a picture of a Negro that had been hanged, he said.

Last Monday, Sayer said the girl was allegedly assaulted in the girl's bathroom.

"On Monday at midday the girl reported that while she was in a bathroom, two other girls came up behind her, covered her eyes and mouth, tightened a scarf around her neck and threatened her," Sayer said.

The Amherst Police Department was notified of the assault and is now investigating the case along with the school department administration.

The girl was not physically injured and did not receive medical attention. On Friday, Sayer said she had not been to school the rest of the week, but said he hopes she will return soon.

"It could've been prevented if there'd been enough people to be on guard throughout the entire building, or if we could've had someone following her at all times," Sayer said.

Friday afternoon about 70 students from the junior high and high school walked out of classes to protest the alleged attack, marching down North Pleasant Street to the Amherst Common.

Sayer said the march illustrated a "common symbol of unity" among the students. He said the students' reaction was influenced in a large part to the education they receive and the diversity of the area.

"The students have a strong exposure to diversity in the community," Sayer said.

Saturday's rally was more organized than the students' demonstration, with a variety of speakers from the area, including student leaders from the regional schools, Affirmative Action officer Jaqueline Bearce, and Ishmael Ali from the Muslim Society of Western Massachusetts.

People of all ages attended, many toting signs along with them. A good deal were not from the area, but came in support of the cause.

Askia Muhammad, an Islamic clergyman from Springfield, said he came to the rally in support of the Islamic victim and her family, he said.

"From my understanding, there have been several incidents," Muhammad said. "Once they held a parent- student meeting and students came forward with unreported cases."

The situation with racism in Amherst has been "broiling over the years," according to Reynolds Winslow, branch president of the NAACP and director of the UMass minority engineering program.

This is an underlying problem in the community, not just the schools, he said. "The foundation goes very deep and stems from family unit at home."

In the past, Sayer said there has been a problem with racial graffiti on bathroom walls, lockers, and with hate letters.

However, Sayer said he believes the school district provides an awareness of multiculturalism and diversity, starting in the elementary schools. Overall, Sayer said he believes the education students receive in diversity and multicultural issues is effective but, he said it does not stop all possible racial problems.

Students from Amherst public schools expressed that there is a problem concerning the administration's neglect of racial problems.

Lesure said she had a friend who, while in the seventh grade, received five notes that said, "Niggers die." She never reported it. "She didn't tell nobody cause she knew nobody'd do nothing about it."

"The students all be going to school for learning and all they're doing is fighting, and the school doesn't do noth-

Turn to RACISM, page 2

UMass develops auto simulator

By Heather Redfern
Collegian Staff

In an effort to reduce the number of fatalities caused by vehicle accidents, the construction of an automobile collision-avoidance system is underway at the University of Massachusetts' School of Engineering.

Donald Fisher, associate professor in the department of industrial engineering and operations and coordinator of project MIDAS (Massachusetts Interactive Driving and Acoustic Simulator), has recently been awarded federal and corporate grants from Mili-Tech, the National Science Foundation (NSF) to construct a state-of-the-art driving simulator. The University and the School of Engineering have also contributed funds.

"The main purpose of the simulator is to develop and test what kind of signals should be used to warn drivers [of possible accidents], said Fisher.

Fisher said it will cost roughly $50,000 to create a fixed device consisting of a real Saturn SL-1 Sedan mounted on a "road feel" motion.

Surrounding the vehicle, outside scenes appear on a 180 degree forward view screen and a 60 degree rear view screen.

Outside scenes consist of computer-generated animation display roads, bridges, as well as external moving objects such as pedestrians and other vehicles.

Fisher said the system will be used to warn drivers ahead of time of potential accidents.

Included in the project is the development of a new eye- tracking sensor that will "read" the eyes of the test driver 200 times per second as he/she responds to auditory, visual, and physical stimuli while the "simulated car" drives down the road.

"We need to better understand how to direct signals to drivers," said Fisher.

The University project will also include discovering methods on how to warn drivers that he/she is falling asleep.

"Twenty-five percent of accidents are caused by drowsy drivers," said Fisher.

According to Fisher, the development of an advanced travel information system which will work as a computerized map inside the vehicle is also in mind as part of the project.

The advanced travel information system will enable a driver to use the system to lead he/she to a desired destination having directions appear on a computer screen within the vehicle.

Plans for the completion of a fully operational simulator system are for the Spring of 1995 said Fisher.

As a mathematical psychologist, Fisher concentrates in designing quantitative models for why humans behave the way they do.

The engineering department will work in collaboration with the University's psychology, communication disorders, and exercise science departments to develop the best possible methods to test and create auditory warning signals for the system.

Fisher said driving schools and police departments will have access to use and discuss the system.

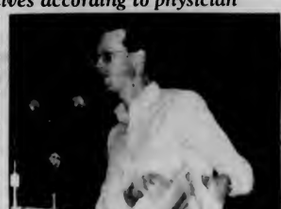
University staff and students were able to see a sneak preview of a similar simulator created by the American/Australian partnership, Illusion Technology, this past weekend.

As part of a 16 city U.S. tour, Illusion Technology is displaying their simulator known as REAL DRIVE.

Author critical of Haitian policy

Media misrrepresents US' motives according to physician

By Ben Geman
Collegian Staff



JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

Author Paul Farmer said past U.S. intervention in Haiti has repressed democracy in a speech at the Campus Center Saturday.

The United States' history of intervention in Haiti has brought suffering to the island, and the real motives behind past and current intervention are not brought out in the establishment press, according to a physician who spent eight years treating the island's poor.

Paul Farmer, physician and author of The Uses of Haiti, argued that previous U.S. intervention in Haiti has been self- serving and repressive toward Haitian movements for democracy in a lecture bearing the title of his book held Saturday in the Campus Center.

"Are we suddenly on the side of democracy? Is that was this invasion is about?" said Farmer. "If we regard Haiti as distant instead of deeply tied to our economic and political system...then we're never going to understand what's happening now."

Farmer showed that the police and military responsible for torturing and killing Haitians were trained and financed by the U.S. both during and after the dictatorships of President Duvalier and his son, which lasted from 1957 to 1986.

He criticized President Clinton for failing to draw attention to the history of U.S. support for the Haitian army in announcing plans for a U.S. invasion of the island in his televised speech Thursday night.

"We have always supported the Haitian army. How much of a sense of that did you get listening to Bill Clinton?" said Farmer.

Far from acting in the interests of the Haitian people, the U.S. has consistently fed the oppression of the Haitian poor by acting to maintain a favorable investment climate for U.S. corporations, according to Farmer.

In The Uses of Haiti, Farmer notes the U.S. Embassy in Haiti opposed democratically-elected Haitian president Jean- Bertrand Aristide's attempt to raise wages in American- owned factories in Haiti from 14 cents per hour.

Also, Farmer said the U.S. has ignored the trade embargo designed to force out the ruling Haitian military, which ousted Aristide in a 1991 coup. In the first nine months of 1992, the U.S. engaged in $265 million in trade with Haiti.

He also questioned the motives behind attacks on Aristide's credibility by U.S. officials as attempts to justify future efforts to control the Haitian government when a seemingly imminent invasion returns him to power. Farmer pointed to the CIA's acknowledged forgery of a psychiatric report claiming Aristide is unbalanced.

Farmer blamed the mainstream press of failing to acknowledge U.S. responsibility for Haitian poverty and oppression.

"We can't rely on the establishment press to supply a reliable version of what's happening in Haiti. If there are errors or omissions, they will almost inevitably serve the powerful," said Farmer.

He said the current debate over a Haitian invasion is framed in the press in a manner not accurately portraying the real motives of the U.S.

The attacks on Clinton's policy from the political right argue that we don't have sufficient interest in Haiti to justify the loss of American lives, while Clinton responds the need to restore democracy and improve the situation for Haitians is reason enough for invasion.

This dichotomy, according to Farmer, is misleading because it assumes U.S. interevention will support Haitian democracy, which U.S. involvement in Haiti has not done in the past.

"The Uses of Haiti" was co-sponsored by the Traprock Peace Center, the University of Massachusetts Economic Department and the American Friends Service Committee.

New tutorial center available in tower library, graduation rates expected to increase as result

By Damien Becker
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts is offering a new program to offer scholastic aid to students.

The newly opened Learning Resources Center is located on the tenth floor of the Tower Library.

The center is the first stage of a plan that was started last year. Based on a survey of students and teachers, it is designed to raise the proportion of graduates, and retain more freshman.

Due to its expected effect on the University in general, the Center was hurriedly pushed through Administration in order to get it running this fall, said Norman Aitken, deputy provost.

The center offers tutoring in most freshman and sophomore level courses in all mathematics, sciences and languages. Tutors will also be available for economics, philosophy, and English as a Second Language.

There will be six tutors on hand at all times covering a range of subjects. These tutors were trained over the summer by Humberto Segura, former Supervisor for the Multi-media Center at the University of Houston, now Director of the Learning Resources Center. Segura trained 40 tutors to staff the center and expects the numbers to grow.

"This will be a center where peers teach peers."
-Humberto Segura

Segura said he will be offering a semester-long class which will teach the basics of tutoring. The class, a two credit course, will begin Sept. 29 and will meet on Thursdays from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Tutors of the center may receive international accreditation through the College Reading and Learning Association, which is in the process of determining the center's eligibility for such recognition.

With this accreditation, tutors will receive a certificate allowing them to tutor anywhere in the country and abroad.

There are also 20 computers which are equipped with CD-ROM readers and additional software covering all the subjects offered by the center. The computer systems offer interactive programs equipped with microphones and speakers that accelerate the learning process. For example, the Berlitz Language Programs are designed to correct grammar and can even correct speaking techniques.

Through computerized registration, students will be able to record suggestions, feedback, and recommendations.

"This will be a center where peers teach peers," said Segura. "We want to get as much feedback from the students as possible in order to focus our efforts on them. I expect it to be a great program that will benefit all students who take part."

This is the first year any tutoring center will open on campus. It is available on a walk-in basis, from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday.

'Opportunity' a concern for candidate

By Ben Geman
Collegian Staff

Democratic gubernatorial candidate Mark Roosevelt, the front-runner heading into tomorrow's Democratic primary, will face an uphill battle to unseat Governor William Weld in November's election if he wins Tuesday.

Roosevelt, a four-term state representative from Beacon Hill, has campaigned as a "new democrat," staking out a moderate position on welfare and attacking Weld for being "soft" on crime. He talked to the Daily Collegian about his campaign platform in a telephone interview on Friday.

Daily Collegian: A Sept. 16 Boston Globe editorial endorsing you in Tuesday's primary argues public education should be the state's top priority. As governor, what steps will you take to support public higher education in Massachusetts?

Mark Roosevelt: A great many. The tragedy of what's happened with UMass and Massachusetts public higher education in general has been that the burden of the financing has been too much on the students and too little on the state. UMass deserves more support. We need to better integrate our public universities into our economic revitalization. UMass has the largest plastics polymer research center in the world. Plastics and the plastics industry should be a major growth industry in the area. I would like to try to work with [UMass President] Michael Hooker to make sure these kinds of things happen. Mainly, I want to make sure that all students in my state can afford to go to UMass if they get in. The fees are outrageous. I've fought the cutbacks in scholarship money. I've been chairman of the [state Legislature's] Education Committee and I've been fighting this fight for a long time.

DC: Many students fear that after they leave UMass they're going to be without health insurance. How will you approach health care in Massachusetts?

MR: I hope very much the federal government provides universal health care. I'm a strong supporter of it. Every job has to carry health insurance with it. Students, especially those in between jobs, often fall between the cracks. That's why we need universal coverage. I'm unconvinced the state can do that alone. The federal government must act.

DC: You have mentioned that you see this campaign as an opportunity to redefine what the Democratic Party stands for in Massachusetts.

MR: My philosophy is too make us the party of opportunity again. Opportunity is good schools, K-12 and public higher education, and good jobs. The Democratic Party got into believing there was a government answer to every problem. There is not. We got into thinking you can help people who don't want to help

Turn to ROOSEVELT, page 3

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Monday, Sept. 19

Book–buying — The Textbook Annex is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Opening reception — "Foundation Exhibition: Works from First and Second Year BFA Students," Herter Hall Gallery, 5 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Italian Club — Meeting, knowledge of Italian language not required, Herter Hall third floor lounge, 5 p.m.

Hillel Council — Hillel House, 5 p.m.

Candle lighting — Eve of Sukkot, Chabad House, 6:33 p.m. Information: 549–4094.

Dinner/service — Sukkot Eve, Hillel House, dinner at 6 p.m., service at 7 p.m. Dinner reservations: 549–1710.

Bolwood Project — Recruitment and information night for student volunteers, Campus Center room 168C, 7 p.m.

Lecture — "A Personal Perspective on Creating the Valley Lesbian Community: 1968–present," Pamela Kimmell and Kaymarion Raymond, Campus Center room 917, 7 p.m.

Service — Sukkah, Chabad House, 7 p.m. Information: 549–4094.

Collegian meeting — For new and returning graphics, business and newsroom staff, Campus Center room 101, 7:30 p.m.

Tuesday, Sept. 20

New members meeting — Alliance for Student Power, Campus Center room 804, 6:30 p.m. Information: Ken Miller, 665–3471.

LBGA Infosocial — Campus Center room 803, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Speakers Bureau — New members training, Program for GLB Concerns Office, Crampton House, 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. Information: 545–4824.

Reading — John Ash, Wootton's, 19 No. Pleasant St., Amherst, 8 p.m.

Lecture — Lost and Rediscovered: The Historic Gardens of Wales, McConnell Hall 103, Smith College, 9 a.m. to 10 a.m., No fee, Information: 585–2748.

Sukkot Services — Morning services 10 a.m., Chabad House, Information: 549–4094.

Music — Tregar & Shank Team Up. Faculty recital, Sponsored by Department of Music and Dance, Bezanson Recital Hall, University of Massachusetts, 8 p.m.

Special Event — Healthy, Wealthy and Wise? Lecture on health care in the 90s, Main lecture hall, Holyoke College, 7:30 p.m.

Film — Not at the Mall: A Series of Film Experiences You Won't find Anywhere Else, Bartlett Hall auditorium, University of Massachusetts, 7 p.m., No fee.

Wednesday, Sept. 21

Lecture — Latina/lesbian comic Marga Gomez, LBG Studies Lecture series, ninth floor Campus Center, 12 p.m. to 1:30 p.m.

Theater/comedy — Marga Gomez in Cheva, $3.50 Five College students and seniors, $6 general public, Bowker Auditorium, 8 p.m. Tickets: Fine Arts Center Box Office, 545–2511.

Debate Union — First meeting held today, Machmer lobby, University of Massachusetts, 5:30 p.m.

Lecture — An Adoptee's Dreams, poetry reading, Seelye Hall, room 201, Smith College, 7:30 p.m.

Thursday, Sept. 22

Theater/comedy — Marga Gomez in Cheva, $3.50 Five College students and seniors, $6 general public, Bowker Auditorium, 8 p.m. Tickets: Fine Arts Center Box Office, 545–2511.

Just For Fun — Chabad House Sukkah Party, Chabad House, 8 p.m., Information: 549–4094.

Upcoming

Pond clean–up — Volunteers needed for campus pond clean–up to be held Sept. 27 and 28, 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. Sign–up: Karen Drumm, 545–2317.

Blood Drives — Sept. 20 and 21, Campus Center, 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

racism

continued from page 1

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

Protestors display signs expressing their opposition to recent racist acts at Saturday's rally on the Amherst Common.

ing about it," Jessica Gladu, a former student from Amherst's public schools, said.

Amherst 10th grader Mandisa Barnes, who claimed to be very close to the victim of the recent assault, said that she could not understand how this all got kept quiet.

"She told them about the letters threatening her and they didn't take her seriously. They should've been stopped after the first letter," she said.

"My sense is that there is this police mentality; that the school treated it as if the solution was to catch the perpetrator, and they kept their eye on the victim at 'peak times'," Julia Halevy, an Amherst parent and diversity teacher, said.

This was the wrong approach, according to Halevy. They should have publicized the threats and raised consciousness of the problem, so the other kids could have protected her, she said.

Catching the "perpetrator" is not the answer; the perpetrator represents a part of our community, Halevy said. Emphasis should be put on education.

Open Your Mind

Sigma Delta Tau Fall Rush!!

All University Women are invited to join us for fall rush this week:

9/20 Open House 8-10 PM
9/22 House Tours 6:30-8:30 PM

Please call Kristin at 549-7361 for more information.

Check for a Collegian ad and in the personals for next weeks dates too!!

Undergraduate Football Season Tickets

will be available for pickup starting today from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. at the Curry Hicks Cage box office with a valid I.D.

$129/Semester

Co-Ed FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA Co-Ed

The Valley's Leading Weight Training Facility
175 University Drive • Amherst • 253-3539

WALKING DISTANCE

UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
GRANT DEADLINE FRIDAY, SEPT. 23
GRANTS FOR:
• Visual Art & Design
• Literature, Theater, Performance Art
• Film & Video
• Music
• Artistic components in multicultural programs
PROPOSALS ARE ENCOURAGED FROM STUDENT GROUPS
Applications, guidance & information: Student Activities Office or the Arts Council 101 Hasbrouck 545-0202

If it ain't broke, we don't fix it.

MONRO MUFFLER/BRAKE

mufflers • brakes • shocks • springs • alignments
tires • front wheel drive experts

Hadley: 360 Russell St.....586-0892
Northampton: 326 King St.....586-3266
Chicopee: 461 Memorial Dr.....594-9161
Wilbraham: 1971 Boston Road.....543-8027
W. Springfield: 777 Riverdale St.....739-3860

90 days same as cash!

Coupon Specials

Monro Muffler Brake
Oil, lube & filter $16.99
Includes up to 5 quarts Kendall motor oil, new Kendall oil filter, chassis lube and free undercar inspection. Available for most vehicles. Please call for an appointment. Additional charge for filters on some vehicles.
Coupon valid through 10/22/94 7777

Monro Muffler Brake
$20 off wheel alignments
Take $20 off our regular price on any 2-wheel or 4-wheel alignment service with this coupon. Coupon cannot be used in conjunction with any other offer. Please call for an appointment.
Coupon valid through 10/22/94 7778

40,000 mile limited treadwear warranty from $37.95
Computer alignment steel radius rodder
Many other sizes and styles available

Free brake inspection any time!
With no obligation on your part. We only make repairs with your permission. We only recommend repairs if they are necessary.

RESERVE OFFICERS' TRAINING CORPS

BELIEVE IT OR NOT, THIS GUY IS IN CLASS.

If you're looking for excitement and adventure, you'll find it when you enroll in Army ROTC. It's not your ordinary college elective.

NO OBLIGATION TO ENROLL!
FOR MORE INFORMATION:
CONTACT CAPTAIN PAUL GUELLE
545-2321

ARMY ROTC
THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE.

THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHEERST
CENTER FOR
ORGANIZATION ADVISING & PROGRAMMING
Proudly Announces
6TH ANNUAL
STUDENT LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE

ties that bind

gain new skills
sharpen old skills
connect with other students

Open to all members of RSOs/Businesses/RAs

Registration is limited SO . . . register NOW in COAP

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1994
10:00 AM - 5:00 PM
CAMPUS CENTER/
STUDENT UNION

REGISTRATION DEADLINE SEPTEMBER 23
416 STUDENT UNION
CALL 545-3600

Roosevelt

continued from page 1

themselves. You can't. We need to be there for the people who want to make the most of their lives and want to get ahead, and occasionally need a helping hand to do so.

DC: You've recently attacked Weld on his crime record. What approach will you bring to crime in Massachusetts?

MR: Two-fold. We need to punish people that insist on being career criminals and we need to be tough. I do support a death penalty. But we also need to be smart, and that means getting help for fist time offenders while there's still a chance to keep them from becoming career criminals. I would mandate drug and alcohol counseling for offenders that have a drug and alcohol problem, which, believe it or not, is about 90 percent of first time offenders. I would make staying off of drugs a condition of their parole and I'd pull them back in if they're abusing drugs while they're out.

DC: The recently passed crime bill has been called a liberal's dilemma because it contains both prevention measures and more conservative approaches to crime.

MR: The liberal's dilemma is in the liberal's own mind. Liberals have far too often been more interested in the criminals than the victim and that's got to stop. The crime bill is a good bill. Its not perfect. It's a step in the right direction. It provides more police for the streets which is essential. It provides some of the good youth programs necessary to help youths stay on the straight and narrow. That's the way we need to go. To cut the spigot off at the source you need prevention programs. But liberals also need to understand that people in our urban communities will no longer accept being soft on people who insist on terrorizing them and making life miserable for the average citizen. Democrat's hostility to being tough on career criminals never made any sense to me.

DC: Backing up, could you elaborate further on your idea of redefining the Democratic Party?

Again, when I look back on the 1980s, when we had those boom years, well what do we have to show for it? What legacy did we leave? I would like to have left the best public school system in America, K–12 and higher education because that is the only social program I've ever known to have made a difference in changing someone's life in terms of changing their whole life. A good school can do that for somebody. A good education can do that. A hand out, a welfare payment does not do that. I think we've strayed very far from that truth and think we now need to get back to it.

DC: You've suggested that people receiving welfare benefits for more than one year should be required to perform community service. What types of community service do you envision?

MR: All kinds, whether it's stacking books in a library or sweeping the streets. All work has dignity. That is a very important lesson for us to teach our children and remember ourselves.

DC: You've talked of the extension of health care benefits to welfare recipients who find jobs that don't provide health care.

MR: All work must have health care. The reason that some people stay on welfare, especially a young mother with children, is because if they get a low paying job it often doesn't have health care benefits and, ridiculously, the state takes away their health care from them when they get low paying jobs. If the federal government does not act, I would make sure the state covers people who move to a low–paying job environment because that is what will make work pay.

DC: Many stress the need for the availability of child care for people trying to find jobs who have children.

MR: I'm for it. It fits in with my philosophy that says if someone wants to make more of their own life, they want to get a job, they want to get ahead, we have to be there to help them.

DC: The Massachusetts Low–Level Radioactive Waste Management Board is looking to place what would be considered a low–level nuclear waste dump in Massachusetts. Many are fearful it will be in the western part of the state. What are your thoughts on the site selection process and the nuclear industry in Massachusetts?

MR: Safety first. Environmental regulations have to be abided by. I would be very careful before we site any low–level radioactive waste sites in Western Mass.

DC: At a public meeting with the board in June at Northampton High School, an anti–nuclear activist told the board, "Shut off the faucet first, then we'll talk about it," meaning there shouldn't be a site selection until we decrease our reliance on nuclear power. Are we too reliant?

MR: No. Massachusetts is not particularly reliant on nuclear power as a power source. All sources of power have environmental downsides. We have to be very careful not to isolate just one. Coal, all of them.

ATTENTION
COLLEGIAN Staff

There is a mandatory meeting for all staff tonight

Campus Center Room 101
7:30 p.m.

Eating Disorder Programs • 1994/95
Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Treatment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner
Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4

Friends and Family Group
Single session for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder Call 549-2671, Clinic 4

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Mondays (except holidays) 4:30-6:00 p.m. Campus Center Room Number posted by elevator.

Peer Health Connections
A confidential phoneline for help around eating disorders - yourself or someone you know. 549-2671, ext. 168.

!! IBM XT COMPUTERS !!
*Includes monitor, 10 meg hard drive, (printers, modems also available) $168.00!!!
*14 day replacement guarantee.
*delivery available.
call 256-8094

3 three opportunities to learn about arts management at the Arts Extension Service

1 Introduction to Arts Management, 3 credits
Meets Mondays, 4 to 6:30 p.m. Offered through the Division of Continuing Education (Fee waiver available to qualified students through support from the UMass Arts Council)

2 Internships at AES/credit possible
•New England Film and Video Festival •Publications marketing
•Arts for social change research •Artist Business Library
Meeting: Wed., Sept. 14, 4p.m., 602 Goodell

3 Work Study Positions
•congenial staff
•nationally respected organization
•great experience

Interested? Call AES, 545-2360 or stop by 602 Goodell.

AES is a program of the Division of Continuing Education.

200 Throbbing Watts!
Artistry in Sound
ONKYO TX-SV940 Receiver
Sale $289.
Sound & Music
Millbank Place • 351 Pleasant Street • Northampton
584-9547 • VISA & MasterCard accepted

HELP WANTED
Paid Marketing/ Advertising Assistant

BusinessWest—an award-winning publishing firm located in Chicopee, Mass—has an immediate opening for a Marketing Assistant. This position offers a flexible 24-hour-a-week schedule, and pays $6.00 an hour. There is also the opportunity of permanent employment upon graduation.

The duties of the Marketing Assistant include the following: Developing marketing and advertising campaigns for area companies, providing support services to our advertisers, designing sales-support materials, research, and working closely with our sales staff to open new accounts.

Candidate should have a 3.5 GPA or better, must possess excellent oral and written skills, have the drive to make a difference and the ability to meet goals, and transportation. If you think you have the skills we're looking for, we want to hear from you. Send us your resume and something creative to get our attention.

BusinessWest
450 Memorial Drive
Chicopee, MA 01020
Fax (413) 598-0350

LSAT +7.5
GMAT +72
GRE +214
MCAT +6

Small Classes, Documented Highest Results, Guaranteed.

413 584-6849

Course Sites:
Mt. Holyoke College, Smith College, Williams College, MCAT - Umass.

THE PRINCETON REVIEW
We Score More

ETS and Princeton University are not affiliated with The Princeton Review

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
University Health Services
Amherst, MA 01003
545-2671

An open letter to the UMass Student Community from the Director of UHS Eye Care Program, Fall 1994

Frederick H. Bloom, O.D.
Director, UHS Eye CAre Program

MY name is frederick Bloom. I graduated from the University of Massachusetts in 1971 and the New England College of Optometry in 1975. I am very proud of the program and high quality eye care delivered to the over 80,000 individuals at the UHS Eye Care Program over the last 19 years.

I have been on the teaching faculty of the New England College of Optometry. Recently I co-authored an article with Dr. Abel, a UHS physician, that was published in a national optometry journal. I am also credentialed in diagnostic ocular pharmaceuticals by the Massachusetts Board of Optometry.

Services include:

- Complete optometry examinations
- Reduced rates on spectacle frames and lenses from local participating opticians
- Emergency eye care
- Comprehensive contact lens service

Our staff takes great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.

Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Care Program over the years has been consistently excellent.

"I invite you to use the eye services at UHS"

EYE CARE PROGRAM

Convenient Hours and Camus Location

CALL 549-2671 EXT 244

WordPerfect 6.0 for Windows
WordPerfect
Quattro Pro 5

Big Deal.

$99

SPECIAL LIMITED-TIME OFFER: WordPerfect 6.0 for Windows, Quattro Pro 5.0 for Windows, and Random House Webster's Electronic Dictionary and Thesaurus, College Edition.

See your local campus reseller for more information.

$99 WordPerfect 6.0 DOS and Dictionary
The most powerful DOS application ever!

$49 WordPerfect Presentations 2.0 for Windows or DOS
The ultimate tool for graphics and presentations!

$99 Macintosh Student Essentials WPMac 3.0, the iconic dictionary, grill game, & tel more!

Student

WordPerfect
Novell Applications Group

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Gantley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor
Position vacant Black Affairs Editor
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor
Evelyn A. Delerus Multicultural Affairs Editor
Kelly Spang News Editor
Nathan K. Martin Photography Editor

Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Position vacant Women's Issues Editor
Marni E. Hellner Editorial Production Manager
John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Jim Roode Circulation Manager
Eric Abenaim Subscriptions Manager
Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Pictures through the looking glass

Nathan Crick

Written in February of 1994 from Norwich, England:

Pictures remain taped to my wall. Friends have saluted to me there for five months. My cat still stares at a leaf on my driveway under the golden trees. The Colorado Rockies remain spread out into the distance beyond my brother's gaze. My grandmother stands smiling in her yard, though I will never see her again beyond my frozen images.

My room was still here when I got back from Spain. Norwich greeted me with a quite murmur of voices in the open air market, full of cheerful requests for cheese or minced beef or maybe a sausage roll amidst the crowded counters in voices I could understand. The university pub also greeted me, old faces I vaguely knew suddenly becoming laughing friends.

I heard my voice telling and retelling stories of a French New Year's or the look of the Spanish coast at midnight, and felt my mind becoming muddled with the echoes of laughter and sighs. I wondered if the whole thing was real, or maybe part of a dream I had fallen into and never emerged, still clinging desperately to that bottle which said Drink Me. Yet through it the classes began, and I slept and awoke in the morning, feeling a strange pause in time, frozen like the pictures on my wall.

I live in America. In Massachusetts. I live in a wooden house, with an acre of lawn surrounded by tall maples towering above. I can walk down the street and climb this small hill, where I might follow the banks of a stream up until it opens up into a field of high grass dotted with the misshapen bodies of apple trees. Our town is rather small, and the closest thing we have to a pub is the pizza place that sells beer. But oh, we do have a McDonalds. There's not much to do there, but sometimes on a clear night if one lies in the old graveyard they might see shooting stars blaze across the sky in the still darkness, and make them believe that they could lie there forever and never leave and not miss a thing.

I wonder sometimes if my home has become a foreign land, because everything seems a bit tilted now. My parents, my family, have all become old friends whom I might sit with in a cafe and talk about my troubles.

UMass has become a beautiful place compared to this modern concrete bunker, but the loneliness I had become accustomed to there creeps out of the buildings and dirties its memory. I think I might even now feel an outsider in my own town, where I will only have to open my mouth to feel like an intruder.

Every familiar scene that I bring before me, I have to concentrate on what it was like to actually be there. The trees, the buildings, the sounds, the people. I cannot close my eyes and imagine, because I never knew what it was like to have to do that.

If I were dead, would I remember what it was like to breath? If I went away, could I return to my pictures and greet them as if their smiles had not been frozen for all that time while I had lived?

I once said in this paper that I did not believe life would take on some heightened significance just because you got on a plane and flew to Somewhere Else. I said that because I thought humans were humans, and the societies we manifest reflect our common natures. I had flown to and back from Boulder, Colorado, and saw a city like any other, with people like any other. The only difference was that they were living under the shadow of a towering stone mountain, on a rolling plain that opened up the sky.

So as I sit now and gaze out my window into the English fields beyond, I can say that I was wrong. For I think something significant has happened to my life. I have lost it. The places in my memories have been replaced with the scenes of my favorite characters in a book I once read, after I had torn the pictures from the binding.

People come into it and leave again with disconcerting familiarity, allowing me to retell the story again and again, but with the feeling that it will be merely a tale of someone else's voice, someone else's home, someone else's memories. I sometimes even believe I could return to my graveyard, and look up at the stars, and tell myself something which I might believe...

Here sat someone I knew. Some nights he would lay down in the grass and look up at the stars. Sometimes a light might even shoot across the sky, and he might then think to himself that he could lie here forever. And never leave. And not miss a thing.

Nathan Crick is a Collegian columnist.

Running the First Amendment up the flagpole

Peter Orvetti

During Labor Day weekend, 300 demonstrators marched in South Carolina in opposition to efforts to remove the Confederate battle flag from the top of the state capital. Apparently invoking the First Amendment, the protesters wanted the flag to stay where it is.

But it is precisely the First Amendment that commands that the flag be removed.

The Confederate States of America is the only country in the modern era to be founded entirely on the principle of racism. Why anyone would want to honor that legacy is beyond me. But that is irrelevant in a debate about the freedom of expression. As Voltaire once said, "I disapprove of what you say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it."

This case can be compared to a similar one at Harvard University a few years back. There, a Southern student hung the battle flag out her window. A Black student protested by hanging a swastika out her window, saying that if the Southern girl had the right to hang one symbol of racism, then she had the right to hang another. She meant this ironically, but she was right. Student protest forced the removal of the swastika. That was wrong. For no matter why the student put the swastika there, it was her right to do so.

What, then, is the difference in the South Carolina case? Simple: a person cannot be forced to express a viewpoint in which they do not believe. That, too, is a government office building, however, has as much right to hang a banner reading "Support Desert Storm" as it would to hang one reading "Trust and Obey Your Leaders" – that is, no right at all.

Freedom of speech is the most important freedom we have in America. Without it, there would be no dissent, no discussion, and no democracy. But just as we cannot, legally or morally, censor those views we do not like, nor can we impose views through legislation that someone else might not like. One is freedom, the other fascism. That, South Carolina, is what freedom of speech is all about.

Peter Orvetti is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Alumni responds

As a recent graduate of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst I was able to somewhat sympathize with David Chan's article "There Are Just Too Many Students" which dealt with the difficulty of getting classes, finding housing, and parking at UMass.

He is correct that most classes at UMass, during the first few days of school, do have waiting lists and that housing, with so many attending students, is at times scarce. However, as a former UMass student myself, I was forced to learn that persistence, patience and responsibility are the three key points to getting what you need at the University.

First– Add/Drop and the waiting list issues. Until two years ago Add/Drop was done ON FOOT. Each and every student was required to walk all over campus to add or drop a class. Furthermore, when the destination was reached the student had to wait in a line of usually fifty to one hundred and fifty other students to see if there was even a chance that they may be able to take that class.

You should all feel very privileged, as I did, to be able to have the luxury of dialing in for your classes from anywhere on campus, in Amherst, in Massachusetts and/or from anywhere in the country for that matter. Moreover, even if you are unable to add a class, go speak with the professor about your situation. They're usually very sympathetic and willing to help.

Second – The housing will be a problem. Yet, if you know you will need a place to live make sure you are prepared in advance. Contract the housing office a few weeks ahead of time to be sure they have room for you. If they don't, make your own temporary arrangements PRIOR to arriving in Amherst until housing can be provided through UMass.

It is not the responsibility of the school to make sure that you have definite housing but rather it is YOUR responsibility to make sure that they have the ability to provide it for you at that time.

Third– The parking issue. Parking at UMass has always been a chore. No one likes parking in 'E' lot, but parking is provided on a first come, first serve basis. If you are late, lazy or just irresponsible and EXPECT a sticker for what lot you want when you want it then yes, you will be stuck in 'E' lot. Take the time to plan to get up early to get your sticker or else have the patience to wait until there is room available in the lot that you want.

If you begin to back and/or break down because you don't get your way AT THAT MOMENT real life is going to be like a slap in the face. Nothing in life comes easily. If you believe it does, like David Chan obviously did prior to attending UMass, post-graduation will be quite a rude awakening for you.

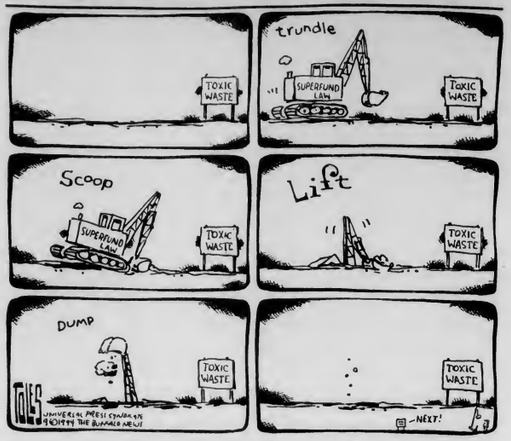
Whining and complaining about your problems get you nowhere but a little ACTION, as Chan felt so worthy to capitalize on, will take you a long way. Just remember to take college and all of life one step at a time. As I stated before, with a little patience, persistence and responsibility you'll do just fine.

Erika Beatrice Framingham

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

THE WIDOW DOONESBURY FIRST NOTICED HIM ON THE KNOLL ABOVE THE OLD MANION PLACE.
HMM... WHO IS THAT MAN? AND WHAT'S HE DOING?
HER CURIOSITY GOT THE BETTER OF HER.
GOOD MORNIN', MA'AM!
MORNIN'.
I'M JUST DOING SOME SURVEYING. NOT DISTURBING YOU, AM I?
NO...NO. I SUP-POSE NOT.
THAT NIGHT, SHE GOT THE FRETS.
I BETTER CALL THE PRISON.
MAYBE HE'S ONE OF THEIRS.
GBTrudeau

Opinion/Editorial



Talent fails to outweigh greed

Caleb Cochran

David Caruso is a good actor. In fact, he is an excellent actor. His decision to bolt from the Emmy-nominated series "NYPD Blue," however, creates some serious questions concerning his ego and the inflation thereof. The conduct of the other party, producer Stephen Bochco, must also be examined.

Caruso and Dennis Franz carried "NYPD" last year. Although the actors shared relatively equal screen time and Franz eventually carried home the Emmy for Best Actor in a drama, it was Caruso who was propelled to stardom in the show's premiere season. When it came time to begin taping for the fall, however, Caruso asked for a raise of over 200 percent, from $30,000 to $100,000 per episode.

While Caruso's agent says that this figure was negotiable, producer Stephen Bochco did not sense this, because it was soon announced that ABC could not pay Caruso this amount and that he would be written out of the show. Caruso apparently has no regrets about leaving the show and is ready to move on to a movie career.

My question is this: What makes Mr. Caruso think that he can make the transition from television to film so smoothly? Granted, he has acted in films before, and put in a decent performance in Mad Dog and Glory, but to think that he can have the same impact in films that he did in his brief stint on television is wishful thinking.

Caruso's arrogance is not the only issue in this mess. After being part of one of the best casts on television and leaving after only one year, his loyalty to the show has to be questioned as well. One would think that the chance to be part of one of the greatest television shows in history would be enough to keep him around for at least a few years.

"NYPD" does not face the problems of, say, "The Cosby Show" or even "Beverly Hills, 90210." That is, the age of the characters is not a factor. Caruso, Franz, and everyone else on the show is middle-aged or nearing it.

There is no reason why the show couldn't run with virtually the same cast for years. With his premature departure, Caruso has changed not only the chemistry of the show, but perhaps its fate as well. Who knows if replacement Jimmy Smits will mesh with the other characters on the show? Caruso is not only the best actor on the program, but his character is, far and away, the most charismatic and intriguing of the whole cast. Whether or not one agrees with his reasons for leaving, it must be acknowledged that his presence will be greatly missed.

As a fan of the show, I am angry at all parties involved in the Caruso fiasco. I am angry with Caruso for demanding such an enormous raise, and at the same time I am angry with Bochco for refusing to negotiate more with Caruso. It was rumored that Caruso was very difficult to work with, and this probably had something to do with Bochco's reluctance to bargain with him. While I can understand this thinking, Caruso's importance to the show must be fully realized. Is it worth the hassle of working with a grumpy actor when the result is the best show on television? Apparently not.

So as Caruso prepares to leave the show and Bochco and the rest of the "NYPD" personnel prepare for life without him, one cannot help but wonder what would have been in store for this brilliant program had both sides been just a bit less pig-headed.

Caleb Cochran is a Collegian columnist.

Halloween continues beyond the candied apples

Mark McGrath

In my earlier years, one of the most exciting annual events was the coming of Halloween. Months before the actual event, my friends and I would discuss who we were going to be on that wonderful autumn night. Halloween was not just a chance to set new standards in the art of candy collecting, but also an opportunity to shed one's own identity in favor of another, more appealing character. The key item in the costume was always the mask.

A good mask could make someone almost unrecognizable. I remember walking around the neighborhood unknown to even the closest friends of family. All of the old ladies would greet me with the same excited squeal. "Look at the ghost!" each would say. That was amazing. You can imagine how it felt to be known by all, to be loved by all, and to be treated the same by all. At that point it didn't seem to matter who was underneath.

As the years progressed, it became more important to fit in, to be what others expected. Even though I was my own individual, I had to act in the expected fashion. Then came the mask. The mask was the solution to all my problems. I could put it on, change it and take the appearance of whatever was expected or needed at a particular point in time.

It was like molding clay. I could put on a happy or sad exterior, whichever would be more appropriate, and not have to show my true feelings. The problem with masks is that the longer they are exposed, the harder they get. one morning I woke up and my mask was rock solid, stuck. although it was awkward at first, I soon became used to it.

It was now a part of me. I accepted it, and it protected me. I could look in a mirror, and not even notice it was there. Everyone loved it, and therefore I loved it. I knew the mask better than I knew myself.

Yet for all the distortion they breed, there's a reason why they stick around. Those who wear them are immune to the truth. People wear them for different reasons. My personal reason for wearing one is fear of what is underneath. If others could see the real me, they could know my weaknesses and hurt me. If I was able to know the real me, I fear I would hate myself.

The fact is that for all weaknesses, there are more powerful strong points. Although a mask is effective in keeping the bad or uncomfortable things from reaching the surface, it also keeps in strong good things. What results is a robot of a person, whose characteristics are determined by the people around him.

Masks are common things. Everybody has them to some degree. Even if you don't realize it, masks effect the way you act every day. Who are you? Who am I? The world may never know. It's scary trying to take them off. Mine wouldn't budge. Every day I take a chop at it, and with any luck, a little shard may split off.

It will probably take years to chip away enough of this mask to reveal even the smallest part of me. Once it does, I will be relieved. It hurts to feel and not show it. To be sad, and not cry. To be happy, but not to smile. To love and not be able to express it.

If someday in the future, you see me walking down the street, and if you see a tear rolling down my cheek or traces of a genuine smile on my mouth, please congratulate me, for that is the day I will be free. Free of this mask which makes my life a living hell.

Mark McGrath is a UMass student.

So you want to be a columnist?

Tonight. It's here. The meeting for all those interested in writing for the Editorial desk.

This meeting is the deadline for applications to become a columnist. So be here.

Bring your sample columns tonight. We will accept no sample columns after tonight. Sorry, but we will still care about you.—

"A sample column," you ask. "What is that?" Well, sit down and pretend your writing something for the editorial page. Aim for between 60–80 lines. Got it? Good.

Attend the meeting tonight at 6 p.m. at the editorial desk. This meeting is mandatory for all new and returning columnists. If there's a conflict see the editorial editor, Tracy Monahan.

Sample columns will be perused and a schedule of writers for the fall semester will be posted by 3 p.m. on Thursday.

Arts & Living

Cool new releases from Stereolab, Danny Johnston

MARS AUDIAC QUINTET
Stereolab
Elektra Records

Hands down, Stereolab is making some of the most challenging, not to mention beautiful pop music around. Since their humble beginnings on the Too Pure label a few years back, the band has been wrestling with a fascination of vintage keyboards (moogs, farfisa, etc.) and a notion of deconstructing the modern day pop song and refashioning it in their own nineties image. Thankfully, for our sake, they have come up a winner every time.

Doing away with any concept of traditional song structure, and replacing it a swirling mass of organ, call and response melodies, and subtle guitar drone, the band has managed to harness some very retro ideas and cleverly morph into a completely original musical entity.

With their latest release, Mars Audiac Quintet, the band has thankfully left behind much of the experimental thumb- nosing that permeated it's major label debut Transient Random-Noise Bursts With Announcements. Instead they have settled down to concentrate on more lofty numbers that are more direct and gentle in their delivery. If the earth grounded Transient Random-Noise Bursts... was a test in musical sound and structure, then Mars Audiac Quintet is a heavenly cruise through the pop stratosphere.

Tracks such as "Wow And Flutter" and the joyfully bouncy "Ping Pong" show that the "group" (as they so affectionately call themselves) can indeed swing after all, as upbeat grooves mesh perfectly with vocalist Laetita Sadier's breathy voice. Even when the band seems more concerned with headiness than actual songs, they still can't help but throw in enough "la–la–la's" and catchy vocal melodies to hold the listener's attention.

Yes, Stereolab are pop lovers at heart, who thankfully are not afraid to wear their influences on their sleeve. By combining this with their own revolutionary vision, they have taken pop music by the hand and drop-kicked it well into the next dimension. A

Tear Out Trash Out

(Matt Audette)

FUN
Daniel Johnston
Atlantic Records

If a year ago you told someone that indie-basket case Daniel Johnston would reside on a major label, they would have laughed you straight out of the room.

Welcome to the Alternative 90's where anything can happen, and probably will. Since Johnston has been somewhat of an indie-cult hero for quite some time now, it was only inevitable that he would be assisted by some distinguished members of the alterna–community. In this case Paul Leary, of Butthole Surfers fame, takes up the production helm, and guides an obviously nervous Johnston through much of the eighteen tracks that make up the album.

But before you can stand up on your righteous indie-soapbox and scream "sell–out", take a listen to Fun and you will quickly realize that not much has changed. Johnston still sings in his high, nervous wail (always off–key) about such topics as being scared of girls and aliens. Only this time around Leary has taken the liberty of flushing out Johnston's nearly skeletal songs, letting the genius that was always lurking behind the lo–fi tape hiss of his early homemade releases, shine through. By only accenting the songs with delicate strains of cello and acoustic guitar, Leary still lets Johnston run the show, but helps conjure up some shimmering moments of beauty that rarely surfaced in his earlier material.

But like any good producer should, Leary knows when to back off allowing Johnston to fly solo (complete with cheesy chord organ) on tracks such as "Crazy Love" and "Jelly Beans." And even though Johnston has basically been feeding us the same shtick for some time now, there is still something quite unnerving about hearing a grown man (who lived with his mother well into his thirties) singing lines like "I love that girl so long/I feel just like King Kong/Someday I'll find that girl" and meaning it.

With Fun, Johnston (with the help of Leary) has sidestepped many of the pitfalls that have become associated with major labels. Sure, he has traded in some of the naivete that made his earlier efforts so charming, but in return he has finally made a mature album that exposes the eccentric talents he has been hiding so well for all these years. A (Matt Audette)

Attention!

Arts & Living staff members and prospective writers:

There is an all staff/new writers' meeting tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 101. On Thursday, Sept. 22, there will be a specific meeting for veteran and new writers who are interested in writing for Arts & Living at 7:30 p.m. at the Collegian offices, located in the Campus Center basement.

For more information, call 545–1361.

IF YOU HAVEN'T YET, NOW IS THE TIME!

Register now through September 26 for over 200 evening credit courses and noncredit workshops.

University of Massachusetts/Amherst
Division of Continuing Education
Goodell Building
545-2414

A quality education at affordable prices

EMERGENCY MEDICAL TRAINING
BY HUMAN SERVICES TRAINING CONSULTANTS, INC.
PART TIME EVENING CLASSES START SEPT. 19, 1994
CALL UMASS CONTINUING EDUCATION
545-0474

READING BY ABBY
PALM TAROT & EBP READING
HELPS SOLVE ALL PROBLEMS OF LIFE HELPS YOU THROUGH YOUR GOOD AND BAD CYCLES OF LIFE. TELLS YOU LUCKY DATE AND LUCKY GUESTING ONE VISIT WILL CONVINCE YOU THAT SHE IS SUPERIOR TO ALL READERS YOU HAVE SEEN BEFORE
All readings Confidential and Results Guaranteed
HOURS 9 a.m. To 9 p.m. 218 Russell Street Route 9 Hadley 586-0335
(413) 586-6711 Open 7 days Evenings

Spirit Haus
Refrigerator Rentals
256-8433
253-5384

SEMESTER MEMBERSHIP only $109
The GYM
AT MOUNTAIN FARMS MALL
Rt. 9 - Hadley • 584-2175

CANS BOTTLES PAPER PLASTIC
You just separated your trash.
RECYCLE

SQUIRE VILLAGE APTS.
1120 Sq. feet
2 Bedroom Townhouses
ONLY A FEW LEFT
ACT NOW!!!
SUNDERLAND, MA
665-2203
Beautiful Spacious apartments.
Spacious yards, swimming pool, dishwasher, A/C, garbage disposal, wall to wall carpeting, laundry facilities

The ALANA Lecture Series
PRESENTS
JOHN TRUDELL
Native American Activist
THURSDAY
SEPTEMBER 22, 1994
7:30PM
CAMPUS CENTER
AUDITORIUM
SPONSORED BY: THE OFFICE OF THIRD WORLD AFFAIRS

ADMISSION FREE!!!
Not at the Mall
A series of film experiences you won't find anywhere else
Remarkable documentaries and powerful recent international films shown every Tuesday in Bartlett Hall Auditorium: 7 PM (Documentaries) and 9 PM (Films).

Sept 13 7 PM (Doc) "The Kirghiz of Afghanistan" - Pure Capitalism on the roof of the world.
8 PM (Doc) "Out of the Past: New Worlds" - The latest info from archeologists about how we got here.
9 PM (Film) U Ki Ri Ri Ri - Illegal construction workers try to make lives and love.
Sept 20 7 PM (Doc) "Out of the Past: Artisans and Traders" - The irresistible rise of specialization.
8 PM (Doc) "Out of the past: Signs and Symbols" - Language as the unique element of culture.
9 PM (Film) Ying Ting Tsing of the Gyrfalcons - To help his crippled sister, a Bavarian kid joins gypsy criminals in Italy and flies very high.
Sept 27 7 PM (Doc) "Out of the past: Realms" - Politicians of the ancient world would fit right in today.
8 PM (Doc) "Out of the Past: Power, Prestige, and Wealth" - the rich get richer, the poor get the usual.
9 PM (Film) Rus I Little Vera - a Russian daughter rebels to become a woman.
Oct 4 7 PM (Doc) "Out of the Past: Religion" - from human sacrifice to the big picture.
8 PM (Doc) "Out of the Past: Collapse" - do cultures die of natural causes? or do they design their own ruin?
9 PM (Film, Can.) Beautiful Dreamers - Walt Whitman frees inmates of a madhouse, the psychiatrist, and his wife.
Oct 11 7 PM (Doc) "The Great Depression" - the disaster of the 1930s, the New Deal, and the threat of revolution in America.
9 PM (Film, Rus) Freeze, Die, Come Back to Life - Russian kid & girl next door ruin for their lives from a vicious Siberian mining town.
Oct 18 7 PM (Doc) "Klein Kampf" - Hitler's plans to make the world a better place for Nazis
9 PM (Film, Aus) Bliss - A man dies and discovers his family & world aren't at all what he thought.
Oct 25 7 PM (Doc) "China in Revolution" - an irresistible force meets dan immovable object.
9 PM (Film, China) Raise the Red Lantern - the new (4th) wife of a rich husband tries to make a dangerous marriage work.
Nov 1 7 PM (Doc) "China: the Mao Years" - millions of people get a new idea and a little red book and some survive.
9 PM (Film, Turk) Yol - 6 convicts on 2-week parole in Iran raising stones.
Nov 8 7 PM (Doc) "Vietnam, the War Before 1954" - the Vietnamese fought invaders for a thousand years before the Americans came.
8 PM (Doc) "Hearts and Minds" - Americans and the Vietnam experience.
9 PM (Film) Rus Taxi Blues - tough cab driver meets off-the-wall Russian sax player & never gets over it.
Nov 15 7 PM (Doc) "Berkeley in the Sixties" - It's not like Kansas, Toto.
9 PM (Film, Rus) Close to Eden - a nomad's family in Mongolia rescues a true believer & wrestles with the modern world.
Nov 22 7 PM (Doc) "Roger and Me" - the funniest film ever made about a large corporation killing an American city.
9 PM (Film, NZ) Map of the Human Heart - Eskimo kid seeks lost childhood sweetheart, joins a WW2 bomber crew, goes off the map.
Nov 29 7 PM (Doc) "The Story of English" - Robert McNeil's exploration of why we speak and write the way we do.
9 PM (Film, Fr) Clean Slate - policeman in an African colonial town evens the score with everybody.
Dec 6 7 PM (Doc) "Bill Moyers: the Public Mind" - the power of political and advertising language.
9 PM (Film, Uk) "Another Time, Another Place" - an Italian POW changes the life of a Scottish farmer's wife during WW2.
Dec 13 7 PM (Doc) "7 Up in the Soviet Union" - interviews with kids as the new world goes berserk around them.
9 PM (Doc) "Out of the Past: Collapse" - why do cultures go down the tubes?
9 PM (Film, It) Mediterraneo - Italian soldiers are marooned in a Greek village during WW2 and get a life.
Students wishing one academic credit should register for English 191 & attend any 12 documentary and/or film sessions. Sign in with the projectionist.

Report on the 1992 ALANA Agreements

The University of Massachusetts at Amherst strives to demonstrate its regard for human enablement through the realization of a multicultural community -- a community that disallows equating difference with division or deficiency but, rather, insists upon difference as intrinsic to its definitions of excellence and quality. At UMass we believe that multiculturalism encompasses diversity, variety and distinction in all dimensions of the University and that it is integral to the intellectual, social and moral vitality of this community of learners. We believe we must demonstrate our understanding of difference in our policies and our practices, in our habits of thought and in our daily routines. We have moved a long way from the monocultural world view as the ideal. Some day in the future we may also evolve from multiculturalism to transculturalism where differences are valued and enriching and where we also transcend our differences through common humanity.

The ALANA Agreements of November 1992 have prompted the University to reflect on and recommit to its values and to undertake actions that reflect those values. This second update of administrative efforts to fulfill the 1992 agreements represents a recognition of our responsibility to ensure quality and excellence by affirming the centrality of multiculturalism in its definitions.

Chancellor David Scott

Update as of 4/7/94 -- Changes From 3/1/93 Update In Italics

AGREEMENT	STATUS
1a. 20% minority student representation in the first–year class by fall 1995.	20% still target -- A Minority Recruitment Plan is being developed under the guidance of the new Director of Admissions. Financial aid will be key in reaching the goal -- have added scholarships and changed packaging to assist. Retention: Learning Center Proposal and changes in Academic Regulations proposed by the Retention Report were passed by the Faculty Senate on 3/25/93. For fall 1993, students of color were 15.1% of first–year students who were U.S. citizens: 3.9% African–American (including Cape Verdean), 4.2% Hispanic, 6.7% Asian, .3% Native American. 24% of all 1992–93 first–year students did not return in fall 1993. The percentage non–returning students by racial and ethnic group were: 23% White, 32% Black (includes Cape Verdean), 30% Hispanic, 24% Asian.
1b. Improve the percent of minority faculty on campus. (Quotas and targets may not legally be set.)	Chancellor O'Brien and Provost Gordon wrote to the academic departments, supplied them with nation–wide minority availability statistics, and urged them to move closer to these figures when recruiting faculty. As of fall 1993, 21 new faculty of color were hired, bringing the total of tenure track and tenured faculty of color on the campus to 145 of 1153 total faculty, or 12.6%. Four more faculty of color were hired during the remainder of the academic year. The number of faculty of color relative to all faculty, and the percentage of faculty of color over the past four years, counted for the fall semester was: 137/1247 or 11.1% in fall 90; 134/1185 or 11.4% in fall 91; 125/1127 or 11.2% in fall 92; 145/1153 or 12.6% in fall 93. The number of faculty of color hired over the past four years relative to non–minority faculty hirings was: 11/27 in 90–91; 5/12 in 91–92; 3/23 in 92–93; 25/79 in 93–94. The number of faculty of color departing the campus relative to non–minority faculty departures was: 8/65 in 90–91; 8/80 in 91–92; 6/51 in 92–93.
1c. Classified staff: Restore classified staff apprentice program.	Due to budget constraints the apprentice program in Physical Plant is on hold. However, union and management discussions aimed at bringing back this program are continuing.
2. Upward Bound Replacement	The Future Scholars of America (FSA) Program was created during the spring of 1993. Funding in the amount of $750,000 has been set aside for this program for three years. The FSA program has two components: (1) an academic enrichment program of at–risk H.S. and Junior H.S. students, held on the campus on Saturdays and during school vacation periods; there are approximately 20 students attending the program, with a number of students coming from as far away as Springfield and Pittsfield; (2) a six week academic summer program designed to improve students' academic skills and to expose them to the various programs available at the University; fifty–five students attended the 1993 summer program. An additional transitional program was offered during fall 1993 which allowed seven students to attend a "college preparatory" semester on the campus. Four of the students have now been admitted to the campus.
3. Partial restoration of litigation powers for the Legal Services Center.	Partial litigation powers restored by 12/1/93 Trustee vote.
4. ALANA Affairs & role of students on search committees.
a. Teaching Assistant to be funded for the ALANA Office.	a. Teaching Assistant hired on 2/21/93.
b. Task Force to discuss Office of ALANA Affairs.	b. This is to take place in the context of the Student Activities Program Review starting February 1994.
c. In cases where candidates meet with interview groups (as in deans and other senior appointments), the ALANA students will be invited to sessions with the top candidates and will report their evaluations to the Appointing Authority, via the search committee. In cases where there are no such interviews, but the candidates present seminars (as in faculty appointments), the ALANA students will be invited to the seminars, and will report their evaluations to the Appointing Authority, via the search committee.	c. Chancellor O'Brien instructed the chairs of search committees to request in writing from the Office of Third World Affairs that ALANA students be informed about the existence of an interview session or seminar and are told that they are welcome to attend it and convey their views to the search committee or the department chair.
5. Undergraduate Recruitment
a. Assistant Director to be upgraded to Associate Director of Admissions.	a. An Assistant Director of Admissions position was upgraded to Associate Director of Admissions, with an appointment finalized on 1/25/93.
b. Two entry–level recruiters of color to be hired.	b. Completed.
c. 4 new paid student positions to organize student volunteers of color.	c. Four students of color have been hired and additional students are being sought.
d. 40 new minority scholarships to be provided (totalling $200,000).	d. Completed.
e. Meetings with reps. from CCEBMS, UALRC, and BCP will be arranged to discuss space, staffing and other needs.	e. Many equipment requests have been funded. Space issues for UALRC have been resolved.
6. Graduate Student Recruitment
a. Add 3 more people of color to the Minority Graduate Fellowship Review committee.	a. Four graduate students of color have been added to the committee.
b. Goal of 305 minority graduate students.	b. Goal had already been achieved when these negotiations took place. As of fall 1993, 450 minority graduate students were enrolled in 50 of the 64 on–campus graduate degree programs.
7. Columbus Day Teach–ins to be arranged, and to re–name that day appropriately as far as campus usage is concerned. It will still remain a State holiday for State employees who wish to use it that way.	The Office of Human Relations coordinated a teach–in related to these issues on October 13, 1993. Discussions with Graduate Student Senate Officers, undergraduate Student Government Association Officers and Native American students produced no consensus regarding the renaming of the day. The status of future teach–ins is being discussed with the Josephine White Eagle Native American Cultural Center.

CAMPUS CLIMATE ISSUES

ITEM	STATUS
1. Safety & Security
a. Training: A need for diversity training for police officers and security guards was identified.	a. Police officers and supervisors have all completed a half–day training session on diversity issues.
b. Additional Personnel: 4 Officers were to be on board by January, 1993. Phase I (FY93) 4 more patrol officers and 10 security officers. Phase II (FY94) 3 supervisory officers. Phase III (FY95) 4 more patrol officers.	b. 4 new police officers were hired; on campus field training continuing; diversity topics included in training at the Municipal Police Officer Academy in Agawam. Phase I Completed. Phase II and III Funding for these positions will be examined when FY95 budget information is available. Anticipated hiring would begin in July 1994. The Director of Public Safety will explore options for creating incentives to attract job applicants from the undergraduate population. Additional Safety & Security New escort van was purchased and is in use. An additional dispatcher for escort service hired. 5 additional student security supervisors hired. The student–Initiated Peer Victim Assistance Program has now completed its third semester of operation. Trained peers staffed a hotline on weekday evenings, providing information and referrals for students concerned about harassment and intimidation. Despite several different publicity campaigns, students have not utilized this service. Continuation or modification of this program is being discussed with the Student Government Association leadership.
2. Housing
a. Non–violent confrontation training for RAs.	a. Students provided additional training on non–violent confrontation in the January training. Additional offerings for RA's as in–service training during the semester. Additional social issues training also included.
b. 7 additional Assistant Resident Directors to be hired.	b. 7 Assistant Resident Directors were hired for the Spring 1993 semester.
c. Special RA Review Committee to make recommendations by spring semester.	c. RA Role Review Committee completed its work by end of fall semester. Report available as well as VC Robinson's response.
d. Housing Services Review Committee to make recommendations for implementation prior to 93/94 academic year.	d. Housing Services Review Committee report was completed in August and is under review.
3. Review and revise new student's program to emphasize social justice issues and behavior expectations.	Diversity issues are emphasized during New Students Orientation.
4. Training and Development Training and Development will be restored. A specific plan will be submitted to the Chancellor within the next 10 days (by 11/17/92).	The search for a Training and Development Manager has been completed with the hiring of Dr. Linda Marchesani. Hiring of other staff and graduate students is currently underway. A project providing diversity education for employees is top priority.
5. Communication Press releases will be issued each month to be published in the Campus Chronicle.	Communication will be maintained by updating and adding to this chart on a semester–by–semester basis. SGA leaders will provide the Chancellor's office with a list of student organizations that should receive the chart.

Jim's Journal By Jim

I got up in the middle of the night last night.
I had this funny feeling that something was wrong.
Then I heard Mr. Peterson yowling in the next room.
I went out and petted her and she seemed okay.

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

A SMALL RED SPACECRAFT BREAKS THROUGH THE CLOUD COVER OF MYSTERIO SYSTEM PLANETS.
AT THE CONTROLS, ITS NONE OTHER THAN OUR FEARLESS HERO, SPACEMAN SPIFF!
PILOTING OVER THE LIFELESS WORLD, HE REFLECTS ON HIS UNUSUAL MISSION...
QUIZ
1 6×5=___
TO SOMEHOW CRASH PLANETS 6 AND 5 TOGETHER.

Jim's Journal By Jim

Today, Ruth and I went over to Steve's place.
She saw his new plant and said, "oh, look, you got a plant."
Then she went off about how to water it, take care of it and everything.
Steve said, "Knowing me, it'll probably just die."

Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

I'M GLAD WE WERE FINALLY ABLE TO RESOLVE OUR LONG ARRANGEMENT PROBLEM PEACEFULLY
I CAN'T BELIEVE WE DIDN'T THINK OF MOVING INTO A TRIPLE SOONER! NOW WE'LL ALL BE FRIENDS AND LIVE QUITE COMFORTABLY AND PEACEFULLY AT THE SAME TIME!
CAN I SQUEEZE IN THERE?
GET LOST!
SCHNEIDER

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21–April 19): Someone who is feeling under the weather needs your support. Business negotiations go more smoothly than in the recent past. A family member makes an interesting suggestion.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20): Career and financial matters dominate your thoughts today. Keep long–range goals in mind while launching a travel or educational project. A friendship brings important new benefits.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20): Be non–committal about a new career opportunity until you can talk it over with loved ones. Romance needs encouragement; take the initiative. Cultivate the power of positive thinking.

CANCER (June 21–July 22): A personal project gets the green light. Your ideas are right on target! Take a leaf from an old friend's book. Approach those who have the authority to make important decisions.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22): Starting a new business or making a major career change requires careful planning. Consult experts. Creating a positive work atmosphere will be easy if you hire people who share your optimism.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22): A good period for vacations and travel. You are sometimes too critical or suspicious for your own good. Review insurance matters with an agent you trust. Family members deserve the best coverage you can afford.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22): You could find yourself in a difficult situation caused by an associate's dishonesty. Deal with this problem in a prompt and forthright manner and you will emerge a winner. Be gentle with loved ones.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21): Despite a rocky start, this should turn out to be a highly satisfactory day. Settle any differences with loved one at the earliest opportunity.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21): Be very security– conscious if traveling or visiting another city for the first time. An attitude of overconfidence could get you into hot water with your romantic partner. Guard your valuables.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19): Creative efforts can be highly profitable if you are flexible. Adopt a less independent stance when dealing with stubborn colleagues. A shared spiritual experience will strengthen a friendship. Do not let your imagination run wild.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18): Financial affairs look promising. A friend covers for you in an embarrassing situation. Do not short–change your loved ones. Call friends and colleagues if you want to expand your social calendar. Keep their confidences.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20): Stay alert! Careless mistakes can be costly. What was previously established could be changed by today's events. Stand up for your rights. A mood of nostalgia may prevail this evening. Romance sends your spirits soaring!

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH
Deli Beef Sandiwch
Grilled Chicken Sandwich

BASICS LUNCH
Hummus Veggie Pocket
Grilled Chicken Sandwich

DINNER
Roast Pork with Gravy and applesauce
Shells in Cheese Sauce

BASICS DINNER
Shells in Cheese Sauce
East/West Lasagna
Red Beans

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Brain Gormley
Copy Editor.....Jeff Crofts
Photo Technician.....Jessica Taverna
Production Supervisor.....Marni E. Helfner
Production.....Jon Lupo, Mark Mitchell

Quote of the Day

"I have everything now I had twenty years ago–except now it's all lower."

–Gypsy Rose Lee

Auto Reverse Double Deck!

A entry in Sound
ONKYO TAR-W313 CASSETTE
Sale $209.
Sound & Music
Millbank Place • 351 Pleasant Street • Northampton
584-9547 • VISA & MasterCard accepted

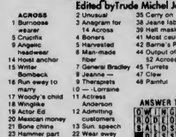
Daily Crossword

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

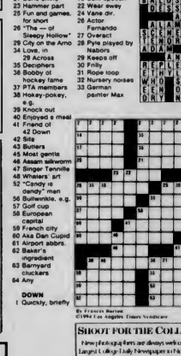
ACROSS
1 Burnoose wearer
5 Crucifix
9 Angelic headwear
14 Hoist anchor
15 Writer Bombeck
16 Run away to marry
17 Woody's child
18 Wingless
19 Actor Ed
20 Mexican money
21 Bone china
23 Hammer part
25 Fun and games for short
26 "The — of Sleepy Hollow"
28 City on the Arno
34 Love, in 29 Across
35 Deciphers
36 Bobby of hockey fame
37 PTA members
38 Hokey–pokey, e.g.
39 Knock out
40 Enjoyed a meal
41 Friend of 42 Down
42 Sita
43 Burners
45 Most gents
46 Assam silkworm
47 Singer Tennille
48 Wheelers' art
52 "Candy is dandy" man
56 Bullfighting, e.g.
57 Golf cup
58 European capital
59 French city
60 Asia Dan Cupid
61 Airport abbrs.
62 Baker's ingredient
63 Barnyard chuckers
64 Any

DOWN
1 Quickly, briefly
2 Unusual
3 Anagram for 14 Across
4 Boners
5 Harvested
6 Man–made fiber
7 General Bradley
8 Jeanne —
9 Therapists
10 — Lorraine
11 Actress Anderson
12 Admitting customers
13 Sun. speech
22 Wear away
24 Vane dir.
26 Actor Fernando
27 Overact
28 Pyle played by Nabors
29 Keeps off
30 Frilly
31 Rope loop
32 Nursery noses
33 German painter Max
35 Carry on
38 Jeane Isbnc
39 Hall masks
41 Most cautious
42 Barrie's Peter
44 Output of 52 Across
45 Turrets
47 Clew
48 Painful
49 Soft drink
50 Former Mideast title
51 Where chanty begins
53 Regarding
54 Grand —
55 Stockings
56 Springtime month

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



8/17/94



8/18/94

The Far Side By Gary Larson

"Well, lad, you caught me fair and square. ... But truthfully, as far as leprechauns go, I've never been considered all that lucky."

SHOOT FOR THE COLLEGIAN
Have photographs? We are always welcome at the Largest College Daily Newspaper in New England

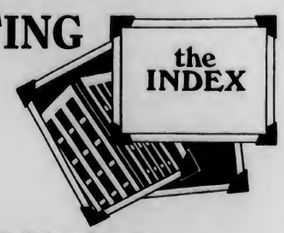
SMART SHOPPERS SHOP SMART!
Classic Consignments
Designer, Brand Name Women's and Children's Clothing Sold and Consigned
256-0661
Tues.-Sat. 10:30-5:30 800 Main St., Amherst
on PVTA Bus Route

The Index Yearbook

1st Staff Meeting
Tuesday & Wednesday

6:30 - 7:30 PM
911 Campus Center
Come One or Both Nights

MARKETING
LAYOUT
PHOTO
COPY



We need all departments.
Some Paid Editorships still available.

The Index • 304 Student Union • 545-0848

Classifieds

• 20¢ per word per day for students
• All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
• Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ACTIVITIES

Free bridge lessons. UMass Bridge Club. 8 lessons-free book free T-shirt Weekly-Thur. 4-6pm Start 9/22. Bluewall. Chris 5-4411

Chi Omega open house rush parties Tues 9/20 6pm-9pm
Wed 9/21 6pm-9pm
Dessert night
Sun 9/24 5:30pm- 7:30pm
Please contact Lauren at 549-4351 or Steph at 549-5780 for transportation or any additional information. Come up to Chi O because it makes no difference if we're not on fraternity row!

Sigma Kappa welcomes all women to attend our make your own healthy snack-bar night at our home at 19 Allen St. Come pig out in style. No investigation required.

UMass Women's Ice Hockey is back Season starts soon. For information call Dren- 549-7278.

Wanted goalie to play intramural ice hockey. Call Dave at 253-7435.

BEER TAP FOR SALE

Cord plate with a two tap cooler and a CO2 tank. Great for parties or drunks. Call Stephen 253-7499 $375 or b/o

Recreational and competitive boxing lessons for men and women with retired professional G. Dutra Bumpus. 549-5752.

BOXING LESSONS

Recreational and competitive boxing lessons for men and women with retired professional G. Dutra Bumpus. 549-5752.

CHRISTIANS

Alliance Christian Fellowship adds value and balance to your UMass education. We're committed to personal discipleship training, outreach and spirit-filled fellowship and fun! FRIDAYS 11-midnight Fellowship 7pm Campus Center

CHRISTIANS

Do you need $$$ for college??? WE have the solution. Guaranteed results. Write to: Corporate Scholarship Service, 2 Dashurst Terrace East, N. Reading, MA 01864 for free details.

COMPUTERS

BK Computers & Associates writing systems. Parts, including motherboards, drives, cards and more. Free estimate 549-4362

FOR RENT

For rent one room in a big new house. See it to believe it!! Call Brian 253-2746.

Fridge rentals 253-9747 free delivery.

Single room for rent at Alpine Common $174.61 inclusive. on bus route, call Tom 256-0674.

Two rooms in private home. $300 each per month. Kitchen privileges. kosher/vegetarian preferred. Laundry, parking, furnished. 549-4853.

FOR SALE

2 refrigerators 4 sale $50 549-8283 Rod

Designer clothing for women. Thrift shop prices. Will deliver. 413-323-8674

Furniture. Desks, rugs etc. Cheap. Call 549-1578

IBM compatible XT computer with printer, mouse, software. Greasy shape $340 or b/o 253-7822

IBM XT 286 18 meg, color monitor. Excellent for hooking up to a TAU $250 call 546-3458

Jane's Addiction Live on cd! $28. call 546-8813. Only 1 copy available!!!

Large couch $100 chair and footstool $50. octagonal coffee table $85. 665-8954

Macintosh computer. Complete system including printer only $500. Call Chris at 800-789-5685.

Panasonic printer KX-p2123. Great shape. Free color kit. $175 or b/o. 548-3713

POSTER SALE Biggest and best selection. Choose from over 2000 different images. ROCK, OLD MASTERS (Monet, Van Gogh, Picasso, Escher, Mancuso, Wyeth, and hundreds more!), MOVIE POSTERS, 30'S, SPORTS, SCENIC LANDSCAPES, MUSIC, DANCE, SKIING, PERSONALITIES (Einstein, James Dean, Marilyn Monroe, and others!), TRAVEL, HUMOR, ROMANCE, PHOTOGRAPHY (Talbot, Ansel Adams, and others). MOST IMAGES ONLY $5, $7, AND $8 each! See us at STUDENT UNION BALLROOM on MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 12TH THROUGH FRIDAY SEPTEMBER 16. The hours are 9 a.m. - 4:30 p.m. The sale is sponsored by WMUA 91.1 FM.

Rollerblades 7 1/2 wmn new $100. Ski-boots 7 $40. 549-8348.

Solid oak triple dresser
Excellent condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253-9394

Sony stereo components 80 watt receiver/amplifier $700. Dual cassette deck w/ dual recorc $100. 5 disc changer $175. Note that controls all, also pair of Technics 150 watt speakers. Call 546-5857

Store bought loft. Paid $175 will sell for $85 or b/o. 549-1518

Toshiba T1200 laptop with mouse + word and star NX 1001 multifont printer. Call Alex 549-8114 with best offer

Washer and electric dryer. Great for students. Will deliver to you. $700/ John or Todd 256-8388

Watch batteries ear piercing, eyeglass and jewelry repairs, great earrings, gifts from glass to gold, custom designed jewelry. Silverscape Designs. 264 N. Pleasant St. Amherst. 253-3324.

Word processor for sale. Brother WP-7800. $299. Call Josh or Charlie 549-8535.

FREE

Free hamster with cage starting for a good home! Leave message 6-2301.

HELP WANTED

$363.00. Sell funny college T-shirts. Profit $363.00. Risk free. Choose from 19 designs. Free catalogs. 1-800-700-4250.

FOR SALE AUDIO

Stereo equipment: used/reconditioned, area's largest selection, priced to sell! Also tv's, vcr's, dj/ pa equipment, instruments etc. We buy, sell, trade. Call SAV Exchange, 8am-8pm. 256-0941.

Babysitter/ mother's helper in Amherst. Sat. and/ or Sun. mornings. 8:30-12:30. Infant experience, car, non-smoking. $5/hr. Call Robin 253-0880 9am-9pm please.

Boston Globe subscriptions- delivery and marketing help wanted. Marketing for three weeks, flex hours. Delivery am all semester. All well paid! Call 256-1071.

Childcare: afternoons/ 2 children, 3 hours/ week. Own car. 253-9679.

Cruise ships now hiring earn up to $1000+/ month working on cruise ships or land tour companies. World travel. Seasonal and full time employment available. No experience necessary. For more information call 1-206-634-0468 ext. C50011.

Drivers wanted Trattoria Gaspetto Italian restaurant, 1177 N. Pleasant St. Amherst. Apply in person after 3:00 pm. 549-7777.

Earn $25 in 2 hours. Seniors and first year grads warned for research study dealing with the GRE. Call Sharon.

Help wanted drivers needed to deliver Collegian. Pays $25 to $85 per week. Must be available in the morning. Call Jim at 549-3535 or stop by the Collegian office in the Campus Center basement.

Jobs for the environment /Grassroots political organizing. Earn $40-80/day. Very flexible hours/ casual atmosphere. Call Alex 256-8434.

Kitchen help and delivery persons wanted, nights and weekends, must be able to work 25 hours a week. apply at D.P. Dough.

Obtain valuable teaching experience and enhance your resume. Volunteer to teach contraception workshops at University Health Service. Call for more information 549-2671 ext 181.

Outreach intern wanted. UMass Hillel looking for outgoing person with abilities to organize outreach events. Flexible part time hours. Contact Yehudit 549-1710.

Part time manager trainee Firestone needs assistant manager. Flexible work schedule/20-25 hours/week. Call Frank in Northampton at 586-1364. ($6/hour)

Receive up to 288,000 dollars in 18 months! For your amazing free report call 413-525-6480 Mon-Fri 8am-5pm.

Resort jobs earn to $12/hr and tips. Theme parks, hotels, spas, + more. Tropical + ski location destinations worldwide. Call (706) 637-0150 ext. 150011.

Responsible children's companion for 11 yr old boy at our home in Leverett one eve a week plus some overnights. Need car 548-9057.

Spring Break '95 Sell trips, earn cash and go free!!! Student travel services is now hiring campus representatives. Lowest rates to Jamaica, Cancun, Daytona and Panama City Beach. Call 1-800-648-4849.

Telefund is hiring, where else can you sit around, talk on the phone, and earn $5.50 per hour? Great experience. Flexible hours call 545-7509 or stop by our office in the basement of Memorial Hall.

Telemarketing Service and develope classifieds advertising in the MA, CT, NY, markets for the Advocate + weekly newspapers. Customer service and communication skills required. $8 hr. Flexible schedule. Call Steve at 800-442-4286.

Teamsfitness club seeks babysitter for up to 18 hrs per week. $5 per hour plus free club membership. Phone Mike or Sunny at 549-3038.

Wanted!! America's fastest growing travel company seeking individuals to promote trips: Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida! Easy free travel! fantastic pay 1-800-426-7710.

Workaway position available $5.50 15 hrs/wk. Flexible office work for public foundation. Call Nancy at Peace Development Fund 256-8308.

Workstudy positions available in Sport Management. Macintosh computer skills and office experience preferred. Apply at 1 Curry Hicks 5-0441.

MUSICIANS

Student alumni relations is looking for musicians and singers for a band to play at our activities. For info call Robert/ Karen 5-7317/ 549-7958.

PERSONALS

Hey Trysta!!! We know it's not the big one but. Happy Birthday anyways!!!! We love you!!! Love Kristen and Gina

PINNOCHIO'S

Hiring driver: full or part time. Call 256-4110 or stop by 30 Boltwood Walk. Ask for Ben.

RESUME WRITING

We specialize in writing resumes and cover letters. Over a decade of experience. Close to campus. 549-0367.

ROOM WANTED

Attention students Anyone who has a single in the Central area and would like to switch for a single in the Southwest area, please call Cheryl at 546-7316.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female roommate wanted to share a large bedroom in a three bedroom condo. Partially furnished $240 a month. For more info call 256-4966.

SERVICES

Model search. The 1994 Glamour Masters national model search continues. Local test shoots now being conducted by First Impressions Photography. Beginners and experienced models. Males, females, all categories welcome. 617-523-0367.

WANTED

Attn. Drama and medieval performers 2 UMass alumni seek medieval performer, jugglers, jongleur to oversee games of skill and inspire guests at their local 15th century wedding. Please have costume and desire for a good time. Bill/ Irene 584-4703.

Campus representative Kodak products spring break trips "guaranteed" best prices + incentives. Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica, S. Padre + Florida. We handle the bookkeeping. You handle the sales. Call 1-800-222-4432.

Sports

Minutemen rush past hapless Crusaders

Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

WORCESTER, MA — An ugly 7–0 first half score turned into a beautiful 32–0 victory as the University of Massachusetts football team defeated the Crusaders of Holy Cross at Fitton Field.

UMass	32
H.C.	0

Before a homecoming crowd of 12,271, the Minutemen [1–1] shut out their opponent for the first time in four years, dating back to 1990 when they were victorious against Villanova 3–0.

As for the 0–2 Crusaders, their only source of offense turned out to be senior tailback Kevin Wynn, who rushed for 108 yards on 12 carries. Touted quarterback Andy Fitzpatrick was ineffective for the second straight week, completing just 9–25 for 92 yards.

"How 'bout the defense," said the very pleased Minutemen coach Mike Hodges. "There was a goose egg, and we don't do that too often. This guy [Fitzpatrick] can throw the football with anybody, and we did a great job of putting the pressure on him."

If it wasn't defensive linemen like seniors Ben Albert, Brian Corcoran and Silas Burke stuffing the run and pressuring Fitzpatrick, it was the linebackers, like sophomore Mike Valentino and senior Trejo Rust, picking up the slack.

As for the Crusader air attack, senior Tony Williams headed the secondary, picking off two passes.

Holy Cross has been outscored 81–3 in the last two games, including a 49–3 drubbing last week at the hands of Army.

The Minutemen, on the other hand, were carried by their explosive ground game — 412 rushing yards on the day, two one hundred–yard rushers, the same two backs scoring two touchdowns apiece and three different running backs scoring touchdowns.

Junior fullback Rene Ingoglia, living up to his preseason All–American talk, rushed for 199 yards on 30 carries as well as scoring two touchdowns. One statistic that sums up the outstanding day of Ingoglia, who captured the John Turco Award as the game's MVP, was that he gained at least a yard on all 30 carries — no loss of yards. Vintage Ingoglia.

It did not end there. Ingoglia's number one mate in the backfield, sophomore tailback Frank Alessio, sped for a career–high 109 yards on a career–high total of 15 carries, and scored two touchdowns, as well. And sophomore transfer Ron Brockington ran for a TD, his second of his career in as many games.

More credit for the offense? The offensive line did the job, as evident by the total yardage. Junior QB Andrew McNeilly had to throw just 14 times, and completed seven passes for 82 yards. An all–around solid effort.

The game was scoreless up until 7:56 of the second quarter, when Ingoglia rambled for a 30–yard score and Eric Oke hit the extra point to make it 7–0. That was the only points scored in the ugly, punt–filled first half.

"It was a third–and–one play, and I was just thinking short yardage," said Ingoglia. "[Brockington] threw a great block, and I happened to get the yard and just bounced it. I got outside the corner, and it was there."

Williams picked off a Fitzpatrick pass late in the second period, his first of two in the game, that stopped a Holy Cross drive. The interception was the junior Fitzpatrick's first since his freshman year, some 143 attempts later.

COLLEGIAN FILE

Junior fullback Rene Ingoglia captured the John Turco award as the Holy Cross homecoming game's most valuable player.

Ingoglia then capitalized on an eight–play, 78–yard third quarter drive with a two–yard run for his second TD to make it 13–0, before Oke missed the PAT.

The fourth quarter was more of a Minuteman onslaught, as they scored another three TD's. Alessio bumped the score to 19–0 with a five yard score with 10:02 left in the fourth. The 4–play, 38–yard drive was inititated by Williams' second interception.

Alessio scored once again on a 16–yard run at 12:11 to push the score to 25–0. Brockington then added to the punishment when, after a fumble on the kickoff, he raced from 25 yards out with 2:32 left to finalize the score.

Hodges was pleased with the units on both sides of the ball.

"I'm very happy for what we did offensively, but I'm extremely happy with a zero on the scoreboard, because those are hard to come by," said Hodges.

Backs key to UM success

By Anthony Guido
Collegian Staff

WORCESTER, MA — Thunder and Lightning.

One rumbles and one strikes. Together Massachusetts' Rene Ingoglia and Frank Alessio combine to form the best backfield in the Yankee Conference.

"It's great to have those guys, if we can rush the football like this we're going to win a lot of football games," Coach Mike Hodges said.

The backfield duo combined for 308 yards rushing in a 32–0 romp over Holy Cross, with two touchdowns each. The Minuteman offense steamrolled the Crusaders after halftime to the tune of 25 points on four rushing touchdowns, with 412 total yards on the ground.

With the UMass offense struggling midway through the second quarter, the Minutemen faced a third–and–one situation. Ingoglia took the handoff and bounced outside, down the sideline for a touchdown to break a scoreless tie.

"All I was thinking was one yard, but Ron [Brockington] made a great block so I could take it to the corner. It really got us rolling," Ingoglia said.

Ingoglia (30–199) was presented the Bob Turco award for homecoming most valuable player. He picked up his second TD on a two yard run, after again running for 30 on the previous play.

"The MVP trophy is a team honor, it's a tribute to my teammates, it belongs to all of us," Ingoglia said.

Ingoglia continues to re–write the UMass records books as well. The junior running back is now second on the all–time yards–gained list with 2,269 yards. Ingoglia, with his two touchdowns, moved up to second on the all–time touchdowns list with 23.

"Rene is a guy who can bounce to fullback and tailback. You can't set your defenses because you don't know where he's going to be," Hodges said.

Alessio (15–109) used his outside quickness to avoid would–be tacklers all day. The sophomore running back broke touchdown runs of 5 and 16 yards while recording his first career 100–yard game. With his breakaway speed, Alessio is a threat to go all the way every time he touches the ball.

"I'm happy for him, he did a great job today. He struggled a little bit last week," Hodges said.

"Frank is the scatback, our styles compliment each other very well," Ingoglia said.

Three new starters on the Minuteman offensive line opened up holes consistently for the backfield, with Ingoglia and Alessio each averaging over six yards per carry. Guards Mark Zych, Todd Tinker, and center Mark Shalala performed well after a tough first game.

"We were missing something last week, missing some schemes, we got it back today," Ingoglia said. "the offensive line was excellent today."

Hodges indicated that Ingoglia, Alessio, and Brockington (5–39, 1 TD) will continue to rotate and share duties. Hodges has different weapons for different situations, as all three appear to be capable receivers out of the backfield.

"We will continue to move the backs around, some guys have a feel for certain plays, we will take what the defense gives us," Hodges said. "It's going to be hard to stop us."

UMass All–America hopefuls do it all

Roberts, Myers spearhead women's soccer

By Mike Reiss
Collegian Staff

The words in itself say enough: All–America Candidate. A potential All–America selection has to be an All–Around All–Everything – much like Nicole Roberts and Rebecca Myers.

The tandem scored two goals apiece yesterday, sparking the University of Massachusetts women's soccer team to a 6–2 triumph over Temple in Philadelphia, Pa.

Massachusetts remains undefeated at 5–0, and with the win, also improves its Atlantic 10 Conference mark to 3–0.

The team now turns its attention to the upcoming weekend (Sept. 24–25) when it hosts the UMass Classic at Richard F. Garber Field. In addition to UMass, Connecticut, William & Mary and Central Florida will participate in the tourney.

Yesterday at Temple, it didn't take long for two of Massachusetts five All–America candidates to break into the scoring column. At 17:00, Roberts found the back of the net, giving Massachusetts a 1–0 lead. Sophomore midfielder Sandy Shimogaki assisted on the goal.

Myers scored soon after at 24:30, cashing in on a feed from junior Rachel LeDuc. Nearing the end of the first half, Myers tallied her second goal of the game, assisted by sophomore Julie Magid.

Roberts added her second score of the contest in the second half, as sophomore All–America candidate Erin Lynch and Polly Hackathorn also cashed in with second half goals.

Lightning's Impact:

Last season, Massachusetts and Rutgers locked horns in an Atlantic 10 matchup at Garber Field that the Minutewomen controlled throughout. Yet the final result was a 0–0 tie.

On Friday, it appeared lightning was going to strike twice, with the teams battling to another scoreless tie. Lightning did strike, but this time around, Massachusetts had the final say.

Riding the strength of freshman Tina Lightning's goal at 106:40, Massachusetts earned a hard–fought 1–0 victory in A–10 Conference play. Myers and Lynch assisted on the goal.

Scoring goals in nothing new to Lightning, a native of London, England. While captaining the Fulham Ladies Football Club, which was the Divisional Championship runner–up, Lightning amassed 25 goals.

Massachusetts No. 5 in nation:

As of today, when the updated national women's soccer poll will be released, Massachusetts was ranked No. 5.

"The ranking really doesn't mean anything," said senior co–captain and All–America candidate Heidi Kocher earlier in the week. "What matters most is where you are at the end of the season."

Looking for reasons why Massachusetts is ranked so high, and respected across the nation? Here's a few:

- Over its first five games, it has outscored the opposition 18–2. In addition, it has outshot the opposition 106–32.
- The team has never trailed, and has outscored the opposition 8–0 in the first half.
- Freshman goalkeeper Danielle Dion has 3.5 shutouts, a .923 save percentage and a 0.41 GAA.
- An air–tight defense led by Kocher.
- A midfield that controls the middle of the field, and distributes the ball well.
- A potent frontline, with everyone a scoring threat.
- A coach, Jim Rudy, who is fourth among Division I women's soccer coaches in career victories (162) along with accomplished assistants, April Kater and Brianna Scurry.
- Depth (11 of 14 players in scoring column).
- The team has had 32 total corner kicks, compared to the opponents 12.
- Every player on the team has at least one shot on net, with Myers (18), LeDuc (16), Melissa Mitchell (12) and Roberts (11) logging double–digit totals.

COLLEGIAN FILE

Sophomore Rebecca Myers scored two goals in the UMass victory over Atlantic 10 rival Temple.

Volleyball remains undefeated at 11–0

Brown, Delaware, Yale and Hartford Fall at UMass Classic

By Brian Perillo
Collegian Staff

The wins just keep on coming.

The University of Massachusetts volleyball team played host to the UMass Classic tournament this past weekend, and had little trouble dispatching with four opponents to capture first place.

The Minutewomen sailed by Brown, Delaware, Hartford and Yale in the Curry Hicks Cage to remain undefeated. Their 11–0 record marks the best start for UMass volleyball since 1985 when the team jumped out to a 15–0 mark, the best ever for Massachusetts volleyball.

The Minutewomen have now won 33 of the 34 games they have played this season, after having their school record 25 game winning streak snapped in the second game against Delaware.

"We're playing well," said UMass Coach Bonnie Kenny. "We had some tough back to back matches."

UMass sophomore outside hitter Dionne Nash, who collected 47 kills and 27 digs in the tournament, was named Most Valuable Player.

"Dionne hit the ball exceptionally well, she played very smart," Kenny said.

Junior middle blocker Rachel Sky and freshman outside hitter Lesley Nolan were named to the All–Tournament team for the Minutewomen.

"Lesley stepped up and Rachel played exceptional defense." said Kenny.

UMass defeats Brown 15–13, 15–12, 15–12

With their starting setter and floor general, junior Cass Anderson, out with a back injury, The Minutewomen turned to freshman Michelle Paciorek to handle the duties.

"Michelle did a great job for her first Division I setting experience," said Kenny.

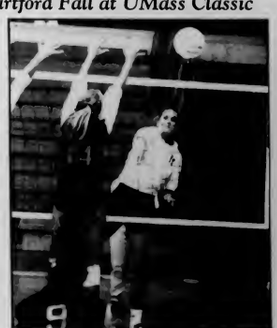
Maybe so, but UMass did not click early, falling behind 0–7 and 0–8 in the first two games, before using comebacks to take the match in three straight.

"Michelle did well," Sky, who led the team with 13 digs, said. "As a team we played about two levels lower than we are capable of."

UMass defeats Delaware 15–9, 13–15, 15–6, 15–11

"All good things must come to an end," Kenny said of the 25 game winning streak ended in game two. "but it doesn't really concern me, people ask if you won, not how you won."

UMass used four players with over 10 kills, led by Nash's 20, and three in double digits in digs, led by Sky's 23, to down the Blue Hens. Anderson returned to the UMass lineup, splitting setting duties with Paciorek, and each of them collected over 20 assists.



COLLEGIAN FILE

The Minutewomen shined in the UMass Classic, extending their winning steak to 11 games.

UMass defeats Hartford 15–0, 17–15, 15–9

The Minutewomen, who were the only team to play four matches in the tournament, opened up day two of the UMass Classic with a victory over the Hawks.

Anderson started for the Minutewomen and tallied 33 assists as well as leading the team with 15 digs. Sophomore sensation Giza Rivera led UMass in kills with 11.

Freshman Leigh Ready and junior Beth Cabral also played well for UMass throughout the tournament in a platoon situation.

"This is great," said Kenny, "but we still have to beat the first rate teams like George Washington, URI and Temple."

UMass defeats Yale 15–6, 15–8, 15–5

The Minutewomen ended the tournament by disposing of Yale to lock up first place.

Nash once again led UMass in kills with 10, and had an impressive .450 hitting percentage. Anderson also played well, again leading UMass in both assists, 30, and digs, 11.

"Our intensity level was low, it has to be higher," Sky said of the tournament. "We play to the level of our opposition. I can't wait to play at a higher level."

National Football League Results Week Three

New England 31–Cincinatti 28	Miami 28–N.Y. Jets 14
Buffalo 15–Houston 7	San Diego 24–Seattle 10
Philadelphia 13–Green Bay 7	San Francisco 34–L.A. Rams 19
New Orleans 9–Tampa Bay 7	L.A. Raiders 48–Denver 16
Pittsburgh 31–Indiannapolis 21	N.Y. Giants 31–Washington 23
Minnesota 42–Chicago 14	Kansas City–at Atlanta (Late)

Detroit at Dallas (Tonight)

Sports Notice:

There will be a meeting for all Collegian sports staff members on Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Collegian offices. Anyone who is interested in writing for sports is encouraged to attend.

Anyone with questions should call Matt Vautour or Andrew Bryce at 545–1851.

Women's tennis takes three in a row

The UMass women's tennis team started its season off right with three straight wins over the weekend (Sports, page 14).

Motorcycle accident hospitalizes student

A UMass junior riding a motorcycle struck a dormitory wall late Friday afternoon and remains hospitalized in good condition (story on page 9).

Van Damme's new film better than expected

Time travel, martial arts salvage yet another Hollywood action move (Jean-Claude Van Damme's Time Cop reviewed on page 5, Arts & Living).

Extended Forecast

Mostly sunny, high in the mid-70s with a west wind of 10 to 15 mph. Fair tonight with lows around 45 to 50. Mostly sunny and warm Wednesday with rain moving in Thursday.

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 75	HIGH: 80	HIGH: 65
LOW: 45	LOW: 50	LOW: 55

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 6 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, September 20, 1994

U.S. brings democracy and problems to Haiti

By Lisa M. Hamm
Associated Press

PORT—AU—PRINCE, Haiti — To the cheers of jubilant slumdwellers, U.S. troops swept peacefully into Haiti by sea and air Monday to clear the way for a new democratic day in this poor, violent land.

The first GIs, dropping in by helicopter at Port-au-Prince airport, met with only cooperation from officers of the military dictatorship. Thousands of other Haitians streamed to the city harbor to greet arriving soldiers, some clambering over fences to give the Americans a personal welcome.

"We're free! We're free!" one shouted.

But the euphoria was dampened by an ugly scene at the port. As American soldiers watched warily from nearby, Haitian police, some swinging rifles and sticks, broke up a rally of hundreds of people chanting slogans in favor of exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide. An 8-year-old boy was killed when run over by car in the late afternoon melee.

The scene could be a prelude to the days and weeks to come, making Operation Support Democracy a risky venture.

By pledging to surrender power, Haiti's rulers kept the Americans from shooting their way in. But a key uncertainty clings to Sunday's last-minute deal: Will next month's promised transition back to Aristide, the elected president, take place without new turmoil and bloodshed?

"The mission still has risks," President Clinton said at the White House.

After landing at the airport, the U.S. force commander, Lt. Gen. Henry Hugh Shelton, went first to Haitian army headquarters and met with military strongman Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras to discuss arrangements for the new U.S. occupation — the second in Haiti this century.

Shelton later described the session as "warm and cooperative." The two military forces must, among other things, decide who is in charge of everyday security matters during the 3 1/2 weeks leading to the Oct. 15 deadline for Cedras' resignation.

Shelton said he hoped the Haitians would handle any "internal disturbances" on their own. But he said no decision had been made on disarming thousands of army auxiliaries, blamed for much of Haiti's recent terror.

It was unclear if Haitian police would make their normal rounds in pro-Aristide areas Monday night. About six policemen carrying sticks, rifles or automatic weapons guarded the gates to the port. The American landing climaxed three years of international diplomatic and economic pressure to restore Aristide, ousted in a September 1991 coup.

Shortly after 9 a.m., the first wave of U.S. soldiers, flying in from the invasion flotilla offshore, stormed off 10 Black Hawk helicopters at the airport, assault rifles at the ready. The camouflage-uniformed Americans, prepared for anything, were met by welcoming Haitian officers.

Earlier, at first light, two U.S. warships and a Coast Guard cutter had steamed into Port-au-Prince harbor. As the day wore on, Aristide supporters thronged the harborside in a carnival mood, cheering GIs as they alighted from assault choppers.

"Tell Clinton that all Haitians are happy," said one man awaiting the Americans' arrival.

Late into the night, helicopters continued to ferry supplies to the airport and port. U.S. troops didn't venture beyond those areas, where they were spending the night.

Late start of year means pressure to election day

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

The Student Government Association at the University of Massachusetts is asking students to use their power and vote in the upcoming elections for Student Senate.

The Student Senate elections will be held on Sept. 29, from 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. Students living in the dormitories can vote at the Dining Commons and students who commute can vote at The Hatch in the Student Union. Students who live in the Greek area can vote at the Newman Center.

The SGA is campaigning to get students to vote because, according to SGA president Mirran Raphaely, 5 percent of the UMass undergraduate population has to cast their ballots in order to make the elections valid.

"We need people to turn out and vote," Raphaely said. "We need 5 percent of the population, 843 people, to make the elections valid."

Nomination papers for the senate positions went out last Thursday and are due by Sept. 23, according to Raphaely.

The people running need 25 signatures from students who reside in the area they are running for in order to be nominated for the election, according to undergraduate student speaker Mercedes Betanco.

Raphaely said students have one week to campaign for their position because of the late start of the school year.

"School starting late has created a problem because we have a constitutional deadline to have the elections before Oct. 1," Raphaely said.

SGA is holding a general information meeting

Turn to SGA, page 9

What more can you ask for? It's all at the Big E

By Emily Marino
Collegian Staff

Where else but the Big E can you eat everything from burritos to corn dogs, play a round of miniature golf, air brush your favorite T-shirt and battle a raging roller coaster all in one day?

This year's Big E features a number of attractions that make the fair worthy of its reputation as one of the biggest and best events to ever happen to western Massachusetts.

Amidst the crowd of booths, buildings, pavilions, stands, rides, tents and most importantly people, it is easy to see that the Big E is a big deal.

The most noticeable presence on the fairgrounds (besides the chewing, licking, munching and sipping people who frequent them) is the wide array of food stands. Colorful signs with pictures of giant hot dogs, french fries, pretzels and fried dough are everywhere, advertising all of the foods traditionally offered at fairs.

If arts and crafts are the name of your game, you won't be disappointed. Vendors offer the opportunity to purchase the air-brushed design of your choice, handmade jewelry, accessories for the home (some funky key racks or ceiling fan pulls), caricatures drawn on-the-spot, and a handful of knick-knacks that you will convince yourself you can use somehow in your room.

Animal lovers will likely need at least one day just to experience all of the fury, feathered or floating friends that are hanging out at the Big E for the next couple of weeks. The fair features a number of animal rides and exhibits, and even boasts a free petting zoo.

One of the most impressive animal displays is the World's Largest Mobile Aquarium, owned and operated by Mike Camerota of Monson. Camerota's exhibit features a 22- pound lobster, moray eels, lemon and nurse sharks, piranhas, sea horses and a 15-foot, 170-pound python.

"This is a 100 percent educational exhibit," Camerota said. "It is the only exhibit like it in the country, maybe even world."

Figuring out how to exit the trailer (which Camerota designed to make transporting the animals safe and easy) without walking past the python was an educational experience.

Camerota has been coming to the Big E for 15 years with his show. He said a network of friends and colleagues have developed in this time.

"For me, it [the best part of coming to the fair] is visit-

Turn to BIG E, page 9

"Going to the chapel. . ."

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

Kristina Robbins, a University of Massachusetts alumna and member of Chi Omega sorority, sashayed through the Campus Center Concourse Saturday en route to her wedding at the Amherst Women's Club.

Departments reorganized, hope for positive change

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

The realignment of the Student Affairs organization at the University of Massachusetts has eliminated the old divisional structure to make way for a new system of clusters.

Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs Thomas B. Robinson directed the restructuring.

In a memo sent to Student Affairs staff and student leaders, he explained the plans to replace the vice chancellery's six divisions by four "clusters" of interrelated departments and programs.

"Specifically, I plan to eliminate the current Student Affairs organization based on the concept of six divisions. At a time when collaboration and partnership is critical at the University, the concept of divisions does not work well - literally or figuratively," Robinson said in the memo.

Robinson created the clusters of departments and programs to help the department work together more efficiently and effectively than the previous structure of divisions.

The four major clusters are: Campus Activities Cluster, Student Affairs Cluster, Enrollment Services Cluster and Vice Chancellor's Closter. The closters, the departments and programs within them are described below.

The Campus Activities Cluster is managed by M. Ricardo Townes, the newly appointed interim assistant vice chancellor for campus activities.

Townes will be in charge of the Center for Organization Advising and Programming. COAP, the new umbrella organization for student activities on campus, will replace the Student Activities Office as it currently stands.

COAP will offer advisory and programming support to registered student organizations, campus cultural centers, student businesses, the Craft Shop, Union Video Center, WMUA radio station, and the Daily Collegian.

Included in these groups is the Office of Third World Affairs, the Student Legal Services Center, the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy, Commuter Services and the Housing Resource Center.

The Student Affairs Cluster is managed Jo-Anne Vanin, dean of students and associate vice chancellor for Student Affairs. In the Student Affairs Cluster, the two positions will be separated and Vanin will become full-time associate vice chancellor.

The Dean of Students Office will continue to function with its current associate and assistant deans until the end of the 1994-95 year and, according to the memo, Robinson hopes to search for a permanent dean in the FY96.

Robinson wrote that he also wants to consolidate all undergraduate academic and non-academic discipline efforts into a new Office of Conduct Standards.

Housing Services and University Health Services are a part of the Student Affairs Cluster.

Turn to CLUSTERS, page 9

Career opportunities offered and great experience available

By Tim White
Collegian Correspondent

The Everywomen's Center at the University of Massachusetts offers counseling and support groups, but it also gives students an opportunity for career advancement.

"We are a very diverse organization," says Carol Wallace, director of the Everywomen's Center (EWC). "We provide services to all women."

Located on the second floor of Wilder Hall, the EWC has been helping men and women at the University of Massachusetts and throughout the Five College system as well as Hampshire County since 1972.

"We are not here to provide answers," Wallace said. "We make you aware of all of the options. We let you know what's out there."

In addition to counseling and referrals to other programs Wallace said the EWC also provides job experience.

"We are a training site to students," she said. "We employ over 150 students a year across all of our programs."

The programs students are involved in, and receive training, for are counseling services, which includes a 24- hour hotline, Counselor Advocate program, Educator/Advocate program, Resource Referral program, and the Women of Color program.

Astrid Meijer, assistant coordinator of the Resource/Referral program, said with the number of programs available at the EWC, it is easy to find job experience sometimes leading to changes in majors or career decisions.

"There are a lot of people that I've seen work here that not only have an academic switch but go through a personal growth," Meijer said.

Meijer herself started as an order-

Turn to EWC, page 2

"Glamour" has been added to a Smith student's life

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

A Smith College senior from Boise, Idaho, has received honorable mention in Glamour magazine's annual "Top Ten College Women" competition.

Government studies major Darcy Goddard will have her name printed in the October 1994 issue of the magazine, according to the Smith College news office. The national magazine has a circulation of more than 2 3 million.

"It's such an honor. Anytime anyone asks about it, I get embarrassed and blush," Goddard said. "My dad, this big hunter-fisher-Idaho man, went out and bought three copies. He was so proud."

Although Goddard did not end up in the top ten, she said she still feels it will serve as a positive force in her life.

"The good thing about it is that it is a national magazine, not as respected as The New York Times, but it still receives national recognition," Goddard said.

Several different categories within the contest were math, science and literature. Goddard said she entered into the public service category because it is what she wants to get into.

When done with school, Goddard said she hopes to attend law school in Washington, D.C., preferably at Georgetown University.

After Goddard finished a semester in Idaho and seven months interning at the Supreme Court in Washington D.C., she sent her application to the magazine.

> "The good thing about it is that it is a national magazine, not as respected as The New York Times, but it still receives national recognition," Goddard said.

The application consisted of a writing sample, letters of recommendation, newspaper clippings about her, a list of activities she participated in, her resume and a list of positions she has ever held, Goddard said.

Marc Green, a representative for Glamour, said the winners of the contest were selected by Glamour editors on the basis of outstanding academic credentials and extracurriculars above and beyond school.

There were about 1,000 applicants this year, Green said. The winners will receive $1,000 each.

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Darcy Goddard

Although Goddard is flattered by the honorable mention, she said she can foresee a negative aspect in receiving the recognition.

"There is this perception that it was some kind of beauty contest, but it wasn't at all," Goddard said.

Goddard said she was required to send a picture but that it had no bearing on the results. The pictures were used only for identification and the photos were pulled off file while the applicants were being considered.

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

Two years in the planning, the Graduate Women's Network debuted Sunday night with a reception in the Campus Center. The organization formed to provide academic support, advice, information and resources to the UMass community of about 3,000 graduate women.

■ clusters

continued from page 1

The Program for Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Concerns, the Everywoman's Center, Disability Services, Veteran's Assistance and Counseling Services, and Greek Affairs will report to the associate vice chancellor of Student Affairs.

The Enrollment Services Cluster will replace the current department of Academic Support Services. A position for assistant vice chancellor and dean for Enrollment Services will replace the dean of Academic Support Services position.

Ken Burnham, the former interim dean of Academic Support Services, will return to his position as associate dean upon the appointment of a permanent assistant vice chancellor and dean.

Student Affairs Special Services is included in the Enrollment Services Cluster.

The Vice Chancellor's Cluster includes the Student Government Association because it is officially recognized as the organization that represents undergraduates on campus, according to the memo.

The SGA will not report to, but does a have a direct relationship with, the chancellor and vice chancellor for student affairs, according to Robinson.

The Division of Public Safety will continue to report directly to Robinson and Environmental Health and Safety will report to the vice chancellor, provided it remains within the Student Affairs vice chancellery.

Student Affairs Research, Information and Systems and the Employee Assistance Program will also be placed in the Vice Chancellor's Cluster.

■ EWC

continued from page 1

graduate student at UMass in 1986. She said she came to the EWC looking for a support group as an incoming first-year student, and ended up applying for a job. She has worked at the EWC throughout her four years as an undergraduate and is currently a graduate student at the University.

Meijer presently holds a professional position with the EWC.

"Check us out," says Meijer. "You don't need to have a reason, bring your lunch or come in for a tour."

Patricia Mota Guedes, a UMass graduate student and the volunteer coordinator of the Educator/Advocate program, came to the University in 1991 and looked for a job at the EWC. Despite an opportunity for a job elsewhere, she opted to stay at the center.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Tuesday, Sept. 20

New members meeting — Alliance for Student Power, Campus Center room 804, 6:30 p.m. Information: Ken Miller, 665-3471.

LBGA Infosocial — Campus Center room 803, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Speakers Bureau — New members training. Program for GLB Concerns Office, Crampton House, 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. Information: 545-4824.

Reading — John Ash, Wootton's, 19 No. Pleasant St., Amherst, 8 p.m.

Lecture — "Lost and Rediscovered: The Historic Gardens of Wales," McConnell Hall 103, Smith College, 9 a.m. to 10 a.m., No fee, Information: 585-2748.

Sukkot Services — Morning services 10 a.m., Chabad House. Information: 549-4094.

Music — Tregar & Shank Team Up. Faculty recital, Sponsored by Department of Music and Dance, Bezanson Recital Hall, University of Massachusetts, 8 p.m.

Special Event — "Healthy, Wealthy and Wise?" Lecture on health care in the '90s, main lecture hall, Holyoke College, 7:30 p.m.

Film — "Not at the Mall: A Series of Film Experiences You Won't find Anywhere Else," Bartlett Hall auditorium, 7 p.m. No fee.

Wednesday, Sept. 21

Lecture — Latina/lesbian comic Marga Gomez, LBG Studies Lecture series, ninth floor Campus Center, 12 p.m. to 1:30 p.m.

Theater/comedy — Marga Gomez in Cheva, $3.50 Five College students and seniors, $6 general public, Bowker Auditorium, 8 p.m. Tickets: Fine Arts Center Box Office, 545-2511.

Debate Union — First meeting held today, Machmer lobby, University of Massachusetts, 5:30 p.m.

Lecture — "An Adoptee's Dreams," poetry reading, Seelye Hall, room 201, Smith College, 7:30 p.m.

Thursday, Sept. 22

Theater/comedy — Marga Gomez in Cheva, $3.50 Five College students and seniors, $6 general public, Bowker Auditorium, 8 p.m. Tickets: Fine Arts Center Box Office, 545-2511.

Just For Fun — Chabad House Sukkah Party, Chabad House, 8 p.m. Information: 549-4094.

Friday, Sept. 23

Meeting — Meeting of Campus Crusade for Christ, singing, skits, short talks, Campus Center. Check information desk in Campus Center for room number, 7 p.m.

Special Event — Rep. Bernard Sanders will be speaking on health care, main lecture hall, Mount Holyoke College, 3 p.m.

Film — To Kill A Mockingbird, Gamble Auditorium, Mount Holyoke College, $2.50, presented by the MHC Film Society, 7 p.m. and 9:15 p.m.

Just For Fun — '80s dance party, sponsored by First Korean American Students of SC, Davis Ballroom, Smith College, 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Upcoming

Pond clean-up — Volunteers needed for campus pond clean-up to be held Sept. 27 and 28, 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. Sign- up: Karen Drumm, 545-2317.

Blood drives — Sept. 20 and 21, Campus Center, 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

My eyes teared as I hacked my desert dry cough at the road dust that swirled up from behind the passing semi. Yes, I was lost... a long way from the rotting New York cul-de-sac I had called my home. Why HAD I eaten that moldy bread. Why DID I let that circus bear break my heart.

Mass. Daily Collegian
Wherever you go, There you are!

at zanna...lug soles

Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 N. Pleasant St. • Amherst
413.253.2563

!! IBM XT COMPUTERS !!
*Includes monitor, 10 meg hard drive.
(printers, modems also available)
$168.00!!!
*14 day replacement guarantee.
*delivery available.
call 256-8094

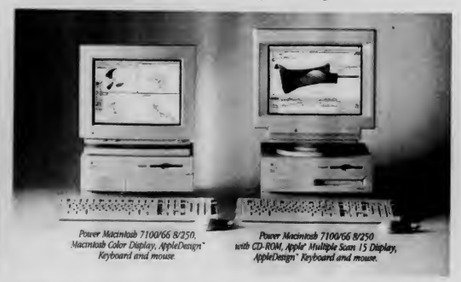
200 Throbbing Watts!

Artistry in Sound
ONKYO TX-SV940 Receiver
Sale $289.
Sound&Music
Millbank Place • 351 Pleasant Street • Northampton
584-9547 • VISA & MasterCard accepted

We've just developed a way to make Power Macintosh even more powerful.

(Buy one now, and we'll throw in all this software to help you power through college.)

ClarisWorks and the Apple Student Resource Set included when you buy the Power Macintosh computers to the right.



Power Macintosh 7100/66 8/250, Macintosh Color Display, AppleDesign™ Keyboard and mouse.

Power Macintosh 7100/66 8/250 with CD-ROM, Apple® Multiple Scan 15 Display, AppleDesign™ Keyboard and mouse.

Not only is the world's fastest Macintosh® computer available at special low student prices, but now it includes a student software set available only from Apple. For a limited time, buy a select Power Macintosh® and you get software that helps you through every aspect of writing papers, a personal organizer/calendar created for your student lifestyle and the Internet Companion to help you tap into on-line research resources. Plus you'll get ClarisWorks, an integrated package with a word processor, database, spreadsheet and more. Buy a select Power Mac® with CD-ROM, and you'll also get a multimedia library of essential reference tools. It all comes with Power Macintosh — the computer that grows with you from college to the professional world. And now, with an Apple Computer Loan, it's easier than ever to own one. It's the power every student needs. The power to be your best. Apple® through it.

UNIVERSITY STORE

Campus Center
545-2619

Mon.- Fri. 9a.m. - 5p.m.
Sat. 11a.m. - 3p.m.

Talk to Apple Representatives & see the latest MACINTOSH PRODUCTS Sept. 27 & 28, on the concourse in front of the U Store.

Offer expires October 17, 1994, available only while supplies last. ©1994 Apple Computer, Inc. All rights reserved. Apple, the Apple logo, Macintosh and "The power to be your best" are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. AppleDesign, Power Mac and Power Macintosh are trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. ClarisWorks is a registered trademark of Claris Corporation.

Information highway set to travel on

Career fair ready to help guide students plan for their futures

By David Copeland
Collegian Staff

Students will have the opportunity to travel a "Career Information Highway" in the Student Union Ballroom at the University of Massachusetts.

On Sept. 21 the open house, which is being sponsored by the Mather Career Center, will have several tables set up for students to learn more about choosing their career paths.

Karen Knight, the Industry Liaison for the Mather Career Center, said she has been busy contacting various alumni to attend the open house.

Friendly's, Health New England, American Power Conversion are several companies that will be present at the fair.

"It is real important to get across to students that this is not a career fair," Knight said. "This is a major networking event for information sharing."

Knight said students should not feel the need to dress up or bring resumes to the event.

The Student Union Ballroom will be set up to look like a highway. Exits will include a "Test Driving Your Career Stop" where students can learn about Co-Ops and internships.

There will also be a "Travel Bureau Stop" which is the Career Center's information library, as well as "rest stops" which will have food for students.

The open house will have several mini workshops throughout the day. Friendly's will run a twenty minute session on the demands of management. Health New England will discuss what they look for in the people they hire.

American Power Conversion will also run a workshop on the soft skill they look for in the people they hire.

Bob Paquette, who works for WFCR radio, will interview several UMass alumni. One notable former UMass student will be Wayne Levy, who is the Director of Community Relations for the Boston Celtics.

Alumni will wear buttons that will invite students to ask them about their jobs. Knight said the emphasis will be to get students to talk to people who have traveled the road they are now traveling.

"Career development is learning to ask other people for help and information. Networking is the key to a student's future, and knowing how to use that information," Knight said.

Students will also have a chance to learn about Co-Ops and Internships offered by the Career Center at the Test Driving Your Career Stop.

This table will be staffed by Lynn Yaffee who is a Field Experience Advisor at the Career Center. Yaffee has arranged for a number of students who have previously done Co-Ops and Internships to be at the table.

"Sometimes it's less intimidating for a student to go up and talk to another student," Yaffee said.

Over $1000 worth of prizes will be given out, including resume packages, day planners and gift certificates from local merchants.

Knight said she is hoping the fair will make students aware of the certain steps they need to make in choosing a career.

"We're trying to present it in a way that's interesting and fun. The job search doesn't have to be this intimidating, scary thing," Knight said.

STEVEN PEDULLA / COLLEGIAN

Police Sgt. Mark LaBranche shares the limelight with the cruisers' new logo, which took first place in an international police design competition.

New police car design gets award

By Heather Redfern
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts police will be driving in style this season with the new design of their 1994 cruisers garnering international attention.

Placing first in an international design competition at the state and federal level in competition with 400 applicants, UMass police were awarded a plaque for their new logo.

The award will be donated to the UMass Department of Public Safety and the $250 check which will be given to fund activities of the Special Olympics.

The competition held by Law and Order Magazine, a magazine for police management, judged vehicles on how well their graphics project favored police images, reflect authority and professionalism of the department as well as provide immediate recognition as a police vehicle.

Sergeant Mark LaBranche, a vehicle maintenance supervisor for the UMass Police, proposed re-designing of the UMass police vehicles in 1991. Yet due to budget complications, beginning the task was postponed until June 1993.

LaBranche said that each of the six fully-equipped 1994 Ford Crown Victorias were purchased for $18,000 through state bidding.

LaBranche worked with Sergeant Mark Jacques and Gil Leblank of the University's paint shop to develop the cruiser logo.

As the design initially created for all of the UMass sports teams - the cursive "UMass" logo recognized by lance purposes.

The new light grey vehicles can be recognized with six-inch dark blue stripes along the sides topped by a one-inch yellow reflectorized stripe, enabling one to follow the side- lines of the vehicle from front to rear.

The 911 emergency number appears near the rear of the vehicles.

Added features, such as an eight-strobe light system and a built-in Traffic Advisor Light System, have been installed in the new cruisers.

The Traffic Advisor System will warn an officer of a dysfunctional light in the cruiser's lighting system.

In addition, a Big Sky Racks shotgun mount within the vehicle will give an officer quick access to the weapon, offering little visibility to it from the outside of the vehicle.

Tremco anti-theft devices will be added to deter thieves from access to a police vehicle in the case of the vehicle having to be left running unattended at an accident scene.

According to LaBranche, the new vehicles will cut fuel consumption by 50 percent with smaller engines tuned up to give more horsepower.

LaBranche said the addition of the six cars will increase the number of functional vehicles accessible to University officers.

At the present time, 35 officers are using vehicles to cover regular beats in addition to transporting prisoners and traveling to and from the police academy in Agawam.

"The majority of the cars on the lot are very old. We maintain a policy of not giving up vehicles," LaBranche said.

Gain valuable "real world" experience on campus!

The Collegian Business Office is looking for ambitious, organized Sophomore SOM majors for the position of

Associate Business Manager.

Direct supervision recieved from the Collegian business manager, as well as the assistant business manager. Applications may be obtained at:

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center (the basement)

Resumes and cover letters may be directed to:

Michael McRae, Business Manager

The Collegian is an equal opportunity employer.

UMass Arts Council Presents performance interventions at public art sites & courtyards

artEventives

September 22

Delight in an Autumnal Early Evening at two campus gardens... featuring Vincent Dowling

3:30

Beginning at the Clark Memorial public art place, delight in early American music & Morris dancers. Enjoy the ambience – bring a picnic and blanket and supper on the surrounding berms/Berkshire Hills. You will be greeted by notable Clark himself, personified by hosting actor, Walter Carroll of WFCR's "Afternoon Music"

4:45 A Musical Promenade will stroll down Hill Side to...

5:00 the new DiTree Gardens. Sip cranberry punch, tour the splendid garden spaces and listen to Sea Songs of Shantie man Davis Bates

5:30 Spotlighting the Durfee Stage, eminent actor and director, Vincent Dowling from the Miniature Theater of Chester reading "By the Shores of the Berkshire Mountains," a dramatization of Melville's short story, "The Piazza" by Bimie Greenbie

Reception to meet the artist follows

Support and assistance for this evening from: UMass Arts Council, Department of Landscape Architecture & Regional Plan., Reg. 1 Mass Student Chapter of ASLA, Campus Center Building Services/AV, Fine Arts Center Production Services, Amherst Chamber of Commerce/Brick & Plow Festival, and many others friends.

A genius figured it out— HP built it in.

E=MC²

- The HP 48G has built-in equations, functions, and menus to guide you through complex calculations.
- Access over 300 built-in equations.
- Push a button, choose from a pull-down menu and fill in the blanks. Entering data is that easy.
- View 3-D graphs.
- Perform algebra and calculus operations on equations before entering values.
- Enter and see equations like they appear on paper.
- Work with different units of measure. The HP 48G will convert them for you. So, enter inches, centimeters, yards, and feet, together in one equation — it'll convert them.
- You'll quickly learn to operate it!

Pull-down menus guide you through problem-solving smoothly and quickly. Push a button, select an entry from the pull-down menu, and fill in the blanks.

- Check it out at your college bookstore.

The HP 48G graphic calculator gives you a whole lot more for a whole lot less than you think. Compare — the HP 48G fits your budget.

HEWLETT PACKARD

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Durienne I. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Ganley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor
Position vacant Black Affairs Editor
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor
Evelyn A. Delerme Multicultural Affairs Editor
Kelly Spang News Editor
Nathan K. Martin Photography Editor

Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Position vacant Women's Issues Editor
Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Jim Roode Circulation Manager
Eric Abenaim Subscriptions Manager
Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

A time for pleasure before the end

"I could never work in a nursing home."

I hear people say this to me all the time when I tell them that I work in one. My friends wonder how I can enjoy a job where sickness and death come so often.

But the truth is I enjoy working in a nursing home. I have worked in one since 1989 and every year I enjoy it more.

I have been around nursing homes all my life because my mother is a nurse. I remember going to all the different activities as a kid and having a great time. I always looked forward to going to work with my mother.

Candice Flemming

It is true that there is a lot of sickness and death. There are people with so many different problems like Alzheimer's, Parkinson's, cancer and so on. It really can be a depressing job, but at the same time it can be very rewarding.

The elderly have a lot to offer if you give them a chance. Some people would not want to get to close to someone who is very sick. But for me, the job would not of been as enjoyable if I did not make friends with some of the patients.

The nursing home is the last stop for a lot of the patients; most of them will die there. Most of their family is gone and they are all alone with no one to talk to. Knowing this, I try to make their last days enjoyable.

I have seen a lot of people die in five years but it was not until this year that I had to deal with someone I really cared about dying. In fact I dealt with it twice.

They were both in relatively good health so I did not expect them to die. I had put the fact that they were old out of my mind. I knew they would eventually die but I didn't expect it for years. So, when they both died it was a shock.

Miss Mahoney was a 95–year–old former kindergarten teacher. She had no serious health problems, she was just old. Whenever I walked into her room to say, "Hi, Miss Mahoney," a big smile would come across her face. She had the most deepest laugh for such a little lady.

I always would take the time to sit and talk with her. She was very intelligent and she always gave me good advice. She always used to say to me that "it is better to laugh than to cry." In her situation, she could easily be sad all the time and give up, but she never did. She always smiled and laughed.

In May, she became sick with pneumonia. I went home to see her on a weekend and she did not look good. She stayed in bed all day and she did not recognize anyone. I thought maybe if I said something to her she would respond but she did not have any reaction towards me. At that point I knew that it would not be long until she was gone.

I was prepared for it but it still was extremely upsetting. She passed away during the last week of school. I was sad, but it did not really effect me until I went back to work for the first time and immediately went to her room to say, "Hi, Miss Mahoney." I was so excited to hear her deep laugh but then when I entered her room, it hit me that she was not there and she never would be again. It took me a while to get used to not seeing her.

Beatrice Fleming was 92 years old and, like Miss Mahoney, a former school teacher. She had Alzheimer's disease which greatly affected her mind but from the first day I saw her there was something about her that I liked. She was my favorite patient in the home. In fact, she was the favorite patient of a lot of the employees. She was so sweet and lovable.

She was always sitting in her chair looking out into space talking to her sister or her mother, whoever it was that she "saw" that day. Every morning I would go say, "Hi, Bea," and she would say "Hi, dear," in a loud voice. You could not have an intelligent conversation with her, but she was still the nicest person. She would always give you a hug and kiss when you said hi to her. I could be in the worst mood coming into work but then I would see her and she would make me smile.

I had took for granted that she would always be there and then one day when I arrived at work, I found out that she had passed away. At first I did not believe the person, I could not believe that she was gone. I went straight to her room to see if it was really true. When I got there and saw all of her clothes in bags, I was in complete shock. I just could not believe it.

After dealing with these two deaths, I will still work in the nursing home because it is something I love to do. I refuse to be afraid to make friends with another patient even though I know they will eventually die. I will continue trying to make their last days enjoyable.

And if people still ask me how can I work in a nursing home the answer will come easily. The people I work with are special to me and being there for their last days is one of the most rewarding jobs I could ever have.

Candice Flemming is a Collegian staff member.

Without community there is no society

"Personal responsibility" is the new magical word in Washington. Just as all candidates in '92 were trying to be the agents of change, every candidate in '94 is trying to be a preacher of "personal responsibility."

Neil Carpenter

In 1992, it didn't take a high–priced political consultant to figure out why change was driving the election.

The economy was awful, people were losing their health care and the budget deficit was skyrocketing out of sight. People wanted Washington to change so their lives would be changed.

However, personal responsibility is a more complex issue, involving a hazy fog of issues from race to religion.

At its core, personal responsibility is a response to everything from the Menendez brothers to street beggars.

The public has gotten sick of complaining to the point that it has abandoned compassion in favor of anger.

In America the average person's wages, corrected for inflation, have not gone up in 20 years. TV makes crime look out of control, and more children are living in poverty now than 20 years ago.

America has gotten to a point of societal frustration so that we have gone from "we are all in this together" to "all this is everyone else's fault," and the sniping and bitterness that befalls all groups after enough failures has begun.

Ironically, the drive for personal responsibility is also a shirking of responsibility in the broadest sense.

To say, "I'm sick of 'other' people's problems, they should deal with their own," is ignoring our potential role in helping cause the problems in the first place.

Personal responsibility is signaling the end of Community. The end of community is the result of a new world economy where it is every man for himself.

Companies do not believe in loyalty anymore and workers know that only they can, and will, take care of themselves.

People are also moving frequently from town to town today never staying long enough to build up strong community ties. The "every person for himself" mentality has also infected our personal lives.

Many people don't take sex or creating a child seriously because they can make it someone else's problem. Men can dump the problem on women and women can dump the problem on society.

The problems this attitude generates are both a cause for the political drive for personal responsibility but also a consequence of this individualistic philosophy as well.

Why? Children of a young drug addict, for example, can't take care of themselves and their parents clearly can't either. Personal responsibility is leaving the poor innocent kids out in the cold.

We, as a society, are more interested in trying to teach the parents responsibility by — neglecting these kids — than in taking responsibility for helping those who can't help themselves. How responsible is that?

Neil Carpenter is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

New student speaks out on convocation

To the editor:

As a new student of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, I was very disappointed and surprised about numerous events.

The first night I arrived on campus there was the annual convocation ceremony. I was very disturbed with Mirran Raphaely, president of the Student Government Association. Her speech was extremely condescending. As a new student I was not interested in hearing all of the negative aspects of this University.

Miss Raphaely blamed all the faults of the University on the professors, the lack of affordability, and the lack of student power. She did not offer solutions to these problems. In my opinion she is a simple–minded liberal. That night, I left the Mullins Center very upset and wondering if attending UMass was in my best interest.

After attending classes last week, I was very impressed with my professors. I look forward to an exciting year. The University has wonderful facilities and is a great place to learn. Rather than being pessimistic and criticizing this University, I would rather be optimistic and use my energy to make this University better.

I believe that a president is supposed to be an advocate for the school and its students, not a cynic. As a student of this fine University I would like to demand that Miss Raphaely immediately resign her post as president of the Student Government Association. Obviously, she does not like this place and would rather be somewhere else.

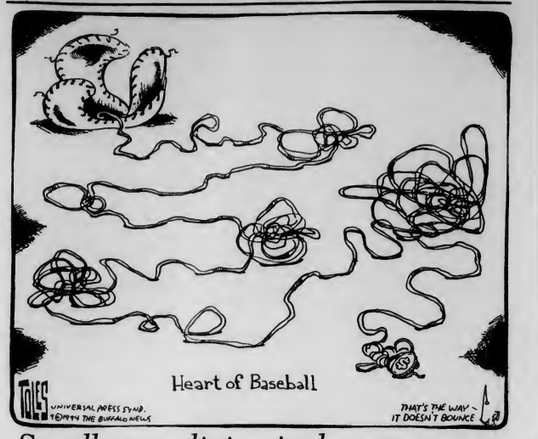
We need a president who is going to take initiative, not cheap shots on anyone who is a convenient target. It is often easier to criticize something rather than take the time to fix it. We do not need a lazy, "do–nothing president" who cannot take the initiative. Let us work together, not against each other, to create the best UMass possible.

James A. Resnick
Class of '98

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

IN THE DAYS THAT FOLLOWED, THE WIDOW DOONESBURY KEPT A VIGILANT EYE ON THE STRANGER.
HE'S STILL OUT THERE!
WELL, HELLO AGAIN!
HELLO. STILL "SURVEYING"?
YUP. SURE IS NICE OF YOU TO KEEP STOPPING BY, MA'AM.
UM... NOT AT ALL! GOOD DAY!
LATER, AT SHERIFF TOWNSEND'S OFFICE...
WHAT KIND OF CRIME SPREE, MRS. D?
HOW SHOULD I KNOW? THAT'S YOUR JOB!

Opinion/Editorial



Small town living is the way to go

Lee, N.H., is the small town where I was born and bred.

It's a place where I can pull into "the dump" and see either people I went to school with or someone else I know. It's a town where the small village store, which has been there for as long as I can remember, is now being threatened by the Market Basket where we can finally do all of our shopping without driving 20 minutes away.

But I'm realizing I want something else in life. I'll be perfectly happy to live in a small, sleepy, little town where excitement is a moose wandering into someone's back yard.

Jacob W. Michaels

Lee is the type of town where people grow up and have kids who go to the same schools and have the same teachers as their parents. It's a strange idea, one I thought was rather sad when I first realized what was happening. Didn't these people have any desire to get out into the world, to not live in a house right next to their parents?

I remember telling my dad during my senior year in high school that there was no way I would go back to Lee after graduation and live there. So I came to Amherst, another small town three hours from home, and made friends with a bunch of seniors who graduated last semester. I remember them talking about how far away they wanted to get from here and from home.

It's something I can understand but I just don't agree with them. When I'm done with all my schooling, I want to come back to a small town like Lee or Amherst.

Sure I want all the great experiences in life, but that's what college is for. Going to other countries, meeting new and different people, and trying out new things. But I'm realizing that I want something else in life. I realize that I'll be perfectly happy to live in a small, sleepy, little town where excitement is a moose wandering into someone's back yard.

Yet, little towns can offer something as well. If you're looking for a chance to do what you like, it can be easier in a small location, whether it be opening a restaurant or teaching elementary school.

There's a quality that exists in the simplicity of country living. It's relaxing and peaceful, as opposed to the hustle and pressures of living with a million other people. People get to know each other's names.

There's something simple and appealing about small town living. Maybe it has to do with not having to worry about long lines or traffic jams. Maybe it's the idea of a neighborhood cookout, grilling hamburgers while bugs eat you alive. Or maybe it's the town fair that occurs every year, watching your friends' little sisters ride down main street in the parade just like you did years before.

I want nothing more than a nice home and happy family in a small town where I don't need to worry about locking my door. It's odd, I guess. It takes leaving what you have, to truly appreciate it.

Whether I do spend the rest of my life in the town where I grew up or not, it will always be a part of me. I will always want to live in a small town where people know each other and smile as they pass. Or the kind of town where we pay the two cops to sit in the police station unless they're travelling the quarter hour to the nearest donut shop, and the volunteer fire department spends all of their time rescuing cats stuck in trees.

I guess I'm just a small town boy at heart.

Jacob W. Michaels is a Collegian staff member.

Communities need a united front

A letter to the Latino/a community new and returning students: During my first two semesters as a Latino student at the University of Massachusetts, I saw and heard many things. Some things were amazing, others deplorable. My emotions ranged from happiness and sadness to despair. I was truly crushed when I found a community of Latino/a students who, for the most part, had been divided by the politics of other groups on campus.

We have a culture and history as people of Latin American descent. It is our duty to ensure that Latino/as that come to UMass find comfort and support here.

Daniel Rivera

Some of my Latino/a friends were "White" enough to be accepted in the mainstream White groups. Others were "down" enough to be accepted in the African–American camp. I saw my community being torn apart and set against each other on issues that did not concern us. This set up a dynamic that did not allow for any Latino/a dialogue or unity — outside of the salsa and meringue dancing on the weekends.

Our house needs some cleaning! We have to establish a better relationship with our Latino/a faculty and administration, as well as among ourselves. We cannot accomplish those things if we are caught up fighting someone else's fight, and if we continue to disassociate ourselves with each other because of other groups' agendas, prejudices and politics.

It is unacceptable to have the second highest enrollment rate and have one of the highest dropout rates. It is unacceptable for the support that other students on campus receive to be far superior to ours due to the lack of a unified voice.

It is unacceptable for the dynamics of hate and prejudice that are rampant at this University to be a part of our community. There needs to be a support system from within the Latino/a community for all of us to turn to when we come across a problem, have a bad experience or if we just want to celebrate our culture. I hope that my Latino/a hermanos y hermanas see the need for dialogue and discussion among our community in order to create this type of environment for all Latino/a students on campus.

I am in no way suggesting that we should be one homogenous group that only associates and socializes with each other. That would be absurd. I feel it is important to interact and support each other, as it is to interact and support the other communities. Only a unified community is capable of dealing with the problems and needs of the individuals. Who, if not us, will have our best interest in mind? The Black community? The White community? The administration? They have their own issues to deal with, and only we have the perspective to deal with ours.

We have a culture and history as people of Latin American descent (native–born and U.S.–born). It is our duty to continue and advance that culture. It is our duty to ensure that Latino/as that come to this University find comfort and support here.

We are the fastest growing minority group in the state and we must ensure that Latino/as, who get the opportunity to come to college, graduate with the tools necessary to advance in society. There are many problems in our community on a state, national and international level, and our generation will be the one asked to come up with answers to these problems.

Daniel Rivera is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Welcome back. We'd love to receive letters from you. The mailbox has been very dusty and lonely as of late. Come on down and contribute.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please type your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

The Editorial/Opinion page will occasionally print guest columns, but arrangements must be made in advance. If you feel you have a unique perspective on an issue of general interest, contact the Ed/Op staff before you submit anything longer than a standard letter.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Arts & Living

Formula thrives in loose Timecop

By Daniel Pellegrini
Collegian Staff

TIMECOP
with Jean–Claude Van Damme, Ron Silver and Mia Sara
Directed by Peter Hyams

In the great and somewhat long tradition of the action movie genre, Peter Hyams' Timecop has Hollywood written all over it. That's O.K. though, we all accept it. Just as we accept the fact that we know who wins and who dies at the end before we

Turn to TIME COP, page 6

ASSOCIATED PRESS
Jean–Claude Van Damme

New Baseball documentary a winning grand slam

By Scott Williams
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The viewer approaches the vast edifice of Ken Burns' monumental film Baseball like the Mississippi River. Like the river, Baseball runs through the center of America, its steam resonant with history, its sources hidden. Baseball is epochal. Vast. Deep. And, like the river, Baseball is ungodly long.

The longest baseball game in history played out at eight hours, six minutes. (White Sox beat the Brewers 7-6, May 8-9, 1984. You could look it up.) At 18 half hours-plus, Baseball throws down the old mark and dances on it.

Burns and co-producer Lynn Novick adopted a format of nine, two-hour "innings," as the backbone of their decade-by-decade chronology. Like the game, each episode begins with a rendition of The Star-Spangled Banner.

PBS, hoping to induce the same cultural fascination as did Burns' 11-hour masterpiece, The Civil War, has stripped the nine innings across 11 nights. The television event began on Sunday, Sept. 18: Five nights, two days off, then the final four episodes. This is foolhardy.

Baseball should be savored like baseball itself — at leisure. The wise fan will stock up on blank videotapes.

There's a way to watch Baseball without pain. Start with the first inning, "Our Game," on its origins and pre-history, and the second inning, beginning at 1900 with the dawn of the modern game. Historians will want to stick with the third inning, 1910-20, with the booming popularity of baseball, the pro game's "urbanization," the venality of the team owners and the 1919 Chicago Black Sox Scandal.

Skip the fourth inning, 1920-30, and view it at your leisure. It's a fine, stand-alone film about the decade dominated by Babe Ruth. There's little to it, however, you haven't seen or heard before.

Jump to the fifth inning, "Shadow Ball," about the emergence of the Negro Leagues.

At that point, real-time viewers should wait for the decade of their youth to roll up. The "Baseball" of the '40s, '50s and '60s is still part of our cultural memory, so pick your green-grass decade and dive in.

The ninth inning, which ranges from the '70s to the present, focuses on the Curse of Ruth, which has dogged the Boston Red Sox since 1918, and on Pete Rose's disgrace.

In Baseball, Burns also uses his customary "talking head" commentators to put the history in perspective.

We get to see Buck O'Neil, formerly of the Negro Leagues' Kansas City Monarchs, whose burnished soul radiates wisdom and kindness, and The New Yorker's baseball writer, Roger Angell, analyze the game.

Ted Williams and Bill Lee talk about the inner game. But Burns also includes very smart people who are, fore-

Turn to BASEBALL, page 6

New Baseball documentary a winning grand slam

By Scott Williams
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The viewer approaches the vast edifice of Ken Burns' monumental film Baseball like the Mississippi River. Like the river, Baseball runs through the center of America, its steam resonant with history, its sources hidden. Baseball is epochal. Vast. Deep. And, like the river, Baseball is ungodly long.

The longest baseball game in history played out at eight hours, six minutes. (White Sox beat the Brewers 7-6, May 8-9, 1984. You could look it up.) At 18 half hours-plus, Baseball throws down the old mark and dances on it.

Burns and co-producer Lynn Novick adopted a format of nine, two-hour "innings," as the backbone of their decade-by-decade chronology. Like the game, each episode begins with a rendition of The Star-Spangled Banner.

PBS, hoping to induce the same cultural fascination as did Burns' 11-hour masterpiece, The Civil War, has stripped the nine innings across 11 nights. The television event began on Sunday, Sept. 18: Five nights, two days off, then the final four episodes. This is foolhardy.

Baseball should be savored like baseball itself — at leisure. The wise fan will stock up on blank videotapes.

There's a way to watch Baseball without pain. Start with the first inning, "Our Game," on its origins and pre-history, and the second inning, beginning at 1900 with the dawn of the modern game. Historians will want to stick with the third inning, 1910-20, with the booming popularity of baseball, the pro game's "urbanization," the venality of the team owners and the 1919 Chicago Black Sox Scandal.

Skip the fourth inning, 1920-30, and view it at your leisure. It's a fine, stand-alone film about the decade dominated by Babe Ruth. There's little to it, however, you haven't seen or heard before.

Jump to the fifth inning, "Shadow Ball," about the emergence of the Negro Leagues.

At that point, real-time viewers should wait for the decade of their youth to roll up. The "Baseball" of the '40s, '50s and '60s is still part of our cultural memory, so pick your green-grass decade and dive in.

The ninth inning, which ranges from the '70s to the present, focuses on the Curse of Ruth, which has dogged the Boston Red Sox since 1918, and on Pete Rose's disgrace.

In Baseball, Burns also uses his customary "talking head" commentators to put the history in perspective.

Turn to BURNS, page 7

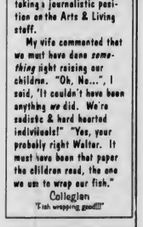
Today as we walked home from church our son Normal announced that he had sold his complete set of action smurf figurines and made a key contact for a job gutting fish in an Alaskan fish cannery.

Our daughter Willamina has decided to rush a sorority and is considering taking a journalistic position on the Arts & Living staff.

My wife commented that we must have done something right raising our children. "Oh, No...", I said, "It couldn't have been anything we did. We're sadistic & hard hearted individuals!" "Yes, your probably right Walter. It must have been that paper the children read, the one we use to wrap our fish."

Collegian
"Fish wrapping good!!!"

For long distance calls. Savings based on a 3 minute AT&T operator dialed interstate call.



It's my sons in Nebraska for only three years old. I like smarts, and Pete, and the Maxx Daily Collegian.

Spirit Haus
Refrigerator Rentals
256-8433
253-5384

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycles
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST FITNESS CLUB
256-0080

A.B.C. GUM

1-800-COLLECT
The Polite Way to Call Collect

"Chewing gum while calling collect is as rude as dialing zero." Please use the space provided above to store gum for after conversation enjoyment. And always dial 1-800-COLLECT when calling collect. You'll save the people you call up to 44%.

"One day I decided to sell my bike and my car, and in the spirit of Walden Woods & Don Henley, I would walk everywhere from now on.

I also decided that the best way to get rid of them and make a whole lot of cash (that I wouldn't donate any of to a worthy environmental cause) was to advertise in The Collegian Classifieds.

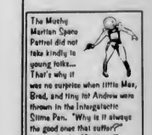
Needless to say, I sold my bike and car, but when I looked to see my classified in the paper I saw a really cool classified for a motorcycle. Screw the environment, now I ride with the wind and death at my side."

Collegian Classifieds
They really work.

HELLCATS
JOIN THE PACK
RIDE WITH DEATH
THE COLLEGIAN



The Mighty Martian Space Patrol did not take kindly to young folks... That's why it was no surprise when little Max, Brad, and tiny tot Andrew were thrown in the Intergalactic Slime Pen. "Why is it always the good ones that suffer?" whined Andy. "Shaddup!" replied Maximillian and Brad. Andy ignored the older boys, as he scavenged another twist-tie. He had plans. BIG plans. He didn't plan on staying around.

Collegian
"Just another brother on Intergalactic lockdown."

Writing for Arts & Living is Wicked Cool.

Be a part of the only Collegian desk to offer our writers a wide range of topics, personalities and possibilities. We're looking for a few good women and men to lend their writing expertise and to continue the level of wicked coolness.

Whether you're interested in penning a few reviews just for fun or beginning a writing career, we're the ones to check out. From interviews to essays on pop culture, from concert previews to film reviews — that's Arts & Living. . . and that's wicked cool. (*sarcasm optional)

Now and returning writers are invited to a meeting on Thursday, Sept. 22 at 7:30 p.m. in the Collegian newsroom. Any questions? Call 545-1361.

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY
Division of International Programs Abroad
119 Euclid Avenue
Syracuse, New York 13244-4170
1-800-235-3472

SYRACUSE ABROAD
Something to write home about!

FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE AVAILABLE

- Programs in Australia, Belgium, England, France, Germany, Israel, Italy, Spain, and Zimbabwe
- Prior foreign language not always necessary
- SU credit
- Field trips/traveling seminars
- Internships
- Study for a semester, a year, or a summer
- Home stays or limited apartment placements

You know Bobby, copying those answers from our family encliopedia for your botanie project reminds me of my college days. Ahh... those were the good ole' days, cheat sheets on the inside of my leg league muffler, paying off the students at the state school to take my exams. Summa Cum Laude. God bless those enivilling statisics! I did love them so!

DAILY COLLEGIAN
State school intelligence five every weekday.

It's all the same to the Clans...
COLLEGIAN...
To tell the truth, it's all the same to us too.

■ Time Cop

continued from page 5

pay our money to see it.

There's nothing really wrong with Hollywood - that is, as long as you're prepared to take in snappy one-liners that teeter-totter all over the world of humor and cheese, or you are patient enough to sit through loads and over loads of unreal and almost comedic action. American audiences, including myself, enjoy surviving through these formulas. There's almost a kind of self-gratification to it.

Timecop begins with the introduction of time travel to the world. It's a phenomenon that has been violated by a few corrupt government insiders (more specifically a presidential wannabe named McColmb, played by Ron Silver) who uses the device to travel into the past in order to make money off future-dependent markets like Wall Street or sports gambling.

Enter Jean-Claude Van Damme. Possibly one of the world's most egotistical men, but we forgive him because he can stretch his legs into ungodly positions. He plays Max Walker, a TEC cop, who's part of a special unit that insures law and order throughout the boundaries of time.

Now enter Ron Silver, a sleazy senator put in charge of regulating the time travel operation who, from the beginning of the film, wastes no time in telling us he's the bad guy by killing Van Damme's wife in an attempt to shut him up.

Now, enter Hollywood. From this point on Timecop becomes nothing more than an action movie, but by the same token nothing less than entertaining. It's easily Van Damme's best yet (though to consider a breakthrough role is arguable), but his soft-spoken Belgian dialect will never appropriately fit the roguish, haunted, rebel-cop he plays here.

As always, the martial arts steal the show. Unlike the fight sequences from Hard Target, which were slow and painful, Timecop's brutality is much quicker, and still more painful. The result of some of Van Damme's low blows will leave the male portion of the audience cross-legged and wincing.

Aside from lacking intelligence, the only thing Timecop has against it are a couple loose ends. First off, there are always unanswered possibilities when dealing with time travel in film, but these are technical and complicated flaws that can be overlooked.

The film's other loose end is a plot that grows weak and essentially falls apart in the second half of the movie. Suddenly the film becomes a balance of Van Damme's race to a) save his already dead wife and b) kill the bad guys. Normally this would work, but director Hyams keeps the two plots seperate for the majority of the film and the point when the two interact is thin and unbelievable.

Timecop may be loose but it's still potent. The time travel is fun to watch, as is Ron Silver as the always bearded adversary, but Jean-Claude still has a way to go before really breaking through. Next we'll see him as the title role in Street Fighter, based on the video game. Potential Oscar perhaps? B

■ Baseball

continued from page 5

most, fans. Kennedy biographer Doris Kearns Goodwin and paleontologist Stephen Jay Gould are very smart, but they've got no business here.

Burns' stated goal in his lifework is to use film about America to show us Americans who we are and from whence we have come — in films like Liberty, The Shakers, Brooklyn Bridge, Huey Long and Empire of the Air.

His Baseball does best when it shows the baseball of days gone by, and puts faces and lives to names like Honus Wagner, John McGraw and Ty Cobb. It shows how the game perpetuated the shameful fissure of our society, race, and how its owners squeezed the game for every nickel it would yield.

RUSH PIKE

ΠΚΑ

FOR THE DOG DIES

ALL UNIVERSITY MEN WELCOME
FALL 1994
SEPTEMBER 19, 20, 21, 22
8:00PM-10:00PM
418 N. PLEASANT ST.

THIS IS A PARODY, SO PLEASE DON'T WRITE THE COLLEGIAN

PI KAPPA ALPHA

Are you an on-campus student interested in providing sexual harassment education to other students?

The Peer Education Program on Sexual Harassment is recruiting 30 undergraduate men and women for a one-credit training session this semester. After successfully completing this course, Peer Educators will provide workshops to other undergraduates in the spring 1995 semester and receive practicum credit.

For more information, call Mike at 546-0365.

SQUIRE VILLAGE APTS.

1120 Sq. feet
2 Bedroom Townhouses
ONLY A FEW LEFT
ACT NOW!!!

SUNDERLAND, MA

665-2203

Beautiful Spacious apartments.
Spacious yards, swimming pool,
dishwasher, A/C, garbage disposal,
wall to wall carpeting, laundry facilities

SYSTEMS ENGINEERS • SOFTWARE ENGINEERS • HARDWARE ENGINEERS

Information Systems and communications technology is uniquely dynamic. It continues to evolve at an accelerated pace, requiring constant innovation and encommon expertise. From high tech wide and local area networks, interactive video, mobile communications systems, and up-to-the minute weather information to the Information Superhighway and ATM (Asynchronous Transfer Mode), GTE Government Systems Corporation is developing dual-use technologies for both commercial and government customers.

GTE Government Systems Corporation is the premier engineering component of GTE Corporation. As we move to diversify and service other GTE business units, we require engineers with the ability to create the power of technology.

ON CAMPUS INTERVIEWS
Thursday, October 20, 1994
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA
Resumes are due at the Mather Career Center on
September 22, 1994

THE POWER OF YOUR FUTURE

SYSTEMS ENGINEERS
Perform requirements analysis, design, integration and test of communications systems

SOFTWARE ENGINEERS
Design, develop and test systems using relational databases, graphical user interfaces, and client/server architecture

HARDWARE ENGINEERS
Analyze and design circuits, prototyping and simulation, bench testing, and integration with other system elements

We offer a competitive education policy including tuition, books and fee reimbursement, health and dental insurance, employee stock and pension plan, and, at our larger facilities, on-site wellness centers, libraries and credit unions.

If we do not meet you at On Campus Interviews on the date listed above, mail the Mather Career Center to review our literature and video. Interested candidates should send their resumes to Julie Bebo, College Relations, GTE Government Systems, 77 A Street, Needham Heights, MA 02194

GTE Government Systems

An equal opportunity employer M-F

The Index Yearbook

1st Staff Meeting
Tuesday & Wednesday

6:30 - 7:30 PM
911 Campus Center
Come One or Both Nights

MARKETING LAYOUT
PHOTO
COPY

the INDEX

We need all departments.
Some Paid Editorships still available.

The Index • 304 Student Union • 545-0848

Country artists gather together to help fight AIDS epidemic

Various Nashville stars record latest 'Red Hot' benefit effort

By Jim Patterson
Associated Press

COURTESY PETER NASH / COLUMBIA

Mary Chapin Carpenter is just one of the many country artists who contributed to Red Hot + Country, a benefit album intended to raise awareness and fight AIDS.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — There are reasons for country music artists to redo such classic rock radio mainstays as "Teach Your Children" and "Fire and Rain." Really, there are.

Those two songs kick off Red Hot + Country, a 17-song album of today's country stars acknowledging their influences for a cause: AIDS.

The results sometimes cast new light on old standards, and at times the singers themselves. Songs about mental or physical imprisonment, like "Fire and Rain" or "Folsom Prison Blues," are that much richer done in light of AIDS.

"People don't just grow up in a rural area and only listen to country music and then become country music singers. It's much wider than that," said singer Kathy Mattea, who came up with the concept of artists using the occasion to show fans their musical roots.

There are some obvious choices: Johnny Cash sings a Bob Dylan tune, and Dolly Parton does one from the George Jones canon. But artists such as Sammy Kershaw and Brooks & Dunn use the opportunity the best - bringing new life to hoary standards and illustrating that their roots, and artistry, run deeper than the latest line-dancing hit.

Producer Randy Scruggs said the main pitfall of a compilation project is winding up with a batch of rejected recordings from the artists' vaults.

Instead, he strove to show "the artists' ability to expand where they don't feel like they have to be this character that radio thinks they should be, or a particular fan base thinks it should be."

Kershaw, typecast as a George Jones soundalike, tackles James Taylor's "Fire and Rain." The idea sounds horrible on paper, but Kershaw pulls it off by doing it as an over-the-top ballad, instead of copying Taylor's famous, more intimate version.

"That may have been one of the most surprising," Scruggs said. "The more I learn about Sammy Kershaw, the more I hear him, the more he does surprise me.

"He's an extremely talented artist. In concert, he might go out and do a Lynyrd Skynyrd song or a James Taylor song and just nail it."

"Fire and Rain" and "Folsom Prison Blues" aren't the only songs on Red Hot + Country that are reinterpreted. A group of stars including Mattea, Alison Krauss and Suzy Bogguss join Crosby, Stills and Nash on "Teach Your Children."

Mary Chapin Carpenter doesn't bother with metaphor, performing "Willie Short," a song written by her producer, John Jennings, from the point of view of an AIDS sufferer. It also works as a tribute of sorts, as the blues-folk tune wouldn't be out of place on an album such as The Freewheelin' Bob Dylan.

The new artists don't try to hide their noncountry influences, Scruggs said. "That's one thing about country music today ... it's very open."

"It's like Kathy (Mattea) picking the Jackson Browne song (Rock Me on the Water')," he said. "And these are songs that are great songs, and not necessarily in just a country flavor, but they can be performed that way as well."

Mattea got Browne to sing on the remake with her, and went on to further showcase her California rock influences on her hit album, "Walking Away a Winner."

"I've done a lot of work with ... my bluegrass influences and blues and Celtic and folk," Mattea said, "but that's a whole segment that I spent a lot of time with that I've never really ... talked about very much."

Mattea is recognized as one of the first mainstream Nashville stars to publicly address the AIDS problem at the nationally televised Country Music Association awards show in 1992. A public service announcement campaign featuring country stars ran earlier this year, and Reba McEntire even has a hit single about AIDS, "She Thinks His Name Was John."

John Carlin of The Red Hot Organization said that someone with Mattea's credentials was needed if a successful followup to benefit albums featuring Cole Porter, alternative rock and dance music were to be possible.

"We were virtual unknowns in the country music community," Carlin said. "Kathy brought to our alliance an intense commitment to make a difference among her peers and the fans of country music."

■ Burns

continued from page 5

tive.

We get to see Buck O'Neil, formerly of the Negro Leagues' Kansas City Monarchs, whose burnished soul radiates wisdom and kindness, and The New Yorker's baseball writer, Roger Angell, analyze the game.

Ted Williams and Bill Lee talk about the inner game. But Burns also includes very smart people who are, foremost, fans. Kennedy biographer Doris Kearns Goodwin and paleontologist Stephen Jay Gould are very smart, but they've got no business here.

Burns' stated goal in his lifework is to use film about America to show us Americans who we are and from whence we have come — in films like Liberty, The Shakers, Brooklyn Bridge, Huey Long and Empire of the Air.

His Baseball does best when it shows the baseball of days gone by, and puts faces and lives to names like Honus Wagner, John McGraw and Ty Cobb. It shows how the game perpetuated the shameful fissure of our society, race, and how its owners squeezed the game for every nickel it would yield.

Baseball, however, is not America. Baseball creaks painfully when metaphorically contorted to fit the job.

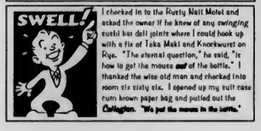
It is, after all, a game that we made up to pass the time, and children can play it with a ball and a stick.

"Nanci Griffith and Jimmy Webb do a duet," Mattea said, "Jimmie Dale Gilmore and Willie Nelson do a duet. There's a great cut of this sort of Memphis influence that's the Mavericks, Duane Eddy and Carl Perkins.

"There's an instrumental version of 'Keep on the Sunny Side' - that's Earl Scruggs, Randy Scruggs, Doc Watson, Vince Gill and Ricky Skaggs. There's just a lot of diversity on it.

"So we have this very wide-ranging statement about where modern country music has come from and what the influences are."

Oh No!, I wouldn't give up my llama shag rug for all the clams in the intravenous needle littered sea!!! Nay, Nay!. The rug truly matters to me! I CARE for it!!! @#$!* the j%$@#$*! CLAM!!!
Collegian
Look... It's still all the same to the clam



SWELL!
I checked in to the Rusty Nail Motel and asked the owner if he knew of any swinging sushi bar deli joints where I could hook up with a fix of Toka Maki and Knackwurst on Rye. "The eternal question," he said, "is how to get the mixers out of the bottle." I thanked the wise old man and checked into room six sixty six. I opened up my suit case from brown paper bag and pulled out the Collegian. "We put the mixers in the bottle."

Challenge yourself...

...to reach your potential.

As part of The Travelers Insurance Companies Financial Management Development Program, you'll receive the training and development necessary to help you reach your potential as a future financial leader in the insurance and financial services industry.

To be considered, submit your resume and transcript to the SOM Placement Office by Friday, September 23, 1994.

We will be available to answer questions about FMDP at the 1994 Career Day, sponsored by The Undergraduate Business Club on Wednesday, October 12, 1994.

INTERVIEWS will be conducted Thursday, October 27, 1994.

The Travelers Insurance Companies

An Equal Opportunity Employer

The ALANA Lecture Series

PRESENTS
JOHN TRUDELL
Native American Activist

THURSDAY
SEPTEMBER 22, 1994
7:30PM

CAMPUS CENTER
AUDITORIUM

Artist, poet, [illegible] and political agitator [illegible] Trudell, a Santee [illegible] at [illegible], or [illegible] National Chairman of the American Indian Movement. Was featuring artistic [illegible] "[illegible]"

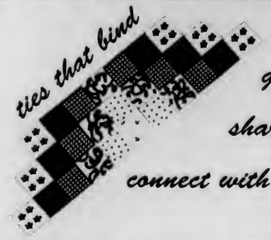
Free and Open to the General Public

SPONSORED BY: THE OFFICE OF THIRD WORLD AFFAIRS

THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHEERST
CENTER FOR
ORGANIZATION ADVISING & PROGRAMMING
Proudly Announces

6TH ANNUAL

STUDENT LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE



gain new skills
sharpen old skills
connect with other students

Open to all members of RSOs/Businesses/RAs

Registration is limited
SO . . . register NOW in COAP

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1994
10:00 AM - 5:00 PM
CAMPUS CENTER/
STUDENT UNION

REGISTRATION DEADLINE SEPTEMBER 23
416 STUDENT UNION
CALL 545-3600

Be first to get your picture taken with me, "Politenessman"!

1-800-COLLECT®

Is Giving Away

FREE STUFF!

T-SHIRTS, FRISBEES, AMERICAN AIRLINES COUPONS, CD COUPONS, WEAVER POPCORN AND MORE!

CAMPUS CENTER

PLACE

SEPTEMBER 20 AND 21, 8:00 A.M. - 4:00 P.M.

DATE & TIME

AND...You can also register for the 1-800-COLLECT® sweepstakes!

Win this 1995 S-SERIES PICKUP!

record town

CHEVY TRUCKS

AmericanAirlines® AmericanEagle®

Radisson HOTELS INTERNATIONAL

POP WEAVER'S

1-800-COLLECT®

Save The People You Call Up To 44%*.

*Versus AT&T operator-dialed three-minute interstate calls.

Big E

continued from page 1

ing all my friends," Camerota said. "A lot of people rely on this fair for income," he said.

He also said he has known vendors who have been frequenting the fair for 30 years.

Bill Bartlett of Cold Springs Farms in Salisbury said a social network of colleagues has developed over time. A 20- year veteran of the fair, Bartlett said that in between attending to his reserve-grand-champion-prized heifers, he enjoys the Big E.

"I haven't gotten out of here [the dairy barn] too much, but I like to go around and see the fair," Bartlett said.

At the free petting zoo, everyone is encouraged to "pet 'em, feed 'em, touch 'em." Some of the friends you will make here include Elroy the zebra from Africa, a duo of macaw birds named Ringo and Lola whose life spans check in at about 100 years, Sidney the kangaroo from Australia, Ralph the zebu (one of the oldest species of ox) and a team of Shetland ponies that will make you want to take one home with you.

Many of the rides at the fair include a roller coaster, three ferris wheels, the Jungle Fun funhouse, the Snow Ball Express, Tidalwave, the Monster and the Giant Slide.

Simple, old-fashioned fun is taken to a new height when you climb the 104 steps to the top of this shiny yellow slide, hop onto your potato sack and slide down. If you are at least 48 inches tall this is the ride for you, and a range of youngsters to parents were giving it a whirl.

Educational exhibits are also on display, including the Avenue of States, which features building representing each New England state. Inside these buildings you can eat well- known regional foods, purchase souvenirs and pick up information about vacation and travel options.

The United States Army Corps of Engineers' New England Division also offers a wetland exhibit, in which you can learn about national and area wetlands, clean up efforts, building permit guidelines, lakeside recreation in New England and more.

"We're here to provide the public with information and let people know what the Corps of Engineers is all about," said basin manager Joe Faloretti. "It's important for us to get the word out [about environmental issues]."

The Corps of Engineers has been coming to the fair for six years, and sponsors different exhibits according to which issue is most forefront at the time. For the past two years the corps' exhibit dealt with flood control.

Big E security takes care of parking, traffic control and lost property, amongst other things. An officer working at the lost and found said that occasional rowdiness was a problem, but, for the most part, his experience at the fair was not as stressful.

"Part of my job is to calm people down and make sure that when they leave the office, they are more clam then when they first came in," said the officer. He added that his favorite part of the job was returning lost property to fairgoers.

There really is more to the Big E than could ever fit in these columns. There is an activity, food, ride or shop for everyone, and experiencing the variety of all of these things at once is an experience not easily matched.

So try to get to Springfield in the next couple of weeks and check out the Big E. If nothing else, a spin on the roller coaster will clear your head and make all the reading you have to do seem a little more feasible.

The Big E

Calendar of Events

The Big E in West Springfield is now in full swing and will continue through Oct. 2. All events are included in the price of admission. Events scheduled for the rest of the week are as follows:

Today is Rhode Island Day as well as Senior Citizens Day. Performing on the Miller Genuine Draft Stage are singers the Shangri-Las. The Big E Circus under The Big Top runs several times daily and is one of the most popular events.

Other events occurring today and throughout the week are the Pirates of the Caribbean High Dive Show and Joie Chitwood's Thrill Show. Disorderly Conduct, a performance aimed at children, also begins today. Daryl and Don Ellis perform on the Miller Genuine Draft Stage today through Thursday.

Tomorrow's events include The Contours on the Miller Genuine Draft Stage. They also play on Thursday and Friday. The Eastern States Horse Show also runs Wednesday through Friday. Wednesday is Connecticut Day.

Massachusetts Day will be held Thursday and is filled with events that have already begun earlier in the week.

The events scheduled for Agawam Day on Friday include The 4-H Horse Show and the Giant Pumpkin Weigh Off, a contest for pumpkins greater than 400 pounds.

- Compiled by Andrew Ferguson

Revved-up motor bike crashed into dorm

By Darienne J. Hosley
Collegian Staff

A University of Massachusetts junior was still hospitalized last night in good condition after a motorcycle he was sitting on took off and rammed into the wall of Knowlton Residence Hall Friday afternoon.

Thai A. Nguyen, 21, a mechanical engineering student from Lowell, underwent surgery and was admitted to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton following the incident.

Karin Sherbin of the UMass News Office said Nguyen was not wearing a helmet when he hit the side of the building at about 25 mph. Nguyen suffered from cuts to his head and two broken wrists, she said, and was taken by ambulance to the hospital.

According to Philip J. Cavanaugh, court liaison officer for the UMass Department of Public Safety, the motorcycle belonged to a friend of Nguyen. Cavanaugh said Nguyen asked to sit on the idling motorcycle, which was in Lot 63 behind the experiment station on North Pleasant Street.

"Eyewitnesses said the bike somehow went into gear and when it revved up, he took off through the parking lot, over the lawn and the sidewalk, down a small embankment and into the wall," Cavanaugh said.

The accident occurred around 4:45 p.m., drawing a large dinnertime crowd near Worcester Dining Commons. Foot and bicycle traffic was re-routed around the scene, marked off with police tape.

"There's that skid mark right there, and they closed half the campus," said junior Sahan Abeysekera.

Hung Lam, a senior who said he knew Nguyen, said he didn't think the man knew how to operate a motorcycle.

"I don't think he would have hit that wall if he knew how to ride it," Lam said. "He went into that wall and his body fell off the bike."

Cavanaugh said no charges have yet been filed but the accident is still under investigation pending a report from Nguyen. Police tried to interview him at the hospital on Sunday, he said.

UMass help vital to community

By Krista Holmstrom
Collegian Correspondent

In an effort to connect students with volunteer opportunities, Vitally Involved in Voluntary Action and the Community Service Council will be holding the 4th Annual Volunteer Fair Sept. 12 at the University of Massachusetts.

Representatives from 45 agencies will talk with students and share their own unique opportunities about community service.

"A whole lot of people need help and a lot of students don't realize there are so many community service options," said Lori McKinney, coordinator of the community service program at the Mather Career Center.

"The basic idea for the fair is to make sure students are getting information on community service and to make it easier for them to sign up," McKinney said.

Such agencies as the Campus Pond Clean-Up, AIDS Allies, Amherst Survival Center, Jessie's House and Remineralize the Earth will be at the fair.

Diane Houston, director of membership marketing for Western Massachusetts Girl Scouts Council said students have done volunteer work at her agency for 20 years.

"We've found students to be a valuable resource in helping the work we do.

All of them are very enthusiastic and it gives them the experience of helping children. Some are looking for a career with the Girl Scouts and others just want to help," Houston said.

Scott Trehan, a senior at UMass, has volunteered for VIVA and other agencies the past three years.

"Volunteering in itself is a great learning experience. You meet a lot of different individuals, get to see different situations, a get a good picture of what's going on," he said. "You learn about the issues we hear about and get to do something about them, and it looks good on a resume."

"I've found through this position that lots of students want to do something but aren't so sure and feel that if an opportunity comes to them they'll do it, but otherwise not," McKinney said.

"With 45 representative agencies here saying, 'We need volunteers', students will see they need as much help as they can get."

Books listing volunteer opportunities are also available at the Community Service Program Office at the Mather Career Center on campus.

Judge rules O.J. charges will stand

By Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - O.J. Simpson's last-ditch effort before his trial to have murder charges dismissed failed Monday when the judge rejected defense arguments that the case was based on sloppy and dishonest detective work.

Superior Court Judge Lance Ito upheld an earlier ruling by Municipal Court Judge Kathleen Kennedy-Powell that detectives acted properly when they entered Simpson's estate hours after the June 12 slayings without a search warrant and found bloody evidence. Kennedy-Powell presided over Simpson's preliminary hearing over the summer.

In another development, prosecutors complained that Simpson's personal secretary shredded a document after prosecutors had tried to seize it. But the defense contended that investigators improperly used the grand jury investigating Simpson's longtime friend Al Cowlings to learn about the document.

Simpson is charged with two counts of murder in the knifing deaths of his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson, 35, and her friend Ronald Goldman, 25, outside Ms. Simpson's condominium, about two miles from Simpson's estate.

Ito agreed with Kennedy-Powell that the detectives clearly were motivated by a desire to inform Simpson of the tragedy and make sure that others were not wounded or dying at his estate.

"The detectives were faced with a brutal and violent killing. They had two young children who were unattended," the judge said, referring to the couple's 8-year-old daughter Sydney and 6-year-old son Justin, who were asleep at the condo when the slayings occurred.

Ito said the officers were understandably concerned when no one answered the doorbell or phone at Simpson's estate and they spotted what appeared to be blood on his Bronco, which was parked askew in the street.

Ito said he was more troubled by the length of time that officers stayed after making sure everyone was all right.

But he said that the report of thumps heard by Simpson's house guest, Brian "Kato" Kaelin, was enough to keep detectives at the scene and allow them to investigate further. That was when they found a bloody glove lying on a pathway and seized it as key evidence against Simpson.

Donations are needed for food pantry

By Matthew Pottinger
Collegian Correspondent

It's time to pull those dusty canned foods off your top shelf and put them in a paper bag.

The Amherst Survival Center will be holding a fundraiser Sept. 28 in the Student Union Ballroom at the University of Massachusetts.

New Horizons, a Pioneer Valley reggae band, will perform for the duration of the fundraiser to be held from 9 p.m to 1 a.m.

"We are in a crisis situation. We really need cash and canned goods," said Edwina Eskew, the center's volunteer coordinator.

The Amherst Survival Center is a food pantry for low income people in Amherst and the surrounding area. Between 60 and 100 people are served daily.

The center, whose services include free daily lunches, free clothing, an open food pantry and weekly visits by a nurse, saw a 40 percent increase in the number of people using its services this July.

Eskew said money raised will go toward "keeping the center going. We're at rock bottom. That 40 percent was the killer for us," Eskew said.

Eskew, who has no specific financial goal for the fundraiser yet, said she hopes the event will provide the center with enough money to buy food, pay rent and cover utilities.

The center has seen an increase in attendance around the holidays, she said.

"We're gearing up for (the winter)," Eskew said.

The Amherst Survival Center has been running since 1976. The center's present staff of over 100 volunteers, two part- time and two full-time workers, operates out of the basement of 1200 North Pleasant St. The building was originally donated by the University.

The Town of Amherst, the Department of Mental Health, and local grocers, businesses and religious groups have all donated to the center.

"UMass has always been a great supporter," Eskew said.

Tickets for the fundraiser will go on sale at the door. The Amherst Survival Center will also have a volunteer table set up on the Campus Center Concourse tomorrow.

SGA

continued from page 1

today at 7 p.m. in room 805 of the Campus Center. The meeting will give information about all areas of the SGA, the Student Senate and the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy.

"The meeting will be about the elections, how students can be nominated, how students can get involved, what the SGA is about and what you can do," Raphaely said.

All students are encouraged to attend the meeting.

ATTENTION ALL UMASS WOMEN!

AEΦ is holding their annual OPEN RUSH this coming Wednesday, Sept. 21 from 7-9pm, and Saturday, Sept. 24 from 11-1pm in the Campus Center.

Contact Emily at 256-8701 or Laurie at 549-7960 with questions.

TOTAL FITNESS WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE

AEROBICS: Funk, REEBOK STEP, Hi/Low, Boxercise, Yoga

STRENGTH: Keiser Air Power, NAUTILUS, Olympic weights, GRAVITRON, The Treadwall

CARDIO: STAIRMASTERS, LifeCycles • LifeRower, Treadmills • BioCycles, Climb Max • NordicTrack, Lifesteps • Crossrobic

SEMESTER SPECIAL $139 four months

Amherst Athletic Club | 460 West St. | South Amherst 256-0080

CELEBRATING 26 YEARS 1968-1994

THE PUB

Fun, Food & Spirits

TUESDAY

Live Entertainment with New Horizons and special guest Mentos

Reggae - Calypso

9:30-1:00

Nachos $2.00 9:30-10:30

15 EAST PLEASANT-AMHERST

LSAT +7.5 GMAT +72 GRE +214 MCAT +6

Small Classes, Documented Highest Results, Guaranteed.

413 584-6849

Course Sites: Mt. Holyoke College, Smith College, Williams College, MCAT - Umass.

THE PRINCETON REVIEW

We Score More

Welcome back to lecture halls, all-nighters, pizza breakfasts, and Kinko's.

with this coupon

2½¢ copies kinko's the copy center

Offer applies to self-serve, black and white 81/2" x 11" copies on 20lb white bond. One coupon per customer per visit. Not valid with other offers. Good through October 31, 1994 at the Kinko's listed

AMHERST: 220 N. Pleasant St. 253-2543 Open 24 Hours

NORTHAMPTON: 34 Bridge St., 585-5000 (across from the Post Office) HOURS: 8am to 12

Ever Thought About Going Greek?

Here's your chance to have all your questions answered and your doubts put aside.

SORORITY OPEN RUSH

September 20th - October 4th

ALPHA CHI OMEGA

Sept 20 6 - 8 p.m.
21 5:30 - 7:30 p.m.
22 5:30 - 7:30 p.m.
25 1 - 3 p.m.
27 6 - 8 p.m.
Oct 4 6 - 9 p.m.

All parties located at 38 Nutting. For more information, please call Meran at 549-6857

DELTA ZETA

Sept 21 7 - 9 p.m.
25 12 - 2 p.m.
27 6 - 8 p.m.
28 7 - 9 p.m.
29 6 - 8 p.m.
Oct 3 7 - 9 p.m.
4 7 - 9 p.m.

All parties located at 11 Phillips. For more information, please call Carrie at 253-5679

SIGMA DELTA TAU

Sept 20 8 - 10 p.m.
22 6:30 - 8:30 p.m.
26 6 - 8 p.m.
27 5 - 7 p.m.
28 6 - 8 p.m.
29 6:30 - 8:30 p.m.
Oct 3 8 - 10 p.m.
4 7 - 9 p.m.

All parties located at 409 N. Pleasant. For more information, please call Kristen at 549-7361

ALPHA EPSILON PHI

Sept 21 7 - 9 p.m.
24 11 - 1 p.m.
26 7:30 - 9:30 p.m.
28 8 - 10 p.m.
Oct 3 7 - 9 p.m.
4 7 - 9 p.m.

For party locations, or more information, please call Emily at 256-8701 or Laurie at 549-7960

IOTA GAMMA UPSILON

Sept 20 6 - 8 p.m.
24 1 - 3 p.m.
25 12 - 3 p.m.
28 5 - 6:30 p.m.
Oct 3 6 - 8 p.m.

All parties located at 406 N. Pleasant. For more information, please call Karen at 549-3974

SIGMA KAPPA

Sept 20 6 - 9 p.m.
21 6 - 9 p.m.
22 6 - 9 p.m.
24 12 - 3 p.m.
27 6 - 9 p.m.
28 6 - 9 p.m.
Oct 2 12 - 3 p.m.
3 6 - 9 p.m.

All parties located at 19 Allen. For more information, please call Kim at 256-6887

CHI OMEGA

Sept 20 6 - 9 p.m.
21 6 - 9 p.m.
24 5:30 - 7:30 p.m.
26 5:30 - 7:30 p.m.
Oct 3 7 - 10 p.m.
4 7 - 10 p.m.

All parties located at Fraternity/Sorority Park. For more information or transportation, please call Lauren at 549-4351

KAPPA KAPPA GAMMA

Sept 20 5 - 8 p.m.
21 6 - 9 p.m.
22 6 - 8 p.m.
25 1 - 3 p.m.
27 6 - 8 p.m.
29 5 - 7 p.m.
Oct 2 1 - 3 p.m.
3 6 - 8:30 p.m.

All parties located at 32 Nutting. For more information, please call Emily at 549-2646

SIGMA SIGMA SIGMA

Sept 20 6:30 - 9:30 p.m.
21 8 - 10 p.m.
22 6:30 - 8:30 p.m.
25 12 - 3 p.m.
26 5:30 - 8:30 p.m.
29 5:30 - 8:30 p.m.
Oct 3 5:30 - 8:30 p.m.

For party locations, or more information, please call Emily at 256-8701 or Laurie at 549-7960

If you have any questions regarding Rush, Please call Melissa Day at 549-5964, or Call the Greek Affairs Office

Sports Notice

There will be a meeting for all Collegian sports staff members today at 7 p.m. in the Collegian offices in the Campus Center basement. Anyone who is interested in writing for sports is encouraged to attend.

If you have any questions, you should call Matt Vautour or Andrew Bryce at 545–1851.

Andrew McNeilly and the rest of the Minutemen are preparing for their game against Maine this weekend.

State study points to court system bias

BOSTON (AP) From defendants to judges, from jury selection to sentencing, members of minority groups face discrimination in the Massachusetts court system, a study done for the state Supreme Court found.

There is widespread bias against those who do not speak English, according to a draft report of a four-year study, "Equal Justice: Eliminating the Barriers" obtained by The Boston Globe.

"I think that the report does a service by pointing out that discrimination, perhaps subtle, perhaps unintended, does exist throughout the court system," said Bill Leahy, chief counsel at the Committee for Public Counsel Services.

The study found that the court system lacks cultural awareness and interpretative services and called for changes in hiring and training.

"Cultural misunderstandings" appear to be factors in the increase in the number of minority children removed from their families through legal proceedings begun after contact with the Department of Social Services, the study found.

Victims of battering who are members of minority groups or do not speak English obtain fewer restraining orders against their attackers, and defendants in such cases face higher bail.

At times, bilingual husbands served as interpreters for their allegedly battered wives, and because of a lack of interpreters, the same person has been used by prosecution and defense in the same cases, making that person privy to confidential attorney-client information.

The study is on target in its criticisms of the arrangements made for interpreting, said Leahy.

"That's the kind of stuff you really do see in the courts and it's absolutely second-class treatment," he said.

The report "hopefully will make everybody who participates in the court system more alert to the possibility that there may be disparate treatment of different categories of people," Leahy said.

"Knowing English to no avail in the daily world may not be sufficient for understanding some of the nuances of the law," said Worcester Juvenile Court Associate Justice Martha P. Grace. She said interpreters in that court are hired on a case-by-case basis but fulltime interpreters likely would be more economical and more effective.

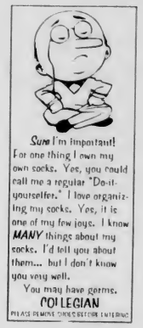
She was one of 40 members of the commission appointed by Supreme Judicial Court Chief Justice Paul J. Liacos in 1990 to make the study. The report is due Wednesday.

Language problems "make the process more difficult because not only are you dealing with difficult family issues but you're dealing with a barrier in terms of language and culture," said Lorraine Cash, a spokeswoman for the Department of Social Services.

She said the department has hired about 70 bilingual and bicultural people since July 1.

Only 29 of 328 trial court judges in the state are members of minority groups, and the study suggested a lack of diversity influences the outcome of cases.

Every year thousands of babies die of choking, suffocating or other breathing emergencies. Don't let yours be one of them.
IF ONLY THEY CAME WITH INSTRUCTIONS



Sure I'm important!
For one thing I own my own socks. Yes, you could call me a regular "Do-it-yourselfer." I love organizing my socks. Yes, it is one of my few joys. I know MANY things about my socks. I'd tell you about them... but I don't know you very well.
You may have gotme.
COLLEGIAN
PLEASE REMOVE THIS SECTION BEFORE

Auto Reverse Double Deck!

ONKYO TAR-W313 CASSETTE
Sale $209.
Sound & Music
Millbank Plaza • 351 Pleasant Street • Northampton
584-9547 • VISA & MasterCard accepted

Undergraduate Football Season Tickets

will be available for pickup starting today from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. at the Curry Hicks Cage box office with a valid I.D.

Biochemistry & Molecular Biology

Fall Counseling and Information Session

All freshmen, transfers, and students interested in a Biochemistry & Molecular Biology major should attend!

Wednesday, September 21st at 7pm!!!

Math Lounge 1634 LGRT-C

SEMESTER MEMBERSHIP only $109
The GYM

AT MOUNTAIN FARMS MALL
Rt. 9 - Hadley • 584-2175

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
SHARK NIGHT IS HERE
Single Elimination Pool Tournament
• Free Pizza for Players
• $2.00 Entrance Fee
Sign Up: 7:30-8:00
WINNER TAKE ALL!!!
University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549-4040

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS
PAID OFFICIALS NEEDED FOR FLAG FOOTBALL, SOCCER, SOFTBALL AND ICE HOCKEY
Clinics: Football, Soccer - Sept. 21, 22, 23
Co-ed Softball - Sept. 26, 27
Ice Hockey - Oct. 3
Call for times & locations
STILL TIME ENTER FLAG FOOTBALL, SOCCER & SOFTBALL
MORE INFO IN 215 BOYDEN, 5-2693 / 5-0022

THE BIG E EXPRESS
FRIDAYS, SATURDAYS AND SUNDAYS FROM THE HOLYOKE MALL AT INGLESIDE
Every half hour beginning at 8:00 a.m.
$8 - includes shuttle and Big E admission
$.80 - each way for shuttle only
PARKING IS FREE in the "White Lot" next to Valley Chiropractic
The bus also stops at the Holyoke Holiday Inn and tickets are available at both locations
Take Exit 15 off I-91 South
The last bus leaves The Big E at 10:30 p.m.

IF YOU HAVEN'T YET, NOW IS THE TIME!

Register now through September 26 for over 200 evening credit courses and noncredit workshops.

University of Massachusetts/Amherst
Division of Continuing Education
Goodell Building
545-2414

A quality education at affordable prices

Welcome to the Career Information Highway

. . . Where the Present Meets the Future

Options, options, options . . .
your first job is not necessarily for the rest of your life

Your career path is an open road . . .
with information stops, side roads, detours, and even some U turns.

THE UMASS CAREER CENTER

Where the Present Meets the Future

Come find out what it's all about as the Career Information Highway
comes to life in the Student Union Ballroom for the Career Center Open House

Wednesday September 21 from 10-3

Open your mind . . .
think beyond the confines of your major . . .
let the Career Center be your guide.

- Food - Fun - Prizes - Giveaways - Displays -
- Recent alums, employers ready to talk with you -
- The latest job search technology -
- Interview signups by phone -
-Co-ops - Internships -
- Career Planning Courses -
- Grad school information - Networking -

Don't miss this important event!
First year through graduate students welcome!

$1,000 IN DOOR PRIZES!!
40 FREE Resume Expert software packets
Autographed Celtics basketball
Coach Cal autographed UMASS basketball
Uninterrupted computer power supply donated by American Power Supply

Gift certificates from:
Aesthetics European Skin Care, Amherst Optical Shoppe, A Branch Beyond, Atticus Bookstore, House of Walsh, Kinko's, Modrian, Oasis, Pearl Street Nightclub, Zanna.
Professional Day Planner from Agway Corp.,
UMASS Alumni director's chair
2 Cartalk Radio Show "Roadside Assistance Packages"

you are here

Resume software provided by the Vice Chancellors of Student Affairs and University Advancement and the Deans of Humanities and Fine Arts, Social and Behavioral Sciences, Natural Science and Math, Engineering and Food and Natural Resources.

Calvin & Hobbes By Bill Watterson

IN A SCIENTIFIC MISSION TO DISCOVER WHAT HAPPENS WHEN TWO PLANETS COLLIDE, SPACE MAN SPIFF DROPS ANCHOR!
THE ANCHOR CATCHES ON A HILLSIDE! SPIFF DOWNSHIFTS, AND GUNS THE MOTOR!
IMPERCEPTIBLY AT FIRST, THE PLANET SLOWLY MOVES, TOWED ALONG BY OUR HERO UNTIL...
...BREAKING ORBIT, PLANET 6 PICKS UP SPEED, HURLING TOWARD PLANET 5!

Jim's Journal By Jim

Today Tony was making a hamburger and whistling a tune.
"Nothing like a whistled ditty to brighten your day," he said.
I told him that I've never been able to whistle.
"You freak!" he said.

Urban Shocker By Deg

Jim's Journal By Jim

I got up in the middle of the night last night.
I had this funny feeling that something was wrong.
Then I heard Mr. Peterson yowling in the next room.
I went out and petted her and she seemed okay.

Urban Shocker By Deg

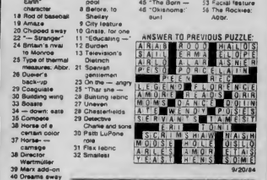
Daily Crossword

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 The Charles' pet
5 Responded
10 Urge
14 Mortgage
15 Mild cigar
16 — — klaine Nachtmusik"
17 "The Good Earth" character
18 Rod of baseball
19 Amaze
20 Chipped away
22 "— Stranger"
24 Britain's rival in Monroe
25 Type of thermal measures: Abbr.
26 Duiker's back-up
29 Coagulate
30 Building wing
32 Bosses
34 — down: eats
35 Compete
36 Horse of a certain color
37 Horse-— carriage
38 Director Wertmuller
39 Marx add-on
40 Dreams away
41 Appraises
42 — alma
43 Grain beards
44 Scholar
45 "The Long Gray —"
46 — May: Donna Douglas role
47 Imperturbable poise
50 Minimize
54 Actress Arthur and namesakes
56 "Our Town" role
57 Roman emperor 69 AD
58 Kitchen sort-on
59 In a cowardly way
60 Worries
61 Lascivious glance
62 Hideous and lean
63 Hawaiian goose

DOWN
1 In the ship's hold
2 Farm feature
3 Rip
4 Leakey- —
5 Agreement
6 Tenons
7 Mountain pool
8 Before, to Shelley
9 City feature
10 Grass, for one
11 "Educating —"
12 Burden
13 Television's Dietrich
21 Spanish gentlemen
23 On the — angle
25 "That she —"
28 Barking sound
27 Uneven
28 Chesterfields
29 Detective Charlie and some
30 Patti LuPone role
31 Flax fabric
32 Smallest
34 Winch
37 Conductor's movement
38 "Grey —"
40 Insure
41 Depend (on)
44 Beaches on the Costa del Sol
45 "The Born — Identity"
46 "Oklahoma" aunt
47 Explorer Tasman
48 Wimbledon winner Sampras
49 The — Show"
50 City on the Arno
51 Snoopy
52 — I was a kid, . . ."
53 Facial feature
56 The Rockies: Abbr.

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



9/20/94

© 1994 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 9/20/94

The Far Side By Gary Larson

Marie Antoinette's last-ditch effort to save her head.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19): When drawing up a work schedule, consult someone who is both experienced and dependable. Acting impatient with a supervisor could be a no-no! Spend the evening with longtime friends.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Another year for your mate should lend shy about making your feelings or views known. A relationship based on trust will flourish. Do something behind the scenes to help a friend who is having difficulties.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): If there is work to be done, pitch right in. Influential people will be impressed. Save time and effort by being well-informed about recent developments in your field. Unconscious mind is extra sensitive.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your diligence could rub off on your co-workers now. Pay close attention to detail. If someone makes a convincing argument for a policy change, be flexible. Let a new admirer know exactly what you want.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The next two days will be great for hours of transactions of all types. Look further thought to a real estate investment. The contacts you make now will help you later on. Beware of aliens, especially those from other planets.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Joint ventures enjoy highly favorable influences now. Be supportive of your co-workers efforts. A change of scenery is required; should be encouraged. The tempus prides up in romance. Wear your heart on your sleeve.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Inspiration strikes early this morning, resulting in profitable financial activities. A shopping bargain improves your home. Unusually reflexive act as a stimulant to your ambitions. Don't overlook good feelings shortly above hand. Check your horoscope.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You get a chance thanks perhaps to a VIP, to add the finishing touches to yesterday's rewarding developments. Be appreciative. Look for the cause of a family upset tonight. Stem talk things out.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You have find a way to not mutually combine your better-brief interests with your efforts to get ahead professionally. You will have to burn the midnight oil to accomplish your goals. Seek your mate's support.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The charm you turn on in the words ahead of time you will profit from any pending financial deals. Be sure your schedule is arranged a lunch date with someone you would like to know better. Pay the check.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Financial changes are in the wind. Show your flexible, practical mindset. Someone right you off to a real bargain. Emphasize ethics and morality on the road to business stardom. Guard any company secrets.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The emphasis now is on getting enough done so desire to do something original should be encouraged. The tempus picks up in romance. Wear your heart on your sleeve.

Research Interviewers
Day and Evening Hours
No Selling Involved

Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Monday-Friday, 9am-5pm, 5pm-10pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hour.

We're in the Mountain Farms Mall which is a stop on the free bus line. Interested candidates, please call between 9am-7pm, Monday-Friday: (413) 586-8635.

Abt Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An Equal Opportunity Employer.

Abt

Immigration Law

Hans & Curran, P.C.
30 Years of Experience in Immigration Law

1163 Main Street Springfield, MA 781-6370 | 13 Old South St Northampton,MA 584-3232 | 50 Congress St Boston, MA (617)722-0043

Free Consultation for Five-College Students/Faculty

Classifieds

- 20¢ per word per day for students
- All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
- Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ACTIVITIES

Free bridge lessons. UMass Bridge Club 8 lessons-free book-free T-shirt Weekly Thur 4-9pm Start 9/22 Bluewall Chris 5-4411

Chi Omega open house rush parties Tues 9/20 6pm-9pm
Wed 9/21 6pm-9pm
Dessert night
Sat 9/24 5:30pm 7:30pm
Please contact Lauren at 549-4351 or Steph at 549-5780 for transportation or any additional information. Come up to Chi O because it makes no difference if we're not on fraternity row!

Sigma Kappa welcomes all women to attend our make-your-own-healthy-snack bar night at our home at 19 Allen St. Come pig out in style. No invitation required.

Try something new, try something different, try sigma. Open rush tonight at Alpha Tau Gamma (375 N. Pleasant St.) 8:30pm-9:30pm. Any questions or need a ride call Pam at 253-0854

UMass Women's Ice Hockey is back! Season starts soon. For information call Cheri 549-2726

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Sigma Delta Tau invites all university women to attend an open house this evening from 8-10. We're located at 409 N. Pleasant St. Call Kristin at 549-7301!

Share the Alpha Chi Omega experience. Found out what we are all about! Come visit us at our fall rush party: Alpha Chi Island, Tuesday Sept. 20 8:30pm

BOXING LESSONS

Recreational and competitive boxing lessons for men and women with retired professional G. Dana Bumpus. 549-5752

CHRISTIANS

Alliance Christian Fellowship adds value and balance to your UMass education. We're committed to personal discipleship training, outreach and sport-filled fellowship and fun. FRIDAYS 7:meout Fellowship 7pm.... Campus Center

CHRISTIANS

Do you need $$$ for college??? We have the solution. Guaranteed results. Write to: Corporate Scholarship Service, 2 Dalhurst Terrace East, N Reading, MA 01864 for free details.

COMPUTERS

BK Computers & Associates whole systems. Parts including monitors, drives, cards and more. Free estimates. 549-4362

FOR RENT

Fridge rentals 253-9742 free delivery

Single room for rent at Alpine Commons $274 all inclusive, on bus route, call Tom 256-0824

Two rooms in private home $300 each per month. Kitchen privileges, kosher/vegetarian preferred. Laundry, parking, furnished. 549-4853

FOR SALE AUDIO

Stereo equipment: used/reconditioned, entire's largest selection, priced to sell! Also tv's, vcr's, dj/ pa equipment, instruments etc. We buy, sell, trade. Call SAV Exchange, 9am-9pm. 256-0541

FOR SALE

Designer clothing for women. Thrift shop prices. Will deliver. 413-323-8674

IBM XT 286 10 meg, color monitor. Excellent for hooking up to a TAU $250 call 546-3458

Large dorm fridge 5 cu ft. $100 Fred 549-7234

Macintosh computer. Complete system including printer only $500 Call Chris at 800-289-5685.

Panasonic printer KX-p2123 Great shape Free color kit $175 or b/o 546-3713

Rollerblades 9 1/2 worn new $100 Ski boots 7 $40 549-8348

Solid oak triple dresser
Emperfect condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253-8354

Store bought loft. Paid $175 will sell for $85 or b/o 549-1518

Toshiba T1200 laptop with mouse + word and star NX-1001 multifont printer Call Alex, 549-6114 with best offer

Want to trade Macclassic for comparable or can I.o 545-1378 days. 774-3129 eve.

Washer and electric dryer. Great for students. Will deliver to you. $200/ John or Todd 256-8388

Watch batteries. ear piercing, eyeglass and jewelry repairs, great earrings, gifts from glass to gold, custom designed jewelry. Silverscape Designs 264 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-3324

FREE

Free hamster with cage looking for a good home! Leave message 8-2381

HELP WANTED

$363.60. Sell funny college T-shirts. Profit $363.60. Rush free. Choose from 19 designs. Free catalogs 1-800-700-4250.

Babysitter/ mother's helper in Amherst Sat. and/ or Sun. mornings 8:30-12:30 Infant experience, car, non-smoking. $5/hr Call Robin 253-0980 9am-9pm please.

Boston Globe subscriptions delivery and marketing help wanted. Marketing, 1st three weeks, flex hours. Delivery, am all semester. All will paid! Call 259-1071.

Cruise ships now hiring earn up to $2000+/ month working on cruise ships or land tour companies. World travel. Seasonal and full time employment available. No experience necessary. For more information call 1-206-634-0468 ext C50011

Drivers wanted Trattoria Geppetto Italian restaurant, 1177 N. Pleasant St. Amherst. Apply in person after 3:00 pm 549-7777

Earn $25 in 2 hours. Seniors and four year grads wanted for research study dealing with the GRE. Call Sharon 256-8092

Help wanted drivers needed to deliver Collegian. Pays $25 to $85 per week. Must be available in the morning. Call Jon at 549-7635 or stop by the Collegian office in the Campus Center basement.

Jobs for the environment Grassroots political organizing. Earn $40-60/day. Very flexible hours/ casual atmosphere. Call Alex 256-5434

Obtain valuable teaching experience and enhance your resume. Volunteer to teach contraception workshops at University Health Service. Call for more information 549-2671, ext. 181

Part time manager trainee Firestone needs assistant manager. Flexible work schedule/20-25 hours/week. Call Frank in Northampton at 586-1584 ($8/hour)

Part time technical position available. Computer experience a plus. 549-0701

Receive up to 788.000 dollars in 18 months! For your amazing free report call 413-525-6480 Mon-Fri 8am-5pm

Resort jobs earn to $12/hr and tips. Theme parks, hotels, spas, + more. Tropical + m ountain destinations world-wide. Call (206) 632-0150 ext R50011

Spring Break '95 Sell trips, earn cash and go free!!! Student travel services is now hiring campus representatives. Lowest rates to Jamaica, Cancun, Daytona and Panama City Beach. Call 1-800-648-4849

Telefund is hiring, where else can you sit around, talk on the phone, and earn $5.50 per hour? Great experience, flexible hours call 545-3508 or stop by our office in the basement of Memorial Hall.

Telemarketing Service and develope classifieds advertising in the MA, CT, NY markets for the Advocate + weekly news papers. Customer service and communication skills required. $6 hr. Flexible schedule. Call Steve at 800-447-4286

Tennis/fitness club seeks babysitter for up to 16 hrs per week. $5 per hour plus free club membership. Phone Mike or Sunny at 549-3638.

Women!!! America's fastest growing travel company seeking individuals to promote trips Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida! Easy free travel, fantastic pay 1-800-426-7710

Workstudy position available $5.50 15 hrs/wk. Flexible office work for public foundation. Call Nancy at Peace Development Fund 256-8306

Workstudy positions available in Sport Management. Macintosh computer skills and office experience preferred. Apply at 1 Curry Hicks 5-0441

MUSICIANS

Student alumni relations is looking for musicians and singers for a band to play at our activities. For info call Robert/ Karen 5-7317/ 549-2858

Wanted 1 drummer. Call 256-1906

PERSONALS

Female singers wanted!!! For experienced acappella group. all styles of song. auditions Wed 21st 7:00pm rm 150 FAC.

Happy Birthday Scott.
Try not to get too high on sunflower seeds! Best wishes Melissa

Rush! Rush! Rush!
It's island mocktail night at Sigma Kappa! Come sail with us. All women invited to stop by anytime from 6-9pm. Call if ride is needed. 256-6887

PINNOCHIO'S

Hiring drivers full or part time. Call 256-4110 or stop by 30 Bertwood Walk Ask for Bob

RESUME WRITING

We specialize in writing resumes and cover letters. Over a decade of experience, close to campus. 549-0367

ROOM WANTED

Attention students. Anyone who has a single in the Central area and would like to switch for a single in the Southwest area, please call Cheryl at 546-1396.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female roommate wanted to share a large bedroom in a three bedroom condo. Partially furnished $240 a month. For more info call 256-4966.

SERVICES

"Balloon View" canteen cancellures. Makes great gift! $75. full color, satisfaction guaranteed! For details call Paul (413) 586-5442

I'll sew for you. Alterations, buttons, hems, repairs. Call Allison 546-8263.

Model search. The 1994 Glamour Models national model search continues. Local test shoots now being conducted by First Impressions Photography. Beginners and experienced models. Males, females, all categories welcome. 617-527-0367

THANK YOU

Thank you SI Jude A.D.

WANTED

Arts, Drama and medieval performers. 2 UMass alumni seek medieval performer, jogglers, entrouver to oversee games of skill and inspire guests at their local 15th century wedding. Please have costume and desire for a good time. Billy Ivorie 584-4703

Campus representative Kodak products spring break trips "guaranteed" best prices + incentives. Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica, S Padre + Florida. We handle the bookkeeping. You handle the sales. Call 1-800-222-4432

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Pizza	Chicken Paul Caccitore
Hot Turkey Sandwich	Roast Beef au Jus
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Pizza	Roman Rice & Beans
Split Pea Stew	Baked Ziti

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Darienne J. Hosley
Copy Editor.....Geri "Elmo" Sahn
Photo Technician.....Steve Pedulla
Production Supervisor.....Tony Morse
Production.....Mike "Flea Boy" Stern, Andrew Davidson, Wendy Rae Nutter

Quote of the Day

"Words you say never seem to live up to the ones inside your head / The lives we make never seem to ever get us anywhere but dead"
—Chris Cornell

SMART SHOPPERS SHOP SMART!
Classic Consignments
Designer, Brand Name Women's and Children's Clothing Sold and Consigned 256-0661
Tues.-Sat. 10:30-5:30
800 Main St., Amherst
on PVTA Bus Route

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS $10.

WOMEN
WALKING
Co-Ed
Co-Ed
DISTANCE
FLEX
FITNESS CENTER
AMHERST, MA
The Valley's Leading Weight Training Facility
175 University Drive • Amherst • 253-3539
FREE Personal Trainer for Women Members

Sure I'm important! For one thing I own my own socks. Yes, you could call me a regular "Do-it-yourselfer." I love organizing my socks. Yes, it is one of my few joys. I know MANY things about my socks. I'd tell you about them.... but I don't know you very well.
You may have germs.
COLLEGIAN
PLEASE REMOVE SHOES BEFORE ENTERING

Sports

Minutewomen win first three matches of season

By Derek Milosavljevic
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts women's tennis Coach Judy Dixon felt coming into this weekend that the team's three matches would be the key to the fall season. If that is the case, the door is now wide open.

Dixon's team blazed to a 3–0 start, knocking off Wesleyan on Friday, Hartford on Saturday, and Vermont on Sunday.

UMass defeats Wesleyan 5–4

The Minutewomen had the most difficulty beating the pesky Wesleyan team 5–4.

Experience came through for the Minutewomen as junior Liesl Sitton and senior Mary Edwards were both victors in singles and doubles play.

Sitton found herself down two breaks at 3–0 to first–year student Mollie Nelson in her No. 1 singles match when she decided to change her strategy.

"She's too powerful, I couldn't play her game. If I tried to bang it out with her corner to corner, I'd get beat," Sitton said. "I had to hit it hard, hit it soft, and move it around to beat her."

Beat her is exactly what she did. The lefthander from Puerto Rico proceeded to win the next eight games en route to a 6–3, 6–2 victory over Nelson.

In doubles play, Sitton teamed with first–year student Caroline Steele to defeat Nelson and Elizabeth Elliot, 8–6.

At No. 6 singles, Edwards won a hard–fought match over Rachel Kowal 7–5, 7–5. Assistant coach Dan Rosenberg praised Edwards for her grittiness.

"The match became possible for us to win because of that," head coach Dixon said.

In her No. 3 doubles match, Edwards teamed with sophomore Liz Durant to knock off Alisa Miner and Kowal.

The win kept Durant's collegiate doubles record unblemished at 13–0.

UMass defeats Hartford 7–0

The Minutewomen had no trouble with the University of Hartford on Saturday, sweeping the Hawks in singles play and winning the doubles portion.

Most impressive in victory for UMass was Durant. The five–footer from Edison, N.J., hageled her No. 4 singles opponent, Julie Merrill, 6–0, 6–0. She and her partner Edwards were nearly as impressive in No. 3 doubles play, thumping the team of Hilary Linder and Heather Maitland, 8–1.

Joining Durant as double winners for the Minutewomen were Edwards and freshmen Noelle Orsini and Amy Sidran.

Dixon characterized Hartford as a team in the midst of some tough times.

"Their team is struggling, primarily because of lack of funding," she said.

UMass defeats Vermont 6–3

On Sunday, the Minutewomen notched its biggest win of the young fall season by disposing of a historically strong University of Vermont team, 6–3.

Before the match, Dixon and Rosenberg were cautiously optimistic about their team's chances. "They are a team that we beat in the spring, but they were missing three of their top players," Dixon said.

"They are always very well–coached," Rosenberg said.

Well–coached or not, the Catamounts were overpowered by a UMass team that once again balanced youth and experience. Junior Sitton and freshman Steele were the only Minutewomen to win in both singles and doubles play.

Sitton improved her singles record to 3–0 by crushing Bethany Benoit, 6–0, 6–0. She has yet to drop a set in the young season.

Steele had a tougher time at No. 3 singles with Julia Renstrom. The Paducah, Ky., native rallied from a set behind to claim victory 5–7, 7–5, 7–5.

The two were matched against their singles opponents in doubles play, winning in straight sets, 6–1, 6–2.

Durant, who cruised to a 6–1, 6–4 victory in No. 4 singles, saw her unbeaten collegiate doubles streak end at 14.

She and Edwards fell victim to Becky Sohn and Courtney Bealko, 6–4, 6–2.

Dixon praised her team as one with no weak links. "The key to this team is depth," she said.

"Two, three, four, five and six are all well–trained, talented athletes."

PAUL BLODEAU / COLLEGIAN

No. 1 singles player Liesl Sitton helped the Minutewomen to start the season off at 3–0.

Sports Briefs

The women's cross country team finished second in a tri– meet at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst on Saturday. The University of Connecticut won the meet but sophomore Melissa Langevin continued her dominance, placing first with a time of 17:54.

Rebecca Donaghue placed fourth (18:44), Kristin Donaldson placed 10th (19:17), Julie Moreau finished 11th (19:18) and Kirsten Bringardner placed 12th (19:30) helping the Minutewomen to the second place finish.

The Minutewomen will be at Vermont this Saturday for a tri–meet with host University of Vermont and Boston University.

*****

The men's cross country team placed second out of four teams on Saturday at Franklin Park in Boston. Iona College won the meet with Maine University and Northeastern University finishing after the Minutemen.

Junior Ethan Nadeau was the first across the finish line for UMass placing fifth with a time of 26:15. Jonathan Way placed seventh (26:21), Matthew Behl placed eighth (26:28), Rick Copley placed ninth (26:48) and Paul Blodorn placed 10th (26:46) to help the Minutemen finish in second place.

The Minutemen will be at Vermont this Saturday for a tri– meet with host Vermont University and Boston University.

*****

Goalkeeper Danielle Dion, a first–year student, was named the Atlantic 10 rookie of the week in women's soccer for her stellar play in the net.

Dion recorded shutouts in four of her first five games.

Outside hitter Lesley Nolan won freshman of the week honors as well.

Nolan hit .248 with 41 kills in the UMass Classic this past weekend playing on the all–tournament team.

PAUL BLODEAU / COLLEGIAN

Arkur Baishya (left) and Tim Lipsky (right) helped the Minutemen to a win in 1st doubles.

Minutemen overcome ineligibility

Tennis starts season on right foot, beating Wesleyan College

By Jamie D. Bearse
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's tennis team recovered from last minute player eligibility problems to serve up a crushing 5–1 victory over Wesleyan College last Friday at Boyden Courts.

UMass 5
Wesleyan 1

Senior Keith Murray of Duxbury and junior Eric Peters of Oyster Bay, N.Y., led the Minutemen with double victories.

After Wesleyan's Peele and Freeman combo defeated UMass' No. 1 doubles team of senior Tim Lipsky and sophomore Ankur Baishya, 6–8, the doubles teams in the No. 2 and 3 spots led by Murray and Peters rallied to win the doubles point 2–1.

Murray, after dropping the first set to Wesleyan's Paul Freeman 3–6, bounced back to capture the win in the last two sets 7–5, and 6–3. Murray then teamed up with junior Darren Tow from Brookline to trounce the Wesleyan team of Adam Abel and Bazil El Bez 8–1 in the No. 2 doubles match.

After losing the first set 3–6, Peters fought back against Wesleyan's Adam Abel winning the match edging out Abel in the last two sets 7–6, 7–6.

Peters, teaming up with freshman Keith Kellogg from Newton, Pa., in his first collegiate match, blasted Wesleyan's Josh Turknett and Roy Studness, 8–2 in the No. 3 doubles match.

Peters was not expected to play Friday due to a battle with Whitmore in trying to receive a grade change that would enable him to play. Peters received the change the day of the match.

Original No. 4 seed Justin Lynn could not clear ineligibility problems by match time due to transfer credit problems from his community college. As a result, Kellogg was forced to play.

Coach Dixon was hoping not to have to use Kellogg in his first days at UMass but said she was "proud" of his performance.

Kellogg also played in the No. 6 singles slot and split the first two sets against Wesleyan's Roy Studness before it was suspended in the 3rd set, 5–7, 6–4.

Top seed Lipsky, regaining eligibility status just hours before match time, split the first two sets with Wesleyan's Caleb Peele, 6–3 and 6–7. Lipsky then outlasted Peele rolling through the final set 6–1.

Before the match, Dixon said in order for UMass to win over Wesleyan the No. 3, 4, 5 and 6 singles players would have to "step it up."

UMass stepped it up, only dropping one out of the four pinnacle matches coming in Darren Tow's loss to Wesleyan's Josh Turknett, 2–6, 6–3, 4–6.

No. 3 seed Ankur Baishya, after having a fantastic freshman year, started his sophomore year off by defeating Wesleyan's Bazil El Bez in straight tie–breaker sets, 7–5 and 7–6.

The Minutemen (1–0) will take their rackets on the road this Thursday against Fairfield University.

Baseball junkies go head to head on Strike of 1994

•'Darn good year' for a baseball strike

Ted Kottler

There will be no World Series for the first time in 90 years. Roger Angell might as well get started on his semi– annual New Yorker piece, which customarily follows the "Fall Classic."

And what will appear on the little screen of the digital Big League Baseball Encyclopedia when one types "World Series 1994," which reads "Boston (AL) refused to play New York (NL)" when one types "World Series 1904?"

"Owners refused to settle with players?"

If I sound dejected over the announcement that the baseball season has indeed come to an end, then I am not as I sound. I will leave the whining and whimpering to my foil, Brian Perillo. Of course, if you have read my column in the past, you a) had a lot of free time on your hands, and b) you know I care about the fate of this great American sport.

But I am here to argue that if there ever were to be a baseball strike, this was a pretty darn good year for it, contrary to suggestions made on these pages by my other colleagues.

They juiced the ball. I do not know how they did it or even who "they" are, but it could not have been as clever a ploy as what some suspected led to the allegedly pumped–up balls of 1987. In that year it was proposed that the Haitian employees of Rawlings, which manufactures the balls, wound the innards especially tight since they were so excited about the disposal of their country's dictatorship. I liked that one.

It has been written here recently that it is a real shame that Matt Williams and Ken Griffey Jr. could not further pursue Roger Maris' single–season record of 61 home runs set in 1961. All because of those greedy owners and greedier players, one of the most memorable campaigns in baseball history came to a grinding halt.

I believe 1994's inflated offensive statistics are an aberration, due to those Titleist's they were pitching. Think about it: should not the total of homers have been higher last season, when the league expanded? The pitching was not appreciably worse this year; if anything it improved.

What I am waiting to see is a comprehensive, scientific breakdown and analysis of the baseball. For all the scrutiny bats endure, why does no one look at the ball? I would think that a baseball, which is stitched together with thread, would be easier to tamper with than a bat and its one–piece construction.

In sum, we must remember the real issue that sent this baseball season to an early grave: cable television revenue– sharing. While the New York Yankees collect $47 million in such funds, the Cleveland Indians receive less than $4 million.

This disparity makes it more difficult for the Indians' ownership to finance its payroll than the Yankees'. But think about that: what do the owners need all that cash for? To pay the players' ever–escalating salaries, of course.

That is why I endorse a modified salary cap that would go something like this: certain players, such as Griffey, Frank Thomas, Barry Bonds and Jeff Bagwell may name their price. Beyond that most selective echelon however, a distinct drop–off would occur, preventing the likes of Matt Young and Jody Reed from reeling in excess riches each year.

Of course, the players would not go for it, and the owners would still have to pay some exorbitant salaries. But until they bring back ordinary baseballs, it is all for naught.

Ted Kottler is a Collegian staff member.

•Strike hurts the game as well as fans

Brian Perillo

It was played by soldiers during the Civil War more than a century ago. It outdates the radio and television that people use to follow it. It is more than just a game. It is the national pastime of the United States of America.

It is baseball.

Coming into this year there was much talk that baseball no longer means what it used to in this country. Television ratings were down and people talked of how football and even basketball had replaced baseball as the great love of the nation.

As the season progressed, wonderful things began to happen. A new generation of stars began to emerge. Ken Griffey Jr. and Matt Williams were chasing the all–time home run record. Tony Gwynn was flirting with .400. The new Iron Man Cal Ripken Jr. was closing in on Lou Gehrig's consecutive games played mark.

Questions began to arise. Could Jeff Bagwell or The Big Hurt Frank Thomas capture the first triple crown since Carl Yazstremski? Would the Cleveland Indians, whose biggest success since 1954 occurred when Major League came out in theaters, actually make the post season. Records looked like they could be shattered and milestones were within reach.

Then it all came tumbling down. Baseball seemed to emulate the Boston Red Sox during the last several years, starting off with a bang and getting fans excited and then wham, falling on its face and disappointing everyone. The strike ended all of the previously mentioned possibilities and the door slammed shut on the potential of the baseball season.

Now I do not know how Ted will justify saying the strike is a good thing, but the fact remains that he is missing the point. Yes, baseball was in the midst of its best and most exciting season in years, but even more importantly is what this meant to the fans.

You see, whether or not Williams hit 62 dingers is not the point. What is important is that the fans cared if he did or not.

This past season inspired more baseball talk, speculation and discussions than in any past year I can remember. The question, "So, can Griffey break the record?" had been asked and answered so many times, it seemed everyone had an opinion.

In 1994, the interest level of baseball fans was at an extremely high level. That is the main reason why a strike this season is not only the worst possible thing for the fans, but also for the game of baseball.

The excitement generated was a sign of baseball gaining back much of its popularity and getting back on track as America's premier sport. Not only have fans, who were suddenly beginning to care about the game, lost this season, but they now feel cheated and that could keep them from coming back.

The fact is, baseball will be hard pressed to come up with another season where so many records are in danger of falling at once. And even more important than the individual milestones is the amount of interest and attention they have brought to the game.

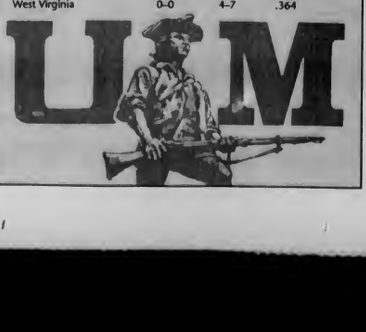
Sure, who would not have liked to see Tony Gwynn, a player who in a major media market like New York or Boston would be hailed as the next Ty Cobb, finish the season with the first .400 plus season since Ted Williams in 1941? However, as a baseball fan, I would rather see the sport back on top where it should be.

James Earl Jones said in Field of Dreams, "The one constant through the years has been baseball." Unfortunately that's not so in 1994, and may never be again.

Brian Perillo is a Collegian staff member.

Atlantic 10 Standings

	A–10	overall	PCT
Men's Soccer
Rutgers	1–0–1	2–3–1	.417
George Washington	1–0–0	1–4–0	.200
Massachusetts	1–0–0	2–2–1	.500
West Virginia	1–1–0	3–1–0	.750
St. Joseph's	0–0–1	2–2–2	.500
Rhode Island	0–0–0	4–2–0	.667
St. Bonaventure	0–1–0	0–6–0	.000
Temple	0–2–0	0–3–0	.000
Women's Soccer
Massachusetts	3–0–0	5–0–0	1.000
George Washington	1–0–0	3–2–0	.600
Rutgers	1–1–0	1–3–0	.250
Temple	1–1–0	1–4–0	.200
Rhode Island	0–2–0	1–4–0	.200
St. Bonaventure	0–2–0	2–2–0	.500
Rutgers	1–0–0	2–3–0	.400
Field Hockey
Massachusetts	0–0–0	3–0–0	1.000
St. Joseph's	0–0–0	2–2–1	.500
Temple	0–0–0	2–4–0	.333
Rhode Island	0–1–0	0–4–0	.000
Duquesne	0–0	7–5	.583
George Washington	0–0	8–2	.800
Volleyball
Massachusetts	0–0	11–0	1.000
Rhode Island	0–0	4–3	.571
Rutgers	0–0	4–7	.364
St. Bonaventure	0–0	3–7	.300
Temple	0–0	6–4	.600
West Virginia	0–0	4–7	.364



Entering the spotlight

Senior co-captain Danielle Borges is on a tear, helping to lead field hockey to a 3-0 start. A win today will bring the team to 4-0. Story page 12.

All the help you need and more

Need questions answered about HIV testing and AIDS? There's a hot-line set up just for that. See story page 2.

Safer sex focus of MTV special

Real people, real issues take center stage on a network special designed not to preach, but to raise awareness. See story on page 5.

Extended Forecast

Wednesday: Mostly sunny, high 75-80, but cooler along the coast. Nightpartly cloudy and mild. Thursday: Partly cloudy with a slight chance of precipitation.

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 80 LOW: 75	HIGH: 75 LOW: 65	HIGH: 70 LOW: 60

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 7 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Wednesday, September 21, 1994

Student voter registration drives heat up

By Christopher Hassett
Collegian Correspondent

Several registered student organizations at the University of Massachusetts are initiating a campus-wide voter registration which could result in an increase state funding for the University system.

Mercedes Betanco, undergraduate student speaker, said there is a campus-wide effort to register students to vote because it will give students power to lobby the State House for more appropriations to the University.

"The first thing they ask you at the State House is whether or not you are registered to vote," Betanco said.

Students registering to vote will allow student leaders to mobilize students to lobby the State House, according to Betanco.

"If you are not registered to vote, [legislators] don't care what you have to say," Betanco said.

There are several organizations involved in the registration drive. Among the groups are the Massachusetts Student Public Interest Research Group (MASSPIRG) the Commuter Area Government (CGA), the Save Our Schools coalition (SOS), and the Student Center of Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA).

The voter registration drive is part of an overall strategy set by SCERA to lobby the State House for more funds for the University, said Betanco.

Students wishing to register for the next election may register to vote at the registration table set up outside the mini-store in the Student Union.

Student leaders of the SOS said their goal is to register 4,000 students statewide, the CGA has a goal of 5,000 or more students, and 6,000 students through MASSPIRG's efforts.

The registration process is "quick and painless," according to Chad Rippere, a first year computer sciences and mathematics major. Registration generally takes less than five minutes.

Students interested in registering should look for registration tables which will be at the Hatch, the Student Union and the Campus Center concourse. Registration will also take place in some classrooms.

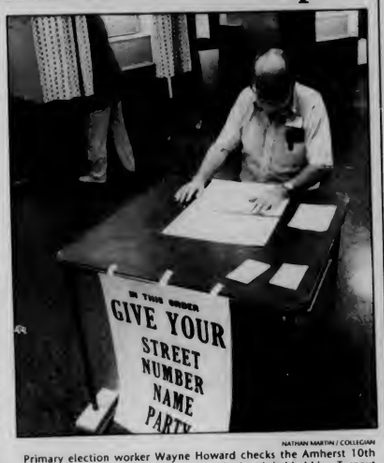
The CGA plans to go to the dorms to register students said Matt Pavesi, the commuter advocate for the CGA.

Chancellor David K. Scott wrote a letter to faculty and professors throughout campus asking them to allow students to hold the registration drive in classes, Betanco said.

The Off Campus Housing office has hired 10 people to staff the registration continuously throughout the semester, Betanco said. If more funds are received, she said it is possible that the drive may continue into the next semester.

MASSPIRG has approximately 15-20 volunteers working in the

Turn to VOTERS, page 3



NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Primary election worker Wayne Howard checks the Amherst 10th precinct voting list as a voter checks into the booth behind him. Turnout was light in the area because many local incumbents ran unopposed.

Carter blasts Clinton on Haitian policies

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — If he didn't learn the lesson in North Korea, President Clinton knows now that Jimmy Carter's help comes with a price.

Hours after closing a deal to avert a military invasion of Haiti, the former president broadsided Clinton with criticism of his Haiti policy and launched a publicity campaign from, of all places, the Lincoln bedroom.

Carter opposed an invasion. He opposed an embargo. He opposed driving fallen dictators from Haiti. He opposed nearly every aspect of the president's work in Haiti, a senior Clinton aide said, except the decision to let Carter try to make peace.

And even that wasn't handled right, the former president said. He accused Clinton of nearly scuttling peace talks by deploying an invasion force while negotiations were still underway.

"What we had worked on to accomplish was about to come apart," Carter told CNN in an interview he arranged from the historic White House bedroom, moments after returning from Haiti.

The administration obviously disagreed. Clinton's foreign policy team insisted that an imminent threat of war was what pushed military leader Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras to close the deal. The agreement has drawn criticism from lawmakers who think Clinton, eager to avoid violence, went too easy on the junta.

Carter, whose global troubleshooting is eclipsing memories of a vexed presidency, said the White House should not be surprised by his objections.

"Well, I've expressed my criticism publicly," Carter said Tuesday. Referring to two other members of the negotiating team, retired Gen. Colin Powell and Sen. Sam Nunn, the former president added, "All three of us have expressed our concern about the embargo, which was affecting primarily very poor people in the country."

Clinton publicly heaped praise on Carter, and White House officials marveled at his eagerness to hopscotch the globe and make peace. He was at it again Tuesday, meeting privately in Atlanta with

Turn to CARTER, page 10

Sioux activist to visit UM campus

By Kristin St. John
Collegian Staff

John Trudell, a leader in the Native American movement, will be on hand to discuss his efforts, in the Campus Center Auditorium tomorrow night.

Sponsored by the Office of Third World Affairs, Trudell's speech will be the first in this fall's ALANA (Asian Latin African and Native American) Lecture Series.

"We're hoping to enlighten people," said Nelson Acosta, coordinator of the OTWA.

Trudell, a Santee Sioux born in Nebraska, began his life as a national fighter for Native American rights in 1969 when he became the spokesman for the Indians of All Tribes Occupation of Alcatraz, which protested the treatment of Native Americans by the United States Government. In 1973, he became the national chairman for the American Indian Movement, a position which would bring heavy pressure from the federal government.

Burning the American flag at a demonstration in front of the FBI headquarters in Washington, D.C. in 1979 would change his life forever. Later that evening his house burned down, killing his wife, their three children and his mother- in-law. The fire was described as suspicious, but was ruled as accidental. To this day, Trudell, along with many others, believes the U.S. government was responsible for the fire and deaths in his family. In interviews Trudell describes the fire as a mass murder and compares it to the attacks on women and children at winter camps.

Better known by younger generations for his poetry, Trudell did not start writing until after his family was

Turn to TRUDELL, page 10

ASSOCIATED PRESS

John Trudell, an activist in the Native American movement.

Air Force ROTC takes to the sky

Recruiting figures going up; female population growing

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

Recruitment figures are picking up for University of Massachusetts Air Force ROTC after a threat of extinction a year and a half ago.

An improved freshman orientation/recruitment program and increased publicity have helped to assure that the organization remains on campus, said Major Cheryl Koren of the UMass Air Force ROTC.

In March of 1993, Air Force officials asked then- Chancel or Richard O'Brien to consider dissolving the UMass unit. They recommended elimination of the unit by either 1995 or 1996 because of low enrollment, but officials left the decision up to the campus organization, Koren said.

UMass decided to keep the program, and now retention of recruits are increasing, Koren said.

In 1993, there were a total of 13 freshman recruited, and four of the recruits stayed in the program. This year, out of the 12 freshman recruited, nine are planning to stay.

"The female population has grown significantly," Koren said. Last year there were four women in the whole corp; now they are the majority, 15 women in all.

Siu Ling Cheung, an undecided freshman recruit, said being involved is "not an issue of being a woman; it's an issue of being physically fit."

The Air Force ROTC freshman program incited her involvemcnt through an informative and encouraging orientation tour of the campus.

The orientation program is run prior to the arrival of returning students. It offers freshmen an opportunity to tour the campus, receive information on the ROTC organization, and socialize with other members of the corp.

"There is a misconception that Air Force ROTC is too time consuming, but I have cadettes that are members on varsity teams and still take classes," Koren said. "The orientation program gives us an opportunity to clear up these kinds of misconceptions."

The freshman orientation is only one of the many efforts geared at getting the word out that have been successful in increasing recruitment figures, Koren said.

The organization sends letters and makes calls to students who show an interest in getting involved, Koren said. Three thousand form letters were sent to incoming freshman this year.

"You figure, you send that many letters out, you're bound to get something back," Clay Nicholson, the cadet group commander, said.

A high school orientation program is in the works to target potential UMass freshmen. Cadets give students tours of the campus and also a chance to ask questions and learn about the Air Force ROTC program.

Emphasis has been put on acquainting freshmen with the campus and the program in a personalized fashion.

A new big brother/big sister-type program is being conducted, Koren said. Cadets sponsor a "rookie" and show them the ropes.

All of the students involved have the option of applying for positions in the U.S. Air Force after they graduate, Koren said.

Because of military downsizing, Lt. Col. Glenn Stankiewicz says people seem to think there are no jobs available anymore. Stankiewicz, a new employee at UMass Air Force ROTC, is a professor of aerospace studies.

The Air Force is always looking for good people, especially now that it is becoming more eonsumed with humanitarian missions, Stankiewicz said.

"We have to do a better job at letting people know what we have to offer and that the Air Force is a viable career," Stankiewicz said.

SGA opens semester with informative meeting

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

The Student Government Association at the University of Massachusetts held a general information meeting in the Campus Center last night.

Approximately 50 students attended the SGA meeting which gave students information about the student government and the student senate.

"The meeting generally is to inform interested individuals about what the SGA is about," said Al Lizana, student trustee. "We want to get people involved and answer their questions."

The purpose of the meeting to give students a sense of how the SGA is organized and run, said Lizana. Students also learned about the history of SGA and some their accomplishments.

"We want to give students a sense of the issue the SGA is involved in," Lizana said.

Those who attended the meeting included students who are interested in the student government, student senators and both members of the SGA and other registered student organizations.

Mercedes Betanco, the undergraduate student speaker, welcomed everyone to the meeting and spoke briefly.

Phil McNamara, the SGA attorney general, also spoke at the meeting. McNamara gave an overview of the new SGA constitution.

The SGA's constitution was redesigned last semester by former Attorney General Matt Malone

Turn to SGA, page 2

Pro-Aristide rally erupts in violence

By Andrew Selsky
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Jubilant supporters of Haiti's exiled president cheered U.S. troops on Tuesday, but police clubbed the demonstrators and fired tear gas as American soldiers stood by, under orders not to get involved.

Some demonstrators became angry at the Americans for failing to protect a man who, according to witnesses, was clubbed to death by a Haitian policeman.

After the disturbances, senior U.S. military officers here roared up to Haiti's army headquarters for a lengthy "talk to," as one American officer put it. At sunset, U.S. military police emerged from their bases at the airport and seaport to begin motor patrols along the perimeters.

The confrontations in the capital, which came as U.S. Marines swarmed ashore at Cap-Haitien on the northern coast, underlined the tensions in Haiti and the danger of factional violence that could drag the Americans in.

U.S. troops are walking a precarious path in trying to build democracy in the impoverished Caribbean nation. Their very presence could embolden mobs into violence against Haiti's military regime, but staying aloof runs the risk of being viewed by the masses as allies of hated Haitian soldiers and police.

Some American soldiers bridled at the orders that prevented them from intervening when police attacked supporters of Jean-Bertrand Aristide, Haiti's first freely elected president, who was ousted in a 1991 coup.

"I feel terrible," said Specialist Douglas Walton of Cincinnati, a soldier in the U.S. Army's 10th Mountain Division at the gates of the capital's port. "To see people beaten and not be able to do anything."

For now, U.S. officials said, the troops would not inter-

Turn to HAITI, page 10

Jump, Ubu, jump

MELINDA LESTER / COLLEGIAN

Owner Jose Woodruff, along with Ken Ward, play with Rico the wonder dog. (No, it's not really Ubu.)

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Wednesday, Sept. 21

Lecture — Latina/lesbian comic Marga Gomez, LBG Studies Lecture series, ninth floor Campus Center, 12 p.m. to 1:30 p.m.

Theater/comedy — Marga Gomez in Cheva, $3.50 Five College students and seniors, $6 general public, Bowker Auditorium, 8 p.m. Tickets: Fine Arts Center Box Office, 545-2511.

Debate Union — First meeting held today, Machmer lobby, University of Massachusetts, 5:30 p.m.

Lecture — An Adoptee's Dreams, poetry reading, Seelye Hall, room 201, Smith College, 7:30 p.m.

Meeting — The Bollywood Project Recruitment Nights, Campus Center, University of Massachusetts, Room 174, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Theater — UMass Theater Guild meeting. Auditions will be discussed, Campus Center room 804, 7 p.m., Contact Lorette McWilliams at 545-0415.

Concert — Music of India, Veena Concert by Dr. C. Chitti Babu & Party, Buckley Auditorium, Amherst College, 7:30 p.m.

Thursday, Sept. 22

Theater/comedy — Marga Gomez in Cheva, $3.50 Five College students and seniors, $6 general public, Bowker Auditorium, 8 p.m. Tickets: Fine Arts Center Box Office, 545-2511.

Just For Fun — Chabad House Sukkah Party, Chabad House, 8 p.m., Information: 549-4094.

Friday, Sept. 23

Meeting — Meeting of Campus Crusade for Christ, singing, skits, short talks, Campus Center, Check information desk in Campus Center for room number, 7 p.m.

Special Event — Representative Bernard Sanders will be speaking on health care, Main lecture hall, Mount Holyoke College, 3 p.m.

Film — To Kill A Mockingbird, Gamble Auditorium, Mount Holyoke College, $2.50, Presented by the MHC Film Society, Show times: 7 p.m. and 9:15 p.m.

Just For Fun — 80's dance party, Sponsored by The First Korean American Students of SC, Davis Ballroom, Smith College, 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Auditions — Witness For The Prosecution, UMass Theater Guild, Campus Center, UMass, Room 168–C, 6:30 p.m., Information: 545-0415.

Saturday, Sept. 24

Music — Bands on display, 10th Annual Band Day, McGuirk Stadium, University of Massachusetts, 1 p.m., Information: 545-6060.

Film — Presented by the Mount Holyoke Film Society, Gamble Auditorium, MHC, $2.50, Show times: 7 p.m. and 9:15 p.m.

Hayride — Rides from Haigis Mall, UMass, Sponsored by Campus Crusade for Christ, Leaves 7:45 p.m., $6, Information: 546–7302.

Upcoming

Pond clean–up — Volunteers needed for campus pond clean–up to be held Sept. 27 and 28, 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. Sign– up: Karen Drumm, 545–2317.

Blood Drives — Sept. 20 and 21, CC, 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Internships — MASSPIRG is offering internships for the fall semester. Information: 423B Student Union or call 545–0199.

Correction

Yesterday's Collegian reported that the Volunteers in Vital Action (V!VA) Community Service Council held a volunteer fair Sept. 12.

The fair will be today from 11:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. on the Campus Center Concourse.

The Collegian regrets the error.

HIV hotline answers questions

By Matt Yarrows
Collegian Correspondent

For Massachusetts residents with questions about HIV testing, answers may be no more than a phone call away.

The HIV Antibodies Counseling and Testing Hotline, started this April by the Family Planning Council of Western Massachusetts in Northampton, is online and ready to answer questions about HIV or HIV testing.

The Northampton based toll–free hotline was implemented to answer the questions people might be reluctant or unable to ask in other forums.

The hotline is important because many people are in need of facts about HIV or HIV testing, Elizabeth Rivera–Rivas, the hotline coordinator, said.

Getting people to ask questions about HIV and HIV testing is one of the hotline's goals, Nora Lopez, a hotline counselor, said.

"We know a lot of people have questions about HIV antibodies testing, but they don't know where to bring them," Rivera–Rivas said. "The hotline will be a good first step. We're very excited about this new service."

Hotline counselors are trained to be able to answer callers' questions on a one–on–one, anonymous basis. Callers can receive information and be directed to one of the state– supported HIV testing and counseling sites closest to them.

Lopez said the hotline receives approximately 50 calls per day.

Although the hotline is based in Northampton, it can be reached from across the country, she said. Most calls come from either the Boston area or locally, but she has had calls from as far away as California.

Callers ask a variety of questions regarding HIV and HIV testing, but Lopez said that there are some questions that are asked more frequently than others.

Lopez said many people ask "How do I get HIV?" or "How do you protect yourself from HIV?"

Questions about HIV are easier to ask over the phone rather than in counseling or testing centers, she said. People who might not go to the testing centers to get their questions answered sometimes feel better about talking to a counselor on the phone, she said.

"A lot of people think that if they were involved in a risky situation on the weekend, they should get tested for AIDS on Monday," Rivera–Rivas said. "In fact, the test they can get is for the HIV antibodies — not AIDS. The test won't tell them if they have AIDS."

The test for the HIV antibodies, according to Rivera–Rivas, is most accurate six months after the last possible exposure to the virus.

The Massachusetts Department of Public Health estimates that by the end of 1994, 40,000 people in the state will be HIV positive. That will be an increase of almost 25 percent since 1993.

The hotline has three phone lines and is available 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Thursday, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Tuesday and Friday, and from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday.

The hotline can be reached at 1–800–750–2016.

■ SGA

continued from page 1

and will be implemented this year.

"We have a new constitution," Lizana said. "It's a new playing field, and it's still new to all of us."

McNamara also talked about how students could join the student senate and gave information about how to be nominated, election procedure, rules and regulations.

Lizana spoke at the meeting about what it is like to be involved with the SGA and student senate. Lizana also lead introductions of the students attending the meeting.

"It was a good meeting because we got to break it down and really meet people," Lizana said.

Mirran Raphaely, SGA president, also spoke at the meeting. Raphaely said she was pleased with the meeting and was especially happy with the diverse group of student the meeting attracted.

"It was marvelously diverse," Raphaely said. "There were all kinds of people at the meeting. People with different majors, different politics and different backgrounds."

Yes, It's always a fine day for a barbeque. Ahh nothing like the hot coals to cause a man to break down in a fit of hysterical crying. "WHY DIDN'T I LISTEN TO MY MOTHER AND BECOME A DOG GROOMER!!!!"

COLLEGIAN
NEVER TOO LATE TO CHANGE

TIME OUT

Rolling Rock Night
Bottles $1.50

Free T-Shirts, Hats and other prizes

Free Antonio's Pizza 10 - ?

37 N. Pleasant St.

WOMEN

WALKING Co-Ed FLEX Co-Ed DISTANCE

FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA

The Valley's Leading Weight Training Facility
175 University Drive • Amherst • 253-3539

FREE Personal Trainer for Women Members

SMART SHOPPERS SHOP SMART!

Classic Consignments

Designer, Brand Name Women's and Children's Clothing Sold and Consigned
256-0661
Tues.-Sat. 10:30-5:30 800 Main St., Amherst
on PVTA Bus Route

UMASS THEATRE GUILD

1ST MEETING WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER, 21ST 7PM CAMPUS CENTER ROOM 804
OLD AND NEW MEMBERS WELCOME
IF YOU HAVE ANY QUESTIONS CALL 545-0415

Holistic healing

HOLLY ANDERSON / COLLEGIAN

Massage therapist Steve LaFleur practices his technique on Sandi Girling, a sophomore sociology major in downtown Amherst on Saturday.

Health care experts want 'single–payer' legislation

By Ben Geman
Collegian Staff

President Clinton, once so confident in threatening to veto any health care legislation not providing universal coverage, has suffered a major blow to his presidency with the failure of his health care plan.

But three health care experts, speaking at Hampshire College last night as part of the school's "Healthy, Wealthy and Wise?" fall colloquy, told the audience Americans should demand a Canadian–style, "single–payer" plan.

"In the Canadian system, people do not wait for necessary care," said Marilyn Clement of the national organization Health Care: We've Got to Have It.

A single–payer system funds a national health care system health care with a progressive tax.

Clement blamed the establishment press for failing to give consideration to a single–payer plan when framing the debate of Clinton's reform efforts, which allow medical insurance companies to retain a large role in the health care system.

"The New York Times wouldn't talk about single–payer because most of the board members are investors in insurance companies," said Clement.

She encouraged audience members to support a referendum on the California gubernatorial ballot which would create a single–payer plan in the state. She asked the audience to travel to California to do grass–roots campaigning for the issue, likening it to the civil rights movement by recalling the "freedom summer" voter registration drives in rural Mississippi in the summer of 1964.

Clement repeatedly stressed the idea that health care should be available to the poor.

"Resist the calls of the right wing fundamentalists to blame the victims and be greedy," said Clement. "Health care is a right."

Also speaking at last night's forum was Dorian Gregory of the Springfield low–income rights advocacy organization Arise for Social Justice.

Gregory discussed the problems faced by low–income residents of Springfield, noting reliance on welfare can trap residents who fear they will not be able to afford health care or not be provided with it should they

Turn to HEALTH CARE page 10

■ voters

continued from page 1

voter registration project, according to student organizer Robin Eiseman. MASSPIRG is looking to have up to 150 volunteers to more efficiently handle to registration process for as the Nov. 8 election day draws near, she said.

SOS's objective as to "create a statewide grassroots legislative base," said graduate student Ted Chambers. SOS fliers given with the registration form explain how UMass is one of the most expensive state funded schools in the nation.

Chambers said one of the SOS's objectives to keep tuition costs down.

"The only thing between students and another tuition increase is the registration and going out to vote," said Pavesi.

The CGA also plans to compile a database of student phone numbers in order to remind them to send in their registrations and their absentee ballots in on time, as well as to remind them to vote in November. The CGA will also be offering transportation for students to the polls, he said.

The groups want to register as many Massachusetts residents as possible for the upcoming election.

Out of state students are also encouraged to register. Eiseman said over 50 percent of the students registering so far have been from out of state.

Betanco estimates that over 750 students have already registered to vote.

Eiseman said MASSPIRG has a special interest in the upcoming ballot. When students register, Eiseman said, MASSPIRG organizers are urging the voters to answer "no" on Question 3 which concerns an amendment to the state budget made in June of last year prohibiting students from forming and funding groups on campus to lobby public policy issues.

MASSPIRG and other student groups collected 85,000 signatures to repeal the amendment through Question 3, according to Eiseman.

"It [Question 3] takes away our rights as students to form and fund political organizations on campus," said Eiseman. "What right do they [State Legislature] have to take that away from us?"

For Everyone's Information

Submit your FYI to the Collegian and tell the world what they need to know.

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS

PAID OFFICIALS NEEDED FOR FLAG FOOTBALL, SOCCER, SOFTBALL AND ICE HOCKEY

Clinics: Football, Soccer - Sept. 21, 22, 23
Co-ed Softball - Sept. 26, 27
Ice Hockey - Oct. 3
Call for times & locations

STILL TIME ENTER FLAG FOOTBALL, SOCCER & SOFTBALL

MORE INFO IN 215 BOYDEN, 5-2693 / 5-0022

WELCOME BACK STUDENTS!!

Charlie's tavern Since 1970

Wednesday September 21st

8 PM CAP NIGHT!

Giant 22oz. Draft$1!

Over 40 Kinds of BREWED & MICROBREWED BEER

FOOD SPECIALS 5:00PM to Midnight

Monday 10¢ Mozzarella Sticks
Tuesday 10¢ Wild or Hot Buffalo Wings
Wednesday - 25¢ Pizza Slices OR 1/4# Popcorn Shrimp for 99¢
Thursday - 10¢ Chicken Nuggets

Open 11 am - 1 am 7 days a week • Kitchen open 'til midnight

Lost Dog

"Bologna"

Lost 9/17 between Buffam Rd. Shutesbury & Crocker Farm School. If you have any information, please call 545-0977 or 259-1853

!! IBM XT COMPUTERS !!
*Includes monitor, 10 meg hard drive. (printers, modems also available) $168.00!!!
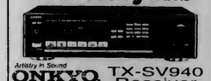
*14 day replacement guarantee.
*delivery available.
call 256-8094

200 Throbbing Watts!



Artistry in Sound
ONKYO TX-SV940 Receiver
Sale $289.
Sound & Music
Millbank Place • 351 Pleasant Street • Northampton
584-9547 • VISA & MasterCard accepted

The Mushy Marten Space Patrol did not take kindly to young folks... That's why it was no surprise when little Max, Brad, and Ring Ted Andrew were thrown in the Intergalactic Slime Pen. "Why is it always the good ones that suffer?" whined Andy. "Shaddap!" replied Maximillian and Brad. Andy ignored the older boys, as he scavenged another hotel tip. He had plans. BIG plans. He didn't plan on sticking around.
Collegian
"Just another brother on Intergalactic lockdown."

"One day I decided to sell my bike and my car, and in the spirit of Walden Woods & Don Henley, I would walk everywhere from now on.
I also decided that the best way to get rid of them and make a whole lot of cash (that I wouldn't donate any of to a worthy environmental cause) was to advertise in The Collegian Classifieds.
Needless to say, I sold my bike and car, but when I looked to see my classified in the paper I saw a really cool classified for a motorcycle. Screw the environment, now I ride with the wind and death at my side."
Collegian Classifieds
They really work.

The University of Massachusetts at Amherst presents

RACISM
The Problem and the Response:
Seven Social Psychologists Speak Out

All Presentations in Campus Center Auditorium

Thursday, September 22

Thomas Pettigrew, University of California, Santa Cruz 6:00 pm
Intergroup prejudice and discrimination on the campus
This talk will apply what social science knows about these two phenomena to the university campus with remedial suggestions

Friday, September 23

John Dovidio, Colgate University 12:15 pm
Racism among the well-intentioned
This presentation examines how even the most well-intentioned person, who genuinely endorses principles of fairness and justice, may develop unconscious negative feelings about African Americans and other "minority" groups, that are expressed in subtle, indirect, and rationalizable ways

Audrey Murrell, University of Pittsburgh 1:30 pm
To identify or not to identify: Preserving, ignoring, and sometimes destroying social identity
This talk explores the ways in which people come to identify with social groups, what things may subtract people from being attached to important social groups, and how individuals deal with a threat to their important group identities

David Sears, University of California, Los Angeles 2:45 pm
The symbolic politics of racism
In the political arena modern racism operates through policy and candidate choices that symbolize racial concerns

Saturday, September 24

Jennifer Crocker, State University of New York at Buffalo 1:00 pm
Racism and self-esteem
Racism doesn't always lead to negative self-views. Groups differ in their reactions to racism. The talk will present evidence and suggest why

Patricia Devine, University of Wisconsin, Madison 2:15 pm
The rocky road to positive intergroup relations
The presentation will discuss obstacles to positive intergroup relations and the challenges associated with managing intergroup interactions

Claude Steele, Stanford University 3:30 pm
Under suspicion of inability: Stereotype vulnerability and intellectual functioning
People who are stereotyped as having poor intellectual ability can be apprehensive about intellectual tests, lest they do poorly and conform to the stereotype. Their apprehension can disrupt performance

No registration required. For more information call 545-5960

Sponsored by the Chancellor's Multicultural Advisory Board and the Department of Psychology Personality/Social Psychology Division

JOHN TURTURRO ROB MORROW RALPH FIENNES

Fifty million people watched, but no one saw a thing.

ROBERT REDFORD

QUIZ SHOW

MICHAEL JACKSON PRODUCTIONS ENTERPRISES BALTIMORE PICTURES ROBERT REDFORD

RALPH FIENNES DAVID PAYMER PAUL SCOFIELD MARK ISHAM KATHY O'REAR JON HUTMAN PAUL ATTANASIO

ROBERT REDFORD

HOLLYWOOD PICTURES

STARTS FRIDAY AT SELECTED THEATRES

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Ganley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Position vacant Black Affairs Editor Position vacant Women's Issues Editor
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor Marni E. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor John Khachadourian Finance Manager
Position vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Jim Roode Circulation Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Eric Abenaim Subscriptions Manager
Evelyn A. Delerme Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Kelly Spang News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Nathan K. Martin Photography Editor Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Viewing post cold war Haiti

The fact that the nation is even focusing on Haiti as a major issue is endemic of the new foreign policy climate which now confronts the United States. Indeed, a mere five years ago, the only way Haiti would have appeared on the diplomatic agenda is if the island held nuclear warheads.

Andrew Davidson

During the cold war, the only reason to focus on states as small as Haiti was if they happened to be pawns in our global conflict with the Soviet Union.

New York Times columnist Thomas L. Friedman points out that "people don't seem to want vision anymore, in large part because they sense that no one has a vision that can encompass a contradictory world." The new international role for the president relies on "the ability to protect American interests and prestige in a world where each problem is uniquely different and requires a uniquely deft response."

The crumbling of the bipolar world order makes foreign policy questions more difficult to define, much less answer. The fact that it took Bill Clinton this long to shine in the foreign policy arena is more a sign of the difficulty of maneuvering through today's international circuit than of his relative incompetence.

By ordering as thorough of a strike as he did, Clinton was able to force a settlement; indeed, the Haitian rulers did not concede to Carter and Co.'s negotiative stance until they had solid evidence that a strike had already been ordered by the president. Clinton's gunboat diplomacy and subsequent "invasion" of Haiti were both masterful moments in leadership, his most presidential actions to date.

But whether or not he handled the situation properly is no less important than the reasons for the invasion. -Despite criticism from both sides of the American political spectrum, there are several factors which categorically establish the situation in Haiti as vital to our national interests.

Humanitarian problems. In the days before the end of the cold war, a conflict over something as simple as humanitarian problems would have been unthinkable. Today, it is agreed by most to be one of the best ways to judge the success of a foreign policy. The fact that the United States has a long history of human rights and democracy ever since it gained independence from France in 1804. We, as Americans, are still idealistic enough to believe that democracy is a given right to all people.

The presence of our troops would ensure the strength of democracy for Haiti. And once democracy has a foothold in any state, it is difficult to derail.

Economic Interests. A strong Haitian economy is obviously beneficial to both countries. An undemocratic, poorly managed non-market economy has been causing mass exodus to south Florida, draining Haiti of a labor pool; this poses problems [albeit relatively manageable] for the United States as well. A democratic, more stable Haiti would certainly foster a more viable trading environment.

The Domino Effect. Establishing a policy of categorically expelling inherently undemocratic governments can only further strengthen U.S. diplomatic power. It is not at all improper for the United States to establish itself as the enforcer of democracy on this hemisphere, especially considering the less than noble history we have in dealing with the Caribbean and Latin America.

There is certainly no argument that Clinton has had a less than perfect record when it comes to establishing a foreign policy. Ironically, it was not his secretary of state who was involved in the negotiations — Warren Christopher was in Washington while the talks took place — but a congressman and two retired officials: President Carter and General Colin Powell.

The problems Clinton has been dealing with in Haiti are nothing new; they are similar to the situations in Somolia and in Bosnia for two reasons: they're all drastically different from any diplomatic relation the U.S. had before the end of the cold war, and they all date back to President Bush, who was lucky enough to stand under the Reagan cold war umbrella just long enough to avoid the downpour of the New World Order. Bill Clinton has so far handled one of them with a certain level of confidence and competence, which is not bad considering we live in a world without precedent.

Andrew Davidson is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Transcripts are free

I wish to correct a comment made by Tracy Monahan in her letter that was printed in the September 13 issue of the Collegian ("A complete guide to your tuition and fees").

At the end of the article, Ms. Monahan refers to the Registrar's Services fee. Specifically, the Registrar's Office charges a fee to all new students who enter the University undergraduate degree programs. The fee is charged once upon a student's entrance to the University.

In her comments, Ms. Monahan indicated that students who pay the one-time fee are charged additional fees for official transcripts. This is not the case. Students who have entered the University as undergraduates since Fall 1990 are charged a one-time transcript fee. If any of these students make a request for an official transcript from the Undergraduate Registrar's Office, they are not charged any additional fees. Students may make any number of requests for official transcripts if they have paid this one-time fee. They are limited to three copies per request.

Nancy Fitzpatrick
Registrar

Objectivity is dead

Often, when the frigid political climate at UMass starts to heat up, our beloved Daily Collegian assumes the role of lightning rod, absorbing the brunt of the slighted party's disdain. This UMass debating usually centers around the inadequacies of a school newspaper to adequately represent the world we live in. This is also the criticism most often levelled against the popular media. Perhaps our disappointment stems from exaggerated expectations of either the media's power or their responsibilities.

The Daily Collegian shares many similarities to the establishment media where most Americans get their news. And like most newspapers, it is funded through advertising. Yes, all major news media in this country exist to make money. The desire to promote a well-informed citizenry is fine, but it certainly doesn't finance Connie Chung's Manhattan penthouse. Nor does it promote the even more necessary duty of the citizenry: to consume ad nauseam.

The whole notion of an "objective" or "unbiased" reporting of news is itself a little naive. The whole myth of an objective and unbiased media arose right about the time ads selling fleece-lined union suits appeared next to news stories. In order to appeal to the greatest number of consumers, or potential union suit buyers, a paper took on the cloak of "objectivity," so nobody would be too offended, disturbed or confused to not live out the American dream in a comfortable and affordable union suit. The space for ads naturally must take from space afforded the actual news of the newspaper. Thus the creation of a benign, and compressed mainstream. What we call the "tabloid" media, really B-grade mainstream, choose to bombard us in triviality rather than pacify us in banality. But when those gossip rags start to sell more union suits than the mainstream, tabloid becomes the mainstream. It's consumer democracy, objective and unbiased.

Actually, if you are looking to understand your world, you are bound to find more meaning in the "fringe-element" press, marginalized for your protection by mainstream journalism. In sheer volume alone you are bound to find more substance in any given issue of The Weekly Trotskyite or The Christ Uber Alles Review than you will in a story pulled off the wires and whittled down to fit next to The Great Futon Blowout Sale. But precious few will look to alternatives because we all know that those guys are whacky with a capital K. Dan Rather told us.

The Daily Collegian operating on its hard-earned advertising dollars is certainly no different from its corporate counterparts. In this profoundly capitalist domain you can read your news as follows: Tuition debate brought to you by...Live Nude Girls! Or for those who remember last year's brouhaha: News around campus, sponsored by an assortment of concerned felines, urging you to call your elected representative and say "I want abortion criminalized again!" But, as it has been stated in the past, the First Amendment guarantees the Collegian the right to make a profit without blushing.

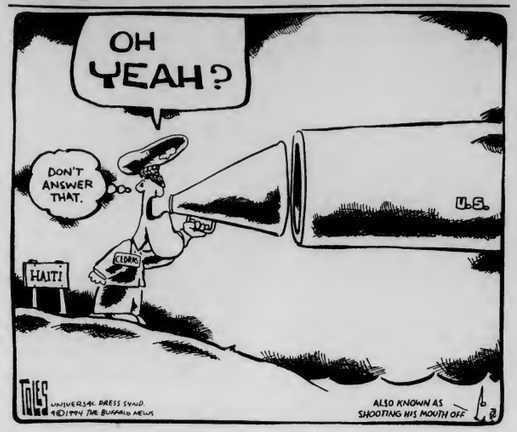
Riding the Collegian for the inequalities which exist on campus and the outside world is really taking a cheap shot. How much credibility can you give a paper which prints news of a possible invasion of Haiti with news that "Mi Mi Miyagi" will soon be dancing on a table near you. Perhaps our standards are too high. After all, is the Collegian that much different from the corporate media? Sadly, no. While the Daily Collegian may serve as a springboard for journalism students wishing to launch a productive non- threatening career, it probably won't serve the student body in any meaningful way. But don't expect it to.

David Sabin
Sunderland

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

THE WIDOW COULD NO LONGER CONTAIN HER CURIOSITY.
WHAT AM I "UP TO," MAAM?
YES.
WELL, MAAM, I'M PART OF A CREATIVE TEAM WE'RE BUILDING SOMETHING MAGICAL HERE— A SPECIAL PLACE OF DREAMS!
UH-OH... HE'S FROM DIS-NEY!
I'LL BE EXPLAINING IT ALL AT A TOWN MEETING TONIGHT. WON'T YOU COME?
AND DON'T WORRY—I'M NOT FROM DISNEY.
THAT EVENING...
I STILL SMELL MOUSE.

Opinion/Editorial



Assorted voices of the Haitian situation

Juan Quiros

Storyteller: In 1915 the United States of America invaded Haiti for the first time in this century. The objective of the operation was to bring democracy to the country. It turned out to be so successful that in September 1994 another invasion took place. And now. . . the news:

CNN: Reverend Jean-Bertrand Aristide, a Catholic priest kicked out of the salesian order for instigating class conflict, wins the presidential election with 66 percent of the vote. Nine months later he's ousted from power by a group of army commanders.

It then becomes clear that the actions of Mr. Aristide as President of Haiti, such as a higher minimum wage and a tax to exports, are not popular among U.S. officials and business community. Furthermore, the efforts of Father Aristide to develop Haiti are seen by many in the CIA as indications of his unstable and unreliable personality. A report is then made public acknowledging the ties between the agency and the army commanders now in charge of Haiti.

A few months later thousands of Haitians begin the long journey by boat to Florida. The Clinton administration suddenly supports an agreement to bring Father Aristide back to power, but just when he's suppose to return to office the generals back out. Soon, a new wave of Haitian immigrants hits the continent.

The State Department changes its rhetoric and begins a frontal attack on Haiti's dictators accusing them of human rights abuses and threatens to invade if Aristide is not allowed back to power. The dictators refuse to leave and prepare to fight. In a last minute deal they accept to relinquish office to Aristide at some point in the future but it is now to late, the U.S. armed forces are on its way.

Storyteller: Any questions?

Couch Potato: . . . (Burp).

Ollie North: Undoubtedly we are the most powerful nation on earth and we can take over countries at a moment's notice. I will use my moral power, if elected senator, to insure U.S. interests in this hemisphere.

Townie: I support the invasion. Finally we will finally have a democratic government in Haiti. Oh. . . and don't forget human rights for all.

Oliver Stone: Vietnam, Grenada, Panama, Iraq and now Haiti. The natural born killers are on the road again.

Storyteller: It was difficult to understand at the time why Carter was preaching peace and love to the Haitians at the same time the planes were taking off from Pope Air Force Base in North Carolina. Maybe Mr. Clinton wanted to restore his popularity before the November elections. Perhaps it was a message to Cuba and the Dominican Republic that, unlike Kennedy, he was no softie.

Another possibility is that he hated boat people. The fact is that Clinton wanted to invade Haiti even if the negotiations succeeded; it helped, the psychiatrist later said, Bill's ego crisis.

CNN: The State Department just issued a communique revealing a plan to train a police force to establish order in Haiti after the departure of the Marines. In other news, Anastacio Somoza's ghost was seen at the State Department. According to Mr. Christopher, Mr. Somoza congratulated him for the plan to train a police force and gave detailed accounts on how that same policy allowed the Somoza family to bring 50 years of dictatorship to Nicaragua after the departure of the Marines in 1933. Mr. Christopher then moved to describe how democracy will be restored in Haiti.

Storyteller: Meanwhile the clock was still ticking and Jean-Bertrand Aristide's presidential term was almost over. It seemed like the Clinton administration never really wanted Aristide back to power and to prove this true, he had to agree not to run for reelection in 1995. If Aristide was ousted because he was a true reformer, for that same reason he would never be given the time to enact reform. The invasion of Haiti was indeed a success.

The democrats were killed in the November elections (Ollie became a senator); democracy never came to Haiti until the U.S. decided to erase the country from the map. . . the couch potatoes never noticed; Oliver Stone made a series of movies about the invasion and Bill and Hillary decided to cruise down Route 666 in a red convertible.

Juan Jose Chacon Quiros is a Collegian staff member.

The real story behind unemployment

Peter Orvetti

Taking a break from his effort to revive the mix of Keynesian tinkering and laissez-faire called Nixonomics that led to 18 percent inflation in the 1970s, Labor Secretary Robert Reich proudly announced that adult unemployment has fallen to 6.1 percent. He considers this to be a major achievement, a sign of the brilliance of the administration he serves.

To be blunt, this is ridiculous. Not just because 35 years ago, 6.1 percent unemployment would be considered tantamount to depression, but also because Reich's figure is completely untrue.

The unemployment statistic offered by the government is an estimate based on the number of applicants for compensation. That estimate is invariably low; the number is probably closer to 6.5 or 7 percent. Reich is also choosing to ignore a well-known general rule: that actual unemployment is approximately one and one-half times the government statistic, on account of those who do not apply for aid, who are homeless, or who are otherwise on the fringes of society. The real result: 13 percent unemployment. In some especially hard-hit areas, 20 percent or more are unemployed.

But wait, Secretary Reich; it gets worse. In the fast-food economy of the 1990s, a new crisis has arisen. It is commonly called underemployment.

Affecting roughly as many people as have no job at all, underemployment is the state where a person has a job (or two or three) but does not make enough to live on. Not people who just can't manage their finances, the underemployed would include the former shipbuilder in New London or Bath, promised a life of ease living off the Pentagon's largesse, now out of luck in the New World Order and wearing a paper hat at Wendy's. Or, the social worker, fired by Ronald Reagan so that the government could buy a really big gun, now working days at WalMart.

The unemployed and the underemployed total, conservatively, 26 percent of the adult American population. Believe it or not, this is the optimal state for our current market economy.

In order to stay in business, corporate America needs to keep a reserve of unemployed on the sidelines. This serves two purposes; first, it keeps rank-and-file workers in line. If your foreman can replace you with any one of the 50 million unemployed or underemployed, you'll take the abuse and the minimum wage, and you'll like it. Second, a certain number of people without spending power acts as a sadistic form of price control. It keeps prices just low enough so that the other 74 percent will keep buying stuff they don't need.

The number that must be unemployed to preserve the market system is growing, as machinery allows less expense and greater production — two factors that spell profit. In the past, if you lost a job, odds are another would open up. Now, if you are fired, a machine takes your place, at less cost to the corporation. You stay fired. Forever.

This is what the Labor Secretary is celebrating: an unacceptable level of employment for 26 percent of America's work force, a necessity of current realities. But don't fret, the number will not always be 26 percent.

It will get even higher.

Peter Orvetti is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

This campus has been awfully quiet lately. We really would like to hear from you.

Come down to the basement and fill our mailbox. Wouldn't you love 19,000 people to read what you have to say? Thought so.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please type your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

The Editorial/Opinion page will occasionally print guest columns, but arrangements must be made in advance. If you feel you have a unique perspective on an issue of general interest, contact the Ed/Op staff before you submit anything longer than a standard letter.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Arts & Living

MTV: Let's talk about sexual attitudes & AIDS

Christian Slater to host cable special focusing on 'real' people

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

AIDS is a disease that affects everyone. Acquired immune deficiency syndrome is colorblind and non-selective. It breaks down the barriers between race, sex, age, sexual preference, ethnics, classes and religion.

On Tuesday, September 27, from 10 to 11 p.m. EST, MTV will premiere "Smart Sex," a one-hour ground- breaking television special with straightforward talk about sexual choices.

Hosted by Christian Slater, the program features eleven 18 to 25-year-olds talking openly about their sexual experiences and attitudes in the age of HIV and other sexually transmitted diseases.

Fact. The World Health Organization estimates that more than three million people worldwide have developed AIDS and that more than 14 million have been infected with human immunodeficiency virus, the virus that causes AIDS.

It is estimated that nearly one million Americans are currently infected with HIV. As of December 1993, there were 361,164 cases of AIDS reported in the United States. Of those, 220,763 have died.

Fact. In 1992, AIDS became the second leading cause of death among young women ages 13-24, 49 percent of reported AIDS cases were due to heterosexual transmission.

A 1991 study by the National Center for Health Statistics revealed that only 28 percent of individuals polled believed that latex condoms are very effective as a means of preventing transmission of HIV.

How many of us have read these facts before and either ignored them or filed them under "it couldn't happen to me?" A lot, according to the growing number of heterosexuals contracting AIDS/HIV every year.

"Smart Sex" features young adults from across the country talking to each other about relationships, about what people are doing and not doing, and about self-respect.

"How many of us have read [facts about AIDS] before and either ignored them or filed them under "it–couldn't–happen–to–me"? A lot, according to the growing number of heterosexuals contracting the disease every year."

The program has no doctors or authority figures and it is designed not to preach. The 11 young people chosen represent all aspects of today's society from straight to gay in a variety of sexual relationships: single and safely playing the field; promiscuous and refusing to use condoms; HIV- positive and practicing safer sex; and choosing abstinence for now.

Some of the 11 people on the special include:

Jamel, 23, and his cousin Emile, 20, two students at the University of New Mexico, who praise women for carrying condoms. They talk about growing up in Boston, learning about dating, and past experiences when they ignored safe sexual practice.

Bill, a 19-year-old from New York is a DJ who has had multiple partners and believes that HIV doesn't concern him. He claims that he can tell which of his partners might carry or be exposed to HIV.

Matt, 23, and Vicki, 18 are two college students from Florida who discuss their serious and fulfilling relationship, one that does not include sexual intercourse.

They discuss their past sexual histories and how they are dealing with the pressures society places on sex and relationships.

Carol, an HIV–positive mother from New York City stated that she would sew a condom on her son to ensure he practices safe sex. When Carol was pregnant she went to the doctor for a pre–natal check up.

He suggested she also take an HIV test. Carol was initially insulted because she felt that AIDS and HIV was a disease for gay men and intravenous drug users. After taking the test it revealed she was HIV– positive. Fortunately her son continues to test negative.

Tammy is a 24–year–old from Southern California who has had many sexual partners, rarely practices safe sex, and has contracted several STDs. But, because of counseling from friends, Tammy has chosen to become a "secondary virgin." She feels her decision gives her more control over her life and earns respect from her peers.

Dwayne is a 19–year–old gay man from New York who is a freshman at Pace University. He formally "came out" three years ago and his family has been very supportive. He has few partners and always insists on safe sex.

With the ever increasing rate of sexual activities comes the comparable rate of STDs. By age 20, 86 percent of men and 77 percent of women will have had sexual intercourse; however, only 17 percent of heterosexuals age 18 and older who have had multiple sex partners always use condoms.

AIDS is now the second leading cause of death among all 25 to 44–year–olds, many of whom were probably infected during their teens and early 20s.

"In presenting 'Smart Sex' on MTV, we hope to raise awareness among young adults about making safer sexual choices," Judy McGarth, president of MTV, said in a press release on the show. "By sharing some of these young adults' stories with our viewers, we hope to encourage them to take steps to protect themselves."

During "Smart Sex," viewers have the opportunity to call the toll–free Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and the National AIDS Hotline number (1–800–342– 2437) to ask questions and receive additional information about HIV prevention.

COURTESY MTV NETWORKS

Dwayne, a gay man who refuses to have unprotected sex, is one of the voices featured on MTV's "Smart Sex."

COURTESY MTV NETWORKS

The special also showcases Matt & Vickie, who have decided to postpone sexual intercourse for now.

COURTESY MTV NETWORKS

Lakita speaks of her decision at 13 to delay sex until marriage on the program as well.

If "Smart Sex" has any goals, the show's creators stress, it is to increase awareness about AIDS/HIV, educate people on how to prevent contracting of all STDs, and open up lines of communication that have been shut down or were non-existent between parents and children, friends, lovers and everyone in between.

Dr. Chitti Babu, renowned Indian musician to play AC

Dr. Chitti Babu, one of the most talented and outstanding musicians of India, will bring his rare and special talent to Amherst College's Buckley Auditorium tonight at 7:30 p.m.

Babu has mastered the Veena, an ancient and popular string instrument of South India. His music, which has been called everything from "divine" to "enchanting" to "inspiring," is sure to be a rare treat for residents of the Pioneer Valley area.

The event is free and open to all and is sponsored by the Foreign Student Program of Hampshire College, the music department of Amherst College, the South Asia Music & Dance Program of UMass, Saptaswara and the Society for Indian Music.

For more information, call 256–6410.

— Jon Lupo

This fall, Hills is Shannen–free

By Adam Scott Roberts
Collegian Staff

"I feel like an outsider," explains Tori Spelling's character to Nat at the Peach Pit in an upcoming episode of "Beverly Hills, 90210."

"Like, everyone is having sex but me. Brenda slept with Dylan, who slept with half of California, and who is now sleeping with Kelly, who deflowered Steve, and is now sleeping with Brandon, who slept with many, and it just seems like all my friends have slept with each other."

Well, this isn't exactly an excerpt from the show, but it could be considering the stories planned on the what is the fifth and surely not the last season of "Beverly Hills, 90210." The show has achieved ultra–cheese status and avid viewers know it.

So, why do teens and young adults across the nation flock to television sets, set their VCRs to tape it, and purchase every publication under the sun when a "90210"–er is being talked about? Because we love trash and trash sells, so it seems that "90210" could last well into the later half of this decade.

With the show going Shannen–less, people have already seemed to forget the Hills' bitch of all bitches, who pleaded with Dylan in the season finale: "Dylan, please give me something to come back to." But isn't Brenda back–stabbing Kelly, who in the previous year back–stabbed her with the same man? Well, Brenda is someone who doesn't care.

Besides, what comes around goes around and that includes Kelly, who kept herself busy with Brandon, who will backstab his own best friend, Dylan, by sleeping with Kelly in a clandestine Washington Summer Romance which will continue. Gee, it seems that "90210" writers enjoy recycling old storylines with different characters.

At any rate, the Shannen–less show is thrusting forward leaving viewers saying "Brenda who?" The new queen bee in town is East Coaster Valerie Malone (Tiffani Amber– Thiessan, of "Saved by The Bell: The College Years" and real life squeeze to Brian Austin Green). She isn't wasting anytime in her new zip code, as she is already a drug user, flirtatious roommate to Brandon, and anti–Mr. and Mrs. Walsh (except for when given a credit card to buy a dress for Donna's debut!)

And now, the new vixen is about to get cozier in Brenda's clothes and bedroom by going after Brenda's ex. Valerie is the girl we all wanted mupy Brenda to be and now Thiessan has already successfully allowed us to love and hate her at the same time. She's accomplished all of this in less than two episodes of the new season — leaving Brenda in the dust, or actually London fog.

Remember Claire (Kathleen Robertson)? Well, she's the new Emily Valentine, who is going to come back to haunt the gang over at CU. I just seen trying to get Brandon in on some erotic S & M, she'll return this season as what I'll predict as the Sydney Andrews of this part of town and spice up some things on campus this year. It's ironic that "90210" producers are now using the same techniques used to attract viewers to the "90210" spin–off "Melrose Place," on their original show to get things back on track.

Overall, "90210" has maintained most of its viewers and most likely will continue holding on to the wants and likes of its audience. Even though the show is cheesy, what are the options, anyway? The OJ Trial? "Hard Copy?" This piece of cheese is still the show with the most taste and zing (along with "Melrose" of course). Now there is some stimulating television.

HUGE SAVINGS AT THE NEW SALVATION ARMY SUPER THRIFT STORE
STUDENT DISCOUNT EVERY THURSDAY ON CLOTHING 50% OFF WITH ID
159 N. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA • 253-4747

Eating Disorder Programs • 1994/95
Sponsored by University Health Services
Eating Disorder Treatment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.
Friends and Family Group
Single session for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.
Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Mondays (except holidays) 4:30-6:00 p.m. Campus Center Room Number posted by elevator
Peer Health Connections
A confidential phoneline for help around eating disorders - yourself or someone you know 549-2671, ext. 168.

Undergraduate Football Season Tickets
will be available for pickup starting today from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. at the Curry Hicks Cage box office with a valid I.D.

TRY FRIENDSHIP, TRY FUN, TRY SISTERHOOD, TRI SIGMA!
The SISTERS OF SIGMA SIGMA SIGMA invite all University women to Fall Rush!
9/21 OPEN HOUSE (at Mill Valley) 8 - 10 p.m.
9/22 MEXICAN FIESTA (at ATT) 6:30 - 8:30 p.m.
9/25 BBQ (at ATT) 12 - 3 p.m.
*ATT is located at 375 N. Pleasant St.
For more information check the personals or call Pam at 253-0854

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
for travel beginning November 1
One Way / Roundtrip
LONDON $183 $345
PARIS $214 $428
MADRID $250 $500
SAN JOSE/ COSTA RICA $224 $448
TOKYO Roundtrip $749
Fares from over 75 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia. Some tickets valid to one year. Most tickets allow changes. Eurailpasses issued on the spot.
Customs, immigration & departure taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student ID cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave. NY, NY 10173
800-272-9676
212-986-8420*
*in NYC

The ALANA Lecture Series
PRESENTS
JOHN TRUDELL
Native American Activist
THURSDAY
SEPTEMBER 22, 1994
7:30PM
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
Free and Open to the Campus and Public
SPONSORED BY: THE OFFICE OF THIRD WORLD AFFAIRS

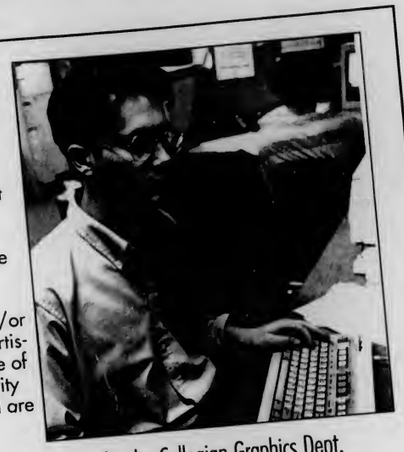
TOTAL FITNESS WITHOUT WAITING IN LINE
AEROBICS: Funk, REEBOK STEP, Hi/Low, Boxercise, Yoga
STRENGTH: Keiser Air Power, NAUTILUS, Olympic weights, GRAVITRON, The Treadwall
CARDIO: STAIRMASTERS, LifeCycles • LifeRower, Treadmills • BioCycles, Climb Max • NordicTrack, Lifesteps • Crossrobic
SEMESTER SPECIAL $139 four months
Amherst Athletic Club 460 West St. South Amherst 256-0080

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

has openings in the Graphics and News Departments. We are looking for dedicated, hard working students interested in getting involved with the largest college daily in New England.

GRAPHICS



Having experience using the industry standard equipment and software is essential in acquiring good employment after graduation.

The Graphics Dept. has openings in the Advertising Production Dept.

Applicants should have experience and/or serious interest in advertising and advertising production, as well as a knowledge of Macintosh computer systems (familiarity with QuarkXpress and Aldus Freehand are helpful but not required).

For more information or for an application stop by the Collegian Graphics Dept.
103 Campus Center Basement • 545-1864 • Ask for Andrew Davidson or Jim Ganley

NEWSROOM

More and more, employers are looking for experienced journalists out of college.

New England area newspapers clearly recognize the Massachusetts Daily Collegian as a first-rate University publication.

The following Editorships are open for Fall 1994:

Black Affairs Editor
Multicultural Affairs Editor
Women's Issues Editor
Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Business Editor
Developing Nations Editor

For more information or for an application stop by the Collegian Newsroom
113 Campus Center Basement • 545-0719 • Ask for Darienne Hosley or Art Stapleton, Jr.

© 1994 Citibank South Dakota, N.A.

HOW TO SAVE A FEW BUCKS.
(YOU CAN'T LIVE OFF PSYCH EXPERIMENTS ALONE.)

- Buy pizza at closing time. Haggle for slices they'd otherwise just throw away.
- Eat Ramen noodles.
- Make friends with a Senior. Come June, they'll be more than glad to give you their old Poly Sci books and couches.
- Donate blood. Save a life and get a free lunch to boot.
- Pick up a Citibank Classic card. There's no annual fee.

WE'RE LOOKING OUT FOR YOU.℠
To apply, call 1-800-CITIBANK.

Apply for the Citibank Classic card by completing the application in this issue or by calling 1- 800 - CITIBANK

Gain Valuable "Real World" Experience on Campus!

The Collegian Business Office is looking for ambitious, organized Sophomore SOM majors for the position of

Associate Business Manager

Direct supervision received from the Collegian business manager, as well as the assistant business manager. Applications may be obtained at:

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center (the basement)

Resumes and cover letters may be directed to:

Michael McRae, Business Manager

Application Deadline: October 17

The Collegian is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer

---

BE A TEACHER. BE A HERO.
Call 1-800-45-TEACH.

A Public Service of The Advertising Council
Reach for the Power TEACH America

Biochemistry & Molecular Biology
Fall Counseling and Information Session

All freshmen, transfers, and students interested in a Biochemistry & Molecular Biology major should attend!!

TONIGHT at 7 PM !!!!!
Math Lounge 1634 LGRT-C

IF YOU HAVEN'T YET, NOW IS THE TIME!

Register now through September 26 for over 200 evening credit courses and noncredit workshops.

University of Massachusetts/Amherst
Division of Continuing Education
Goodell Building
545-2414

A quality education at affordable prices

WE WANT YOU!!!
to be a
HEARING BOARD MEMBER

If You...
- are interested in Campus Leadership
- wish to improve your communication and listening skills
- are a full time student
- have at least a 2.0 G.P.A.
- are not on Judicial Sanction

Apply now to be a Hearing Board Member:
Training Held Oct. 18, 19, & 20
7:00 p.m. - 10:00 p.m.

Applications available at
RESIDENTIAL CLUSTER OFFICES &
THE DEAN OF STUDENTS OFFICE
227 WHITMORE

ANY QUESTIONS?
CONTACT:
Paul Vasconcellos, Assistant Dean of Students
Dean of Students Office • Whitmore • 545-2684

LSAT +7.5
GMAT +72
GRE +214
MCAT +6

Small Classes, Documented Highest Results, Guaranteed.

413 584-6849

Course Sites:
Mt. Holyoke College, Smith College, Williams College, MCAT - Umass.

THE PRINCETON REVIEW
We Score More

ETS and Princeton University are not affiliated with The Princeton Review

---

Auto Reverse Double Deck!

Artistry in Sound
ONKYO TAR-W313 CASSETTE
Sale $209.
Sound & Music
Millbank Place • 351 Pleasant Street • Northampton
584-9547 • VISA & MasterCard accepted

Research Interviewers
Day and Evening Hours
No Selling Involved

Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Monday–Friday, 9am–5pm, 5pm–10pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hour.

We're in the Mountain Farms Mall which is a stop on the free bus line. Interested candidates, please call between 9am–7pm, Monday–Friday, (413) 586-8635.

Abt Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An Equal Opportunity Employer.

Abt

---

26 YEARS 1968-1994
THE PUB
Fun, Food & Spirits

TONIGHT

- "A DIFFERENT TYPE OF BLUES BAND." HOLYOKE TRANSCRIPT-TELEGRAM
- "AN ECLECTIC PASSIONATE BLUES MIXTURE." "A MUST SEE." BRATTLEBORO TOWN CRIER
- "'STEELE' YOURSELF FOR SOME GREAT BLUESY 'ART'" UMASS DAILY COLLEGIAN

15 EAST PLEASANT·AMHERST

We've just made this 6-pound computer even easier to pick up.

(Buy one now, and we'll throw in all this software to help you power through college.)

ClarisWorks and the Apple Student Resource Set included when you buy a

Apple PowerBook 150 4/120.

When you weigh the options, it's quite possibly the best deal available for college students. For a limited time, buy a select Apple® PowerBook® at a special student price and get a unique new student software set available only from Apple. It's all the software you're likely to need to breeze through college. You'll get software that takes you through every aspect of writing papers, the only personal organizer/calendar created for your student lifestyle and the Internet Companion to help you tap into on-line research resources. Plus ClarisWorks, an integrated package with a word processor, database, spreadsheet and more. All with the portable computer you can use anytime, anywhere you happen to be. Apple PowerBook. And now, with an Apple Computer Loan, you can own one for less than a dollar a day.

It's the power no student should be without. The power to be your best.® Apple power through it.

UNIVERSITY STORE

CAMPUS CENTER 545-2619
M-F 9 am - 5 pm
SAT 11 am - 3 pm

Talk to Apple Representatives & see the latest MACINTOSH PRODUCTS Sept. 27 & 28, on the concourse in front of the U Store.

Offer expires October 17, 1994, available only while supplies last. © 1994 Apple Computer, Inc. All rights reserved. Apple, the apple logo, PowerBook and "The power to be your best" are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. ClarisWorks is a registered trademark of Claris Corporation. "An estimate based on an Apple Computer Loan of $1,592.17 for the PowerBook 150 shown above. Prices and loan amounts are subject to change without notice. See your Apple Campus Reseller or representative for current system prices. A 5.5% loan origination fee will be added to the requested loan amount. The interest rate is variable, based on the commercial paper rate plus 5.35%. For the month of August 1994 the interest rate was 10.10%, with an APR of 11.36%. 8-year loan term with no prepayment penalty. The monthly payment shown assumes no deferment of principal or interest. Students may defer principal payments up to 4 years, or until graduation. Deferment will change your monthly payments. The Apple Computer Loan is subject to credit approval.

CLEAR ROAD AHEAD
50
College Lanes
NEW ROUTE OPENED
10
Same
Illinois
THE UMASS CAREER CENTER
Where the Present Meets the Future
RETURN TO SCHOOL ZONE
DETOURS
50
No Limits
ONE WAY
20
CONSULT MAPS

Welcome to the Career Information Highway

. . . Where the Present Meets the Future

Options, options, options . . . your first job is not necessarily for the rest of your life.
Your career path is an open road . . . with information stops, side roads, detours, and even some U turns.

Come find out what it's all about as the Career Information Highway
comes to life in the Student Union Ballroom for the Career Center Open House
Wednesday September 21 from 10-3

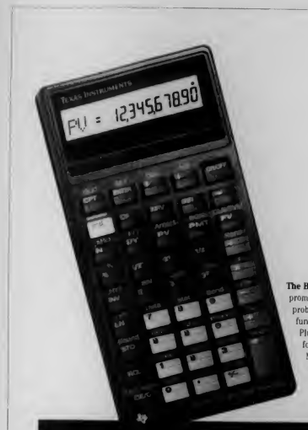
Open your mind . . . think beyond the confines of your major . . .
let the Career Center be your guide.

- Food - Fun - Prizes - Giveaways - Displays -
- Recent alums, employers ready to talk with you -
- The latest job search technology - Interview signups by phone -
-Co-ops - Internships - Career Planning Courses - Grad school information - Networking -
Don't miss this important event! First year through graduate students welcome!

$1,000 IN DOOR PRIZES!!
•40 FREE Resume Expert software packets •Autographed Celtics basketball
Coach Cal autographed UMASS basketball
Uninterrupted computer power supply donated by American Power Supply
Gift certificates from:
Aesthetics European Skin Care, Amherst Optical Shoppe, A Branch Beyond, Atticus Bookstore, Bread & Circus, House of Walsh, Kinko's, Modrian, Northern Reflections, Oasis, Pearl Street Nightclub, Zanna.
Professional Day Planner from Agway Corp., UMASS Alumni director's chair
2 Cartalk Radio Show "Roadside Assistance Packages"

you are here

Resume software provided by the Vice Chancellors of Student Affairs and University Advancement and the Deans of Humanities and Fine Arts, Social and Behavioral Sciences, Natural Science and Math, Engineering and Food and Natural Resources.



The BA II PLUS has unique display prompts that guide you through problems. It offers basic business functions like time-value-of money. Plus, it delivers cash flow analysis for internal rate of return (IRR), Net present value (NPV), Bond calculations, Depreciation, Advanced statistics.

Dollars And Sense.

Management, marketing, finance or accounting major? You know dollars and cents. Get a BA II PLUS™ Calculator from Texas Instruments. It's designed for students and professionals and recommended by professors. Or try the BA-35, our most affordable model for time-value-of-money and one-variable statistics.

If you're in the financial fast lane, TI Business Calculators make the most sense. Try one at your local TI retailer today, or for more information, call 1-800-TI-CARES.

EXTENDING YOUR REACH™

TEXAS INSTRUMENTS

e-mail: ti-cares@ti.com — In Canada, call 1-800-561-2807 — ©1994 TI 1800018

Spirit Haus
Refrigerator Rentals
256-8433
253-5384

SEMESTER MEMBERSHIP only $109

The GYM
AT MOUNTAIN FARMS MALL
Rt. 9 - Hadley • 584-2175

SYSTEMS ENGINEERS • SOFTWARE ENGINEERS • HARDWARE ENGINEERS

Information Systems and communications technology is uniquely dynamic. It continues to evolve at an accelerated pace, requiring constant innovation and encom-non expertise. From high tech wide and local area networks, interactive video, mobile communications systems, and up-to-the minute weather information to the Information Superhighway and ATM (Asynchronous Transfer Mode). GTE Government Systems Corporation is developing dual-use technologies for both commercial and government customers.

GTE Government Systems Corporation is the premier engineering component of GTE Corporation. As we move to diversify and service other GTE business units, we require engineers with the ability to create the power of technology.

ON CAMPUS INTERVIEWS
Thursday, October 20, 1994
University of Massachusetts
Amherst, MA
Resumes are due at the Mather Career Center on
September 22, 1994

THE POWER OF YOUR FUTURE

SYSTEMS ENGINEERS
Perform requirements analysis, design, integration and test of communications systems.

SOFTWARE ENGINEERS
Design, develop and test systems using relational databases, graphical user interfaces, and client/server architecture.

HARDWARE ENGINEERS
Analyze and design circuits, prototyping and simulation, bench testing, and integration with other system elements.

We offer a competitive education policy including tuition, books and fee reimbursement, health and dental insurance, employee stock and pension plan, and, at our larger facilities, on-site wellness centers, libraries and credit unions.

If we do not meet you at On Campus Interviews on the date listed above, visit the Mather Career Center to review our literature and video. Interested candidates should send their resumes to Julie Babe, College Relations, GTE Government Systems, 77 A Street, Needham Heights, MA 02194

GTE Government Systems

An equal opportunity employer M/F

Anyone can study abroad. Arriving home happy is the tricky part.

Looking forward to studying in another country? Make sure you apply to a program that can answer your questions before you get there. A program that has more than three decades of experience in handling issues as diverse as transfer credit and foreign train schedules. A program that gives you all the freedom you need to explore your new home, but that will always be there for you if you get in a jam. A program you can depend on and trust, before you go, while you're there and when you get back. Ask your study abroad advisor about Beaver College programs. Call for a free catalog today.

Study Abroad with Beaver College
1.800.755.5607

LBGA tackles 'coming out' in semester's first

By Tim White
Collegian Correspondent

The Lesbian Bisexual Gay Alliance (LBGA) at the University of Massachusetts says it welcomes newcomers, but some members say they have mixed reactions to welcoming new members who have not yet determined their sexual orientation.

During their first social meeting of the semester last night in the Campus Center, Wendy Darling, Five College chairwoman of the LBGA, explained what the organization is all about.

"We're a resource for a people in need," said Darling. "People who are having trouble with their identity. We get a lot of freshmen and sophomores."

Sophomore Erica Millner, an undecided major who was attending her first LBGA meeting, said large groups are not the best for coming out.

"I think [coming out] is better on a personal level," said Millner. "But I don't think it's a great idea in a huge group."

Millner said she had a negative experience in a teen organization similar to the LBGA when she was coming out which she said causes her to be skeptical of organizations similar to the LBGA for coming out.

Ali Davis, political chair for the LBGA and junior economics major, said it is a personal decision whether or not to use the LBGA as part of the process.

"For person X coming into this organization who is shy, this may be a little overwhelming for them," said Davis.

He also said forcing members out of the closet is not tolerated within the LBGA. He said it is not acceptable to say to a member, "You're in the closet, but you won't be tomorrow."

Amy Gould, a three year member of the LBGA, agrees with Davis that it is a personal decision of whether to use the organization when coming out.

■ health care

continued from page 3

find employment.

She also urged the audience to encourage their state representatives to push for a single-payer system in Massachusetts.

"Single-payer won't eliminate racism, won't eliminate sexism, but it will eliminate discrimination on the basis of being able to pay. Health care decisions must be based on care, not on profit. That's the bottom line," said Gregory. "If single-payer has a chance at all, it's at the state level."

A representative of New York City's Chinatown Health Center also spoke last night, stressing the need for the health care system to be accessible and understandable to people who don't speak English.

"Healthy, Wealthy and Wise" continues Friday when Bernard Sanders, the only independent member of the U.S. House of Representatives, discusses single-payer care at Hampshire College's Franklin Patterson lecture hall at 3 p.m.

■ Haiti

continued from page 1

fere in Haiti's domestic affairs. In Washington, Gen. John Shalikashvili, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, warned the risk of violence was high and said, "We can be taking casualties at any moment."

A day after soldiers of the 10th Mountain Division, from Fort Drum, N.Y., began landing at the Port-au-Prince airport, Marines extended the U.S. military operation to Cap-Haitien, Haiti's second largest city.

About 1,600 Marines came ashore in armored amphibious vehicles, helicopters and Hovercraft. As in the capital Monday, Haitian police cooperated with the American troops.

U.S. troops in Port-au-Prince appeared to be concentrating on consolidating defense positions and supply depots. Convoys moved between the port, airport, an industrial park and a warehouse district where the Americans were setting up bases.

The Marines' objective was to secure the port and airport at Cap-Haitien, a city of 65,000 people, then move inland to take control of two roads and two bridges. Later in the day, they were expected to move farther into town to locations by a Haitian army barracks and several police outposts and a prison.

While street clashes escalated in Port-au-Prince, most parts of the capital were quiet. Many people were still holed up with relatives out of town waiting for the dust to settle.

■ Trudell

continued from page 1

killed. In the early 1980s he published a book of poems and released three albums of his poetry accompanied by the music of guitarist Jesse Ed Davis. Another album is expected this spring.

Acosta said he is very excited about Trudell's visit because it will give students an opportunity to learn more about the Native American culture from a native's perspective. He is hoping people will couple this lecture with the pow wow scheduled for this weekend to help educated themselves.

"Theirs is a great culture with a great richness," said Acosta. "But, there is also great suffering."

The ALANA Lecture Series was created last year to provide a continual effort to educate the University community about multiculturalism and diversity. It also identifies the true leaders who are not able to speak to a wide audience.

"We speak about diversity and yet we still don't know what it is," said Acosta. "The lecture series is part of the process of empowering ourselves."

Trudell will be speaking at 7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. Admission is free.

■ Carter

continued from page 1

ambassadors from North and South Korea.

Carter's energetic efforts make it easier to forgive stubbornness, frankness and an apparent hunger for the spotlight, officials said privately.

"The wonderful thing is that, working from differing perspectives, we achieved a terrific result," a senior White House official, speaking on condition of anonymity, told reporters.

But many Clinton advisers had a hard time containing themselves when Carter returned from the mission and criticized the White House. Press secretary Dee Dee Myers was asked Tuesday about Carter's opposition to the embargo.

"President Carter may have a different view of that," she said flatly. "It's certainly his right."

Aides bristled when he made the wee-hour arrangements with CNN, before Clinton's news conference the next morning. Some questioned whether he exceeded his mandate in negotiating with the military leaders. Others said he sounded naive and pious.

The same complaints were heard from an otherwise grateful White House when Carter interceded in June to defuse the North Korean crisis.

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

THE FEARLESS SPACEMAN SPIFF IS BEING PURSUED ACROSS THE GALAXY BY DREADED SCUM BEINGS!
THEY'RE GAINING! SPIFF'S ONLY CHANCE TO LOSE THEM IS TO RELEASE A GIANT SMOKE CLOUD BEHIND HIS SPACECRAFT! OUR HERO THROWS THE LEVER!
HEH HEH. JUST UH, CLAMPING THE ERASERS. HEH HEH... (COUGH)
YOU AGAIN?
SIGHHHH I CAN'T BELIEVE IT'S NOT EVEN 8:30 YET.

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

PULLED BY SPACEMAN SPIFF, PLANET 6 IS ABOUT TO COLLIDE WITH PLANET 5!
WITH NO TIME TO LOSE, OUR HERO CUTS LOOSE THE ANCHOR AND FLIES TO SAFETY!
THE PLANETS CRASH, GRINDING AND SHATTERING WITH AWFUL FORCE! PLANET 5, BLING SMALLER, IS CRUNCHED TO DUST! ONLY 6 REMAINS.
6:15 6
TIME! PASS YOUR PAPERS FORWARD!
TIME?! I JUST FINISHED THE FIRST PROBLEM!

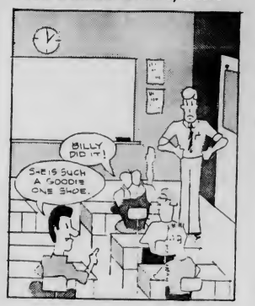
Jim's Journal By Jim

Today Tony told Steve that I couldn't whistle.
Without responding, Steve put his fingers in his mouth and whistled really loud.
Then Tony did the same thing.

Wouldn't you love to see your own comic strip here?

Bring a sample of your work down
to the Daily Collegian offices
ask for Arthur Stapleton Jr.,
Managing Editor

Land Without...Pairs By J. Earle



The Far Side By Gary Larson

"Don't eat the flippers, Zeke, or they'll know we're tourists."

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

IS IT? IT IS! IT'S SATURDAY! OH BOY!
NO SCHOOL! NO HOMEWORK! JUST CARTOONS AND FUN THE WHOLE DAY LONG!
WOOPAY!
TURN ON THE TV! GET OUT THE CEREAL!
IT'S SAAAAT URDAY!
YOU'RE GETTING UP?! IT'S BARELY LIGHT OUT!
I'M GOING TO THE OFFICE AND GET SOME SLEEP.

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Fish Munchies	CharredChicken Sand.
Slop Sloppy Joe	Baked Ziti
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Seaweed Munchies	Roman Rice and Beans
Vegan Sloppy Joe	Baked Ziti

Quote of the Day

"Ninety-eight percent of the adults in this country are decent, hard-working, honest Americans. It's the other lousy two percent that get all the publicity. But then – we elected them.

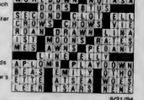
—Lily Tomlin

Daily Crossword
Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

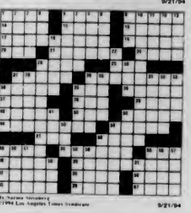
ACROSS
1 Terminus of all roads?
5 Mets' stadium
9 Slack-jawed
14 "— or Lowhand..."
15 Have on
16 "Mr. Television"
17 Photographer's order
19 Filch
20 Historical period
21 Most unusual
23 — and Means Committee
24 Club fees
25 Prospector's find
27 Contempt
29 Hypnotic light of the 70s
34 Avoids
35 Kernel holder
36 Senior
37 Pro ingredient
38 Sinners
39 "And — bed": Peeyrs
40 Does a— publishing job
42 — day now!
43 Dealt with
44 Safety device on a door
48 Photos
47 Yes ain't
48 Twist
49 Drinks slowly
52 Scoundrel
55 Pod
58 Religious sect
60 Rob Reiner order
62 Former Beatle
63 Egg part
64 Precip
65 Author Chesnov
66 Cote ownership
67 Raggedy Ann's friend

DOWN
1 Go up
2 Bridge expert Sharif
3 Poet Angelou
4 Business letter abbr
5 Ingrid Bergman's homeland
6 Obeys
7 Slack
8 War god
9 Weight lifter's concern
10 Greeting card order
11 — of expertise
12 — ball!
13 Sneakers swimmers
18 Time worked
22 Mozart —
24 Monopoly order
26 "Norma —"
27 "Evening —"
28 Famous French physicist
29 "Bonanza" star Greene
30 Newspaper advice giver
31 Take in one's own
32 — and bounds
33 Nudge
34 Chronographer's concern
35 West Virginia product
41 Reserved
43 Chef Julia
45 "— the land of the free"
46 Moves along briskly
48 Libra's prop
49 Poet Teasdale
50 "— Love with a Wonderful Guy"
51 Two cups
53 "— saw ..."
54 Pack away
55 Actress Cannon
56 Surrounded by
57 Refuse to consider true
59 Sweetie
61 Bikini top

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



9/21/94



9/21/94

The Far Side By Gary Larson

Fish rides

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Tracy Monahan
Copy Editor.....Caleb Cochran
Photo Technician.....Nathan Martin
Production Supervisor.....Greg Iafrate
Production.....Kori Carter, Kevin Farrar, Marni Heifner

Classifieds

• 20¢ per word per day for students
• All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
• Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ACTIVITIES

Free bridge lessons. UMass Bridge Club: 9 lessons free book-free T-shirt. Weekly Thur 4-6pm. Start 9/22. Bluewall. Chris 549-4411

Chi Omega open house rush parties
Tues 9/20 6pm-9pm
Wed 9/21 6pm-9pm
Dessert night
Sat 9/24 5:30pm-7:30pm
Please contact Lauren at 549-4351 or Steph at 549-5789 for transportation or any additional information. Come up to Chi O because it makes no difference if we're not on fraternity row!

Hey all UMass women! Alpha Epsilon Phi wants you! Come check us out tonight from 7-9pm and Saturday 11-1pm at the campus center! We'll be looking for you! Questions call Emily at 256-8701 or Laurie at 549-7980

Sunny days washing the clouds away. Delta Zeta fall rush '94. Sept. 21 7:30pm Sept25 12-2pm. Sept 27 6-8pm. Sept 29 6-8pm. Oct 3 7-9pm. Can you tell me how to get how to get to Phillips St?

Sunshine, scandal, & Sigma. Join the jesters of Tri Sigma for 90210 and Melrose Inc. Open rush tonight at Mill Valley. All University women are welcome. Call Pam for a ride 253-0854

Try something new, try something different, try sigma. Open rush tonight at Alpha Tau Gamma (375 N. Pleasant St.) at 6:30pm-9:30pm. Any questions or need a ride call Pam at 253-0854

UMass Women a lax Hockey is back Season starts soon. For information call Cheri 549-7278.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

If you Delta Tau Invites all university women to attend an open house this evening from 8-10. We're located at 409 N. Pleasant St. Call Erstin at 549-73611

There the Alpha Chi Omega experience. Found out what we are all about? Come join us at our fall rush party- Alpha Chi land, Tuesday Sept. 20 6-8pm

Thinking about coming back for more? or planning on visiting us for the first time? Either way you are invited to Alpha Chi Omega for our second rush party- Stadium Night. We are looking forward to seeing you from 5:30-7:30 on Wednesday, Sept. 21

BOXING LESSONS

Recreational and competitive boxing lessons for men and women with retired professional © Dyana Bumpus. 549-5752

CHRISTIANS

Alliance Christian Fellowship adds value and balance to your UMass education. We're committed to personal discipleship training, outreach and spirit-filled fellowship and fun. FRIDAYS: Timeout Fellowship 7pm Campus Center
Orthodox Christians and friends are invited divine liturgy Saturday Sept 24th 10am Chapin Hall, Amherst College

C.A.S.H. FOR COLLEGE

Do you need $$$ for college??? We have the solution. Guaranteed results. Write to: Corporate Scholarship Service, 2 Clairmont Terrace East, N. Reading MA 01864 for free details

COMPUTERS

BK Computers & Associates whole systems. Parts including monitors, drives, cards and more. Free estimate 549-4367

FOR RENT

Fridge rentals 253-9742 free delivery

Single room for rent at Alpine Commons $274 all inclusive, on bus route, call Tom 256-0674

Two rooms in private home. $300 each per month. Kitchen privileges- kosher/ vegetarian preferred. Laundry, parking, furnished. 549-4853

FOR SALE AUDIO

Stereo equipment! used/ reconditioned, area's largest selection, priced to sell! Also tv's, vcr's, dj/ pa equipment, instruments etc. We buy , sell, trade. Call SAV Exchange, 9am-9pm. 256-0941

FOR SALE

Computer- IBM compatible 386SX 16mHz incl. monitor, keyboard, mouse, drive, printer, windows 3.1, dos 6.0 good condition. Will sell cheap! 4 info 548-0424

Dead tickets Boston 9/28 - 9/29 $50 call 586-2364 or b/o

Designer clothing for women. Thrift shop prices. Will deliver. 413-323-8624

IBM XT 286 - 10 meg, color monitor. Excellent for hooking up to a TAU. $250 call 549-3450

Large dorm fridge 5 cu ft $100 Fred 549-7724

Macintosh computer Complete system including printer only $500! Call Chris at 800-289-5885.

Panasonic printer KX-p2123 Great shape. Free color kit $175 or b/o 546-3713

Rollerblades 7 1/2 umm new $100. Sasha 2 540 549-8346

Solid oak triple dresser
Excellent condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253-9264

Store bought loft. Paid $175 will sell for $85 or b/o 549-1518

Tandy computer system w/ drives, monitor. Tons of software. Asking 325 or b/o Call Joe 5-2748

Toshiba T1200 laptop with mouse + word and star NX-1001 multifont printer. Call Alex 549-8114 with best offer.

Want to trade Macclassic for comparable or cell Liz 545-1378 days. 714-3129 eve

Washer and electric dryer. Great for students. Will deliver to you. $700/ John 549-7166 256-8388

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass and jewelry repairs, great earrings, gifts from glass to gold, custom designed jewelry. Silverscape Designs 264 N. Pleasant St. Amherst. 253-3374

FREE

Free hamster with cage looking for a good home! Leave message 8-7301

HELP WANTED

$363.60. Sell funny college T-shirts. Profit $363.60. Risk free. Choose from 19 designs. Free catalogs. 1-800-700-4290

Babysitter/ mother's helper in Amherst. Sat and/ or Sun mornings 8:30-12:30 more experience, car, non-smoking $5/hr. Call Robin 253-0660 9am-9pm please

Boston Globe subscriptions - delivery and marketing help wanted. Marketing 1st three weeks. Flex hours. Delivery an all semester. All well paid! Call 298-1021

Cruise ships now hiring - earn up to $2000+/ month working on cruise ships or land tour companies. World travel. Seasonal and full time employment available. No experience necessary for more information call 1-206-634-0468 ext C50011

Drivers wanted! Earn $8-$12/hour 11-2 or 4-11. No prep work! Call Delivery Express 549-9077

Drivers wanted - Trattoria Grepetto Italian restaurant, 1127 N. Pleasant St. Amherst. Apply in person after 3:00 pm 549-7777

Earn $25 in 2 hours. Seniors and first year grads wanted for research study dealing with the GRE. Call Sharon 256-8092

Jobs for the environment - Grassroots political organizing. Earn $40-50/day. Very flexible hours/ casual atmosphere. Call Alex 256-0434

Part time manager trainee - Firestone needs assistant manager. Flexible work schedule/20-25 hours/week. Call Frank in Northampton at 586-1584 ($8/hour)

Part time technical position available. Computer experience a plus. 549-0701

Receive up to 268.000 dollars in 7-8 months! For your amazing free report call 413-525-5480 Mon-Fri 8am-5pm

Resort jobs earn up $12/hr and tips. Theme parks, hotels, spas, + more. Tropical + in contiguous destinations worldwide! (206) 632-0150 ext R50011

Spring Break '95 Sell trips, earn cash and go free!!! Student travel services is now hiring campus representatives! Lowest rates to Jamaica, Cancun, Daytona and Panama City Beach. Call 1-800-648-4849

Telefund is hiring; where else can you get around: talk on the phone, and earn $5.50 per hour? Great experience. Flexible hours call 549-3589 or stop by our office in the basement of Memorial Hall.

Telemarketing Services and developer classifieds advertising in the MA, CT, NY markets for the Advocate + weekly newspapers. Customer service and communication skills required. $6/hr. Flexible school use. Call Steve at: 800-447-4788.

Wanted! America's fastest growing travel company seeking individuals to promote trips: Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida! Earn free travel, fantastic pay. 1-800-426-7710

Workaway position available $5.50 -15 hrs/wk. Flexible office work for public foundation. Call Nancy at Peace Development Fund 256-8305.

Workstudy positions available in Sport Management. Must have computer skills and office experience preferred. Apply at 1 Curry Hicks. 5-0441

MUSICIANS

Student alumni relations is looking for musicians and singers for a band to play in our activities. For info call Robert/ Karen 5-7317/ 549-7698

Wanted Drummer. Call 756-1998

NEED A RIDE

Need a ride to Boston on Friday. Sharing expenses. Call Dilsel 546-5381

PERSONALS

Delta Zeta open rush. Wednesday 7-9pm. !! Phillips St. Questions? Call Carrie 549-7341

Female singers wanted!!! For experienced acappella group: all styles of song; auditions Wed. 21st 7:00pm. rm 150 FAC. 7222 4432

Happy 20th Luis Love Andrea
I love you for always.

Happy Birthday Scott.
Try not to get too high on sunflower seeds! Best wishes! --Marissa

Hey Baby. I've seen you at the Hatch. I've seen you at the Bluewall. I've even seen you at the Whitmore Snackbar (my personal favorite). I've come to the conclusion that you like to eat, not that anyone could ever tell by your Daily Pantaneque figure. If you want to know what it's like to chow down with the best, respond here. Don't miss your chance at greatness.
Ricky.
Good luck with the trial
-Vince

PINNOCHIO'S

Hiring driver; full or part time. Call 256-1110 or stop by 30 Bolkwood Walk. Ask for Bob

RESUME WRITING

We specialize in writing resumes and cover letters. Over a decade of experience, close to campus. 549-0367

ROOM WANTED

Attention students - Anyone who has 8 weeks in the Central area and would like to switch for a single in the Southwest area, please call Cheryl at 546-7296.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female roommate wanted to share a large bedroom in a three bedroom condo. Partially furnished $240 a month. For more info call 256-4968

RUSH SIGMA KAPPA

Have a favorite t-shirt? Well wear it to Sigma Kappa tonight. It's a t-shirt night! Games, prizes, munchies. All women stop by 19 Allen St. from 9-9pm. No invitation required. 256-0887

SERVICES

I'll sew for you Alterations, buttons, hems, repairs. Call Allison 549-0763

Model search The 1994 Glamour Models national model search continues. Local rep shoots now being conducted by First Impressions Photography. Beginners and experienced models. Mimes, fatigues, all categories welcome. 617-523-0367.

SCHOLARSHIPS

Apply for private scholarships - we guarantee one or your money back - price $4500 - for more information call Janice 585-0872

WANTED

Attn. Drama and modernist performers: 2 UMass alumni seek medieval performers, jugglers, armourer to oversee games of skill and inspire guests at their local 15th century wedding. Please have costume and desire for a good time. Billy/ Irene 584-4703

Campus representative - Kodak products giving break from "guaranteed" black prices + incentives. Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica, Padre + Florida. We handle the bookkeeping. You handle the sales. Call 1-800-222-4432

SAVE SPANKY 8 yr cute male beagle needs a home. Well trained. Call Kent 549-8555

FOR 26 WAYS to help save the EARTH CALL 1-800-488-8887.

Ad Council — A Public Service of This Publication — Earth Share

TAKE THE KEYS. CALL A CAB. TAKE A STAND.

FRIENDS DON'T LET FRIENDS DRIVE DRUNK

Ad Council — U.S. Department of Transportation

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Attend a special meeting even if not in the mood — it could have a huge impact on your professional or personal future. A romantic relationship is strengthened without your realizing it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An exciting career development sends your income or earning power soaring. Do nothing to jeopardize your reputation for reliability. A well-planned project will get the green light later today. Assemble your own team.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You have good ideas on the best way to tackle a home-related task. A take-charge attitude will work wonders! There may be a financial reason behind a canceled date. Show resolve.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Despite some petty aggravations, you will enjoy rubbing elbows with the members of a trendy group. Join forces with someone who can help your career or financial prospects. Anchor your genius in practical work.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Remarkable mental rapport could send your love life in a new direction. You will know when to speak up and to whom! Today also favors discussion of legal matters. Voice your views with confidence.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): If you want to sell property, this is a good day to show it; and if you want to buy, now is also a great time to look. Tie up loose ends tonight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Today's events point out the importance of keeping a close eye on joint financial interests, tax payments and credit matters. Let others know you respect their views. An unusual trip brings a wealth of insight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): In one way or another, the job scene could introduce you to a new romantic interest. Take an aerobics class or a daily walk if worried about a lack of exercise. Speak with a noted author.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): This is not a good day to try putting your foot down at home. Seize an opportunity to promote domestic harmony. Zero in on athletic or social events that younger family members will enjoy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An old complaint may resurface between you and your mate. It is up to you to promote accord. Artistic pursuits enjoy better influences than legal endeavors now. Turn your attention to creative projects.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Steer clear of risky financial ventures involving your friends. You can make much better investment advice elsewhere! Your social life is on the upswing.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A family powwow will produce a wise decision regarding a property matter or major domestic change. You discover that your partner is in agreement with you on basic issues. Be willing to make concessions.

Sports

Women's Division I ISAA Top 20 Poll

1 N Carolina	6 Duke	11 Connecticut	16 Washington
2 Portland	7 Virginia	12 Wisconsin	17 SMU
3 Notre Dame	8 Hartford	13 William & Mary	18 Dartmouth
4 Stanford	9 St Mary's	14 Santa Clara	19 Washington St
5 UMass	10 George Mason	15 Maryland	20 Boston College

Borges emerges from shadow for field hockey

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

Coming out from the shadow.

The first thing anyone mentions in regards to Danielle Borges' senior season is her chance to come out of the shadow.

The shadow was cast by Jenn Salisbury and Tara Jelley. The two All-Americans led the UMass offense for the past two seasons, while Borges remained anonymous to many observers.

But with the graduation of Salisbury and Jelley, the spotlight has fallen on Borges, and so far she has shined in it.

A year ago, Borges scored five goals and added one assist. In only three games so far this season, she already has four goals and two assists. But it is more than just the statistics, as Borges has truly emerged as a dominant offensive player.

"I think she realizes that it is her opportunity," said Minutewomen Coach Megan Donnelly. "The team is really looking for her step up. In past years there's always been those other offensive players. This season she's the one everyone's looking to."

"It's hard to play with two superstars," said Borges. "They are good friends of mine off the field, but I was hesitant and followed their lead. This year I feel free to do my own thing, and not worry about getting in their way."

Her emergence started in spring practice and continued into the summer trip to Ireland.

"You could always tell that she had the ability. I just think people overlooked her," said Donnelly. "She got off to such a fast start. In Ireland, she really stepped it up big."

Unlike her predecessor Pam Hixon, Donnelly's coaching style allows more creativity, a style that seems to suit the senior forward.

"She is very creative," said Donnelly. "She uses her speed extremely well. She uses her strengths better than most people. She has great speed and a very deceptive touch around the net."

She was named a co-captain (with Kyri Sparks) before the season and has thrived in the role.

"She's great to play with," said junior forward Kerry Metelski. "She's really helped us out a lot. Her intensity rubs off on us."

"[Her play] has really made the difference in the confidence of our offensive players," said Donnelly. "They have seen her work ethic and how she has stepped up. She just shows no fear. That's the type of attitude you want offensive players to have."

After an impressive high school career, it appeared that the Blackstone native was headed for Northeastern University, but a phone call from then Hixon brought Borges to Amherst.

"I was going to go to Northeastern," said Borges, "but Pam called me late in the year. I visited the school and I liked it here."

UMass has been glad to have her as she's emerged into an All-American candidate.

The Minutewomen are hiding nothing. Their goal is a national championship. They will need Borges to be the scorer and leader to help achieve that.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

UMass will need continued offensive production from senior forward Danielle Borges.

"If we end up making it to the Final Four and the National Championship, and I don't get All-American, I'll be happy," said Borges.

"I think they realize they have a chance to accomplish something that no other UMass team has accomplished," said Donnelly.

If they do reach their goal, despite any statistics or accomplishments of her predecessors there will be no shadow over her career and if she continues this season's success, she will hold her own spot in UMass field hockey history regardless. That history has influenced Borges.

"It is a strong tradition that goes way back," Borges said. "Everyone takes winning games very seriously. No one likes to lose or play badly. Having that helps us because everyone wants to keep the tradition going."

As her collegiate career winds down, Borges hopes that her field hockey days are not all behind her.

"I'd like to work in a school," said Borges. "Wherever I get settled, someday I'd like to coach high school field hockey. I don't see this as the end."

The Minutewomen will try to improve to 4-0 this afternoon against Yale at 3:30 at Totman Field.

Backfield, defense tops in Yankee Conference

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts football team is hoping that there will not be a repeat of last year.

The Minutemen [1–1] will host Maine [0–3] this Saturday at Warren D. McGuirk Alumni Stadium after coming off a Holy Cross win. Same as last year. The hopes are for a different result, though, because Massachusetts was upset by the Black Bears 17–13 last season in Orono, ME.

This time around, they have the home field advantage, and are arguably deeper than last year's squad. Some notes...

Ingoglia we trust — The Minutemen have learned to just expect junior fullback Rene Ingoglia to perform day in and day out — and he has obliged. Ingoglia racked up 199 yards this past weekend in the 32–0 victory against Holy Cross, and scored twice.

With the big day on the ground, the All-American candidate moved up the ranks in Massachusetts career rushing, passing Jerome Bledsoe [2,216 yards] to grab second with 2,269 yards. Ingoglia also escalated to second place in the touchdown department with 23 career TDs, passing Greg Landry [1965–67].

More about Ingoglia? He outgained the opposing team for the second straight week, as Holy Cross amassed 136 yards on the ground. Safe to say Ingoglia is a candidate for the Walter Payton Award, given to the Division I-AA Player of the Year.

The rest of the backfield — Ingoglia, as spectacular as he's been the past two weeks, is not alone. Sophomore speedster Frank Alessio ran for a career-high 109 yards on 15 carries, the first time he has topped the century mark. While Ingoglia's up-the-gut running has terrorized the Minutemen's opponents, Alessio has burned them on pitches, compliments of his explosive speed.

His improvement from last year has been noted by many of the players as well as Coach Mike Hodges.

Sophomore fullback Ron Brockington has come in to his own in his first two games here at Massachusetts. The transfer from Syracuse ran for a touchdown in both the Richmond game as well as last week's contest at Holy Cross, and has rushed for 50 yards on seven attempts.

As for the rushing-yard totals, the Yankee Conference- leading Minutemen have gained 670 yards on the ground, good for 6.1 yards per carry. The 317 yards per game include the 412 yards against the Crusaders this past weekend.

Defense pitches shutout — In that same game, Massachusetts held Holy Cross to a goose egg with the 32 point victory, and now leads the Yankee Conference in defense. They have allowed just 240.5 yards per game.

Out for the season -- It's unfortunately official for the Minutemen. Sophomore quarterback Vito Campanile will miss the remainder of the season due to his right knee injury. The Franklin Lakes, NJ native had surgery to repair the damage to the ACL [anterior cruciate ligament].

Senior fullback David Smith is academically ineligible and will be out for the rest of the season as well.

Men's soccer to battle fifth–ranked New Hampshire

The Minutemen must contain All–American Mike Veneto in order to notch third win

By Brian Gormley
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's soccer team will get their toughest test of the young season when they square off against the University of New Hampshire Wildcats today.

UMass Coach Sam Koch said today's game against the fifth–ranked Wildcats (3:30 p.m. at Richard F. Garber Field) will be a rough one because UNH has an excellent team that plays a relentless style of soccer.

"New Hampshire is very direct, there are no secrets about the way that they play," Koch said. "They play high pressure defense, they swarm the ball and give you very little space to play. And they work extremely hard for the entire 90 minutes."

Koch said one of the keys to stopping the Wildcats will be to control the midfield. To do that, they will have to contain senior midfielder Ryan Leib and senior All–American forward Mike Veneto. Veneto now has 93 career points, more than any other player in UNH history.

To this end, the Minutemen will assign defenders Benny Sheally and Dan Chagnon to take turns shadowing Veneto. Koch said Veneto's quickness and all–around skills make him impossible to stop with one player.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

The Minutemen hope to pull off an upset this afternoon against the No. 5 Wildcats.

Koch said his overall defensive strategy will be to play tough on the ball while playing their zone defense. He said UMass must prevent the Wildcats from setting up on offense and serving the ball.

"Defensively we have to stay compact and close on the ball quickly," Koch said. "If we give them time to look and serve the ball, we're in trouble. They have three or four players who are very skilled. The rest are hard workers with limited ability to serve the ball if you close on them quickly. If they have time to serve the ball they can be as effective as anyone in the country."

Koch said his team has to work on creating more scoring opportunities while cutting down on their opponent's chances. In last week's 1–0 loss to the University of Connecticut, the Huskies had eight good scoring opportunities, Koch said. He also hopes to hold New Hampshire to only four solid scoring chances, but he acknowledged that Veneto and Leib will probably create at least one scoring opportunity for themselves each per half. In that game, UMass mustered only six quality shots on net, a number that he hopes to double against UNH.

Koch stressed that his front runners must play especially well if the Minuteman attack is to be effective.

"The front runners have to work hard offensively on their off–ball runs. They have to be able to look and see if the quick counter is on, and if it is to attack quickly," he said. "If the quick counter is not there they have to be patient and work with the midfielders."

New Hampshire may be vulnerable to the quick counter because they are young defensively, according to Koch.

UMass must come out and match the Wildcat's intensity right off the bat in order to win, Koch said. He said in the Minutemen's last game against Connecticut, the intensity was missing at first.

"We have to be ready to play the first five minutes of the game," Koch said. "Against UConn we were not ready to play. I am at a loss for a reason why. This is the most important game of the season so far because we need to improve on what we didn't accomplish against Connecticut. It will be a real good indication of where we are going."

In general, Koch expressed a great deal of respect for the Wildcats' talent.

"I respect UNH a great deal, they play a tough, aggressive style and they don't quit," he said. "It should be a fun game to watch. It's going to be a battle."

Get up there!

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Rebecca Myers and the rest of the UMass women's soccer team are getting ready to host the UMass Classic this weekend.

Butch Hobson fired as Red Sox skipper after three straight losing seasons

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

BOSTON — Butch Hobson, who could not turn around a team whose players admired him, was fired Tuesday as manager of the Boston Red Sox after three losing seasons.

Although rumors about his possible firing had circulated for the past two seasons, Hobson said he was surprised he was let go.

"I believed in my heart that this day would never happen," Hobson said during a news conference at Fenway Park. "I'm not going to burn any bridges. When new faces come in, they want to bring in new faces, I knew that."

Speculation intensified about the future of Hobson when Dan Duquette became general manager last Jan. 27 after serving in that capacity with the Montreal Expos. It increased when the Red Sox faltered after getting off to a strong start this year.

Duquette did not immediately name a successor to Hobson. He said he was considering a list of candidates with more experience at the major league level, "an experienced veteran baseball man."

"Butch gave his best efforts for the last three years. Are we holding him responsible for everything with the club? The answer to that is no," Duquette said.

The Red Sox were 54-61 in the strike-shortened 1994 season, 17 games out of first place in the AL East. His record since taking the job in 1992 was 207-232.

Hobson, 43, was not offered another job with the Red Sox. He had flown to Boston from Alabama after receiving a call from Duquette Monday night.

"I apologize for my attire, I didn't know this was going to happen," said Hobson, dressed in blue jeans, a leather vest and a white crew-neck polo shirt.

He thanked Jean Yawkey, the late Red Sox owner, general partner John Harrington, former general manager Lou Gorman and former owner Haywood Sullivan for the opportunity to manage.

> "My head's up because I'm proud of what I accomplished here. My head's up because I'm a good person...Good things happen to good people and good things will happen to me."
>
> – Butch Hobson

"My head's up because I'm proud of what I accomplished here. My head's up because I'm a good person," Hobson said. "Good things happen to good people and good things will happen to me."

Hobson was largely stoical and soft-spoken as a manager, never outwardly exhibiting the intensity in leadership that he had shown on the field as a third baseman with the Red Sox, Angels and Yankees.

In Hobson's first season as manager, Boston finished last in the AL East with a 73-89 record. They were in the division race for much of the 1993 season but ended up at 80-82.

"In the long run, the bottom line for a major league manager is wins and losses," Duquette said. "While it's helpful to be popular with your players, it's more important to have their respect.

"I believe they gave their best effort for him. I believe that Butch gave his best effort for the Red Sox."

During his tenure, Hobson was known as a player's manager, keeping any criticism of a player private.

"If my players needed a swift kick in the rear end, and I think you can ask any one of them, they got it," he said.

Water polo tries to build on experience

Minutemen win EWPA tournament, prepare for Navy invitational

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

There is nothing better than experience.

Fortunately for the University of Massachusetts men's water polo team, they have plenty of it.

This weekend Coach Russ Yarworth and his University of Massachusetts men's water polo team, travel to Annapolis, Md. to compete in the Navy Invitational. The Minutemen (6–3) will ride the tide with a six game winning streak, as well as a No. 14 national ranking, under their belts.

A slow start to this season has seemingly vanished into thin air. After losing their first three games, Yarworth's team has outscored the opponents by a whopping 115–36 margin.

"To this point, the boys are getting along just fine," said Yarworth. "But we still got a ways to go."

Included in this weekend's competition will be a tough Saturday schedule of contests against two Top 20 teams, 11th ranked Bucknell and 20th ranked Richmond. Yarworth said he looks forward to the rematch against Bucknell, since one of their first losses was a close one that was decided in the final second.

Combined with a Sunday contest against Air Force (No. 7 in the country), the chance to further test his team is in Yarworth's sights.

"We need more game experience," said Yarworth. "Not always to come out on top, but to improve and get our rotation set."

* * * * * *

Last Saturday in the Eastern Water Polo Association tournament at Brown University, Massachusetts swept the competition and defeated Queens College (22–8) and Iona University (23–4).

UMass bolted out to a 13–1 lead at the half, with sophomore Greg Menton and junior Frankie Mariani leading the way with three goals each to dominate a lackluster effort by the Iona Gaels.

Against Queens, four different players scored at least three goals for the Minutemen. Led by junior Luis Limardo's five goals, senior co-captain Javier Gonzalez and freshman Juan Carlos Limardo each chipped in three goals to stonewall any chance of a Queens upset.

"We are beginning to see what we originally thought of Juan Carlos' ability," said Yarworth of his freshman sniper. "He is feeling comfortable and getting acclimated to the system."

Sports Notice:

Anyone who is interested in writing a sports column should submit a sample column by 3 p.m. Friday. Any sports related subject is acceptable.

Drop off entries to either Andrew Bryce or Matt Vautour in the Collegian offices, 113 Campus Center basement.

Brockington a welcomed newcomer
Sophomore Fullback Ron Brockington (left) of the UMass football team has shown potential in his first two games as a Minuteman (Sports, page 14).

Mather's career fair
Find out what students learned about networking for the future at Wednesday's "Career Information Highway," sponsored by the Mather Career Center (page 3).

Getting Stoned with Oliver Stone
From Platoon to Natural Born Killers, the controversial director has made plenty of movies, and plenty of mistakes (Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast
Considerable cloudiness mounts on Thursday, turning to a 30 percent chance of rain on Friday. Expect rain throughout the early part of the weekend, with lower temperatures.

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 75 LOW: 50	HIGH: 70 LOW: 55	HIGH: 65 LOW: 50

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 8 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Thursday, September 22, 1994

Plan imposes higher standards to raise public education quality

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

Next year it might be tougher to get accepted to the University of Massachusetts if the Higher Education Coordinating Council (HECC) fufills its five initiatives, but students who do get into the University will have an easier time getting financial aid.

"It is a plan to improve higher education at the state universities and colleges in Massachusetts," said Lynn Robitaille, student coordinator of the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy.

The council will use coordination and collaboration to address change, and work toward a system plan for public higher education.

HECC approved a plan outline on Tuesday which contains a program of five initiatives the council wants to work toward.

The initiatives include reviewing financial aid, evaluating admissions standards, aligning campus programs, setting performance measures and increasing system collaboration.

The initiatives also involve cutting the dropout rate and getting state colleges and universities to work together, according to Robitaille.

HECC, which was created by the State Legislature three years ago to coordinate the public higher education system, will work with representatives of the colleges during the next year on the five initiatives.

"HECC wants to make a connection with the K-12 reform, said Robitaille which is a statewide effort to improve the quality of education.

Stanley Koplik, the Chancellor of Higher Education, said the motive behind the changes are that the state should not lower educational standards, but should instead be raising them, according to Robitaille.

The council plans to raise the standards of higher education with the reform in public education in the kindergarden through the 12th grade.

HECC wants to create programs that will toughen admission standards at the UMass and other state colleges and universities. The council plans to create task forces which will develop a plan following the guidelines approved Tuesday.

HECC also wants to improve access to financial aid available in grants, loans and tuition waivers, making college more accessable to students who are accepted.

HECC plans to develop dropout prevention programs, and make it easier for students to transfer among state institutions.

There is also an effort to increase the use of technology and libraries.

Hillel provides a new weekend meal plan

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

Much more than chicken soup with matzah balls is being made in the basement of Hillel House on its new meal plan.

Hillel has developed a weekend meal plan, which will provide three meals a week. Friday dinner and Sunday brunch and dinner will be made in Hillel's downstairs Kosher kitchen by University of Massachusetts junior Barbara Backner.

REBECCA PETERSON/COLLEGIAN
UMass junior Barbara Backner will prepare meals for Hillel House's new weekend meal plan.

Backner said she is hoping "that the food service program at Hillel gets a strong basis and backing by the students and the community so we can give them the best quality food that we can and the best service and just make everyone happy."

Backner, a Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration major, was hired over the summer.

Backner graduated cum laude from Johnson and Wales with a culinary arts degree. She came to UMass two years ago because she wanted a better management degree and she said she knew UMass had one of the top five HRTA programs in the country. Backner also interned at Walt Disney World, as well as working as a line cook at an Italian restaurant and as a student cook at the Dining Commons. Last summer, she worked at Belle Meade, a prestigious country club in Nashville, Tenn., where she managed the snack bar grill.

Of her responsibilties at Hillel's meal plan, Backner said, "My main job is too make sure it runs smoothly, efficiently and it's cost effective. So that means between the airing, purchasing, receiving, training, serving, I oversee everything."

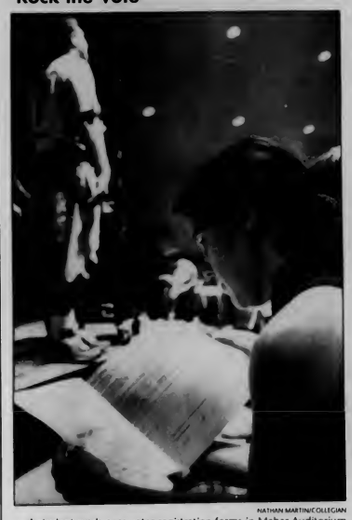
Backner said she specializes in Italian food and especially loves to cook with chicken. The kitchen will also serve a vegetarian alternative. However, because it is a Kosher kitchen, there will be no dairy products served.

The meal plan costs $150 for the semester, which covers every weekend except thanksgiving. According to Rabbi Saul Perlmutter, it would cost more than $180 to purchase the meals individually. Perlmutter also said that Hillel had been given money by a sponsor so that the first 30 people who signed up for the meal plan would get an additional $30 off the price. Perlmutter declined to identify the sponsor.

Hillel also serves lunch on Thursdays, although it is not included on the meal plan.

According to Perlmutter, the meal plan is a "good way to help build a sense of community and give students some top quality food."

Rock the Vote



NATHAN MARTINI/COLLEGIAN
A student reads over voter registration forms in Mahar Auditorium yesterday as Commuter Government Association advocate Matt Pavesi explains that CGA is one of several student organizations trying to register at least 5000 students before the November elections.

Grant given to teen program which keeps local kids in school

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

A program at the University of Massachusetts geared towards keeping local teens in school has received a grant of more than $900,000.

The Talent Search Program, enacted three years ago, allots high school kids in Northampton and Holyoke the resources necessary for them to stay in school, receive a degree and prepare for college, Gloria Cuevara, associate dean for UMass Academic Support Services, said.

The grant of $902,919 is good for the next four years, Guevara said. The program has run for the past three years on a federal grant.

"The program is a great success and keeps on progressing," Frank Tudryn, Northampton High School's vice president, said. "Last year we had 20 to 25 kids and this year we have over 100."

The federally-funded program requires that participants come from either low-income homes, well below

Turn to GRANT, page 3

Roosevelt faces Weld as race for Governor heads to final strech

By Jonathan Yenkin
Associated Press

BOSTON - Mark Roosevelt may have some political momentum after winning the Democratic nomination for governor, but he isn't carrying forward much money to run against the well-financed campaign of Gov. William F. Weld.

Roosevelt, a state representative from Boston, emerged from Tuesday's primary victory with less than $50,000 on hand, said Tripp Jones, his campaign manager.

But Jones said he was confident about building on the primary victory to raise money from Democratic sources outside Massachusetts.

"We will have the necessary funds to get our message out," Roosevelt said Wednesday.

By comparison, Weld was armed with nearly $2 million and ready to pounce. With the primary barely over,

Weld was running three campaign advertisements - one attacking Roosevelt and two promoting the governor's proposals to radically overhaul the welfare system.

"I think the election's going to be fought and won or lost on the issues that people really care about out there on the street, which are crime, welfare, tax levels and the effect of tax levels on jobs," Weld said Wednesday.

Weld has campaigned on a platform to crack down on welfare by forcing recipients to get jobs almost immediately and to get tough on crime by reinstating the death penalty.

But Roosevelt said Weld's campaign talk has been hollow. Roosevelt, who supports the death penalty, said Weld failed to corral legislators when a capital punishment bill was defeated in the House earlier this year.

He also said despite Weld's pledges to clean up the welfare system, 10 percent of the prisoners in several county jails were found recently to be on the rolls for public assistance.

"Rhetoric and reality with Bill Weld have nothing to do with each other," Roosevelt said. "His record is abysmal."

On the issue of prisoners receiving welfare, Robert Bliss, a Department of Welfare spokesman, said only about a quarter of the inmates on public assistance were getting state welfare benefits.

Officials suggest caution to avoid local rabies risk

By Kelly Spang
Collegian Staff

With the rise of rabies in the last 15 years, University of Massachusetts officials are advising students to stay away from any wild animals they may see around campus, particularly raccoons.

George Reed, senior environmental health specialist at the UMass Office of Environmental Health and Safety (EHS) said he is concerned because his office has received several calls of raccoons wander in the wooded areas of campus, particularly the Southwest Residential Area.

"There is a lot of anxiety," Reed said, "But there is not great need for concern — just be careful. Don't go near a wild animal and don't try and help one."

Reed said rabies are a virus rampant among the raccoon population and may be deadly in humans.

There has been a growth in the raccoon population in recent years, but Reed said many are dying off from rabies.

Raccoons are of particular concern because they live in close proximity of humans and feed off garbage, according to Reed.

Humans should stay away from raccoons because at times they may be "docile" and at other times they may be aggressive, particularly if they are sick.

A good indicator that a raccoon is not healthy is if it is spotted walking about during the day light hours, Reed said, because raccoons are nocturnal creatures.

"If you see a raccoon in the day time, there is usually something wrong with it," he said.

Rabies affects a person's nervous system, causing death if not treated immediately. Reed said there are a variety of symptoms from rabies, including hydrophobia, the fear of water.

There is an incubation period for the virus to effect an individual. Reed said the virus makes its way up to the brain, so if a bite is on the upper body, including the arms and neck, the disease will probably affect a person sooner.

However, Reed said an individual bitten by a rabid animal should have the wound treated immediately.

"If you do come out with symptoms, you are probably going to die," he said.

A.J. Lardner, public health nurse at the University Health Services (UHS) said if a student is bitten by a wild animal, the first step is to vigorously wash the wound for at least 10 minutes.

After washing the wound, Lardner said the student should go immediately to the urgent care unit at UHS where the seriousness of the wound will be evaluated. The student will then be given an antibody injection, half of the injection will be given directly in the wound and half will be given as a regular injection somewhere else on the body.

The initial injection is only a temporary injection, Lardner said. There will be a series of rabies immunization shots to be given over the period of seven days to build up the student's immune system to the virus.

Presently, Lardner said the University health insurance will cover the treatment.

There are other animals which Reed said are "high-risk" for rabies; the list includes bats, skunks, foxes, woodchucks and opossums.

Reed said rabies is making its way up the coast from West Virginia because in the 1970s, hunters in West Virginia brought raccoons up from Florida and Georgia which already had the virus. For the past 15 years, rabies has been moving up through New England.

CHRISTOPHER EVANS/COLLEGIAN
Hampshire College student Brad Simpson and UMass student Daniela Motta wait for the bus at Haigis Mall earlier this week.

UM program encourages inner-city high schoolers to avoid dropping out

By Martha Hay
Collegian Correspondent

High school students are seeing the opportunities college offers, not through guidance counselors or handbooks, but through college students themselves.

The Bridging Worlds program at the University of Massachusetts encourages Springfield inner-city high school students in danger of dropping out to stay in school, according to Steve Satell, director and coordinator of the program.

The program boosts students in order to help them reach their personal goals and could someday influence them to apply to the University to study, Satell said.

"A person comes to college to bring something positive back home with them," said Satell.

Bridging Worlds is in its third year, spinning out of a program to recruit and retain more minority basketball players at the University, and grew into a course to reach more students.

There are two components to Bridging Worlds, one being academic and the other being an independent study within each of the students individual majors.

The academics of the program involve normal requirements, such as reading books and writing papers. The independent study can be on almost any topic, as long as the topic has something to do with some aspect of the inner city.

The program also teaches students through its requirement for each student to become a mentor to inner city high school students in Springfield who are at risk of dropping out of school.

The high school students are members of the Dunbar Community Center and attend either Commerce High School or Central High School in Springfield.

During the course of the semester, the two groups will have several opportunities to meet, socialize, work together in community services, and most importantly, learn from each other.

One opportunity for the groups to meet will be in November, at which time the high school students will be visiting the University. The high school students will be "shadowing" their college mentor by attending classes, eating in the dining commons, and spending time together.

In order for the Bridging Worlds course to continue, it not only needs funding from sources outside the

Turn to BRIDGING WORLDS, page 3

Police Log

Compiled by Heather Redfern from University reports

Two individuals reported on Sept. 16, valuables worth $5,500 missing from their room in the Leach Residence Hall after it had been entered in their absence.

The incident occurred between 9:15 and 9:25 a.m.

The door to their room was left unlocked when one individual left to classes on campus while the other individual took a shower down the hall from their room.

University Police received a call at 1 p.m. after both individuals discovered a diamond and sapphire ring worth $5,000 and two wallets missing.

Contents in both wallets, including credit cards and cash totaled $500.

The ring was said to be a family heirloom.

At the present time, police say they there are no suspects.

Motor Vehicle Theft

Sept. 12

A 1991 Geo was stolen from Lot 22.

Bike Theft

Sept. 12

An individual reported a bicycle tire valuing $150 stolen from Dickinon dorm.

An individual reported his bicycle stolen from Dickinson residence Hall. Value $250.

An individual reported a stolen bicycle valuing $575 from Hamlin residence Hall.

Sept. 13

An individual reported his bicycle stolen from the Moore residence hall. Value $360

An individual reported a stolen bicycle from Knowlton Dormitory valuing over $300.

An individual reported a stolen bicycle from Washington Dormitory valuing $650.

Vandalism

Sept. 12

A staff member reported homophobic graffiti written in a stairwell of Coolidge Dormitory.

A staff member reported homophobic graffiti on a bulletin board adjacent to the elevator in Cashin Dormitory.

Staff reported sexual graffiti written in three bathrooms of Kneels Engineering Building.

Liquor Law Violation

Sept. 12

Daniel D. Souza, 19, of 171 Fearing St. was arrested for a minor carrying alcoholic beverages in the Southwest Circle.

Sept. 13

Alyson M. Lillis, 18, of 1735 York Ave. in New York was arrested for a minor carrying alcoholic beverages and a disorderly person.

Burglary/ Breaking and Entering

Sept. 12

An individual reported his vehicle had been broken into and his stereo valuing $150 was stolen.

An individual reported his vehicle in Lot 22 on University drive had been broken into. The estimated damage was $275.Arrests

Sept. 13

Giddell Padilla, 21, of 199 Eastern Ave. in Springfield was arrested for operating a motor vehicle without a license and failure to use care when starting, turning and stopping.

Motor Vehicle Traffic Stops

Sept. 13

Thierry A. Laurent, 20, of 26 Williams St. in Chester was stopped for operating a vehicle without a license, failure by the owner to have the vehicle inspected, operating a vehicle with defective equipment, speeding, and illegal possession of a Class D substance.

Sept. 14

Adam Kestin, 19, of 506 Joralemon St. in Belleville, N.J. was stopped for operating under the influence of drugs and liquor, for operating with defective equipment, failing to display plates properly while operating a vehicle, speeding, and illegal possession of a Class D substance.

Larceny

Sept. 13

Two individuals reported stolen back packs from the Textbook Annex.

An individual reported a stolen wallet valuing over $150 from Morrill Science Center.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Thursday, Sept. 22

Theater/comedy — Marga Gomez in Cheva, $3.50 Five College students and seniors, $6 general public, Bowker Auditorium, 8 p.m. Tickets: Fine Arts Center Box Office, 545-2511.

Just For Fun — Chabad House Sukkah Party, Chabad House, 8 p.m., Information: 549-4094.

Community — Peach Community Pot-Luck Supper & Welcome, dinner and discussion, Bangs Center, Amherst, 6:30 p.m., Information: 253-4008.

French Club — Meeting, Herter 3rd floor lounge, UMass, 5 p.m., Information: 253-5243.

Socialist Club — The International Socialist Club will be organizing rides to the East Coast "Unite and Fight" conference in Providence, Rhode Island, Information: 582- 0475.

Friday, Sept. 23

Meeting — Meeting of Campus Crusade for Christ, singing, skits, short talks, Campus Center, Check information desk in Campus Center for room number, 7 p.m.

Special Event — Representative Bernard Sanders will be speaking on health care, Main lecture hall, Mount Holyoke College, 3 p.m.

Film — To Kill A Mockingbird, Gamble Auditorium, Mount Holyoke College, $2.50, Presented by the MHC Film Society, Show times: 7 p.m. and 9:15 p.m.

Just For Fun — 80's dance party, Sponsored by The First Korean American Students of SC, Davis Ballroom, Smith College, 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Auditions — Witness For The Prosecution, UMass Theater Guild, Campus Center, UMass, Room 168-C, 6:30 p.m., Information: 545-0415.

Saturday, Sept. 24

Music — Bands on display, 10th Annual Band Day, McGuirk Stadium, University of Massachusetts, 1 p.m., Information: 545-6060.

Film — Presented by the Mount Holyoke Film Society, Gamble Auditorium, MHC, $2.50, Show times: 7 p.m. and 9:15 p.m.

Hayride — Rides from Haigis Mall, UMass, Sponsored by Campus Crusade for Christ, Leaves 7:45 p.m., $6, Information: 546-7302.

Sunday, Sept 25

Solar Observing — Amherst Town Common, 1 p.m.

Just For Fun — Barbecue and Volleyball, Hillel House, UMass, $2, free for Hillel Activity Card Holders, 1:30 p.m.,

Music — Boston Renaissance Ensemble, Sage Recital Hall, Smith College, 8 p.m., Free.

Lecture — Conserving Community, Author Wendell Berry, benefits will go to Brookfield Farm, Johnson Chapel, Amherst College, $10, 7 p.m.

Upcoming

Pond clean-up — Volunteers needed for campus pond clean-up to be held Sept. 27 and 28, 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. Sign- up: Karen Drumm, 545-2317.

Blood Drives — Sept. 20 and 21, Campus Center, 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Internships — MASSPIRG is offering internships for the fall semester. Information: 423B Student Union or call 545- 0199.

Hunan Garden 湖南園 Restaurant
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over; $2 charge for orders under $15
NEW
BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
P Buffet Every Night 5-8p.m.
Sunday Brunch 11:30a.m. - 3p.m.
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.25
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3 p.m. - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup
TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

HELP WANTED
WORK STUDY
Positions Available:
Clerical Asst. Needed
for Town of Amherst
Leisure Services
Department
Salary Range $5.10 - $6.26/hr.
flexible hours
M - F
CALL LSSE
256-4065

To the Women of UMASS:
Are you a transfer student new to campus?
Come to a welcome party just for you!
Thursday, Sept. 22, 1994
room 101
Campus Center
7:00 pm
Sponsored by the Panhellic Council

Live in Luxury at...
THE BOULDERS
■New Huge 2 Bedroom Apartments Available:
• NEW APPLIANCES • NEW COUNTERS/CABINETS • NEW CARPETS & TILE
■New Exercise Facility FEATURING STAIRMASTER, LIFECYCLE & NAUTILUS
■Newly Renovated Hallways, Stairways & Entrances
■Free Heat/Free Hot Water/5 College Bus Stop on Property
■New Parking Areas & Landscaping
The Boulders Apartment Complex is conveniently located 1/2 mile from Downtown Amherst. Come check our "Move In Special" today.
156 A Brittany Manor Drive
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-8534
Office Hours: M-F 8:30 - 5:30 Sat 9 - 4
Directions to THE BOULDERS from Amherst Center & Rt. 9
essex partners
An Essex Partners' Community

CLIFFSIDE APARTMENTS
248 Amherst Rd.
Sunderland, MA 01375
(413) 665-3958
Office Hours: M-F 8:30-5:30 Sat. 10-2
Cliffside - Priced to Let You Live Alone!
• Eff., 1, 2 & 3 Bedroom Apartments
• Rents from $460 includes all utilities
• W/W Carpeting • On Site Laundry Facilities
• On Bus Route (Free Fare) • Pool & Tennis Courts
• 28 Acres of Wooded Hiking Trails
Only Minutes to UMASS, Shopping & Rt.91

Choosing your career highway

Students travel open road in search of future jobs at career fair

By Dave Copeland
Collegian Staff

Students had the opportunity to practice networking Wednesday, a skill which will be valuable in their career search, at the Mather Career Center's "Career Information Highway" in the Student Union Ballroom.

The event played on the theme of the career search being an open road, with various routes, exits and options for travelers.

"Getting a job should not cause so much anxiety," said Joan Stoia, the director of the Mather Career Center. "Our hope is to take some of that anxiety away."

Students had the opportunity to talk with representatives of different companies, as well as different alumni who were now enjoying success in wide array of professional careers.

Peter Lee, who graduated from the University of Massachusetts in 1981 and is now the director of Marketing Operations for the Massachusetts Department of Travel and Tourism, said that his degree from UMass prepared him for his career search.

"I think that the one thing you learn being at UMass is that nothing is handed to you," Lee said. "If you want to get an [oversubscribed] class during add/drop, you have to figure out a way to do that. The same types of skills are valuable in keeping you persistent in the job search."

The various tables on the Career Information Highway allowed students to do anything from look at opportunities in internships to practice their communication skills in mock interviews with employers.

Workshops were conducted throughout the day by the represented companies, and provided students with information on topics such as networking and interviewing strategies.

To make networking easier for the students, the career students provided the alumni with orange name tags that also noted interesting bits of information that could be used as conversation starters, such as, "Ask me about what I did with my English degree," or, "Ask me about my career in comic book writing."

"We're trying to help students literally walk through the path of career development," said Stoia, a 1971 graduate of UMass. "If you can walk through it in sequence, then it will seem more alive to you when it's time for you to do it yourself."

Lynn Yaffee, a field experience advisor at the Career Center, said that the success of the day was marked by the fact that students were taking the initiative to talk to the gathered alumni. "Students are actually going up and asking questions, which is great," she said.

Stoia emphasized that the days of the mid-1980s when jobs were easier to find because of a huge influx of money into the economy. She said that today students need to learn how to network.

"In those days, you could throw in a resume like a fishing net and get a job," she said. "Today, students need to know how to network. It's meeting folks and talking to them. And eventually people are offering you jobs."

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Eunice Schmidt, a junior operations management major receives tips from Mather Career Center's Director of Field Experience, Jeff Silver at yesterday's career information highway.

■ Bridging Worlds

continued from page 1

University, but needs to be able count on the University for funding.

Satell said Chancellor David K. Scott had suggested a donation in the amount of $10,000 to match outside donations made to the program. Scott said the University could not give the program $10,000 but would donate $1,000, according to Satell.

Satell said he hopes "this donation is a step in the right direction." However, Satell said he is somewhat disappointed that the University could not find enough money to match other contributed funds and said he would like to see a stronger commitment for the program from the administration.

To raise the funds that are needed from the outside community, Bridging Worlds has planned some fundraisers which will take place over the course of this semester. Fundraisers will include a performance by Archie Shepp at the Zone, a club in Springfield and a dinner.

The dinner will be during the last week in October at the Family Kitchen Restaurant in Springfield. Featured guests at the dinner will be Ben Swan of the Springfield chapter of the NAACP. Satell said Springfield Mayor Robert Markel and UMass President Michael Hooker are tentative guests.

■ grant

continued from page 1

the poverty level, or from homes in which neither parent received a bachelor's degree. The majority meets both requirements, Guevara said.

"This is not a minority program," Guevara said. "Poverty comes in all colors." The program does have a number of minority students, but that is because of the large percentage of minorities in poverty.

Talent Search offers academic and personal counseling, tutorial services, workshops, study skills and test-taking strategies, financial planning and referral services, Guevara said.

"Even if they decide to leave school, we work at finding alternatives for them, like GED tests," Guevara said.

The program is run by UMass employees. The positions consist of duties which combine the job description of both a guidance counselor and a social worker, Guevara said.

The staff go into the high schools, do case work at the kids' homes, and conduct specialized programs at different social agencies in the area, Guevara said.

The primary function of the program is to assist a targeted group of kids with tutoring and college preparation, Guevara said.

Julio Cordero, a freshman at UMass who participated in the Talent Search Program for three years, said he received help writing essays. The staff walked him through the process of applying to college and for financial aid.

With English as his second language, Cordero received the assistance he needed to develop skills as a bilingual student. "They helped me to interpret my ideas."

"Talent Search is good at finding professional, caring staff that understand what it means to work with kids," Paul Katz, associate executive director of the Hampshire Regional YMCA, said.

Talent Search runs a program at the YMCA in Florence after school. On Saturday evenings they provide transportation from low income housing complexes to the center from 6-11 p.m., Katz said. The thrust of the programs are in language development.

"They really improve community development and work hard to enrichen the lives of people who need it," Katz said.

"I was worrying about college all the time, but they made everything easier," Lisa Cancel, a freshman nursing major at UMass and former participant in the program, said. "If it wasn't for them, I wouldn't have done so well in college."

In Holyoke, the program operates through social agencies, instead of working through the school system, Guevara said.

The program is involved with the Community Adolescent Resource and Education Center in Holyoke. The center takes in teenage girls with children and the program helps to educate and prepare them for their GED tests, Guevara said.

The program tutored the girls and brought them on trips to tour different college campuses, including UMass, Kim Giraud, the Educational Coordinator of the Care Center, said.

"Holyoke is very different from Amherst," Giraud said. "It's an intimidating place, it's so big.

"They may not feel they have the skills. Going and seeing the campus like this might make them start to consider it," Giraud said.

"They help kids whose families never looked at college as an option and keep them out of trouble," Tudryn said. "Last year there was a certain group of kids I'd see walk in here everyday. Now that they're in the program, I hardly ever see them anymore."

Better Check the Meter

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Graduate student Paulette Dalpes studies diligently in Lot 40, near Boyden Gym earlier this week.

Spirit Haus
Refrigerator Rentals
256-8433
253-5384

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycles
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0086

Auto Reverse Double Deck!
Artistry in Sound
ONKYO TAR-W313 CASSETTE
Sale $209.
Sound & Music
Multibank Place • 351 Pleasant Street • Northampton
584-9547 • VISA & MasterCard accepted

kinko's...
the place to copy
• Quality Copies of all sizes
• Full Color Copies
• Computer Services
• Binding and Finishing
• Fax & Mailing Services
• Volume Discounts
• Open 24 hours (in most locations)
WITH THIS COUPON
20% off on all school supplies
Bring this coupon into the Kinko's listed and save 20% on all regularly-priced school supplies. One coupon per customer. Not valid with other offers. Good through October 31, 1994.
kinko's the copy center
AMHERST: 220 N. Pleasant St. 253-2543 Open 24 Hours
NORTHAMPTON: 34 Bridge St., 585-5000 (Across from the Post Office) HOURS: 8am to 12

"WE'RE MORE THAN YOU SEE"
STUDENT UNION ART GALLERY various types of artwork done by
The Blue-collar Workers of the UMASS campus
•20 Local Artists
Monday September 19 - Friday, October 7th
Opening Reception: Thursday September 22 from 5 - 7 pm
Gallery hours: Monday through Friday 11 - 4 pm
This exhibition is sponsored in part by the UMASS Arts Council.

at zanna...funky
Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 N. Pleasant St. • Amherst
413.253.2563

Global Internship and Language Programs
a representative will be on campus:
Amherst College
Monday, September 26, 1994, 4:30 - 6:00 p.m.
McCaffrey Room
Smith College
Tuesday, September 27, 1994, 2:00 p.m.
Wright Hall, Common Room
Students from 5 College Consortium
BOSTON UNIVERSITY
International Programs
For program details please write or call:
Boston University International Programs
232 Bay State Road, Box Q, Boston, MA 02215 • 617/353-9888
An equal opportunity, affirmative action institution
FRANCE AUSTRALIA RUSSIA ENGLAND SPAIN CHINA FRANCE ECUADOR NIGER U.S.A. ITALY SPAIN GERMANY ENGLAND ISRAEL U.S.A. BELIZE ITALY FRANCE AUSTRALIA RUSSIA ENGLAND

Bike Sale.
Threshold 239.95 was 259.95
Switchback 269.95 was 299.95
Sycamore 319.95 was 349.95
Hilltopper 369.95 was 399.95
Alta 435.00 was 475.00
Rockadille 489.95 was 525.00
Shock Sale.
Rock Shock Mag 21 Now $299 was $379
Installation only $15 was $25
Lock Sale.
Kryptonite Locks Starting at $29.95
KRYPTONITE
Bicycle World Too
Our Only Business is Bikes
Amherst 253-7722 • 63 South Pleasant St. (rear) • Behind Bueno's • Greenfield 774-3701

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hanley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Ganley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Position vacant Black Affairs Editor Position vacant Women's Issues Editor
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor Marni E. Helfner Editorial Production Manager
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Position vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Jim Roode Circulation Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Eric Abenaim Subscriptions Manager
Evelyn A. DeJesus Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Kelly Spang News Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Nathan K. Martin Photography Editor Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Meet the RA living next door

Marni Helfner

As of yesterday I am 25 days into my new life as a Resident Assistant. It is a whole lot more than what I thought it was, and a whole lot different.

I applied for the job for various reasons, including the free double-single, as well as the opportunity to learn about reaching out to others. Some day I plan to go into teaching, and I was hoping that this would be an experience in whether or not I could make it or even enjoy helping others to learn.

I was in for a surprise.

Being an RA is nothing like what I imagined. I have a floor comprised of 57 residents, most of which are first-year or new transfer students. I've never felt so needed in my life.

Everybody has a question — from where to get free condoms to how to hook up a TAU to what the food is like in the Dining Commons (how do you answer that without grimacing in pain?).

The people who had the most questions on move-in day were, of course, the parents. They wanted to know everything from who cleans the bathroom to whether the police on campus are real or rent-a-cops. All the residents wanted was to ditch their parents — after all weren't we all anxious to start the "college (read drinking) experience" as soon as possible?

Although most of my residents are engineering majors, they range from nutrition to wood technology to the infamous undecided. Trying to find stuff for them to do that meets all of their interests is next to impossible, but I'm trying.

I thought that my RA training would prepare me for exactly what my residents would be like, but they don't fit that mold. The issues we explored in training were surprising, but I have yet to deal with any of them. I've dealt with more ordinary stuff, like noise.

If I had treated my residents the way I was trained to, I would have never gotten anywhere with them. When I go to talk to a resident about making noise — I get a better response by treating them as an equal. If I tell a resident "You are making too much noise and disturbing the other residents, I have to document your behavior," I would get laughed right out the door.

However, tell someone, "Look, could you please keep it down? There are other people on the floor and they're trying to study and sleep — wouldn't you mind if I played Eric Clapton loud enough to make your windows vibrate while you were trying to take your nap this afternoon," and it gets a much better response.

The other part of my role as a RA is to make my floor a home. Part of that is to make their living situation as comfortable as possible. To make sure they study and have fun. To make sure someone isn't coming at 3 a.m. every morning loud and drunk.

Some residents are homesick, and some are big partiers; I have to find a common ground for the two. I want to be my residents' friend and helper, I don't want to be their watchdog. it's much more difficult than I could explain with words.

I think the job is much harder than I ever imagined, but also more rewarding than I expected. I'm learning about myself, as well as how other people function and think.

To give an example of what I mean, the night before the first day of classes, I wrote post-it-notes to all my residents saying, "John/Jane have a great first day of classes! — Marni," and put them up on their doors so they would see it first thing in the morning. I did it because when I was young, my dad would always give me a card or present on my first day to remind me someone cared. I thought that would be a nice gesture to my residents — especially to the residents that are first-years or transfer students.

No one on my floor mentioned it to me. I was really hurt by the fact that no one noticed, but I chalked it up to the fact that they either didn't like me, or didn't know how to approach me.

The next night I was on duty, and one of my residents was locked out and needed to have a key signed out. On the way down to get the key, he said, "Thanks for the note yesterday, I had a pretty crappy day, but it was a cool thing to do." I made a connection, no matter how small, with one of my residents.

And that's what being an RA is all about.

Marni E. Helfner is a Collegian columnist.

Getting by with a little help from your friends

Adam Scott Roberts

The American society is obsessed with labeling things. For instance, recall when you were in second grade and your childlike exuberance allowed you to say to someone, "Do you want to be best friends?" The conversation that followed went something like this, "OK. I'll be your best friend." And then one of you said, "Great then, we're best friends."

Now return to reality, to this present day and age, and realize that we are acting like second graders everytime the need to label a relationship comes about. Labeling relationships is so unnecessary and is actually quite foolish. In understanding this concept, the question is why are we obsessed with labeling a certain type of friend on an everyday basis?

Why must an individual have a best friend? The people or persons that really are your close friends don't actually even need a title because deep down within yourself you will know who they are and the kind of friend they are to you. Often, the friend that isn't given a label really is the true friend. However, take any individual in society and they are obsessed with the phrase "Best Friends?" A day cannot go by without hearing at least one person say the phrase "My best friend," in any given conversation.

The answer lies within the individual who is doing the labeling of the relationship. In laymans terms that translates into the word no one wants used to describe himself: insecure.

If you are happy with your friendship, you will know that it is all about giving, and evenly so taking. However, in some friendships, one person can be said to give more to the friendship than another, and this could be the cause for friction or instability in the relationship.

Furthermore, the understanding can change when one person grows in one direction while the other grows in a completely different direction, thus creating the end of this particular "best friend" relationship. Unfortunately, people and friends do grow apart and not always together. In turn, sometimes this particular best friend may turn out to not even be a "real" friend, and it tends to have been a friendship out of convenience.

Take another kind of friendship appropriately labeled the romantic friendship. Romance and the whole set of games that becomes involved in this kind of relationship can be quite confusing. At one point or another you've been asked about a particular someone, "Are you friends? Are you seeing each other? Are you serious? Are you dating? Is he or she your girlfriend or boyfriend?"

Once again labels have come into this spectrum of friendship because dating virtually is based on friends who treat one another differently than a regular friend.

Romance is never without complications. Take the three words that change everything, "I love you." Why is it that as soon as one member of the relationship decides to label the romantic relationship with the L-word everything starts to crumble? Individuals may be afraid of commitment and this relationship that was obviously more than your average friend has now been labeled as LOVE.

If two individuals are engaged in such a relationship then there really is no need for such labeling. The emotions one is feeling towards another and within oneself will carry through in the way one treats the relationship.

Society says to us that unless there is a title or a label in a relationship, it must not otherwise exist. This is the problem with the romantic relationship and the best friend relationships because, with a label, there are rules and expectations to be followed. When one is a best friend, there are certain ways that you must act according to the label given to the specific relationship.

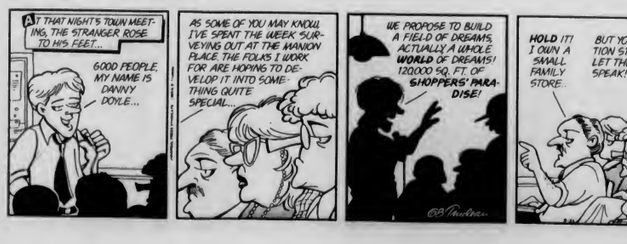
Conformity. Americans have conformed to a specific definition of best friend: "Surpassing all others in quality." Once the word "best" is removed from friend a whole new relationship evolves. And in turn, we have a friend. Rather than define the word according to Webster and the rest of society, I'll break from the norm and give the word a meaning based on my own experiences: A friend is someone who one trusts and can enjoy one another's company. Furthermore, friends take an interest in one another's lives.

However, many of us enjoy a lot of different people's company and, at the same time, they may not be a friend. By removing the labels there are no rules and no expectations or any unnecessary guidelines to follow thus creating a true friendship.

According to some people, they have a zillion friends. Yet in the greater realm of things, if you have one real friend, you've got it all. There is a difference in knowing someone from actually being their friend. To those who find themselves with a zillion friends, evaluate why you feel these people are your friends, and eventually you'll see that your pool of friends has become much smaller.

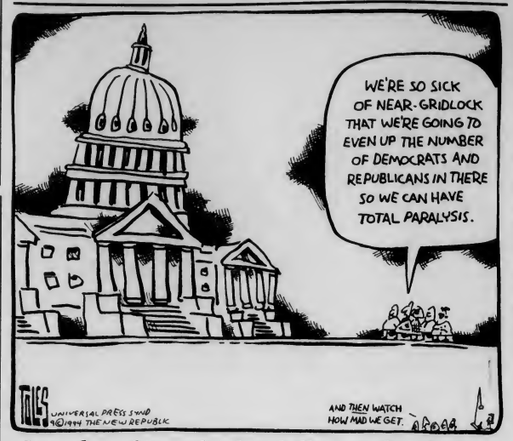
Adam Scott Roberts is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau



AT THAT NIGHT'S TOWN MEETINGS, THE STRANGER ROSE TO HIS FEET...
GOOD PEOPLE MY NAME IS DANNY DOYLE...
AS SOME OF YOU MAY KNOW, I'VE SPENT THE WEEK SURVEYING OUT AT THE MANION PLACE. THE FOLKS I WORK FOR ARE HOPING TO DEVELOP IT INTO SOMETHING QUITE SPECIAL...
WE PROPOSE TO BUILD A FIELD OF DREAMS, ACTUALLY A WHOLE WORLD OF DREAMS! 120,000 SQ. FT. OF SHOPPERS' PARADISE!
HOLD IT! I OWN A SMALL FAMILY STORE...
BUT YOUR SELECTION STINKS, ED! LET THE MAN SPEAK!
©B Trudeau

Opinion/Editorial



WE'RE SO SICK OF NEAR-GRIDLOCK THAT WE'RE GOING TO EVEN UP THE NUMBER OF DEMOCRATS AND REPUBLICANS IN THERE SO WE CAN HAVE TOTAL PARALYSIS.
TALES UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND
WITH THE NEW REPUBLIC
AND THEN WATCH HOW MAD WE GET.

It only takes a lucky dollar and a dream

Arthur C. Stapleton

It could happen to you.

At least that's what they say when speaking of the lottery. Like everybody else, I've dabbled in a little legalized gambling, only to come out of it with one dollar less than I had when I tried. Yet when those projected winnings' figures screen every night, something tells me that one dollar really isn't all that much to chance.

My grandfather played New Jersey's Pick 6 lottery every day of his life for as long as I can remember, until he passed away one year ago yesterday. The closest he ever got to winning was when he hit five out of six numbers, which amounted to peanuts compared to the millions offered today. I guess it takes a lot of dumb luck.

One night this summer my parents and I fantasized about winning when the Pick 6 winnings rose to a whopping $28M. I began to make a list — if I won the lottery, I would ...

• Pay my parents back for sending me to the University of Massachusetts. The cost of attending this fine establishment for out-of-staters has gone from $15K when I was applying to be a freshman in 1991 to nearly $19K for my final year in Amherst. It's the dream of every kid to hit it big and pay his parents back — I may never be famous, but if I had the money, I'd do the same.

• Give my sister $1M just for being my sister. You know what they say about blood and water. I'd put a provision in, though, stating that she couldn't buy a brand new car to drive back and forth to Bergen Community College. As much as she would hate it, I can't fathom seeing her drive to classes in a Mercedes.

• Move the Collegian from the Campus Center Basement to a brand-spanking new building behind the Mullins Center. Ever try sitting in a room with no windows — we do it every day. I wouldn't force anyone to name the building after me; the Collegian's done enough for me already.

Missing classes, new friends, old enemies, untapped fame and fortune ...

• Install new lights in all of the auditoriums on campus. Here's a hint to the higher-ups at this University: if we're going to be required to attend boring lectures as well as stay awake for them, how about making it brighter so we don't have the urge to fall asleep?

• Pay my friend's way through graduate school, beginning next September. She works harder than any student I've ever seen and deserves more credit than I could possibly give. She wants to go to grad school, she's going to grad school.

• Purchase a 1995 Ford Escort LX. I got my first car — a 1984 Buick Regal — this summer; I love my car and I know this is materialistic, but I want new wheels.

• Rent out space in the Bluewall and install something that was taken away years ago — a bar. I could call it Stapes' Place, kind of like Archie Bunker's Place, but different; it would be a sports bar, of course, with new pictures of UMass athletes like Lou Roe, Danielle Borges and Rene Ingoglia, instead of the photos of past athletes like Mike Flanagan in the TOC.

Get me a beer, huh.

Arthur Stapleton Jr. is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Check your facts

To the editor:

I am writing in response to a letter printed on Tuesday, September 20, by a James Resnick. I am not writing this letter as a defense to the speech given at convocation by Student Government Association President Mirran Raphaely but to give some information to the very misinformed Mr. Resnick. Mr. Resnick made comments in his letter stating that he DEMANDS that she resign and that she is a lazy, "do-nothing" president.

Well, if Mr. Resnick had done his research into the working of the SGA president he would see that she was a very important person in the campaign to get legal services back for UMass students and to keep tuition and fees from increasing. Mirran is a very hard working and dedicated person. And to see a person writing a letter about her credibility without even researching the facts is a very misinformed, uneducated person.

He states that, "a president is supposed to be an advocate for the school and its students, not a cynic." I'm sorry to inform him, but this is not high school and a STUDENT president is there to help students and that is the job she has done since she was ELECTED. I emphasize that she was elected, because when reading the letter, Mr. Resnick obviously does not think that the students of this "fine university" smart enough to elect a good president. Well, we did!

If he feels that her speech was inappropriate then he should not complain when his financial aid is cut, or when he loses his housing assignment, or when most of his classes are taught by TA's or even when he can no longer afford to attend this great university. I think this school is a great place, but I am also not naive enough to say it is perfect. If he wants to work to better this school for all the students who attend it then he should start working and stop complaining.

Christine Lopes
Class of '97

Woodstock '94

We posted our "Woodstock or Bust" sign on the back of my friend's car and packed up the last of our things as my four friends and I headed out that early Friday morning, leaving for Saugerties, N.Y. As we sped off onto I-90, we all kept shaking our heads, thinking "yes, we really are going to Woodstock."

We were anxious, excited, scared and had no clue of what to expect for the next three days. As we continued into New York we met up with more and more carloads of hippies heading our way, blowing their horns at us, cheering us on, and holding up peace signs. We blew bubbles as we passed through the tolls jammed with Woodstock traffic and hoped it would be a weekend we would remember for the rest of our lives.

We certainly prepared for what was to come next. We weren't even prepared to pitch our own tents (none of us had ever camped out before). We were five girls from Boston who promised our parents we'd be careful, and actually believed we would use the four changes of clothing, soap, shampoo and razors we brought with us. Yeah, right.

We stayed clean for about five minutes upon arrival. After our tent neighbors helped us pitch the tent, we made our way down to North Stage. We had to walk through what seemed like a foreign refugee camp with the miles and miles of tents that were on top of each other, before we got close enough to see the stage.

We took our first steps towards the lights resembling clouds of purple haze and stepped in, sandals and all, into cool, wet, ankle-deep mud! It didn't matter though, because we were at Woodstock, and we wanted to experience everything we possibly could.

We would never again in our lives have this chance to live in complete anarchy. There was no one at Woodstock to say what we could and couldn't do, and no one to say what was normal and what wasn't. I realized this as I got my first look at the stage, at hundreds of of thousands of bodies dancing to the music, at the crowds and tents that seemed to stretch on forever. It was breathtaking to see something so large and overwhelming.

When people ask me what Woodstock was like, I can never find the right way to describe it. I could talk about the bands, the naked people, or the crowdsurfing, etc.; but the most amazing part about Woodstock had nothing to do with the aspects of it the media sensationalized.

For three days, close to 350,000 people put aside their judgementality and their prejudices to enjoy the music and have a good time. The whole time we were there I didn't see one fight or one act of violence.

People who I would normally never trust if I saw them on the street were the people who never failed to offer us a helping hand, food, shelter, (or illegal substances). People had to depend on each other. Whether it was helping each other down the mudslides, or sharing beef jerky for dinner, or protecting the bearded drunk man who passed out from getting trampled, people were good to each other.

People helped my friends and I make our way through the crowd, linked arm and arm as Joe Cocker sang, "I get by with a little help from my friends." It didn't matter who had purple hair and who wore earrings through their noses and eyebrows; we shared a common bond. We all moved to the music and were moved by the music, we all had slept out in the thunderstorms, and we had all come from miles away to have this once-in-a lifetime experience.

As we drove home through the New York tolls early Monday morning, caked in mud, exhausted and hungry, we looked back on it all as we left. We had survived Woodstock. We loved Woodstock. And we would remember it forever.

Roseann Cohen
Amherst

Film • Music • Theatre • Lifestyles • Books • Art
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
ARTS & LIVING
Thursday September 22, 1994
Weekend Edition

Killers' soundtrack a big mess

By Matt Audette
Collegian Staff

NATURAL BORN KILLERS SOUNDTRACK
Produced by Trent Reznor
Nothing/Interscope Records

The notion of a "concept album" has always been a sketchy one at best. Few artists can pull it off successfully. Pink Floyd did it with the convincing documentation of a rock star's crumbling psyche, while The Who managed to create an entertaining musical tale of a deaf, dumb, and blind pinball whiz.

The first and most important obstacle in this genre that an artist must overcome (and believe it, there are many) is that the album's topic must at least be mildly interesting. This is where the Natural Born Killers Soundtrack falls flat on it's face. While the aforementioned concept albums were both somewhat original in music and text, Killers is a virtual exercise in pointlessness, only rehashing what the film relentlessly bombardcd us with the first time around.

In a nutshell, the story behind the album is that director Oliver Stone, one of the most egotistical directors of our time, approached Nine Inch Nails guru Trent Reznor, the most egotistical musician of our time (come on the guy writes whole albums on how miserable he is), to conceive and produce the soundtrack.

The result is a 27 track collage of mostly previously released songs "cleverly" mixed with dialogue from the film. It is probably supposed to be some grand statement on violence and media or something equally underwhelming, but instead it comes off as nothing more than a vehi-

Turn to SOUNDTRACK, page 6

With Natural Born Killers, Oliver Stone is reaffirmed as America's most contraversial film artist. But the question still remains: Is he a good director?

GETTING STONED

By Jon Lupo • Collegian Staff

It's the most controversial movie of the year. It's inspiring love-it or hate-it responses from film critics, editorial columnists and pundits. It's Natural Born Killers, the new film from two-time Academy Award winning director Oliver Stone. It's also a crock — and an obvious one at that.

Viewing the "bold!" and "daring!" film by Oliver Stone, reinforced something I've always suspected about the director: that his assets and flaws as an artist are so intertwined, they're almost one in the same. Stone's released eight films since winning Best Director for Platoon in just eight years, and he's already impacted on generations of filmgoers. But is it a positive impact? Is Oliver Stone just a mass of contradictions, more interested in pushing buttons than pushing boundaries? Or is he a renegade filmmaker bucking the establishment, using in-your-face techniques to bring controversial issues to light?

From his forceful ferocity in reinventing the sixties — the druggy trance of The Doors or the world-weary Populist sentiment of Platoon — to his right-now depiction of the American wasteland that is the media in Natural Born Killers, Stone has certainly earned his controversial reputation.

But he's paid an artistic price for all this rabble-rousing. It's the fact that, for all of his films' apparent complexity (both in an artistic and thematic sense), they're never more than the sums of their respective neuroses. Stone has a knack for reducing everything to the Big Idea — and pummeling that idea down America's collective throats. This, in turn, reduces the films' potency to a frustratingly simple and annoyingly obvious level.

Stone is hardly the only director to reduce complex issues into simple ones, in many ways, it's the Hollywood standard. However, in Stone's films, he creates his own private paradox: he wants his films to be serious, intricate and to be called art; but he also wants to be the average joe in the back row cheering for the hero. And so all his films — even the good ones — end up undercutting themselves; employing easy moralizing and cliche-ridden plot devices as dramatic cheats in films clearly designed to be more.

It's not surprising that Natural Born Killers is a hit with most audiences; in this day and age of low SAT scores and even lower expectations it's a razzle-dazzle, roller coaster of a movie that manages to point the finger at its audience without entirely placing the blame. One can get off on the film's razor-sharp violence and humor — and then be let off the hook, leaving the media to take full responsibility.

But isn't it more than a little hypocritical for Oliver Stone to blame the media (not as a co-conspirator but as the big villain), considering his career is built on the violent working-out of his personal demons and our national nightmares via media outlets?

One can reach back to Stone's scripts for Midnight Express (1978) and Scarface (1983) for plenty of evidence, but let's stick with Stone's more noted directorial efforts. 1986's Platoon brought Stone his first directing Oscar, a best-picture nod and almost universal acclaim. But, in retrospect, the film's power is derived less from its intellectual artistry than from its raw depiction of Vietnam and its status as the first major Hollywood movie to deal with the wounds of the war.

The violence in Platoon is savage, forceful and unbearably honest; the only problem is, the rest of the movie is a third- rate morality play that wears out its welcome. It's noticeable in the reduction of Chris' (Charlie Sheen) two leaders, Barnes (Tom Berenger) and Elias (Willem Dafoe), from full-bodied individuals to merely good and evil signifiers. They're less characters than symbols — and explicit ones at that. At one point, Elias raises his hands to heaven — an image used for the poster — and it's an embarrassing moment of overstatement.

Then there's Chris' narration, a device used not to expound on the action but substitute for it. Bathos-rich prose aside; it's used less as a narrative elaboration on Stone's visual theme than a dramatic shortcut. It's affecting, but surely not in any sort of skillful way.

Oliver Stone, though, has never been one for subtlety. In Born on the Fourth of July (1989), the second in his Vietnam trilogy (Platoon was the first, 1992's Heaven and Earth the third), this propensity is demonstrated in the film's opening moments. There's a Fourth of July parade going on little Ron Kovic (Tom Cruise) and his true-blue American family are watching gleefully. As the parade grows more sinister and the icons of America become more ominous, none of this is lost, because Stone won't allow it. He doesn't trust his audience to get it — he's too busy leading them to the next pre-digested attraction. Like his next film, the big stinker The Doors, it becomes more apparent that Stone is less a filmmaker than an over-emphatic tour guide.

1990's The Doors illustrates how ripe Stone is for satire — when he's not doing it to himself. It's not just how Stone portrays Jim Morrison (Val Kilmer) as the high-minded voice of the generation, but also the way he presents Morrison and the era. The Doors is filmed in a druggy haze, replete with skewed visuals and Really Important Mythic Imagery It's supposed to be all mysterious and enigmatic; instead it's overbaked melodrama, teetering on the edge of self-parody.

With JFK, however, Stone presented a film whose stylistic and technical complexity was matched with an equally intricate structure and theme. JFK was faulted by many critics as a historically-inaccurate paranoid delusion. And it was, although, the central misinterpretation is in tagging JFK a documentary. As critic Roger Ebert pointed out, it's more a representation and refraction of how we, as a nation, still don't know what happened on that day in Dallas.

Furthermore, it's about how the chasm between us and them (the government) opened up, swallowing faith and trust in our leaders and torpedoing our own notions of truth and honesty.

But most importantly, JFK marked the first time Stone took his audience for more than liberal, uneducated buffoons. Stone manages to throw in every conspiracy ever imagined. Everyone, it seems, was in on it, including Lady Bird Johnson behind the grassy knoll smoking a Cuban cigar. Stone leaves the filtering of the endless stream of factual information, rumor, speculation and innuendo to the viewer. It's your history, he seems to be saying, you figure it out.

Even though the dopey family sequences (featuring a hysterical Sissy Spacek) feel like a redi-made "SNL" skit, the film is a truly a bold move for a director so previously concerned with underlining, ramming and punching up a tunnel-vision point of view.

Natural Born Killers is Stone's latest effort (the less said about 1993's ersatz, triumph of the will Heaven and Earth the better). Killers is a goofy and dramatically conspicuous work that seems more an extension of Oliver Stone's conceit towards his audiences. It's nihilism on a stick; a feel-good movie for doomsday-ers. It's also a film whose message — that the media is bad — is stated like it was a revolutionary call to arms, and Stone as its all-powerful messenger.

He wants to have his cake and eat it too; that is, make a powerful (if an obvious) statement condemning the media's lust affair with violence but at the same time deliver a movie that serves jazzed-up, hip violence as its main component. The brutality in the film is glib one moment, serio-pretentious the next. It's a tightrope few filmmakers and films — with the possible exceptions of Arthur Penn's Bonnie & Clyde and Quentin Tarantino's Reservoir Dogs (who penned the original script for Killers) — can walk successfully.

The film follows the adventures of Mickey and Mallory (Woody Harrelson and Juliette Lewis), two serial killers fleeing their abusive homes and hitting the low road. They kill, kidnap, and otherwise maul through an America cheering them on. You see, M & M have found themselves media celebrities, anti-heroes with axes to grind.

After they are apprehended by a sadistic, media-hungry cop (Michael Madsen), and a sleazy TV producer (Robert Downey, Jr.) capitalizes on their story by setting up an exclusive interview with Mickey to follow the Super Bowl...and to coincide with the eve of Mickey and Mallory's execution.

Much has been made over the "disturbing" nature of Natural Born Killers. Cinematographer Robert Richardson and editors Hank Corwin and Brian Berdan have done masterful work, but unfortunately Oliver Stone's ego gets in the way. Stone whirls in back projection, split-second cuts, overlapping imagery and an eliptical soundtrack with the virtuosity that peaked with JFK. Now, however, it's merely window dressing; not-sly and pointless pyrotechnics designed to cover up the film's shaky and naive premise.

On top of that, he has the schoolboy audacity to say it with a straight face! For a film meant to savage the media, Killers is suprisingly devoid of anything more than dime-store irony. When Mickey and Mallory visit a desert shaman who's full of insights, note that Stone views this not as a reflexive jab at the droopy Native American imagery of The Doors, but as a serious extention of it.

The only bit that manages to poke through is "I Love Mallory," a sequence detailing the abusive home life of Juliette Lewis' Mallory that's presented as a sadistic sitcom, complete with Rodney Dangerfield as the filthy dad and a roaring laugh track. It's one of the few satirical arrows Stone shoots that actually punctures a target; most bounce off, either for lack of timeliness or sheer redundancy.

And yet, in the midst of all this Stone-bashing, let it be known that time and time again he manages to pull stellar performances out of a wide-range of actors. Not just in Natural Born Killers, which highlights a landmark turn by Woody Harrelson (who, with this film, leaves "Cheers" far, far behind) as well as great stuff from Juliette Lewis (contrast Killers with her earlier work in Kalifornia or even Husbands and Wives) and Robert Downey, Jr.

This mark is preceded in his earlier works as well, as Stone's films managed to feature arguably the best performances of Tom Cruise, Val Kilmer, Charlie Sheen, Michael Douglas (Wall Street) and Kevin Costner (JFK). But it is also interesting to mention (though not necessarily derogatory) that, for all these films' considerable star power, they remain, by sheer force of his directorial tenacity, Oliver Stone films. In many ways, that's why people both love and abhor him.

In smaller films, a great performance can save a movie. In Oliver Stone's films, it isn't enough because Stone himself has upped the ante so high, everything else usually

Turn to OLIVER STONE, page 7

COURTESY ENTERTAINMENT WEEKLY

> "[Stone] doesn't trust his audience to get it — he's too busy leading them to the next pre-digested attraction...he's less a film-maker than an over-emphatic tour guide."

COURTESY ORION PICTURES

SHORT CUTS

Edited by Tara MK Connelly

Local book festival tops best of weekend events

Thursday

African Dance with Marilyn Middleton of the Mt. Holyoke dance faculty. All ages are welcome to learn and explore. Thursday, September 22, 7–8:30 p.m., Old Chapel Auditorium.

Marga Gomez, comedian. Take sexuality, Latina/Latino lore, queer politics, catholic guilt and an ambition to make the world a more tolerant place, and you have her hilarious comedy. Sept. 21–24 8 p.m. Bowker Auditorium, UMass. Tickets: $3.50 5–College Students/Seniors, $6 general public.

Dancing at Pearl Street 18+

Friday

Alejandro Escovedo's Thirteen Years with special guests the Ray Mason Band. Campus Center Frontroom. $2 AC, $5 public.

Saturday

Bands On Display, 10th Annual Band Day, during halftime of the UMass–Maine football game. McGuirk Stadium, beginning at 1 p.m. For info call 545–6060, 545–6061.

Barbara Kessler performs acoustic music at the Green River Cafe in Greenfield with Annie Wenz at 9pm.

The Holmes Brothers sing at the Iron Horse in Northampton at 7pm.

Sunday

Book & Plow Festival, Black Sheep Cafe, Amherst. Celebrating literature and the land. 2–5 p.m. Free

Tarika perform the roots music of Madagascar at the Iron Horse in Northampton at 7pm.

Quote of Note

"Isn't it funny? A little popularity and people want to take baths with you."

- HEATHER LOCKLEAR

People & Pop Culture in the News

Hey all you Bon Jovi fans— wondrous news. Mercury record company is set to release a Bon Jovi greatest hits album. Cross Roads will be available in stores October 18 and will include two brand-spanking new tracks "Always" and "Someday will be Saturday Night." So join the rest of the teaming masses and buy the album celebrating Bon Jovi's 10 years of rock.

Another news notable concerns this year's Miss America. This year's reigning queen is the first deaf Miss America ever to put on the crown. However, this led to some complications during a photo shoot. Apparently the flash was too bright and she was temporarily blinded by the light. She told the photographer that because of this she wasn't able to read the photographer lips.

Geffen records is branching out into the mad world of video technology. Their new interactive CD-ROM game Vid Grid features nine great rock music videos. The game is easy enough for a novice to pick up but it's upper levels challenges even the most expert hackers. And don't we all love a good challenge?

For all you fashion frenzied, people keep your eyes peeled for the newest supermodel's attempt to add another notch to her belt of achievements. Naomi Campbell, ex-fiance of U2 bass man Adam Clayton has decided to join the literary world with her new book Swan. It's plot revolves around— ta da! a supermodel. A few people have argued that Campbell never penned the words to her piece de resistance. Her editor's merely shrug it off saying it's a mere technicality and plenty of books have ghost writers. Look for Campbell's book on shelves in October.

According to Entertainment magazine, Coca-Cola executives are pretty miffed at Oliver Stone's usage of their cuddly polar bear in the box office hit Natural Born Killers. People related to the movie say that Stone has a contract with Coca Cola and the footage used in Stone's movie in no way damaged the product or altered it's representation. Plus the ad agency that Coca Cola hired also represents Stone.

Kermit leaves his humble Muppet Show beginnings to create Kermit Unpigged. This montage of songs like FYC's "She drives Me Crazy" will feature a number of celebrities in it's music video. Notable celebrities that have mentioned interest in the project are Brian Austin Green (90210) and David Hasselhoff (Baywatch).

Finally we have Ms. Anna Nicole Smith. Playboy bunny, Guess? model and all-around busty gal. In a recent interview, the nubile model denied marrying her 89-year-old husband for his billions of dollars. "I don't care what people think. I love him, and we're in love, and that's it." Smith also mentioned that if she didn't become a famous movie star or model she would like to have a lot of children— with her husband ... who's 89.

Editors' Cuts

Music Sinead's Latest

Whatever happened to Sinead O'Connor after she tore up the Pope's picture on "Saturday Night Live," refused to let the National Anthem play at her concert, and confessed of her failed suicide attempt? In 1992, she announced to the public that she was retiring from the music world. Her last album, Am I Your Girl?, received mixed reviews and a luke warm reception. But time has passed, memories fade, and O'Connor seems eager to repent her sins.

Her newest release from Chrysalis records, Universal Mother is like a quiet plea for peace. Unlike Lion and the Cobra, with it's loud sounding Mandinka and Troy, Universal Mother is softer, smoother, and even more compelling. From a soothing lullaby to her son ("My Darling Child") and a delicate ballad to a lover ("John I Love You"), O'Connor touches you much in the same her hit "Nothing Compares To You" did in 1990. But it's the acoustic version of "All Apologies," which reeks of sincerity that carries a quiet eeriness even Cobain couldn't draw out.

-Tara MK Connelly

Film Spanking the Monkey

Although it is advertised as a black comedy a la Heathers, let it be known than Spanking the Monkey is a very serious movie. And brave. And daring. And one of the best American films this year.

In a moviegoing season where people are lining up to either be entertained by a lucky dumb guy or by nihilistic serial killers, Spanking the Monkey stands out as a refreshingly adult portrait of dysfunctional family hell on earth. The question is not how does a college kid end up sleeping with his mother, but how come this doesn't happen more often?

Amherst College grad David O. Russell wrote and directed this story of one college kid (Jeremy Davis), his mostly absent father (Carlo Gallo), his laid-up mother (Alberta Wilson) and the summer he's forced to take care of her.

Serious stuff, played out with a strong allegiance to its characters and a very sure hand. Good actors, great performances. In a phrase: see this movie.

— Jon Lupo

Book Generation Ecch!

Generation X. Slackers. Twentysomethings. The 13th Generation. Tired of all these labels that have been graced upon us by our elders and a finger-pointing media? Than make sure to put Generation Ecch! on your required reading list. The book which is co-authored by social wits Jason Cohen and Michael Krugman is a in-depth scrutiny of our generation and all the wacky and silly things we do to try an secure some sort of identity.

WARNING: Absolutely nothing is sacred in Cohen and Krugman's literary world. From MTV and The Real World, to Courtney Love and Quentin Tarantino, these guys have a problem with it all.

Carefully dissecting today's pop culture chapter by chapter, the author's target such topics as movies, television, music, and marijuana as a fashion statement with a careful and often uproarious eye.

Complete with cartoons by illustrator Evan Dorkin, Generation Ecch! will make you take a good look in the mirror, and hopefully give you a good laugh.

- Matt Audette

■ Soundtrack

continued from page 5

cle to promote Stone's vision.

Traditionally in the past soundtracks were supposed to collect a group of songs from a movie and present them for the listeners enjoyment. With Killers Reznor has created a album that is so dependent on the film itself that it can not possibly stand on its own.

Reznor's philosophy here apparently seems to be: you bought the ticket, you saw the movie, now bring it home with you.

Thankfully there are some decent tunes wedged in admist all the excess hoopla. The Cowboy Junkie's delicate interpretation of The Velvet Underground's "Sweet Jane" and Bob Dylan's "You Belong To Me" are both extremely affecting songs, only Reznor manages to dilute their power by overdubbing random voice-overs from the film about "angels" and how much Mickey and Mallory love each other. If Stone only knew how silly his film's dialogue would sound taken out of context, maybe this project would never have got off the ground floor.

Only rabid fans (and I do mean rabid) of the movie could possibly enjoy this excursion into self-indulgence. Those who have yet to see the film should not even bother. With Natural Born Killers Reznor has fallen short of the masterpiece he and Stone probably intended. Instead, sadly enough, he has rather shamelessly handed us nothing more than a cheap souvenir. D

My eyes teared as I hacked my desert dry cough at the road dust that swirled up from behind the passing semi. Yes, I was lost... a long way from the rotting New York cul-de-sac I had called my home. Why HAD I eaten that moldy bread. Why DID I let that circus bear break my heart.
Mass. Daily Collegian
Wherever you go, There you are!

READING BY ABBY
PALM TAROT & ESP READING
All readings Confidential and Results Guaranteed
HOURS 9 A.M. To 9 P.M.
215 Russell Street Route 9 Hadley, MA 01035
(413) 586-6711
Walk-ins are Welcome

NEW IN AMHERST
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Traditional Chinese Cuisine
Relax and enjoy yourself at our beautiful newly remodeled facility including our Sunny Greenhouse.
"Largest Chinese Restaurant in Hampshire County"
PLENTY OF FREE PARKING
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK • 11:30 AM - 10 PM
FRIDAYS & SATURDAYS TILL 11 PM
351 Northampton Rd. • Rte. 9 • Amherst
Corner of Rte. 9 & University Drive • 256-8800

NORTHAMPTON'S PREMIER EXCITEMENT CENTER!
NORTHAMPTON BOWL
525 Pleasant St. Northampton, MA 01060
584-4830
STRIKE OUT in your SPARE TIME!
FIRST GAME FREE
For Everyone In Your Party
(Limit one game per person per day when you bowl more than one game)
NORTHAMPTON BOWL
525 Pleasant St. Northampton, MA 01060
584-4830
Valid ID Required
with this coupon - expires 10/28/94

Multiband POPS
Friday, September 30
8 p.m. at the
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst
TICKETS:
$12 General Public
$9 Senior Citizens
Children 16 & Under & Students
$8 Groups of 15 or more
$3 UMass Students
20th Annual Spectacular Showcase of 500 Performers
Minuteman Marching Band • Jazz Ensembles
• Wind Ensembles • Dances & More
Co-Sponsored By:
Advocate
CNN WTTT 1430
DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
WHCN
Tickets available at the Mullins Center Box Office and, for an additional cost at all Ticketmaster Locations and by the phone. (413) 733-2500

KICK OFF THE SEASON WITH THESE GREAT VALUES AT...
LIQUORS 44
BEER WINE LIQUORS
BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS $9.99 +DEP
ICE HOUSE CASE OF 2-12 PACK BOTTLES $12.99 +DEP
MOOSEHEAD BEER CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BOTTLES $12.99 +DEP
SAMUEL ADAMS OCTOBERFEST 6-PACK BOTTLES $4.99 +DEP
GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY & ANNIVERSARY LIGHT CASE OF 24-12 OZ. CANS $7.29 +DEP
1/2 KEGS ICE HOUSE, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LIGHT, BUD, BUD LIGHT, BUD ICE & LOWENBRAU $39.99 +DEP
WINE of the Month
BANDIERA CHARDONNAY & CABERNET SAUVIGNON "Great Value from the Napa Valley" 750 ML $4.99
CARLO ROSSI WINES ALL TYPES 4.0 LITERS $6.99
RIUNITE WINES ALL FLAVORS 1.5 LITERS $5.99
GLEN ELLEN WHITE ZINFANDEL 1.5 LITERS $5.49
COLUMBIA CREST CHARDONNAY 750 ML $4.99
NEW Krush COMBOS FLAVORS: MUDSLIDE, MILKQUAKE & ALMOND MOO/MOO 4-PACK BOTTLES $4.49
ABSOLUT VODKA 1.75 LITERS $19.99
CANADIAN MIST WHISKEY 1.75 LITERS SALE $11.99 MAIL-IN REBATE -$4.00 COST AFTER REBATE $7.99
GILBEY'S GIN 1.75 LITERS $11.49
MCGREGOR'S SCOTCH 1.75 LITERS SALE $13.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -$5.00 COST AFTER REBATE $8.49
CUERVO GOLD TEQUILA 750 ML $10.49
BACARDI RUM LIGHT & DARK 750 ML $7.29
We Accept All Cans and Bottles for Redemption
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY Campus Plaza/Route 9 253-9344
HOLYOKE 30 Lincoln St. 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 9/22/94 THRU WEDS. 9/28/94
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Woodstock veteran Richie Havens to play Noho

By Jorma Kansonen
Collegian Staff

Open up your mind. Picture it, if you will...

There is a vast expanse of people, over a quarter of a million strong, all gathered in a field in central New York. A feeling of peace and tolerance pervades the air as the sheer mass of humanity battles the elements, mostly the mud, to gain a closer conception of their society.

What is lost here is the massive endorsements of major companies, and where it is placed temporally is twenty-five years ago from this past summer.

But this Saturday night at the Iron Horse in downtown Northampton, the opening act of the original Woodstock Music and Arts Fair will be performing, and you'll have a chance to witness a small piece of history. The legendary Richie Havens will bring his own brand of folk music, flavored with his soulful singing style, to the intimate confines of this legendary venue.

Having somewhat fallen out of the commercial side of the music business, the lack of exposure in the larger musical picture has not effected him adversely.

"I really sing songs that move me. I'm not in show business and never was," explained Havens in a May 1993 interview, in the Denver Post. "I'm in the communications business. That's what it's about for me."

From his appearances at our own 1992 Spring Concert and the Presidential Inauguration, to his stunning version of "Just Like A Woman" at last year's Bob Dylan tribute show at Madison Square Garden, the lack of extreme commercial success has not lightened his influence in the business.

His commitment to creating quality music has now begun a new phase. His latest recording, Cuts To The Chase, is his first for FORWARD, a Rhino label that devotes itself to new music of established artists. The three decades that span his career, of singing songs of social freedom and world brotherhood, seems to be on the right track for continuance in the years to come.

Saturday night's Richie Havens all ages show, with opening act Dayna Kurtz, at the Iron Horse on 20 Center Street in Northampton will begin at 7pm. Tickets are $16.50, and are available at the Iron Horse (584-0610) and the Northampton Box Office (586-8686/1-800-The Tick).

■ Oliver Stone

continued from page 5

crumbles around the actors. It's that way in Killers, where meaty performances are surrounded by toothless commentary and avant garde technical wizardy so over-the-top it merely gives headaches instead of head-spins.

In the long haul, Natural Born Killers will be regarded as an important movie, even if right now it doesn't deserve it. Time will give the film the edges and significance it doesn't have now. And Oliver Stone will go down as one of our country's most noted directors, if only for his Otto Preminger-like way of pushing boundaries and rocking the pop-cultural boat.

In a recent article by Robert Stone (no relation), the writer contends that Oliver Stone's films (particularly his sixties works) "will serve as Hollywood's take on the period, which means that henceforth it will be more real than the vanished reality." In 20 years, will Natural Born Killers serve as Hollywood's version of the nineties? In a time where we, as Americans, look toward pop culture to tell us what we like, who we are and to soothe the wounds and answer the troubling questions of our larger culture, Oliver Stone's films have already served their purpose — and done their damage.

Jon Lupo is the Collegian Arts & Living Editor.

Still crazy after all these years

COURTESY MARK SELINGER/WARNER BROS.

Cheap Trick are still kicking after 15 years in the rock and roll business. Catch their latest incarnation when the guys take center stage at Pearl Street in Northampton on Sunday, September 25 at 8 p.m.

Festival explores love, life, death & Time Indefinite

By Michael MacLean
Collegian Staff

This Friday and Saturday night, moviegoers of all kinds will be treated to a plethora of award winning films in Sage Hall at Smith College. The festival, presented by the Western Massachusetts chapter of the Design Industries Foundation Fighting Aids (DIFFA), is billed as Film 4 Life, and will feature twenty-four films and videos by various New England artists.

The festival's scheduled to open Friday, September 23 at 7:30 p.m. A special opening night program will feature Time Indefinite, by Ross McElwee, the maker of Sherman's March. It will be followed by a small presentation by McElwee. A small reception will then follow. McElwee won three New England Film and Video Festival awards for Sherman's March and has achieved national recognition as a filmmaker. The other activities will start after McElwee's presentation at 10:30 p.m., with six short films. Genres range in format from amusing animations to documentary style narratives, and include several shorts that have received awards for their experimental qualities.

On Saturday, September 24, at 6 p.m. the festival continues with featured local artist Christopher Johnson and his video, Letter to Tennessee. Johnson is a junior at Amherst College and received the 1994 Festival Directors' Honorable Mention award. Other evens consist of three shows: the Twilight, Dusk and Prime Time Shows. The Twilight Show features two documentaries and two experimental shorts, including the co-winner of the 1992 Best of Festival Award, Shayna Maidels: Orthodox Jewish Teenage Girls, by Lisa M. Kors.

The Dusk Show consists of five films are featuring a wide variety of subject matter from a blind date to a family's personal experience. Also being presented is the winner of the 1993 Art New England Animation Award, entitled Perpetual Motion, by Karen Aqua.

Closing the night is the Prime Time Show. Eight films will be shown among them being the other co-winner of the 1992 Best of Festival Award, Which is Scary, a documentary by Paula Gauthier. Four other documentaries and three animated shorts will round off the festivals events. The Film 4 Life is certain to provide a diverse showcase of the talents of local filmmakers, as well as benefit the fight against AIDS.

Tickets can be purchased for individual time slots as well as packages encompassing entire days. Tickets can be purchased at the Northampton Box Office and Thornes Marketplace. For more info please call (413) 533-2426.

NRA BASIC PISTOL COURSE
NORTHAMPTON REVOLVER CLUB
CALL 268-3596 FOR DETAILS

CONTACT LENS SERVICE
At The University Health Services
We take great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.
All fittings are done by an eye doctor with experience in contact lens care and in solving contact lens problems.
Unlimited follow-up visits are available to you under the UHS Eye CAre Savings Plan at no additional cost.
Reduced costs on contact lenses are available to you under the UHS Eye Care Savings Plan.
If you tear or damage a contact lens within 45 days of receiving it, we will replace it for you at no extra cost.
Same day replacement of contact lenses in many cases due to our large in house inventory.
Contact lenses can be mailed to you at no extra charge for postage.
Convenient hours and on-campus location.
Free sample start-up solutions, as available.
Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Care Program over 19 years has been consistently excellent.
"I invite you to use the Eye Services at UHS."
Frederick H. Bloom, O.D.
Eye Care Program
University Health Services
Call 549-2671 ext 244

SMART SHOPPERS SHOP SMART!
Classic Consignments
Designer, Brand Name Women's and Children's Clothing Sold and Consigned 256-0661
Tues.-Sat. 10:30-5:30
860 Main St., Amherst
on PVTA Bus Route

Hadley Coin-Op Laundromat
206 Russell St./Rt.9
Open 7 Days 6am-11pm
Top Loaders: $1.00 • Dbl Loaders: $1.50

The ALANA Lecture Series
PRESENTS
JOHN TRUDELL
Native American Activist
THURSDAY
SEPTEMBER 22, 1994
7:30PM
CAMPUS CENTER
AUDITORIUM
Free and Open to the General Public
SPONSORED BY: THE OFFICE OF THIRD WORLD AFFAIRS

Yes, it's always a fine day for a barbeque. Ahh nothing like the hot coals to cause a man to break down in a fit of hysterical crying. "WHY DIDN'T I LISTEN TO MY MOTHER AND BECOME A DOG GROOMER!!!!" COLLEGIAN
NEVER TOO LATE TO CHANGE

Designer Cuts Perfumes
Bring A Friend! Bring A Friend!
Facials • Haircolor • Waxing • Massage • Manicures & More
Aveda Natural Aromatherapy Permanent Wave with Pure Flower and Plant Essences
Shear Bliss
Full Service Holistic Salon
Aromatherapy Perm SPECIAL FREE
8oz. Aveda Shampoo ($7.95 VAlue) With Every Booked Perm
253-2322
116 So. Amherst - Accross From Dairy Mart On UMass/Hampshire Bus Line

LOOK AT THE SAVINGS SCOTTS HAS IN STORE FOR YOU!
SALE GOOD NOW THRU 9/25/94
Scott's LIQUORS
LITE ICE 24-12 oz. Cans $12.99 + dep
ZHENKA VODKA 1.75 LTR. SALE PRICE $8.99 MAIL-IN REBATE $2.00 FINAL COST $6.99
AMERICAN BEER 24-12 oz. Cans $7.29 + dep
PEACHTREE SCHNAPPS 750 ML $6.99
COORS EXTRA GOLD 24-12 oz. Bar Bottles $10.99 + dep
BUD & BUD LIGHT 1/2 KEGS $39.99
ROUND HILL CHARDONNAY 750 ML $5.99
BUDWEISER 24-16 oz. Bottles $13.99 + dep.
Tele-check for your personal check
We now have all Mass Lottery games!
WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE!
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst • 549-2592
Located Next to Victory Super Market

Bruce Hornsby finds right blend of big concerts, smaller venues on '94 tour

By Jim Strader
Associated Press

YORK, Pa. — In a summer of big concerts and comeback tours, Bruce Hornsby is playing it low key.

While the Rolling Stones, Eagles and the duo of Elton John and Billy Joel fill stadiums and entertain tens of thousands, the Grammy-winning pianist is playing places such as the Strand, a 1,100-seat theater far from the glare of the spotlight.

Hornsby and his band are playing about a dozen concerts in small venues this summer and fall, in-between opening shows for Bonnie Raitt.

"We book a lot of them sort of for our musical sanity. We're not used to playing for just an hour," he said before a concert in York.

The 70-show tour with Raitt, which continues through November, has kept Hornsby and his six-piece band busy, but maybe not busy enough.

"She has just been bending over backwards to make us comfortable," Hornsby said. "But musically, it's a little stifling."

What keeps Hornsby sane and loose is the kind of show he played in York, a central Pennsylvania town about 90 minutes north of Baltimore. More than anything else, the concert gave him time.

Hornsby spent three full hours on stage, running through 28 songs — not all of them his own and none of them mere copies of his recorded songs. He played two versions of "The Valley Road," one an expanded rendering of the cut on his Scenes From the Southside album, the other a shuffling adaptation born out of the 18 months he played with the Grateful Dead.

Hornsby, 39, said small shows give him a chance to explore a wider range of songs and put him closer to his audience.

"There's definitely a certain intimacy," Hornsby said. "I play the acoustic piano. . . I feel very inadequate in a place that holds 18,000 people playing at a pianissimo level.

"You know the people on the lawn can't hear it."

COURTESY BMG MUSIC

Bruce Hornsby's latest release is entitled Harbor Lights and features guest performers like Bonnie Raitt, Jerry Garcia and Branford Marsalis.

Missing musical subtleties was not a problem at the Strand, where no seat is more than 30 rows from the stage.

"The smaller, the better," Hornsby said. "You feel like you can really do anything and it's going to reach the audience." The evening was filled with give-and-take. Song requests came in shouts from the seats and on slips of paper delivered to the stage.

One spectator walked brazenly to the piano and handed his request to Hornsby, prompting him to remark with some candor on the fan's gutsiness.

Late in the show, Hornsby invited the audience to dance on stage during a throbbing version of Buddy Holly's "Not Fade Away," with Hornsby playing accordion and eventually climbing atop his grand piano.

It's all part of Hornsby's effort to make the music accessible. "We'll do anything. We'll take requests," he said. "The musicans on stage won't know where I'm going. It makes for a music-in-the-present-tense gig instead of just playing the records."

That flexibility showed as Hornsby gave his band a chance to shine.

A pair of horn players, a keyboardist and bass player backed Hornsby along with his longtime drummer John Molo, formerly of The Range.

Backup singer Debbie Henry took the lead vocal on the Raitt tune, "I Can't Make You Love Me," while Hornsby duplicated his keyboard work from the version of the song on Raitt's latest album.

The intimacy with the audience returned at the end of the show. As Hornsby allowed the last notes of "Fields of Gray" to fade, a woman in the dark theater lifted her voice to call out, "Thank you, Bruce."

Aspiring rockers to play Noho

Versus, Tuscadaro highlight 1994 Teenbeat Circus Tour

By Matt Audette
Collegian Staff

Indie-rock enthusiasts take note! This Friday night the Bay State Cabaret in Northampton will play host to the Teenbeat Circus Tour '94, which will feature the aspiring talents of Versus, Air Miami, Blast Off Country Style and Tuscadaro.

The Virginia-based Teenbeat label, the brainchild of ex- Unrest frontman Mark Robinson, has labored somewhat in obscurity for quite some time now. Recently it has come into the spotlight due in part to the success of bands such as the now defunct Unrest, Versus and Eggs.

The show which is a sort of touring showcase for the label, is riding high on the buzz of headliners Versus. The New York pop-art trio debut album The Stars Are Insane is currently the label's bestseller, and has received heaps of critical praise. Securing their authenticity with a handful of singles released throughout the last few years on various labels, the band has been churning out some of the best pop songs in the musical world today. They also have earned a much heralded live reputation, due in part to incessant touring an opening slot on part of Atlantic recording artist's Jawbox 1994 tour.

While the name Air Miami might not ring a bell to the Stellar Stereo Listener, it may. The band which is relatively new to the music scene, has arisen from the smoldering ashes of Unrest, and features ex-members Mark Robinson and Bridgett Cross as co-frontman as well as members of Royal Trux and Viva Satellite. While the bands first couple of singles are rumored to resemble a slightly more ethereal Unrest, the band will get their true test when they release their first full-length album on 4AD, in order to fulfill Unrest's contractual obligations.

Lesser known Teenbeat acts Tuscadaro (complete with silver mini-skirts and all) and Blast Off Country Style will open the show with their brand of off-kilter pop.

The Teenbeat Circus Tour 94 will be held at the Baystate Cabaret in Northampton. The show is 21+ and the doors open at 9 p.m. Admission is $6.

American plays take center stage as United Kingdom is flooded with U.S. theater pieces

By Matt Wolf
Associated Press

LONDON — Want to see an English show? England may not be the best place this fall, a new season with a heavy American accent.

The most eagerly awaited new play is the London bow of Edward Albee's current off-Broadway smash, Three Tall Women, which won this year's Pulitzer Prize for drama.

Across the River Thames, the Royal National Theater's midsized Lyttelton auditorium has three plays running in repertory, all of them American.

Up north in the Yorkshire town of Scarborough, Herb Gardner's Broadway hit, Conversations With My Father, is having its British premiere. The star is Judd Hirsch, who won a Tony during the play's New York run three years ago.

And so it goes up and down the country, from a West End rifle with Broadway musical imports — revivals of She Loves Me and Fiddler on the Roof — to Scotland where off-Broadway actor-writer David Drake (The Night Larry Kramer Kissed Me) and comedian Will Durst were among the sensations of this year's Edinburgh festival.

The year's most-discussed new plays have been by David Mamet (The Cryptogram) and Arthur Miller (Broken Glass), American icons both.

In November, Sam Shepard weighs in with a revival at London's Donmar Warehouse of True West, while David Beaird's Gothic comedy, 900 Oneonta (highly praised by British, if not American, critics), suggests a poor man's Tennessee Williams, another local favorite.

Why this trans-Atlantic focus?

"We've created our own vacuum," said Alan Ayckbourn, the prolific English dramatist who will direct Conversations With My Father as the latest in a series of American stagings that included Gardner's A Thousand Clowns in Scarborough and Miller's A View From the Bridge at the National Theater in London and on the West End.

"You go where the quality is," Ayckbourn said in an interview. "We've pursued a policy over so many years of ... resolute neglect of encouraging new writing that it's beginning to pay off; the writing seems less positive."

American plays, by contrast, are "pretty gutsy."

"They address modern issues and capture the feeling of the time," he added. "Even with a controversial play like Oleanna (by Mamet), you feel you've had an evening when you come out."

These days American writing doesn't have to be controversial to get a British airing. Even as the Bush Theater was staging Kentucky writer Naomi Wallace's angry Gulf War drama, In the Heart of America, the Southwark Playhouse was trumpeting a bit of 1930s Broadway esoterica: Paul Osborn's On Borrowed Time.

And while Wendy Wasserstein's Broadway comedy The Sisters Rosensweig awaits a West End transfer to the Old Vic Theater, an old warhorse — William Gibson's The Miracle Worker, about Helen Keller and her tenacious instructor, Annie Sullivan, continues through Oct. 8 at Wyndham's Theater.

Peter Wilkins, managing director at Duncan Weldon productions which hopes to move Conversations With My Father to the West End in February, said commercial producers are less likely to risk a new British play than they once were.

"The economics are such that you can't afford to, so if you can bring over a play that does have some track record, you're in a sense hedging your bets a bit," Wilkins said.

To that end, Duncan Weldon will bring to London next summer Neil Simon's Broadway play, Laughter on the 23rd Floor.

Dominic Dromgoole, artistic director of the Bush, a fringe venue devoted to new writing, attributed the ever-expanding American presence to a richer, less fraught theater culture in England than in the United States.

"There's a sense that you're well-served (in England), that there's an inbred respect for the writer," said Dromgoole, whose theater has premiered American plays by Wallace, Mark Lee (California Dog Fight), and Tony Kushner (A Bright Room Called Day) often in advance of their New York runs.

Dromgoole, too, took a more optimistic view of his countrymen, noting a positive trend of people taking on subjects close to home and writing them; there's a vibrant and youthful writing scene.

He pointed to the West End transfer Sept. 26 of Beautiful Thing by Jonathan Harvey, a 26-year-old Liverpool writer who will have two major plays in London this fall. (The other, Babies at the Royal Court, opened Sept. 9.)

"That sense that only American drama is booming, full of energy, full of rawness — I think that's baloney" said Dromgoole. The writers coming through here have enormous confidence in their own voice."

Still, a glance at the autumn lineup — the Jonathan Harvey jamboree aside — confirms Americans are ruling the day.

The Nov. 1 bow of Three Tall Women follows intensive bidding by five producers for the rights. Dame Maggie Smith heads the cast. Howard Davies opened his National Theater revival on Thursday of Lillian Hellman's The Children's Hour. The play completes an all-American Lyttelton repertory that includes Tennessee Williams' Sweet Bird of Youth and Miller's Broken Glass.

We're wicked cool, we're sassy, we're eclectic, we're all the cliches and more.

We're Arts & Living. And we want you. Help us find new and exciting adjectives. We're running out of ideas. So don't be shy and come on down. The worst thing that could happen to you is that we laugh at you or make you cry. Take a chance ...

The Sisters of
Kappa Kappa Gamma

Invite All Interested University Women
to attend Open Rush September 20 - October 4, 1994

Thursday, September 22	6 - 8 pm
Sunday, September 25	1 - 3 pm
Tuesday, September 27	6 - 8 pm
Thursday, September 29	5 - 7 pm
Sunday, October 2	1 - 3 pm
Monday, October 3	6 - 8:30 pm

We look forward to seeing you there!
32 Nutting Ave. 549-2646 Emily

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

PAWSS
THE FIVE COLLEGE PROGRAM IN PEACE & WORLD SECURITY STUDIES
Presents:
"SEXUAL POLITICS AT THE END OF THE COLD WAR"
A lecture by:
CYNTHIA ENLOE
Clark University
Thursday, September 29th
7:30 PM
Converse Hall
Amherst College
This program is free, open to the public and wheelchair accessible. For more information call PAWSS at 582-5519.

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Bud Light bottles $7.99 / 12 pk.
S.S. Pierce Vodka $8.99 1.75l
Bud Dry Bar Bottles $10.99 / case
Lionshead Pilsner Beer $7.99 case bottles
$14.99
Fosters Lager $7.99/ 12 pk.
Pilsner Urquell $5.69/ 6 pk.
Outrageous Bock Beer 12.99/ case, bott.
"Lite" 16oz Cans $7.99/ 12pk
Sam Adams or Catamount $9.95/ 12pk (Your Choice)
STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact Step Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycles
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

Country bumpkins, pot subjects of book

By Jennifer Bundy
Associated Press

LEWISBURG, W.Va. — Pinckney Benedict lives as a country writer, using Appalachian people and places to tell universal stories that interest readers around the world.

Benedict, 30, published the first of two collections of short stories seven years ago. Now he is basking in the positive criticism of his first novel, Dogs of God, published early this year by Doubleday. It's in its second printing and will be released in paperback in January.

Dogs of God is set in West Virginia and features a 12-fingered drug lord, mountain marijuana growers, a corrupt sheriff, a naive federal drug agent, criminal drifters, a small-time boxer, a religious hermit and lots of violence.

"A lot of the physical elements in the book are imaginative images of the real thing," Benedict said in a recent interview at his Greenbrier County farmhouse, about a mile from Lewisburg. He does not intend his characters to be stereotypes of hillbillies, however. He doesn't care if the images please readers, yet he is pleased if his work is popular.

Benedict said his transition from writing short stories to novels was natural and profitable. "My natural inclination is in sync with the nature of the marketplace," he said. The New York Times once called him a "voice of the border states." That may be accurate, he said. West Virginia has been disowned by the rest of the nation; its a no man's land between cultural continents, Benedict said.

"When I went to school in Pennsylvania, people made fun of me for the way I talk. When I'm in Mississippi, nobody thinks of me as a brother of the Confederacy," he said.

Benedict is working on his second novel in his home office with chili-sauce red walls. The room runs along one side of a turn-of-the century farmhouse he shares with his writer-wife, Laura Philpot, and their 2-year-old daughter, Nora.

The book is about a boy growing up on a dairy farm in the late 1960s and early '70s and is more autobiographical than his previous work, Benedict said. Benedict, who inherited his first name from his father's family, grew up on the 700-acre dairy farm where he still lives.

Although he went to high school at The Hill School in Pottstown, Pa., college in New Jersey and graduate school at the University of Iowa, all his memories are linked to the farm which his brother and father run.

"I'm desperately homesick when I'm away," he said.

The farm is a quiet hideaway, except on the days when an airplane in the presidential fleet practices touch-and-go maneuvers at the nearby Greenbrier Valley Airport. As the airplane comes and goes at five-minute intervals, conversation becomes impossible. "It has caused me to hate the federal government more than I did," Benedict said. Benedict hates politics, in which his father has been involved since 1974. Benedict does not want to follow in his father's footsteps, but not because he doesn't have political opinions. He is radically conservative, a fact he is not eager to discuss. "Being a conservative in the arts today is to sign your own death certificate," Benedict said.

He has declined requests to write about politics because his father's political career would make his political opinions suspect, he said. Benedict's respect for his father, however, is intense. Benedict's secure family ties might be one reason for the lack of self-pity in his work, Banks said.

He has won the Chicago Tribune's Nelson Algren Award, the James Michener Fellowship from the Writer's Workshop at the University of Iowa and a fellowship to the Breadloaf Writers Conference in Middlebury, Vt.

Benedict is teaching creative writing this fall at Princeton University. Benedict will finish his new novel this winter and he and a friend, Tony Naiker, are working on a musical about Edgar Allan Poe, called "Poe." Their musical "A," based on Nathaniel Hawthorne's "The Scarlet Letter," recently debuted at the Greenbrier Music Festival.

"My main goal is to provide for my family and take a vacation occasionally," Benedict said. "If I have a goal, it is to write for the rest of my life and to be better at it 10 years from now than I am now."

'Art' benefits life

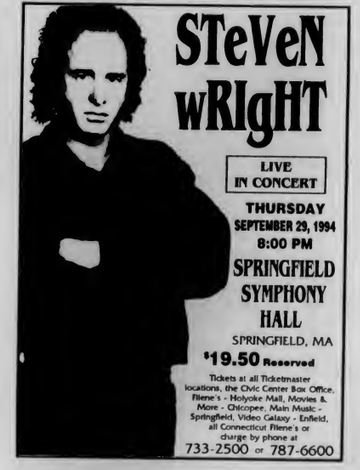
COURTESY JOANNA ROETHKE

Art is an Enemy, a new trio from D.C. with hip-hop influences and political lyrics, is just one of the trio of performers at a benefit concert for ARISE for Social Justice and the Liberator to be held tonight at 8 p.m. in the Commonwealth room in the student union. Admission is $4 and includes a free bagel.

The new queen of comedy

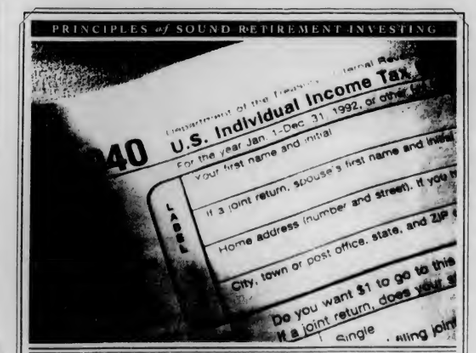
COURTESY PABLO PRIETTO

Take sexuality, Latina/Latino lore, queer politics, Catholic guilt and an ambition to make the world a more tolerant place and you have the hilarious comedy of Marga Gomez. Gomez will bring her new laugh-filled show, A Line Around the Block or My Art Belongs to Daddy, to Bowker Auditorium September 21 – 24. Sponsored by the New WORLD Theatre.



STeVeN wRIgHT
LIVE IN CONCERT
THURSDAY
SEPTEMBER 29, 1994
8:00 PM
SPRINGFIELD SYMPHONY HALL
SPRINGFIELD, MA
$19.50 Reserved
Tickets at all Ticketmaster locations, the Civic Center Box Office, Filene's - Holyoke Mall, Movies & More - Chicopee, Main Music - Springfield, Video Galaxy - Enfield, all Connecticut Filene's or charge by phone at 733-2500 or 787-6600

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
for travel beginning November 1
Fares by Roundtrip
LONDON $183 $345
PARIS $214 $428
MADRID $250 $500
SAN JOSE/ COSTA RICA $224 $448
TOKYO $749
Fares from over 75 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia. Some tickets valid to one year. Most tickets allow changes. Eurailpasses issued on the spot.
Customs Immigration & departure taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l student I.D. cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
342 Madison Ave., 19th Fl., NY, NY 10173
800-272-9676
212-986-8420
In NYC



PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING
U.S. Individual Income Tax
For the year Jan. 1-Dec. 31, 1992, or other
Your first name and initial
If a joint return, spouse's first name and initial
Home address (number and street). If you
City, town or post office, state, and ZIP
Do you want $1 to go to this
If a joint return, does your
LABEL

UNFORTUNATELY, THIS IS WHERE PEOPLE ARE PUTTING TOO MANY RETIREMENT DOLLARS.

Every year, a lot of people make a huge mistake on their taxes. They don't take advantage of tax deferral and wind up sending Uncle Sam money they could be saving for retirement.

Fortunately, that's a mistake you can easily avoid with TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs not only ease your current tax-bite, they offer a remarkably easy way to build retirement income—especially for the "extras" that your regular pension and Social Security benefits may not cover. Because your contributions are made in before-tax dollars, you pay less taxes now. And since all earnings on your SRA are tax-deferred as well, the money you don't send to Washington works even harder for you. Down the road, that can make a dramatic difference in your quality of life.

What else makes SRAs so special? A range of allocation choices—from the guaranteed security of TIAA to the diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity—all backed by the nation's number one retirement system.

Why write off the chance for a more rewarding retirement? Call today and learn more about how TIAA-CREF SRAs can help you enjoy many happy returns.

Benefit now from tax deferral. Call our SRA hotline 1 800-842-2733, ext. 8016.

TIAA CREF
Ensuring the future for those who shape it.™

1 SRA contributions are withheld by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800 842-2733, ext. 8016 for a prospectus. Read the prospectus carefully before you invest or send money.

4Seasons
Thank you for your Patronage—The Krupczak Family
Rte. 9 • Hadley • 584-8174 Between Burger King & Dunkin Donuts

BUD DRY 24/12 oz Bar Bott. $10.99 + dep or $10.69 + dep. (10 + Cases)	M.G.D. & M.G.D.Lt. 24/12 oz Cans $10.99 + dep or $10.69 + dep. (10 + Cases)	PABST 24/12 oz Bar Bott $8.99 + dep or $8.69 + dep. (10 + Cases)	BUSCH & BUSCH Lt. 24/12 oz cans $9.99 + dep or $9.89 + dep. (10 + Cases)	AMERICAN 24/12 oz cans $7.29 + dep or $6.99 + dep. (10 + Cases)	Bud Lt., Bud Ice, Michelob, Michelob Lt., M.G.D., Ice House, Lite, Lite Ice, Lowenbrau 1/2 BBL $39.99 +dep.
Molson Ice 24/12 oz cans $13.89 + dep	Southern Comfort 750 ml $6.99	Jim Beam 750 ml $6.99	Vodka Zhenka 1.75l $8.99	Not only do we meet our competitors sales*... We also have our own! Don't be fooled by the rest, drive a minute longer and shop at the best... And... WE DELIVER * Most Sale Items
M/D 20-20 All Flavors 750 ml $1.99	GO UMASS FOOTBALL	Keg of the Week! 1/2 BBL BUD $36.99 + dep
Fraternities call for a price quote!	Cheapest Ice Prices in the Area!	Busch 1/2 BBL $36.99 + dep	Natural Lt 1/2 BBL $32.99 + dep

PRICES EFFECTIVE THROUGH 9/28/94 HOURS: MONDAY - SATURDAY 9:00-11:00
DISCOUNT LIQUORS • BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE
DELIVERY HADLEY/AMHERST AREA NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

On the day of the apocolypse Gail finally revealed to Bridget that she was the one to steal her "Mrs. Pretty" make-up kit in the 3rd. grade.
Mass Daily Collegian
"Make Amends Now"

Job market is favorable for University IPM majors

By Henry Brier
Collegian Staff

Integrated Pest Management (IPM) is an ecologically sensible way of minimizing the amount of toxicities in reducing pests, explained Dr. T. Michael Peters, a professor from the Entomology Department at the University of Massachusetts.

It is also an issue of common sense, Peters said, because farmers say among themselves, "We're getting into trouble with insecticides, we're using lots of insecticides, more than we probably need."

The University has offered the IPM major for over 10 years, said Peters, who believes the program has been hidden.

"It traditionally has had a very rigid curriculum, because there are so many things that you have to have, that there's not much chance to give people choices," Peters said.

Peters said a familiarity of all the relevant organisms and of what insects are considered harmful are the more imperative aspects of the program.

Peters said he believes the federal government's increased efforts to deter herbicide use as a catalyst for the creation of vast opportunity in the field. Because of new opportunities, Peters said the Stockbridge School of Agriculture has implemented Urban and Public Health Integrated Pest Management as a new program.

The Stockbridge School has made the new program a one- year certificate program, said Peters, who was a member of the committee responsible for arrangements. He said non- pesticidal methods controlling and eradicating mosquitoes, greenheads, roaches, blackflies, termites, fleas and lice, to name a few.

"What they are trying to do in this program," said Peters, "is to give people who become Pest-Control Technicians the appropriate training so that they can leave at the end of the year and get a job."

Peters said in the United States there are few schools that will train and graduate a student into state certification which is one of the advantages of the University's programs.

He pointed out that big companies, such as Orkin or Waltham Chemical, hire individuals and then train them. Terminex, another company in the industry, had been approached by the University committee in an attempt to elicit support. They responded they were able to fill 350 positions at that time.

"There are a number of jobs out there if people have the right training," he said. "If they know the biology of the pest insects, if they know the various ways you can suppress those pest numbers, and you're certified to use those techniques, these people are actively looking for technicians.

"They have to invest thousands of dollars in a person before they can start using the person to make money. That's what this program is all about. To train people in particular information and skills that will make them sought- after employees."

UMass Arts Council Presents performance interventions at public art sites & courtyards

artEventives

September 22

Delight in an Autumnal Early Evening at two campus gardens... featuring Vincent Dowling.

3:30
Beginning at the Clark Memorial public art place, delight in early American music & Morris dancers. Enjoy the ambience – bring a picnic and blanket and supper on the surrounding berms/Berkshire Hills. You will be greeted by notable Clark himself, personified by hosting actor, Walter Carroll of WFCR's "Afternoon Music"

4:45 A Musical Promenade will stroll down Hill Side to...

5:00 the new DUrfee Gardens. Sip cran berry punch, tour the splendid gar den spaces and listen to Sea Songs of Shantie man Davis Bates.

5:30 Spotlighting the Durfee Stage, emi nent actor and director, Vincent Dowling from the Miniature Theater of Chester reading "By the Shores of the Berkshire Mountains," a drama tization of Melville's short story, "The Piazza" by Barrie Greenbie. Reception to meet the artist follows.

Support and assistance for this evening from: UMass Arts Council, Department of Landscape Architecture & Regional Planning, UMass Student Chapter of ASLA, Campus Center Building Services/AV, Fine Arts Center Production Services, Amherst Chamber of Commerce/Book & Plow Festival, and many others friends.

IF YOU HAVEN'T YET, NOW IS THE TIME!

Register now through September 26 for over 200 evening credit courses and noncredit workshops.

University of Massachusetts/Amherst
Division of Continuing Education
Goodell Building
545-2414

A quality education at affordable prices

T.G.I'ts FRIDAY
Every Friday:
$2.00 per game (or)
$1.75 per game with a ticket stub from a recent sporting event
LIVE D.J.
Mike Perkins
584-4830
Bring this ad and get 75¢ off of a shoe rental!
Northampton Bowl
525 Pleasant St. • Northampton

THE SPOKE
The Spoke Amherst, Mass
A DRINKERY
TO MEET, RELAX AND ENJOY
Beer of the Month
16 OZ BUD BOTTLES
$2.00
Drink of the Month
JIM BEAM & COKE
$1.75
35 E. PLEASANT STREET

Gain Valuable "Real World" Experience on Campus!

The Collegian Business Office is looking for ambitious, organized Sophomore SOM majors for the position of

Associate Business Manager

Direct supervision received from the Collegian business manager, as well as the assistant business manager.
Applications may be obtained at:
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center (the basement)
Resumes and cover letters may be directed to:
Michael McRae, Business Manager
Application Deadline: October 17
The Collegian is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer

You know Bobby, copying these answers from our family enclyopedia for your science project reminds me of my college days. Ahh... those were the good ole' days, cheat sheets on the inside of my Ivy league muffler, paying off the students at the state school to take my exams. Summa Cum Laude! God bless those sniviling staties! I did love them so!
DAILY COLLEGIAN
State school intelligence free every weekday

NEWSROOM

More and more, employers are looking for experienced journalists out of college.

New England area newspapers clearly recognize the Massachusetts Daily Collegian as a first-rate University publication.

The following Editorships are open for Fall 1994:

Black Affairs Editor
Multicultural Affairs Editor
Women's Issues Editor
Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Business Editor
Developing Nations Editor

For more information or for an application stop by the Collegian Newsroom
113 Campus Center Basement • 545-0719 • Ask for Darienne Hosley or Art Stapleton, Jr.
Application must be received by Friday, September 22

Scott's LIQUORS
LOOK AT THE SAVINGS SCOTTS HAS IN STORE FOR YOU!
SALE GOOD NOW THRU 9/25/94
LITE ICE 24-12 oz. Cans $12.99 + dep.
ZHENKA VODKA 1.75 LTR. SALE PRICE $8.99 MAIL-IN REBATE $2.00 FINAL COST $6.99
AMERICAN BEER 24-12 oz. Cans $7.29 + dep.
PEACHTREE SCHNAPPS 750 ML $6.99
COORS EXTRA GOLD 24-12 oz. Bar Bottles $10.99 + dep.
BUD & BUD LIGHT ½ KEGS $39.99
ROUND HILL CHARDONNAY 750 ML $5.99
BUDWEISER 24-16 oz. Bottles $13.99 + dep.
Tele-check for your personal check. We now have all Mass Lottery games!
WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE!
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst • 549-2692
Located Next to Victory Super Market

SEMESTER MEMBERSHIP only $109
The GYM
AT MOUNTAIN FARMS MALL
Rt. 9 - Hadley • 584-2175

COLLEGE PIZZA
Welcomes back all the UMass students, and wishes them a happy, healthy and successful year.
College Pizza
The Closest Location, The Hottest Pizza
Located at Patterson Corner of Southwest
549-6098 • 549-6073

AMA WHITE ZIN 2 FOR $5.99
BUD DRY BAR BOTTLES $1.19 + Dep
BIG GUY LIQUORS
BIG ON FRIENDLY SERVICE
16 oz Bar Bottles $1.45 + Dep
549-3555
RTE 63

PEKING GARDEN
A MANDARIN & SZECHUAN RESTAURANT
Open 7 Days a week
20 % OFF MEALS FRI. AND SAT. EVENING WITH COMEDY SHOW with this ad
Comedy Shows Friday and Saturday at 8:30pm with dinner
Monday -Thursday Dinner Buffet $5.99
Sunday Brunch $6.99
586-1202 FREE PARKING
北京
ON RT. 9 HADLEY
MASTER CARD VISA

It's Back to School Time
10% off with Student I.D.
Not valid with other discounts
Does not apply to oil changes
Discount valid only at time of purchase
offer expires 10/16/94
Free Midas Shuttle to Campus
MIDAS
MUFFLERS BRAKES SHOCKS STRUTS
COMPUTERIZED ALIGNMENT
RTE. 9/HADLEY
586-9991
Near Hampshire Mall

Advil
Pain reliever/Fever reducer
INDICATIONS: For the temporary relief of minor aches and pains associated with the common cold, headache, toothache, muscular aches, backache, for the minor pain of arthritis, for the pain of menstrual cramps, and for reduction of fever.

SUMMER'S OVER.
Thank goodness there's Advil.® Advanced medicine for pain.™

Protecting Springfield's forest top priority

UM students collecting data to maintain Metro–City's trees

By Heather Redfern
Collegian Staff

Maintenance of the urban forest in Springfield's oldest neighborhood, Metro–City, is a top priority of the Massachusetts Urban Forest Project.

As coordinators of the project, members of the UMass Department of Forestry and Wildlife Management are looking for Metro–City residents as well as University students and staff to collect computerized data to inventory the trees of the Metro–City neighborhood.

"The more teams of 12 we have, the m c efficient the program will be," said project coordinator David Bloniarz.

Volunteers in the Springfield project will use a hand–held computerized data recorder to collect information about their trees in the Metro–City neighborhood.

According to Bloniarz, the Metro–City neighborhood is multi–faced with single–family homes, town houses, and densely–populated apartment blocks with residents who have a wide range of incomes and ethnic backgrounds.

"We are dealing with an urban area in a central neighborhood," said Bloniarz.

There are an estimated 4,000 trees in the Metro–City neighborhood.

Data collected by volunteers will be entered into a Geographic Information System (GIS).

GIS hopes to include the collected data to create and maintain an urban forest in the city of Springfield.

"We need to develop innovative ways to take care of our green spaces, including utilizing volunteers who can do some of the work which otherwise would not get done because of budget constraints," said Bloniarz in a recent press release.

Springfield is the second city in Massachusetts to be included in the Urban Forest Management Project.

The first project conducted in June 1993, involved 100 Brookline residents in a computerized inventory of 11,000 trees over a two–day weekend.

On Oct. 12, from 7 p.m.–9 p.m., University instructors from the Department of Forestry and Wildlife Management will hold a public training program at the Quadrangle in Metro–City.

Volunteers will receive hands–on training in street tree identification, map reading, urban forest health, and identification of hazardous trees.

Participants in the project will be awarded a pair of complimentary tickets to a "Holiday Pops" concert conducted by the Springfield Symphony Orchestra, a one– year subscription to American Forests' "Urban Forests" magazine and free admission to the Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame.

UMass students and faculty interested in working with the project should contact David Bloniarz at the Department of Forestry and Wildlife Management, 545–4419.

Students building bridges over Fort River

By Ben Geman
Collegian Staff

A group of University of Massachusetts engineering students are working to make sure that crossing Fort River in Amherst is a walk in the park.

Since July, the UMass chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers has been working Sundays in Groff Park in Amherst to build three bridges over the Fort River and to clear a trail linking the park and the Norwottuck rail trail.

The Norwottuck rail trail is a bicycle path laid over unused railroad tracks running through Amherst, Hadley and Northampton.

Six to eight students worked Sundays from 8 a.m. until noon to build the bridges, all between 16 and 25 ft. long, and clear the one–mile trail.

Early last summer, the ASCE approached the Amherst Conservation Department about doing a project in Amherst that would benefit the community. At the time, the department was looking into linking park and the rail trail.

"The question was how to get the work done. ASCE came along at the right time," said Conservation Director Peter Westover. "It looks excellent. This makes a nice foot connection to the rail trail."

Westover also credits Amherst College for the project's completion. The college, which owns the land between the park and the rail trail, allowed the students use the land to clear the new trail.

Senior civil engineering major Celia Chu, who directed the project, said the bridge construction gave the students an opportunity to practically apply what they've learned studying engineering.

"I was pretty excited. This is my senior year, and all the time I've been studying I hadn't done anything hands–on." said Chu.

The group used lumber supplied by the town to build the bridges named Snake Point, Mice Hollow and Rocky Top.

Chu said the project gave the ASCE some needed exposure in the community.

"We wanted some recognition in the community," said Chu. "We don't sit in a corner and study all the time. We go out in the sun."

The group will complete the project this Sunday. The new bridges and trail will be celebrated at a 10 a.m. ribbon– cutting ceremony and trail walk on October 15.

Since beginning the project July 10, approximately four weeks were used to clear the new trail and the rest of the time was used constructing the bridges, according to Chu.

Groff Park, located on Mill Lane, is a recreational center featuring barbecue pits, a playground, athletic fields and a small children's swimming pool.

■ Men's Tennis

continued from page 14

She's not so laid back about URI's arrival tomorrow at Boyden courts.

"URI is a good team. They just got their men's tennis program back a semester after we did (2 years ago) so hopefully the extra semester of experience should pay off for us," Dixson says.

Dixson says the maturity level of the team is high right now and it should carry the team to a winning fall season and "a winning fall season is essential for a successful spring season with a tough schedule."

■ Myers

continued from page 14

William & Mary will be playing, UConn and William & Mary are currently ranked at No. 11 and 13, respectively, and Central Florida was ranked earlier in the season.

"That's gonna be some great soccer," said Myers. "I think we'll be able to see what we're made of, see where we stand in relation to the other top 10 teams in the nation."

What the fans will be able to see is a great player who is capable of so much more.

■ Red Sox

continued from page 14

Duquette made, it was the Jeff Russell trade. Russell is an inconsistent pitcher who whines and believes in the stupid concept of "team chemistry." You can have team chemistry, but you can't win without hard working quality players.

The reason for releasing Hobson is change. Duquette wants change. He picked up a few new faces, did some wheelin' and dealin', and changed the lineup a little. But the team still fell flat. The record has not changed. Why? Look at who Duquette brought in.

First, he signed free agent catchers Dave Valle and Damon Berryhill. Valle had a good season with the Seattle Mariners but unfortunately he was a dud in Boston. Duquette signed Valle because of his bat, but he never got over .200. The bad news for Duquette was that Valle was signed for big bucks. Translation: he can't be traded, the Red Sox had to eat his fat contract. Good thing the team had Berryhill, but he's never been an everyday player.

Then for some unknown cosmic reason, Duquette traded Billy Hatcher and Paul Quantrill to Philadelphia for Wes Chamberlain. Billy Hatcher is not the greatest of baliplayers but he is just as good as Chamberlain. In other words, the Red Sox gave Paul Quantrill, a young pitcher, away. Duquette envisioned Chamberlain as the everyday right fielder, but his vision never came true.

A month later, Duquette picked up Tom Brunansky to play right field. Does Duquette seriously think that he's going to win with the players that he has? The Red Sox got rid of Brunansky because he couldn't produce, but then they sign him back. They might as well hire Butch Hobson back.

The point is that a winning team consists of good players, not necessarily a good manager. Remember the '86 Bobos? John McNamara was not a good manager. 1986 was by far his best year. The team was great because the players all had career seasons. Oil Can Boyd, Bruce Hurst, and Roger Clemens each had the best season of their career. Rich Gedman was an All–Star. Wade Boggs was Wade Boggs. Jim Rice was an MVP candidate. Bill Buckner drove in 120 runs, and Bob Stanley saved games.

Then came Joe Morgan, the magician. Everybody was dirting McNamara for not communicating with his players and hyping Joe Morgan as a player's manager. Morgan won in '88 and '90 because he had slightly better than average players in a weak AL East division. He wasn't a good manager. Remember all the criticism he received when he got fired too? Morgan was underfire for making erratic choices, and not being tough on his players.

Then came Butch. Butch was hyped up as hard–working, tough–minded and demanding. In other words, the opposite of Morgan.

So what's next for Dan Duquette and the Boston Red Sox? Should the farm team take over? Trot Nixon in centerfield?

The Red Sox need a lot of work. The strike was the best thing that happened to them all season.

The team needs players, not managers. The manager is the not the one that hits homeruns, pitches a quality game, steals a base or clokes a game. It's the players.

David Chan is a Collegian Columnist.

Modest Sanders denies total credit

By Harry Atkins
Associated Press

PONTIAC, Mich. — Soft-spoken Barry Sanders won't be drawn into comparisons with Emmitt Smith. Yet his teammates swear there was a special look in his eyes when the Lions lined up against the Cowboys.

Sanders carried a club-record 40 times for 194 yards as Detroit defeated Dallas 20-17 in overtime Monday night. Smith wasn't bad, either, rushing for 143 yards on 29 carries.

But the game clearly belonged to Sanders. He dazzled even die-hard Dallas fans with his myriad of start, stop, sideways, hop moves.

"I saw a look in his eyes that I don't think I've ever seen before," center Kevin Glover said. "In the huddle, he was smiling and nodding his head like, 'Hey, we're going to win. We're going to get it on tonight.'"

Herman Moore saw the look even sooner than that. He thought Sanders was different before they ever went out on the field.

"Barry wasn't saying anything," Moore recalled. "We joke around all the time before games. But not this time. Barry had this look, like he was saying, 'No more joking around.'

Being compared with someone else is nothing new to Sanders. It has been going on as long as he as been in the NFL. When he came into the league, the wags were trying to decide whether he was better than Christian Okoye. Then it was Thurman Thomas. Now it's Smith.

In the week leading up to the game the comparisons were being made, especially in Detroit and Dallas. There almost always is a newspaper laying in the bottom of his locker, so Sanders certainly knew what was being written and said.

"I promise I don't get caught up in that," Sanders said. "I think Emmitt is good. But there are a lot of reasons why we had a good game against Dallas.

"First of all, it's easy to get up for a team like the Cowboys. But it didn't really feel like I had the eye of the tiger or anything like that. Also, we had a terrible game at Minnesota the week before. That was some motivation, too."

Sanders had only 12 carries for 16 yards in the 10-3 loss at Minnesota. That's not nearly enough action for him. He knows it and Lions coach Wayne Fontes knows it. Yet it isn't in his nature for Sanders to complain - especially not during a game.

"I'm not the type," Sanders said.

GRAPHICS

Having experience using the industry standard equipment and software is essential in acquiring good employment after graduation.

The Graphics Dept. has openings in the Advertising Production Dept.

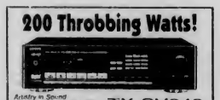
Applicants should have experience and/or serious interest in advertising and advertising production, as well as a knowledge of Macintosh computer systems (familiarity with QuarkXpress and Aldus Freehand are helpful but not required).

For more information or for an application stop by the Collegian Graphics Dept.
103 Campus Center Basement • 545-1864 • Ask for Andrew Davidson or Jim Ganley

Yes, it's always a fine day for a barbeque. Ahh nothing like the hot coals to cause a man to break down in a fit of hysterical crying. "WHY DIDN'T I LISTEN TO MY MOTHER AND BECOME A DOG GROOMER!!!"
COLLEGIAN
NEVER TOO LATE TO CHANGE

Get A Life with Jesus Christ
John 5:12
Alliance Christian Fellowship
UMass FSO since 1964
BIBLE STUDY
DISCIPLESHIP
OUTREACH
TIMEOUT FELLOWSHIP
FRIDAYS • 7 PM
CAMPUS CENTER

200 Throbbing Watts!



ONKYO TX-SV940 Receiver
Sale $289.
Sound & Music
Millbank Place • 351 Pleasant Street • Northampton
584-9547 • VISA & MasterCard accepted

FOR 26 WAYS to help save the EARTH CALL 1-800-488-8887.
Activity in Spanish
Earth Share

WE WANT YOU!!!
to be a
HEARING BOARD MEMBER

If You...
• are interested in Campus Leadership
• wish to improve your communication and listening skills
• are a full time student
• have at least a 2.0 G.P.A.
• are not on Judicial Sanction

Apply now to be a Hearing Board Member:
Training Held Oct. 18, 19, & 20
7:00 p.m. - 10:00 p.m.

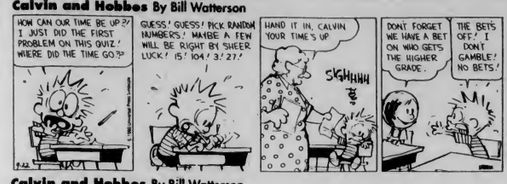
Applications available at
RESIDENTIAL CLUSTER OFFICES &
THE DEAN OF STUDENTS OFFICE
227 WHITMORE

ANY QUESTIONS?
CONTACT:
Paul Vasconcellos, Assistant Dean of Students
Dean of Students Office • Whitmore • 545-2684

BARRY'S WESTVIEW CAFE
MIKE'S WESTVIEW
This Week at Mike's Westview
Rolling Rock Bottles $1.25
16 oz Bud $2.25
Monday Night Football - Free Buffet
Tuesday is Pasta Night
Spaghetti and Meatballs $2.50 6-10 pm
Friday Afternoon
ALL YOU CAN EAT BUFFET $1 - 6 pm
Menu includes: Roast Chicken, Roast Beef, Macaroni & Meatballs, Chicken Parmesan, Assorted Cold Cuts, Shephards Pie, Beef Stroganoff, Spanish Rice, Pasta salad, Tossed salad and Au gratin Potatoes

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycles
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson



HOW CAN OUR TIME BE UP? I JUST DID THE FIRST PROBLEM ON THIS QUIZ! WHERE DID THE TIME GO?
GUESS? GUESS? PICK RANDOM NUMBERS. MAYBE A FEW WILL BE RIGHT BY SHEER LUCK! 15! 104! 3.27!
HAND IT IN, CALVIN YOUR TIME'S UP
SIGHHHH
DON'T FORGET WE HAVE A BET ON WHO GETS THE HIGHER GRADE.
THE BETS OFF! I DON'T GAMBLE! NO BETS!

Jim's Journal By Jim

Today I was sitting around, trying to whistle.
I've never really been able to, so I was mostly just blowing out air.
But then a loud tooting sound came out, and Mr. Peterson jumped about two feet off the floor.
Then she looked at me like I was crazy.

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

HELLO?
HI DAD! IT'S ME, CALVIN.
CALVIN, UNLESS THIS IS REALLY IMPORTANT, HANG UP. OK? I'M VERY BUSY.
OK, DAD. GOODBYE.
THIS SHOULDN'T QUALIFY IN ANOTHER 15 MINUTES

Bruno By C. Baldwin

NOW BRUNO TOLD HIS FATHER AND I HAVE DECIDED THIS, AND WE'VE DECIDED THAT ONE SHOULD BELONG TO TENNIS AND FLYING AND SKATES IS THIS ABOVE YOU'RE GIVING ME DAD?
I THINK THIS IS A BIT MORE THAN A DOUBLE BARREL WE...
DAD, YOU KNOW THAT FOR DAD, SINCE YOU RETIRED, I'VE DON'T KNOW FROM YOUR COLLEGE YEARS?
YOU READY TO USE IT AGAIN?
WHO, BRUNO, I DON'T THINK THAT...
AND DAD?
DID YOU BRING ME A RUN IN THE HOOP, OR HAVE YOU DECIDED TO NEVER HEAR FROM ME AGAIN?

Without Porpoise By Kennet Dall

Without porpoise
HEY, WHAT'S GOING ON? SAM OTTER HERE, IT'S NICE TO SEE YOU AGAIN.
I GUESS WHEN YOU SAW US LAST JD WAS STILL A JET-SETTING HALE MOBEL AND MANDY AND CLIVER HAD FALLEN IN LOVE.
WELL WE'VE HAD LOTS OF CHANCES AROUND HERE AND EVEN NEW ADDITIONS TO OUR HAPPY STRIP.
BUT ALAS, THIS IS THE FOURTH PANEL AND THERE JUST IS NOT ENOUGH ROOM TO EXPLAIN EVERYTHING. SO I HOPE THAT YOU WILL KEEP READING.

Without Porpoise By Kennet Dall

WELL, TODAY IS AN EXCITING DAY, BECAUSE WERE INTRODUCING THE MOST RECENT EDITION TO WITHOUT PORPOISE
HERE HE IS MR. SYD PARKER.
HI THERE
WHY DON'T YOU TELL THEM WHAT BROUGHT YOU HERE.
UMMM-OKAY.
IT WAS DRIVING CROSS COUNTRY WITH MY BROTHER HE PICKED UP A CHICK, AND HE TOLD ME THERE WASN'T ANY ROOM LEFT IN HIS VAN, AND NOW HERE I AM.
SOUNDS LIKE DESTINY TO ME.

Classifieds

• 20¢ per word per day for students
• All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
• Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center
Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ACTIVITIES

Free bridge lessons. UMass Bridge Club 8 lessons free book-free T-shirt Weekly-Thur 4-6pm Start 9/22 Bluewall Diva 5-6411

Chi Omega open house rush parties Tues 9/20 6pm-9pm Wed 9/21 6pm-9pm Dessert night Sat 9/24 5:30pm- 7:30pm Please contact Lauren at 549-4351 or Steph at 549-5788 for transportation or any additional information. Come up to Chi Q because it makes no difference if we're not in fraternity row!

Do you want to meet new people, make the University smaller? Come see what greek life is all about. Sigma Sigma Sigma open rush 6:30 -8:30pm at 375 N Pleasant St. For a ride or any questions call Pam at 253-0854

Tonight, 8:00 in the Commonwealth Rm. with Doc Hopper. Knuckle Sandwich and Art is an Enemy. Sponsored by ASP.

UMass Women's Ice Hockey is back! Season starts soon. For information call Cheri- 549-7276

ANNOUNCEMENTS

All University women are invited to rush this evening at Sigma Delta Tau between 6:30 and 8:30. Please call Kristin 549-7361 for info

Looking for an escape to nature? If so, come rush Alpha Chi Omega and spend some time at Camp Alpha Chi!! Thursday, September 22 5:30- 7:30.

AUDITIONS

UMass Theatre Guild Witness for the Prosecution by Agatha Christie Friday, September 23 at 8:30pm. Saturday, September 24 at 11:00 and 8:30 in Campus Center room 168c. For further information call UMTG office 545-0415.

AUTO FOR SALE

1976 Chevy Impala Runs great low miles $900/bo. Dan 253-9405.

CHRISTIANS

Alliance Christian Fellowship adds value and balance to your UMass education. We're committed to personal discipleship training, outreach and spirit-filled fellowship and fun. FRIDAYS Timeout Fellowship 7pm Campus Center

Orthodox Christians and friends are invited divine liturgy Saturday Sept 24th 10am Chapin Hall Amherst College

C.A.S.H. FOR COLLEGE

Do you need $$$ for college??? We have the solution. Guaranteed results Write to: Corporate Scholarship Service, 7 Delhurst Terrace- East, N Reading, MA 01864 for free details.

COMPUTERS

BK Computers & Associates whole systems. Parts including monitors, drives, cards and more. Free estimate. 549-4362.

FOR RENT

Fridge rentals 253-5747 free delivery

Move in now! Center of town. $300/mo flat. Call Dana 253-7798

FOR SALE AUDIO

Stereo equipment used/ reconditioned, area's largest selection, priced to sell! Also tv's, vcr's, dj/ pa equipment, instruments etc. We buy , sell, trade Call SAY Exchange, 8am-9pm 256-0541

FOR SALE

Computer–IBM compatible 386SX-16mHz incl monitor, keyboard, mouse, drive, printer, windows 3.1, dos 6.0 good cond Will sell cheap! 4 info 546-0424

Dual recess Beats 9/28 • 9/29 $50 call 586-7364 or b/o

Dorm fridge $75 or b/o 253-7349

Guitar processor digitech rp, Toscam 4 track recording studio 549-5862

Hockey skates Mega1090 size 8 worn only 3x $100 or bo 253-3953

Hundreds of quality shareware programs for $3.49 call 584-2282 for free list.

IBM XT 286 10 meg, color monitor Excellent for hooking up to a TAU $250 call 549-3458

Macintosh computer Complete system including printer only $500 Call Chris at 800-288-5685.

Pagers at Pioneer Valley. Knife and Tool 549-7311

Panasonic printer KX-p2123. Great shape Free color kit $175 or b/o 546-3193

Solid oak triple dresser Excellent condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253-9354

Toshiba T1200 laptop with mouse + word and star NX-1001 multifont printer Call Alex 549-6414 with best offer

Welch batteries ear piercing, eyeglass and jewelry repairs, great earrings, gifts from glass to gold, custom designed jewelry. Silverscape Designs 284 N Pleasant St. Amherst 253-3324.

FOUND

Found a walkman, if yours please call 6-5250

FREE

Free hamster with cage looking for a good home! Leave message 6-2301

HELP WANTED

$340.00. Sell funny college T-shirts Profit $363.60 Risk free. Choose from 19 designs Free catalogs 1-800-700-4250

Babysitter/ mother's helper in Amherst Sat. and/ or Sun mornings @ 8:30-12:30 Infant experience car, non-smoking. $5/hr Call Robin 253-0660 9am-9pm please

Bonus Globe subscriptions Delivery and marketing help wanted. Marketing- 1st three weeks, flex hours. Delivery- am all semester. All well paid! Call 256-1071.

Cruise ships now hiring earn up to $700/wk/ month working on cruise ships or land tour companies. World travel. Seasonal and full time employment available. No experience necessary. For more information call 1-206-634-0468 ext C50011

Drivers wanted Earn $6-$12/hour 11-2 or 4-11 No prior work Call Delivery Express 549-0077

Drivers wanted Trattoria Geppetto Italian restaurant, 1177 N Pleasant St. Amherst Apply in person after 3:00 pm 549-7777

Earn $25 in 2 hours. Seniors and first year grads wanted for research study dealing with the GRE. Call Sharon 256-8092

International Employment make up to $7000- $4000 +/ mo teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S Korea No teaching background or Asian languages required For info call 206-632-1146 ext. J50011

Jobs for the environment 20+ assists political organizing Earn $40-60/day Very flexible hours/ casual atmosphere Call Alex 256-8434

Major record label and area nightclub looking for students to hang flyers on campus in exchange for free cds and concert tix Call Jon at 584-7810 for more info

Part time manager trainee Firestone needs assistant manager Flexible work schedule/20-25 hours/week Call Frank in Northampton at 586-1584 ($8/hour)

Part time technician position available Computer experience a plus 549-0701

Receive up to 288,000 dollars in 18 months! For your amazing free report call 413-525-6480 Mon-Fri 8am- 5pm

Resort jobs open to $12/hr and tips Theme parks, hotels, spas, + more Tropical + in cruision destinations worldwide Call (206) 632-0150 ext P50011

Spring Break '95 Sell trips, earn cash and go free!!! Student travel services is now hiring motivated representatives. Lowest rates to Jamaica, Cancun, Daytona and Panama City Beach Call 1-800-648-4849

Telemarketing Service and develope classifieds advertising in the MA, CT, NY, markets for the Advocate + weekly news papers Customer service and communication skills required $6 hr Flexible schedule Call Steve at 800-442-4788

The Amherst Boys and Girls Club needs work study assistants for recreation programs Open 2:30 to 5:00 afternoons 7:00 to 9:00 evenings Workers schedule as time available, $5.25 per hour UM buses stop in front of club at 380 Main St Contact Richard Bird 253-3761

Wanted!! America's fastest growing travel company seeking individuals to promote trips Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida! Easy free travel, fantastic pay 1-800-426-7710

Workstudy position available $5.50 15 hrs/wk Flashlite office work for public foundation Call Nancy at Peace Development Fund 256-6306

Workstudy positions available in Sport Management- Macintosh computer skills and office experience preferred. Apply at 1 Curry Hicks 5-0441

INSTRUCTION

Need a tutor? Calc, chem, physics, bio Call Al 256-1960

J. CREW CLOTHING

Temporary help needed for large J. Crew clothing sale to be held at the Mullins Center, Univ of Massachusetts 10/3 10/8 Cashiers, baggers, set-up/ breakdown To apply stop by our table this Thursday 9/22 10:00am-5:00pm and Friday 9/23 10:00am-11:00pm at the Mullins Center rink

MUSICIANS

Wanted 1 drummer. Call 256-1906

NEED A RIDE

Need a ride to Boston on Friday. Sharing expenses. Call Dinad 546-5381

PERSONALS

Happy Birthday Scot.
Try not to get too high on sunflower seeds! Best wishes –Melissa

Hey Baby, I've seen you at the Hatch I've seen you at the Bluewall I've even seen you at the Whitmore Snacktor (my personal favorite) I've come to the conclusion that you like to eat, not that anyone could ever tell by your Dolly Partonesque figure. If you want to know what it's like to chow down with the best, respond here

Don't miss your chance at greatness!
Ricky.
Good luck with the trial
-Vinca

Geisen
I was wrong about you. This other guy I've been seeing is just way to hairy- I've spent a fortune on Drano already. Save me. Love Belle

PINNOCHIO'S

Hiring drivers full or part time. Call 256-4110 or stop by 30 Bolnwood Walk Ask for Bob.

RESUME WRITING

We specialize in writing resumes and cover letters Over a decade of experience, close to campus. 549-0367

ROOMMATE WANTED

2 rooms in private home $300/ mo kitchen privileges Kosher/ vegetarian preferred Laundry, parking, furnished 549-4853

Female to share large bedroom in house Great location (behind Davenport) Move in immediately September paid! Lease ends June 1st No summer payment $258/mo + utilities Call Kristen for more information 549-3992

Single room in 7 bedroom house Includes full use of house. Washer, dryer, dishwasher, garage 5 students currently there. Quiet persons not encouraged 193 month Call 256-6580

RUSH SIGMA KAPPA

Sigma Kappa welcomes all women to attend our make-your-own healthy snack bar night at our home at 19 Allen St. Come pig out in style. No invitation required 256-9887.

SERVICES

I'll sew for you Alterations, buttons, hems, repairs Call Allison 546-0263

Model search. The 1994 Glamour Models national model search continues Local test shoots now being conducted by First Impressions Photography Beginners and experienced models! Males, females, all categories welcome 617-523-0267

SCHOLARSHIPS

Apply for private scholarships- we guarantee one or your money back- price $4500 - for more information call Janice 585-0972

WANTED

Alex, Drama and medieval performers 2 UMass alumni seek medieval performer, jugglers, armourer to oversee games of skill and mayors guests at their local 15th century wedding Please have costume and desire for a good time Bill/ Irene 584-4203

Campus representative Kodak products giving break trips "guaranteed" best prices + incentives Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica S Padre + Florida We handle the bookkeeping. You handle the sales Call 1-800-727-4432

SAVE SPANKY 5 yr cute male beagle needs a home Well trained Call Kent 549-6566

Daily Crossword
Edited byTrude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Nobel Prize category
6 •
10 Sad
14 More competent
15 Bridge seat
16 Spooky
17 Lender's inducement
19 Ms. Lupino
20 USNA grad.
21 Harness
22 Wiped out
23 Scourge
24 Baseball numbers
25 Lake Geneva great
28 Street talk
31 Be generous
33 Stonekeeper
35 Shows off, in a way
42 Chosen one
43 Indian cart
44 Norway's Hamm
47 Require
48 Putt up
50 Preschoolers
54 Orbit point
55 External: Comb. form
56 Scale notes
59 Visits an army spot on the Hudson?
62 Makes do, with "out"
63 — to life: authentic
64 Foolish
65 Impressed
66 Elevator man
67 Diamond weight

DOWN
1 Window feature
2 Black
3 Metternhorn's range
4 Corp. VIP
5 Susan Lucci role
6 Seabird
7 Innocent type
8 GI support gp.
9 Vitality
10 Commenced
11 Tenant's document
12 Eggs on 13 Cigad
18 Sisters
15 Angle lead-in
23 City on the Aare
25 Small cobras
26 Espadrille
27 Weather word
29 Spring ango
30 Take-home pay
32 And so forth, for short
34 Suitable
36 Gait clubs
38 Political policy
37 Advantage
38 Peruse
40 Type of heel
41 Fly catcher
45 Engraves with acid
46 Observe with rara
46 Orated
49 Alcott's are sms
50 Spew
51 "—: Miserables"
53 Subject
54 Served a winner
55 Needle case
56 Faloe witness
57 O'Neill's Christie
58 Let stand
60 Tasia scrap
61 Adam and Eve — isht: egg order

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

9/22/94

By Jeffrey L. Rubinoff
©1994 Los Angeles Times Syndicate
9/22/94

The Far Side By Gary Larson

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21–April 19): You feel more sure of yourself after talking with a longtime ally. The support of a special group boosts your confidence. A news paper column may have a special message for you.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20): A period of reconciliation and revitalization lies ahead. Focus your creative endeavors and you will find new career opportunities. Travel is best postponed.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20): A financial bonanza gives you cause for celebration. You may be doing more daydreaming than usual. Study your CAREs. Direct your energies towards constructive goals. Creative urges are likely to lead to new artistic triumphs.

CANCER (June 21–July 22): Even if your plans seem sound, put them on ice until conditions are more favorable. Widen your social circle by joining a club or community group.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22): Be prudent if you must criticize others orally or in writing. Reckless comments could create real enmity. Observe all safety factors when playing your trade, especially if moving machinery from place to place.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22): Current financial restrictions will have a silver lining if they teach you the value of frugality and thrift. A practical domestic friend makes it possible for you to pursue a favorite pastime after work hours.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22): Let your bold imagination guide you when engaged in creative work. Unfamiliar settings help you make the most of limited funds. Know when to slow down before you blow a fuse.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21): Your social aspirations could lead you into extravagance. Keep a tighter rein on spending. Friends may try to interfere with your domestic arrangements.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21): An unexpected offer or event should help solve a financial crisis. Do not let up on your efforts to boost your income. Enrolling in high-tech classes will give you new career options. Study hard.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19): You may be able to profit from a mistake now. Be more attentive to a family member who complains that you are aloof. Apologizing for an unintended slight sets the stage for happy romance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18): New business developments should convince you to take a more realistic view regarding cash flow problems. Romance looks rosy. Speak from the heart and your love interest will attend the party on Saturday.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20): Two heads are better than one when conducting sticky negotiations. Curb a tendency to daydream or make impractical suggestions. Turn to trusted friends or professional counselors.

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Hot & Spicy Wings	Meatloaf
Brocoflour Casserole	Mandarin Chicken
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Caponata w/Pita	Lentil Spinach Stew
Brocoflour Casserole	Manadrin Chicken

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Emily Marino
Copy Editor.....Art Stapleton, Jr.
Photo Technician.....Nathan Martin
Production Super.....Andrew Davidson
Production.....Olmy Rosenstock
Gleeson, Mark Mitchell

Quote of the Day

"That was never a condition of our agreement... nor was giving Han to that bounty hunter."
–Lando Calrissian, The Empire Strikes Back

When Worker fell, he called for Help.
but Confusion came instead.
At last Help came, and Help knew what to do.
In times of emergency, are your employees Ready?
The American Red Cross can tailor a package of Health and Safety courses for your business - and teach them on your premises at your convenience. Contact your local chapter
American Red Cross

University Barbers
Express from the arcade!
549-0123
Hours:
Weekdays 8 a.m. - 5:15 p.m.
Sat. 8 a.m. - 1:45 p.m.
No Appointment Necessary

LAKEHOUSE IN GOSHEN
2+ bedroom year-round getaway for relaxed reading, writing and 4-season recreation. Extra-large living room and kitchen. Two fireplaces. Two-car garage. $115,000. 586-5742
OPEN HOUSE 9/25, 2-5 pm. From route 9 left at South Main (3 miles beyond Williamsburg). Follow signs to 99 Lake Drive.

LSAT +7.5
GMAT +72
GRE +214
MCAT +6
Small Classes, Documented Highest Results, Guaranteed.
413 584-6849
Course Sites:
Mt. Holyoke College, Smith College, Williams College, MCAT - Umass.
THE PRINCETON REVIEW
We Score More
ETS and Princeton University are not affiliated with The Princeton Review

Sports

Hart leads Minutewomen

By Mike Pinder
Collegian Staff

And the beat rolls on.

The University of Massachusetts field hockey team rolled to its fourth straight victory yesterday, beating regional foe Yale, 3–0.

UMass defeated the Bulldogs on the strength of two goals by senior back Natalie Hart.

Sporting a brand new stick, Hart tallied her first goal on a penalty corner at the 16:20 mark of the first half. Assisting on the play was the tandem of Kyle Rothenberger and Colleen Duffy.

UMass	3
NU	0

After a series of offensive rushes, the Minutewomen gained the advantage and drew a another penalty corner. This set the stage for Hart's second goal of the contest. Again, Rothenberger and Duffy assisted on the play.

"Her (Natalie's) timing is back, the corners look good, and Kyle is hitting the ball well. We really have our game going well," said UMass Coach Megan Donnelly.

The Minutewomen came out gunning and got on the board midway through the first half. UMass scored both goals just minutes apart, while dominating the majority of play. In the latter stages of the half, UMass slowed to the pace of their opponent, but managed to protect their lead with stifling defense.

"The first half we came out strong, and then we looked at the level of our opponent and played that way," said Donnelly.

Nonetheless, UMass went into the half with a 5–0 shot advantage and had taken eight corners, compared to just one taken by the Bulldogs.

In the second half, the Minutewomen dominated play with precisioned offensive strikes and swarming defense anchored by star goalie Hilary Rose.

"We picked it up in the second half," said Rose. "We're making progress in a forward direction. We just have to keep going upward."

"In the second half we really came out and played our game," said Donnelly. "Everyone stepped up. We have to ignore the opponent and play our game."

Rose, who has not allowed a goal this year, had a relatively easy day in net, recording just one save, while seeing few offensive threats by Yale.

NATHAN MARTIN/ COLLEGIAN

Senior back Natalie Hart scored two goals in yesterday's 3–0 victory over Northeastern at Totman Field.

UMass scored its third and final goal at the 7:49 mark when senior All–America candidate Danielle Borges received a pass from Sharon Hughes, turned in the middle of the circle, and fired a shot past the Yale goaltender.

Borges leads the Atlantic 10 in scoring with 12 points on five goals and two assists.

Hughes, who has been out all year with mononucleosis, played very well, while seeing limited action.

"She is such a good player," said Donnelly. "Her conditioning obviously has a long way to go, but she's an excellent player with great hand–eye coordination."

"I feel better," said Hughes. "It felt good to be able to play again. I'm a little out of shape but I'll just have to work on that."

The Minutewomen open their A–10 season with a pair of tough road games this weekend when they face rivals Temple on Friday and Rutgers on Sunday.

Time will come for Brockington

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

Ron Brockington, the sophomore running back of the University of Massachusetts football team, is a prime example of how good the Minuteman backfield truly is.

The transfer from Syracuse University has run the ball just seven times in the first two games, gaining 50 yards. Not too spectacular at first glance — until it's considered that two of those carries were for touchdowns.

The total number of carries are low, due to the talented backfield of junior fullback and All–America candidate Rene Ingoglia and sophomore tailback Frank Alessio playing before him.

"He's a great back, you can just see it," said Ingoglia. "You don't come from a school like Syracuse on full scholarship and transfer here. He's good – and hungry, too."

Brockington, who was the Gatorade New York State Player of the Year his senior year at Hempstead High School, enrolled into Syracuse during the fall of 1992, before being redshirted his freshman season.

Brockington's 1993 season consisted of as much playing time as he had in 1992. And despite his 11–carry, 72–yard performance in the spring game of 1994, his name wasn't high on the list. Brockington craved game time, and he knew a change had to be made for it to occur.

"After spring practice, each player talked about their evaluations with their position coach," said Brockington, "and basically, things didn't look too good as far as playing. I was entering my third year of school, and I wanted to be on the field.

"I checked into some other options, and the best option, after talking to my high school coach and my parents, was to leave Syracuse."

So, Massachusetts got its hands on the 5–foot 9–inch, 186– pound back to add to the backfield. Brockington began his career as the Minutemen only about a month ago, playing in preseason camp, the intra–squad scrimmages and the first two games of the regular season. Despite the short time of adjustment, the Minutemen patented option offense has proved to be an easy fit for Brockington.

"I settled in pretty well because we ran the option at Syracuse, so I was kind of familiar with a lot of the plays," said Brockington. "I kind of fit right in."

The Minuteman offense is carried by its ground game. Where the running backs go, so go the Minutemen. Coach Mike Hodges likes to utilize different running backs to keep each of them fresh. And Brockington is one of the few in the shuffle.

"He's a great back, you can just see it," said Ingoglia. "You don't come from a school like Syracuse on full scholarship and transfer here.

"He's good — and hungry, too."

Because of the outstanding and deep running back crop of Massachusetts, as well as the academic ineligiblity of senior fullback David Smith, Brockington moved from his natural position of tailback to fullback. Reminisicent of one Ingoglia, who did the same before last season.

"We decided we needed a little more depth at the fullback position, so we lined Ron up there," said offensive coordinator Doug Berry. "He's adapted, as you can see, probably as fast as Rene had. That's what you'll find in a good back that is tough, a good athlete, has great field vision.

"That's what we find with Ronnie."

"He's done a real nice job here," said Hodges. "I think he's going to be a great player."

As for Brockington, all he can do is work hard, and wait for his time to come.

"I'm just going to take what I can get," said Brockington. "I'm just working hard, and whatever the coaches do, they'll do. I'll leave it to them."

Men's tennis to face foes

By Jamie D. Bearse
Collegian Staff

"Men don't like to lose," said Coach Judy Dixon of the University of Massachusetts men's tennis team about its upcoming match at Fairfield University today and tomorrow's match against University of Rhode Island at Boyden Courts.

"They've been working hard to open up the season but they'll tough it out," Dixon says. "We should win both matches with desire and mental strength."

Dixon said she looks forward to the upcoming matches, stressing that victories in the next two days would be a "tremendous confidence builder" for next Tuesday's match against powerhouse Providence College.

Now that UMass has cleared all ineligibility problems, Dixon looks to strengthen the line–up, making it more interchangeable.

"I need flexibility with my players," Dixon says, "especially with my doubles teams, I need to be able to rotate players in order to give us the best match ups."

Co–captains, top seed Tim Lipsky and No. 1 seed Keith Murray will team up for the No. 1 double match.

According to Dixon, both Lipsky and Murray will have problems against Fairfield and URI's "big guns."

However, Dixon is quick to warn not to underestimate the abilities of both the "hard working" Lipsky and the "naturally talented" Murray.

"You never know about Tim, he can beat some of the tough ones," Dixon says, "His confidence and work ethic is so high, I could tell him he was playing Pete Sampras tomorrow and he'd think he have a shot."

According to Dixon, practice is at 3:15 p.m. every day, but both Lipsky and Murray show up at 2:30 p.m.

"It's players that have heart like that and desire for the game [that] makes us win matches," Dixon said. "They hate to lose."

Dixon says the matches against Fairfield and URI will be decided in the No. 3, No. 4, and No. 5 singles which she believes UMass will come out victorious.

No. 3 seed Ankur Baishya and No. 4 seed Justin Lynn are the two "aces" of the squad, according to Dixon.

"I always look at what the No. 3 and the No. 4 match–ups look like in order to get a good idea of if we going to win or not," Dixon says.

Dixon is optimistic about being 3–0 by the weekend. Dixon says that the men's team is a "high caliber team able to outshoot Fairfield."

"We have more talent and better players than Fairfield and we should win unless we play sloppy," Dixon says.

Turn to MEN'S TENNIS, page 12

Men's soccer bows to No. 5 New Hampshire

Minutemen lose to Wildcats, important A–10 road contest ahead against Rutgers

By Brian Gormley
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's soccer team dropped a 2–0 decision to the University of New Hampshire, despite outplaying the Wildcats for most of the game.

New Hampshire, which came into yesterday's game at Richard F. Garber Field ranked fifth in New England, improved its record to 3–3, while Massachusetts dropped to 2–3–1.

Hartford	2
UMass	0

All of the scoring came in the first half. The first goal came at 8:59 when midfielder Dave Kurzonthkowski took a pass from All–American forward Mike Veneto and lined it passed UMass goalkeeper Mark Wolf from the right corner just outside the box.

"I got to midfield and the defenders stepped off the ball," Veneto said. "I just laid it out there and Dave made a great shot. I don't think the goalie was expecting it."

The second goal came just three minutes and 38 seconds later. Veneto took a shot from nearly the same spot that Kurzonthkowski had scored from earlier. His shot was blocked by UMass midfielder Mike Doyle. But the ensuing rebound bounced in front of the net and was collected by New Hampshire midfielder William Schweitzer, who chipped it passed Wolf to make the score 2–0.

The Minutemen had three excellent opportunities to score in the first half, all of them by sophomore forward Dave Siljanovski. His first chance came about four minutes into the game when he took a centering pass and blasted it from about 12 yards out; it hit the post.

His next chance came when he took a breakaway pass and advanced the ball to about 15 yards out from the goal. The goalie and the lone defender back came out to meet him, giving Siljanovski a virtually open net. However, his shot from the left corner sailed just wide of the net.

"I had the goalie beat, but I saw two guys in front of the net. I tried to bend it right and I bent it a little too far," he said. "We played better than they did and I think we have a better team."

Siljanovski's third scoring opportunity came when he lofted a difficult, high–arching shot from just inside the left sideline. The shot sailed over the goalkeeper's head but it hit the crossbar and bounced out.

Both sides seemed to agree that luck had more to do with the New Hampshire win than anything special done by the Wildcats.

"Massachusetts has a good team, we were very fortunate," said New Hampshire Coach Mike Noonan. "We got a lucky goal [to make the score 2–0] and that dug a hole for them. Massachusetts kept battling for the entire game, which is a credit to them. They are going to give teams fits."

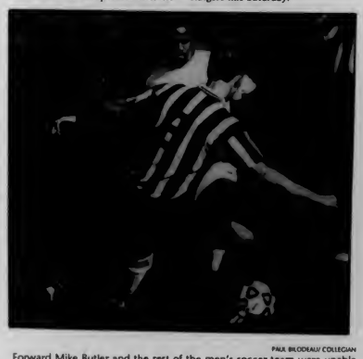
Both Noonan and Veneto also praised the defensive efforts of the Minutemen, who severely limited the number of good scoring opportunities for the Wildcats all afternoon.

"We hit the crossbar twice and the post once in the first 15 minutes and it is tough to come back from that," said Minuteman Coach Sam Koch. "We gave up two goals that we should not have given up, but we got a lot of chances [on offense] and we did what we had to do the majority of the game."

Koch said he was pleased with the play of freshman forward Mike Butler, whose aggressive play created opportunities for Massachusetts.

"Butler played very well and he is only going to get better and better," he said.

Koch said he and his team are upset about the loss, but they will have to put the game behind them if they are to beat Atlantic 10 rival Rutgers this Saturday.



PAUL BLODEAU/ COLLEGIAN

Forward Mike Butler and the rest of the men's soccer team were unable to score a goal in the Minutemen's 2–0 loss to New Hampshire.

Rebecca Myers only improves after outstanding first year

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

So good and so young.

Atlantic 10 Freshman of the Year, Soccer America's All–Freshman Team and Soccer News' All–America Team.

Eleven goals and nine assists for 31 points last year in 23 games started for a Final Four team.

How do you top a freshman year like that?

How about being named one of the top 10 sophomores in the country by College Sports Magazine?

Or scoring a hat trick in the first 20 minutes against Rhode Island and two more goals against A–10 rival Temple for a team–leading five goals (one assist) and 11 points?

If the first five games are any indication, then Rebecca Myers is certainly on her way to bettering her freshman year performance.

"[Rebecca's] done a nice job," said Coach Jim Rudy. "She's been identified now quite frankly by the opponent as the key player. 'Get No. 11, get No. 11.' You hear that all the time. She's definitely getting recognition."

Mention all of that to Myers and she will rather talk about the team.

"I always think the team should come first. If the team plays well then you're going to have certain awards given out," said Myers, "but without the team then you're not going to get any awards. If you don't have a team to back you up, it's not worth it.

"One person can't do everything. It's the team that gets everything accomplished. I want us to play well as a team and go back to the Final Four."

In fact, mention her hat trick performance against URI and she will not take the credit for it.

"I had great services," she said. "If I didn't finish them it would be kind of embarassing."

After starring for Lassiter High School in Georgia and the Georgia State Club team, which won state championships in 1991 and 1992, Myers arrived here on campus and did not even think she would be much of a factor.

"I didn't expect to play much," said Myers. "I thought I'd play a couple of minutes maybe, starting was not even close to imaginable. It was a surprising year."

"Last year she was a pleasant surprise," said Rudy. "We tried not to put any pressure on her about taking on leadership or a commanding role. She showed she had some versatility when our captain (Paula Wilkins) went out, we pushed her back there (at sweeper) with Erin Lynch and she more than held her own back there. We're now excited down the line when we give her more leadership and responsibility."

For Myers, making it to the Final Four in her first year was more satisfying than receiving all of the individual awards.

"It was fun. It was great," Myers said. "That's what I always wanted to do. That was one of my goals in college, to get there once in four years."

Getting there once however is not enough for Myers, she wants to make it to the Final Four again.

"I want us to play well as a team and go back to the Final Four. Now that we've been there, we know what it's like and we know what to expect, and if we don't get back its going to hurt. But if we keep improving with each game and we keep holding up our own, then I think we'll do all right," said Myers.

This weekend, Myers and the rest of the Minutewomen, ranked fifth nationally, will host the UMass Classic where Central Florida, the University of Connecticut and

Turn to Myers, page 12

UMASS MEDIA RELATIONS

Sophomore standout Rebecca Myers has tallied a team– leading five goals as well as one assist for 12 points so far this season.

Rotation changes lead to Red Sox difficulties

David Chan

I'm not a Butch Hobson fan, but I think Dan Duquette, the general manager of the Boston Red Sox, has made yet again another move that will have no positive effect on our beloved hometown baseball team.

It is not Hobson's fault that the Red Sox fell from the top of the American League to 17 games out of first place in the AL East. Hobson, a country boy from Alabama, simply had a team that is no better than average to work with.

Let's face the facts. I don't care if you're Tony LaRussa, Billy Martin, Tony Lasorda or even Joe Morgan, you can't win with a team that changes its starting rotation every week.

Think about this — Hobson's rotation consisted of: Nate Minchey, Tim Vanegmond, Gar Finnvold, Chris Nabholz, Aaron Sele, Roger Clemens, and occasionally Joe Hesketh. The Red Sox should be tearing the Yankees apart with this group of pitchers. Get with it Duquette. Aaron Sele is not good enough to be a number two starter, and Butch has three minor leaguers being thrown into the fire. Could any manager can win with these guys?

Not only was the starting rotation falling apart, but the bullpen has been unable to pick up the slack as well. Roger Clemens should have been an All–Star and he should probably have been in the list of Cy Young candidates. Clemens was tops in earned run average, opponent's batting average, quality starts, and the list goes on.

But the bullpen managed to help him win only nine games. If there was any good move that

Turn to Red Sox, page 12

Minutemen host Maine Black Bears

The University of Massachusetts football team [1-1] hosts Maine [0-3] tomorrow at 1 p.m. at Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium (Story on page 8).

Power and Class of New England

The Minuteman Marching Band will take part in Band Day along with 49 other area bands. (Story on page 3).

Welcome to The Machine

Although they dislike the label, The Machine is a tribute band on the rise. Catch their show tonight, but first check our preview. (Story on page 5).

Weekend Forecast

Rain may be heavy at times. High near 65. Northeast winds 10 to 15 m.p.h. Chance of rain 100 percent. A 50 percent chance of rain in the evening. Low around 55.

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 65 LOW: 55	HIGH: 73 LOW: 58	HIGH: 70 LOW: 60

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 9 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Friday, September 23, 1994

Roosevelt attacks Weld on public education

By Ben Geman
Collegian Staff

Mark Roosevelt, winner of Tuesday's Democratic primary, pledged to support the University of Massachusetts and strongly criticized Gov. William Weld in a noontime rally on the Student Union steps yesterday.

"This election is about two very different visions for Massachusetts. For too long, we've had governors in Massachusetts who haven't understood the importance of public higher education," said Roosevelt, who beat his closest Democratic challenger, George Bachrach, by 22 percentage points in Tuesday's balloting.

"Tuitions are high enough. Period. Fees are high enough. Period," Roosevelt said to the crowd of over 100 students. "There is not enough recognition in political circles in Massachusetts of the contribution higher education makes to our lives. The theme of our campaign is opportunity. What is a more basic part of the American Dream than access to public higher education?"

Roosevelt, a four-term state representative from Boston, attacked Weld's economic record and said the governor's statements about job creation are misleading.

"When Bill Weld tells you he's created 100,000 jobs, ask him to tell you what kinds of jobs they are. They're low- paying, no benefits, no future kinds of jobs," said Roosevelt.

Roosevelt is running as a moderate "new democrat," emphasizing themes of personal responsibility and frequently attacking Weld for being "soft" on crime. Yesterday, he told the audience Weld's support of casino gambling is evidence of a "values crisis."

"The question we need to ask on casino gambling is a simple one," said Roosevelt. "Will Massachusetts be a better place to live and raise children?"

He also used yesterday's speech to support a graduated income tax for Massachusetts residents and told the crowd organized labor could expect his support as governor.

"I am happy today to stand today with the 92 percent who will pay fewer taxes [with the passage of a graduated income tax] and let Weld stand with the eight percent who will pay more," said Roosevelt. "I stand for a democratic state which will stand with working people and stand with college students."

Lieutenant Governor candidate Robert K. Massie, who defeated Marc D. Draisen Tuesday, also spoke at yesterday's rally.

He attacked Weld's record on higher education, telling the crowd Weld "doesn't care" about access to higher education and health care in Massachusetts.

"Bill Weld has demonstrated no interest in building a common future. Unlike Bill Weld, we do not believe the future lies in raising tuition and cutting scholarships," said Massie.

Roosevelt and Massie face an uphill battle to unseat Weld, who they trail in the polls by a substantial margin, in November's election. They acknowledge they will not be able to match Weld's campaign spending, which Roosevelt noted yesterday may reach $3 million.

Roosevelt, 38, served as co-chair of the Education Committee in the

Turn to ROOSEVELT, page 2

JULIO CORDERO / COLLEGIAN

Mark Roosevelt, the Democratic candidate for governor of Massachusetts, was received by a crowd of more than 100 on the Student Union steps Thursday afternoon.

U.S. effort in Haiti to cost Pentagon $250M

By Robert Burns
Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The U.S. military effort in Haiti will cost the Pentagon about $250 million over the rest of the year, forcing it to ask Congress for more money, Defense Secretary William Perry said Thursday.

He said about 11,000 U.S. troops would be in Haiti by Thursday night as part of Operation Uphold Democracy, and the earliest they could begin to withdraw would be after Haitian parliamentary elections set for December. It is too early to predict when all the troops would be out, he said.

Asked about remarks by Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, head of the military junta, that he planned to stay in Haiti after relinquishing power, Perry said he believed Cedras and his top aides would choose to leave, but added, "We're not going to force them out."

Perry, speaking in Norfolk, Va., after meeting with U.S. sailors and officers of U.S. Atlantic Command, said the cost by the end of September would be about $50 million, plus an additional $200 million through December.

The money is coming from the Defense Department's existing funds but will put such a squeeze on the budget that congressional leaders already have been told the department intends to request an extra appropriation, Perry said.

The $250 million is what Perry called an incremental expense - the amount beyond what these particular forces would be spending on normal peacetime training.

On Capitol Hill, lawmakers in both parties vied to place limits on the deployment.

Key House Democrats said they were drafting legislation that would authorize the military action in Haiti but only until Feb. 1 or March 1, when the mission would have to be turned over to an international United Nations force.

Republican officials said they were likely to have their own proposal, and Rep. Christopher Cox, R-Calif., filed legislation urging Democrats to immediately schedule a debate and vote "upon the scope of and authorization for" the military operation. Perry said that once Haitian police trained by multinational forces have begun operating and a fair parliamentary election is held, "then I think it's time to consider whether we can begin to pull our forces out."

About 40 percent of the U.N. forces that would remain in Haiti would be American, he said.

Perry said that although no shots had been fired at the U.S. troops in Haiti so far, the job of overseeing a peaceful transition from the military junta to a civilian-led government headed by exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide would not be easy. Aristide is supposed to be returned to power by next month.

Students told to search for truth

GORDON FENWICK / COLLEGIAN

John Trudell, a Native American activist, spoke to an audience in the Campus Center Auditorium last evening.

By Kristin St. John
Collegian Staff

Native American activist John Trudell instructed a crowd of over 400 people to find the truth in today's reality last night at the Campus Center Auditorium.

Introduced by Adonis Ferreira as a "spokesman for our community," Trudell spoke about the connection that all people have with the earth and how it is being killed.

After reading two poems about that delicate connection, Trudell touched upon Columbus' arrival. Noting that the Inquisition was still happening in Europe, he said the Europeans were arriving in America with diseased minds because the battle for forced religion had been happening for 400 years.

Trudell said before the Inquisition, Europeans lived in tribes and respected the earth. But, with the creation of a male dominate god, it was considered alright to attack the land and each other.

"By the time European descendants got here their minds were all messed up," said Trudell.

This disease in their minds, he said, was killing the earth like termites eat through a house.

Trudell also spoke about the lie of democracy in the United States. Even though this political system is about majority rule, Native Americans could not vote because they were the majority; women were not allowed to vote because they were considered inferior; African Americans did not vote because

Turn to TRUTH, page 3

The New Yorker comes to UMass

Esteemed writer Susan Orlean to speak at Bowker

By Geri Sahn
Collegian Staff

Susan Orlean is living her dream.

On Monday, Sept. 26, The New Yorker staff writer will speak about writing popular American culture. The presentation will take place in the Bowker Auditorium, 8 p.m. at the University of Massachusetts.

Orlean said she will be reading some of her work and talking about the choices she has made as a journalist throughout her life.

"Magazines exist to communicate. We need to encourage every kind of reader. . . And I will be talking about how to capture the feeling of popular American culture in writing," Orlean said.

Working at The New Yorker has always been a goal of Orlean's.

"It really is a thrilling occupation. I have the freedom to look into subjects that are really unusual. Sometimes I have to pinch myself," Orlean said.

Orlean graduated from the University of Michigan in 1976 with a degree in English. She said she always knew she wanted to write for magazines.

"I was originally thinking about law school. But after graduation I took a year off and wrote for a tiny magazine. It's [writing for magazines] like heroin. Once I tried it, it was too late. I never looked back. I really found my calling," Orlean said.

Many of Orlean's subjects are ordinary people.

"I write about things that catch my eye. I like basketball and kids. . . Something will strike me and I will do a story on it," she said.

One of Orlean's favorite subjects was a high school basketball player. She said it was a lot of fun, and very challenging to spend time with, and write about, another person's world.

"It is like eavesdropping on a life. You get involved with the people you write about, but they are also your subject," Orlean said.

Orlean has also written many profiles of celebrities while working at Rolling Stone. Tom Hanks, Andie MacDowell and Jane Wallace are among the people she has profiled.

"I had a great time working for Rolling Stone. I began to feel my oats for 'writing as I see and experience it' when I traveled with the band Bon Jovi for five days. It was such a revelation," Orlean said.

Orlean said she enjoys interviewing celebrities, but enjoys the freedom to look into subjects that are unusual.

"Rolling Stone let me do stories that were a blast, but I had an overdose on celebrities," she said.

Orlean has written many "Talk Of The Town" pieces, which are short commentary articles in The New Yorker. "Writing for Talk Of The Town is very liberating. I hope to publish all of them in a book," she said.

Red Sox and Blue Fish and Saturday Night are two books Orlean has published. In Saturday Night, she wrote about how people spend their Saturday nights.

Orlean has also written for Vogue and contributed many articles to Esquire.

The presentation is a series in conjunction with The New Yorker Educational Program. The program was set up to encourage students to read The New Yorker in order to experience different styles of writing.

Lithuania may prosecute if U.S. deports Lileikis

By Michael Tarm
Associated Press

TALLINN, Estonia — Lithuanian officials said Thursday they would likely prosecute a Massachusetts man accused of Nazi war crimes if he is deported from the United States to the small Baltic country.

The Lithuanian Prosecutor's Office said it had not begun a formal investigation of Aleksandras Lileikis of Norwood, an 87 year old retired publishing company employee.

"If his crimes are clear and he is deported to Lithuania, he will be tried and could be jailed," Special Prosecutor Vidmantas Vaicickauskas said by telephone from the Lithuanian capital, Vilnius.

Lileikis could face a maximum life sentence in prison if convicted in Lithuania.

The U.S. Justice Department accused him Wednesday of being "a senior-level perpetrator of the Holocaust" when Germany occupied Lithuania during World War II. Lileikis allegedly headed the Lithuanian Security Police for Vilnius and took part in the murder of Jews, including a 6-year-old girl, Fruma Kaplan.

A lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court in Boston seeks to strip Lileikis of his citizenship and deport him, possibly to Lithuania. Members of Lithuania's Jewish community welcomed the news that an alleged war criminal could be held accountable.

"It's not time to forget the past," said Emanual Zingeris, a member of parliament and president of the Jewish Community of Lithuania. "If such individuals are guilty they should be prosecuted and go to jail."

But many Lithuanians have expressed reservations in the past about prosecuting alleged Nazi war criminals, arguing that evidence has sometimes been weak and based on files doctored by the Soviet KGB.

"Nobody will protest if someone is guilty and has to be punished," said Vytautas Landsbergis, an opposition leader and former president. "But many people oppose accusations on the basis of rumors and unsubstantiated evidence. We have had such problems."

Landsbergis said many Lithuanians also believe Nazi war criminals are sought but agents of Soviet-era crimes are overlooked.

After Lithuania won independence from the Soviet Union in 1991, Jewish groups at home and abroad criticized the government for not fully cooperating in bringing Nazi war criminals to justice. More recently, Lithuania has signed agreements with countries, including the United States, on exchanging information on Nazi war criminals.

The Lithuanian Prosecutor's office said Thursday it had opened its files to U.S. officials investigating Lileikis.

Landsbergis said Lithuania will vigorously pursue the prosecution if there is sufficient evidence. "Legal matters will be dealt with correctly," he said.

The Nazi-era slaughter of Jews remains a sensitive issue in Lithuania, where a large, prewar Jewish community was almost completely wiped out. In Vilnius, once a center of European Jewish cultural life, 55,000 of the city's 60,000 Jews were either killed or deported to concentration camps.

In the forests of Paneriai, where Fruma Kaplan and many others were shot, thousands of bones are still visible under a thin layer of decaying leaves and underbrush.

Zingeris said many Lithuanians have not faced up to the tragedy or the fact that many of their countrymen collaborated with the Nazis.

I was sitting here first

GORDON FENWICK / COLLEGIAN

Thanks to the draining of the campus pond in preparation for next week's clean-up drive, many ducks are finding more and more places to sit.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Friday, Sept. 23

Meeting — Campus Crusade For Christ, Campus Center, Umass, Check info. desk for room number, 7 p.m.

Theater — Auditions for UMass Theater Guild, Witness For The Prosecution, Campus Center Room 168 d, 6:30 p.m., Information: 545-0415.

Special Event — Healthy, Wealthy, and Wise? Health care in the 90's, Main Lecture Hall, Holyoke College, 3 p.m.

Film — To Kill A Mockingbird, Gamble Auditorium, MHC, $2.50, Show times: 7 and 9:15 p.m.

Film — Great Muppet Caper, Campus Center Theater, Amherst College, $1.75, Show times: 7:30 and 10 p.m.

Community — Amherst Area Amateur Astronomers Association Club Meeting, Bassett Planetarium, Morgan Hall, Amherst College, 8 p.m. Free.

Saturday, Sept. 24

Hayride — Sponsored by Campus Crusade for Christ, $6, Open to all, Rides from Haigis Mall, 7:45 p.m., Information: 546-7302.

Sunday, Sept. 25

BBQ — And volleyball, Hillel House, 388 N. Pleasant Street, Amherst, $2, Sponsored by UMass Hillel, 1:30 p.m.

First Aid - Interested in joining the University of Massachusetts Fire and First Aid Unit? Room N406 Morrill North, 7 p.m., Information: 545-1885.

Music - Boston Renaissance Ensemble, Sage Recital Hall, Smith College, Free, 8 p.m.

Lecture - Conserving Community - Wendell Berry will be speaking. Benefits will go to Brookfield Farm, $10, Johnson Chapel, Amherst College, 7 p.m.

Monday, Sept. 26

Community - Candle lighting, Hakafot, evening services, Chabad House, 6:21 p.m., Information: 549-4094.

Other Activities and Upcoming Events

Volunteers Needed - Campus Pond Cleanup at UMass, Sept. 27 & 28, from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. T-Shirts and refreshments will be provided, Call: 545-2317.

Community Service - The Companion Program is looking for volunteers. Call: 253-2591.

Internships - MASSPIRG is offering internships for the fall semester. Earn course credits. Information: 423B Student Union or call 545-0199.

Earn Credits - The Peer Education Program on Sexual Harassment is recruiting 30 undergraduate men and women for its one-credit training session this semester. Information: call Mike at 546-0365.

Lazin to speak at Hillel during Shabbat services

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Hillel will be seeing a familiar face today. Fred Lazin, an alum of the University, will be joining Hillel House for dinner and then speaking during Shabbat services.

Lazin graduated from UMass with his bachelors of arts degree in government and went on to get his masters degree and doctorate in political science from the University of Chicago.

Lazin spent time working at the John Jay College of Criminal Justice of the City University of New York, University of California at Los Angeles, and Cornell University before joining the faculty at Ben-Gurion University in Israel.

At BGU, Lazin helped develop interdisciplinary programs in urban studies and political science, as well as serving for two years as chairperson of the Department of Behavioral Sciences.

Lazin was the director of the Humphrey Institute for Social Ecology from 1981–1986, where he worked to expand the university's role in the surrounding community. From this research was developed the first and second International Symposiums on the Role of Universities in Developing Areas. Lazin also created new fields in Holocaust studies through his research on how American–Jewish organizations responded to German–Jewish refugees in the 1930s.

In 1991, Lazin was appointed to the Lynn and Lloyd Hurst Family Chair in Local Government at BGU. In that position he works to further understand local government in Israel and around the world. He also accepted the position of Director of the Overseas Student Program at BGU. Attendance in the program has nearly tripled under his guidance.

Lazin will be talking about his experiences as an American in Israel.

■ Roosevelt

continued from page 1

SUZANNE GARR / COLLEGIAN

People gathered on the steps of the Student Union yesterday in a show of support for Democrat Mark Roosevelt and his challenge of Gov. William Weld.

Legislature and helped write the 1993 Education Reform Act.

The law ensured that public schools in low–income communities receive a base amount of funding apart from property taxes, and established uniform graduation and teacher performance standards.

Yesterday, Roosevelt said that as governor, he would work to establish high school programs for motivated students, noting "we aren't there for the kids that want to play it straight and want to make the most of their lives."

Roosevelt also said yesterday that welfare should serve to "help people that want to help themselves."

In his campaign, Roosevelt has proposed a one–year time limit for welfare recipients to find employment, after which they will face a 25 hour per week community service requirement.

He also advocates the extension of health care to welfare recipients who find jobs that do not offer benefits.

Roosevelt is supported by State Representative Ellen Story, D–Amherst, who was on hand to introduce Roosevelt and Massie yesterday.

CANSBOTTLESPAPERPLASTIC
RECYCLE
It's the everyday way to save the world.
ENVIRONMENTAL DEFENSE FUND

COLLEGE PIZZA
Welcomes back all the UMass students, and wishes them a happy, healthy and successful year.
College Pizza
The Closest Location, The Hottest Pizza
Located at Patterson Corner of Southwest
549-6098 • 549-6073

IF YOU HAVEN'T YET, NOW IS THE TIME!
Register now through September 26 for over 200 evening credit courses and noncredit workshops.
University of Massachusetts/Amherst
Division of Continuing Education
Goodell Building
545-2414
A quality education at affordable prices

HELCATS
JOIN THE PACK
RIDE WITH DEATH
THE COLLEGIAN

BE A TEACHER.
BE A HERO.
Call 1-800-45-TEACH.

SMART SHOPPERS SHOP SMART!
Classic Consignments
Designer, Brand Name Women's and Children's Clothing Sold and Consigned
256-0661
Tues.-Sat. 10:30-5:30 800 Main St., Amherst
on PVTA Bus Route

200 Throbbing Watts!
Xtasy in Sound
ONKYO TX-SV940 Receiver
Sale $289.
Sound & Music
Millbank Place • 351 Pleasant Street • Northampton
584-9547 • VISA & MasterCard accepted

THE DOVE'S NEST
Rt. 116 Sunderland • 665-7969
Open Mon-Sat 6am - 3pm
Sunday 7am - 3pm
THIS WEEK'S SPECIAL
2 Pancakes, 2 Eggs & 2 Bacon or Sausage for $2.15

SEMESTER MEMBERSHIP only $109
The GYM
AT MOUNTAIN FARMS MALL
Rt. 9 - Hadley • 584-2175

Spirit Haus
Specialty Beverage Center
Catamount & Post Road (Porter, Amber, October Fest) $4.69 / Six Pack $17.99 / Case
Black Label 15-Pack $5.25
Meisterbrau (Reg. & Light) $13.99 / 12 Pack
Blackened Voodoo Lager $6.49 / Six Pack
Wild Goose (India Pale Ale, Golden, Amber) $5.49 / Six Pack
John Courage 22oz bottle $1.80/each
Popov Vodka 750ml $5.49
Captain Morgan Coconut Rum 750 ml $7.99 With Free Mug
Matador Tequilla 1 Liter $7.99
Southern Comfort 750ml $6.99
Gordons Pepper Vodka 1 Liter $4.99
Bartles & Jaymes Coolers All Flavors $2.99 / 4 Pack
All prices Plus Deposit
Wine Coolers • Ice • Mixers • Mini Kegs • Beer Glasses
"Your Full Service Party Source"
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER
Rt.9 East College Street • 253-5384
one mile east of Amherst Center on Rt.9E
VISA - MASTERCARD - DISCOVER Accepted

!! IBM XT COMPUTERS!!
*Includes monitor, 10 meg hard drive. (printers, modems also available) $168.00!!!
*14 day replacement guarantee.
*delivery available.
call 256-8094

HELP WANTED
WORK STUDY
Positions Available:
Clerical Asst. Needed
for Town of Amherst
Leisure Services
Department
Salary Range $5.10 - $6.26/hr.
flexible hours
M - F
CALL LSSE
256-4065

AHORA plans for the new semester

By Carlos Castillo
Collegian Correspondent

AHORA, a Registered Student Organization at the University of Massachusetts, began 22 years ago through the efforts of faculty, local leaders and students who shared Spanish as a common language.

The choice of the name AHORA, meaning "now" in Spanish, reflected the urgent need for an organization which incorporated Spanish language into an RSO.

AHORA distinguishes itself because of the many activities it offers. Last year, the group ran 20 activities. Organizers of AHORA said they expect similar success this year.

President Norma Rosa, a junior apparel marketing major, said her goals for AHORA are to "continue educational, cultural, and political efforts — in that order."

Constant assistance allows members of AHORA to move positively in realizing the group's mission; to develop an organization that represents the wholeness of Latin American cultures on campus, Rosa said.

Rosa's duties are shared with Vice President, Juan Mejia, a civil engineering senior. Rosa said both she and Mejia make a conscious effort to bridge the needs of the Latin American community through student organized meetings, committees, news letters, and communication with other campus and local organizations.

AHORA opens opportunities for the Latin American community to gather by financially supporting groups who wish to participate in various activities scheduled throughout the year, Rosa said.

These activities have included participation in an international fair. AHORA also presented videos and literature at tables on the Campus Center Concourse. Throughout the year, they have brought distinguished speakers, artists and musicians to visit the campus.

Over 40 people attended AHORA's opening meeting last night.

"AHORA is important because it unites Latino students," said Rosa Monet, a sophomore exercise science major and treasurer.

Darrin Bouley, senior biology major, said, "I'm interested in learning a second language."

Tonight, AHORA will be sponsoring Noche Social Latino America in the Southside Room in the Southwest Residential Area from 7:30–9:30 p.m. The event will be followed by a Fiesta Latina at 10 p.m.

Tomorrow will be Sabor Latino also in the Southside Room in Southwest from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. which will include Latino food. Admission is $3.

Budget discussed at faculty senate meeting

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

Physical assaults on minority students are a result of multicultural issues being taken too lightly on campus, according to Prasad Veneujopal, president of the Graduate Student Senate.

Veneujopal spoke yesterday afternoon at the University of Massachusetts Faculty Senate meeting, where many issues were addressed. It marked the first meeting of the semester.

Relations with the state, in western Massachusetts, with the surrounding campuses, and within UMass were key points addressed as people set down guidelines and goals for the next two semesters.

Low faculty morale is a problem that stems from the state and other political forces failing to support and appreciate the faculty, according to Provost Pat Crosson. In working on raising the morale of the faculty, she hopes to inject new energy into undergraduate education at UMass.

The profits of economic development were discussed and the process wherein enrichening UMass talent benefits the community. In projecting those talents outwardly, there is greater opportunity to attract companies, ultimately creating more jobs.

Chancellor David K. Scott noted that UMass is now the fourth most expensive public university in the country, stepping down from the rank of second in the nation last year. This set the tone for the budget concerns discussed.

A long–term budget request plan that would involve participation from an Amherst representative and senator was discussed.

The main focus of the plan would be to make sure students were only paying the one–third of tuition they are responsible for while attending a state school, as opposed to the 42 percent they are currently paying at UMass.

Scott reported that the Chancellor's Council has raised 30 percent more than it did last year and the university has received $12,500 in private giving. This promoted discussion of increased alumni relations.

The biggest concern about budget allocating and fund raising seemed to be a need for more collaboration within the university.

Scott stressed this point and said it could be made possible through increased communication. He spoke of "blurring the boundaries," in order to do so.

■ truth

continued from page 1

they were property and even white men who did not own land were excluded. He said looking at democracy as an outsider he could see it as "a direct threat to the evolution of our tribes."

Trudell said democracy and capitalism consider him an enemy because he questions the truth behind it. He asked why people in power are concerned about wha. one person says about them or other groups of people. Calling the savings and loan scandal a treason against the American economy, Trudell said he did not understand why it has been called a scandal.

"Exactly what's happening in this democracy?" he asked.

Trudell was quick to point out that peoples lives are about evolution not revolution, human beings should use their minds to be creative and cause change, instead of suppressing emotions, people need to get in touch with their feelings and be true to themselves. He also said before doing something people must check out their motive and intentions.

"I don't think that the mind shuts down," he said. "Thoughts are always there, they are creative energy from the mind."

To find the point of reality, Trudell told the attentive audience to speak the truth to themselves and to learn from their mistakes quickly. He said childhood is learning, adulthood is knowledge and old age is wisdom.

"What prevents wisdom is not knowing the truth," he said. Trudell also touched on sexism, saying it was a tool to break down society. When Europeans came to North America, Indians still viewed the earth as the mother, so the women were attacked. He said if women realigned themselves with the earth and become one with their thoughts and feelings there would be a change in power.

"It's not going to change until the consciousness of women change it," he said.

Talking about the tragedy in Waco, Texas, Trudell mentioned how Attorney General Janet Reno took the fall for President Clinton. He said women clean up after men all the time.

Trudell used another poem to sum up his speech which read: "We are part of the dream time. . . Happiness is one of the colors. We can't buy happiness, we can't steal it, we can create it."

Minuteman marching band plays on

Power and class of New England form family under Parks

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

The Power and Class of New England, the Minuteman Marching Band, will join 49 other bands from around the area for Band Day at tomorrow's football game at Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium. Festivities for Band Day begin at 1 p.m. with the start of the Massachusetts-Maine football game and culminate with a show which includes all 50 bands at halftime.

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian Correspondent

Many students will attend the University of Massachusetts football game this weekend and have the opportunity to hear the Minuteman Marching Band, but few realize what goes on behind the scenes.

The band goes through intensive training and practicing before each performance, according to George Parks, director of the band.

The band begins practicing about a week and a half before most students return to campus for the fall semester.

Freshmen enter the band knowing little about how to march, but within three weeks, they are just as competent as returning band members, according to John Thomson, a senior computer systems engineering major and a clarinet player.

"Band members work very hard, they put in long hard hours, but when it's done, they have a feeling of accomplishment, a feeling of pride," said Parks.

However, to many members, the band is more than just music and hard work. To many members, like senior marketing major and trumpet player Tim O'Toole, it is like a family. Parks said he believes the band is a sub-culture.

"The band, besides being a family, is an outlet of creativity," said Thomson.

The present band structure grew out of an effort in the 1960s by former University President David Lederle to form a strong marching band.

Lederle hired Dr. John Jenkins in 1963 as the new band director who took a different and more serious approach than his predecessor, Joseph Conino.

Jenkins began intensive rehearsals everyday, and he sponsored the formation of band service fraternity Kappa Kappa Psi and sorority Tau Beta Sigma, which are currently still present at the University.

In 1977, current band director Parks took the helm. He said he kept many of Jenkins' innovations, plus he expanded upon them. Parks said he was not afraid of playing untraditional pieces at performances.

"With every organization, there always is an evolution, you never stay the same, you either get better or worse," Parks said.

The band is nationally recognized as one of the finest collegiate marching bands. Last year, the band had the opportunity to perform at the Bands of America in Indiana.

"It was really great getting a chance to go do the Indianapolis trip, that was where the band really had the opportunity to perform on a national stage" said Parks.

In the past, the band has performed at both of former President Ronald Reagan's inaugural parades, and every year they perform at at least one New England Patriots' game.

Last year a documentary entitled The Power and Class was produced by Tony Musari who professionally produces documentaries. The documentary followed months of band activities and events.

Many members of the band were interviewed about their experiences in the band. The documentary concluded with coverage of the Bands of America.

"The documentary focused on many students of the band and what they go through as members," said Parks.

This weekend the band will be hosting the 10th Annual Band Day. According to Parks, there will be 49 high school bands attending the UMass football game from across New England. The high school bands will perform with the UMass band at half time.

BEE BOP
If you've got a good vibe you can snap your fingers, you can whistle, and you can hum.
Mass Daily Collegian tickle my tummy honey

KLEIN'S ALL ★ SPORTS
EVERYBODY WINS
ANNUAL EARLY BIRD SKI SALE!
Hurry Sale Ends Sept. 25!
Complete X-Country Packages Starting At $89.99
SAVE UP TO 50% ON ALL NAME BRAND SKI CLOTHING
Complete Downhill Packages W/Boots Starting At $279.99
Hampshire Mall, Rt 9, Hadley, MA

Latino Social Night
Learn about the latino registered students organizations.
Come see what your community has to offer !!!
Friday Sept. 23, 1994
Southside Room (south west)
7:30- 9:30P.M.
LATIN JAM
10:00P.M.

amc THEATRES
$2.50 MATINEE (1:30 PM or LESS) DAILY
LIMITED TO SEATING
MT. FARMS 586-0123
Call Theatre For Showtimes
Timeclock* PG
Princess Caraboo* PG
Milk Money PG13
Clear and Present Danger PG13
HAMPSHIRE 586-7500
Call Theatre For Showtimes
Natural Born Killers R
Forrest Gump PG13
The Next Karate Kid PG
Terminal Velocity* PG13
Trial By Jury R
Comma, Comma PG

THE NEW YORKER
ON CAMPUS
A Series in Conjunction with The New Yorker Education Program
Presents Staff Writer
Susan Orlean
With Insights On
"American Voices: Popular American Culture"
Monday, September 26, 1994
8:00 P.M. Bowker Auditorium
University of Massachusetts, Amherst
Meet the author at a reception following the discussion
Free and Open to the Public
For information and directions contact Journalism Department University of Massachusetts (413) 545-1376
TIAA CREF

Spirit Haus
Refrigerator Rentals
256-8433
253-5384

MEN NEEDED!!
Are you a male student living on campus interested in preventing sexual harassment? The Peer Education Program on Sexual Harassment is recruiting 30 undergraduate men and women for a one-credit training session this semester. Fifteen women have already signed up. After successfully completing this course, Peer Educators working in male/female teams will provide workshops to other undergraduates in the spring 1995 semester and receive practicum credit.
For more information, call Mike at 546-0365.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Dunenne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Conley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor
Position vacant Black Affairs Editor
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaels French Affairs Editor
Evelyn A. Delenus Multicultural Affairs Editor
Kelly Spang News Editor
Nathan K. Martin Photography Editor

Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Position vacant Women's Issues Editor
Marni E. Heffner Editorial Productions Manager
John Khachadoorian Financial Manager
Jim Roode Circulation Manager
Eric Aberiam Subscriptions Manager
Maureen Mejerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Don't neglect today for the future

Emily Marino

I am not going to write a column about the infamous "senior slump," because I refuse to blame my lack of motivation and general feeling of being unfocused on the fact that I am beginning my last year at the University of Massachusetts.

Every fall for the past three years I have returned to school full of excitement (and maybe just a little anxiety), eager to kick off a new year. I have looked forward to classes that would challenge me, that would teach me about places and things of which I was previously ignorant.

I have looked forward to getting to know, and eventually earning the respect of my professors by demonstrating a genuine appreciation of knowledge.

Extracurricular activities, from the Collegian to the Italian Club, to editing a journal for the comparative literature department, have always been important in helping me feel as though my education was not confined solely to a classroom. I undertook every activity with a zest to contribute and, more selfishly, make myself a more well- rounded person with an equally well-rounded social network.

But this year is different.

I'm not sure if this is what is commonly referred to as burn-out, but in many ways I feel as though I've been there, done it, nailed it shut. I look around at the young faces in many of my classrooms, some of them full of the same ambition that I now look for, but cannot seem to find.

As I fill in the bubbles of my GRE registration forms and send away for applications to various graduate schools, I cannot help but feel that the transition to there is slowly consuming my remaining existence here.

I look at my friends and wonder what will become of them a year from now, wonder if they too, will look back at this as a time of confusion. I question the validity of our fading "now," and wonder if the memories we create in the coming months will constitute something strong enough to keep us all together after we throw our tasseled caps in the air next May.

My mother, who is probably one of the wisest women in the world, would have a few choice words for me. I know. She would tell me not to abandon today in the fear of what tomorrow may bring. She would probably also yell at me for wasting this precious time, one of the most exciting and, in many ways, happiest times of my life.

Of course, like all mothers, she would be right. I think of all of the good times I have shared with amazing people, all of the things that I have learned about this curious world, and above all, about myself.

I think of all of the late night reading (and coffee), endless hours down in the good old campus center basement, blurry weekends, basketball games, thousands of pages of exams and final papers, trips that ranged from Northampton to Italy, concerts, novels, and other events that have constituted my life for the past six semesters, and I know that my time here has been spent well.

I know that I have been extremely lucky to have had many of the experiences that I have had, to have met the incredible people that are in my life, and to have received what I believe to be an excellent education.

Perhaps my recent lack of interest in this place is my way of preparing to leave — like fighting with a close friend before leaving for a long trip so that saying goodbye is easier. If I convince myself now that I have gotten all I can from this institution, leaving it behind will make a whole lot more sense, come May.

What doesn't make much sense, however, is writing off the next year to cushion the blow of its end. Why spend the next two semesters turning my nose up at everything that has brought me so much happiness in the past three years? Why not make memories of my last year that will reflect the good times that I have had throughout my undergraduate career?

None of us want to look back at our senior year as a time of longing for the past, fearing the future and, consequently ignoring the present. Sure, this is a scary time for all of us who do not have the comfort of knowing we are returning to UMass in the fall, but we are here now; we should enjoy and appreciate our remaining time here.

Man, my mother would be proud of me.

Emily Marino is a Collegian staff member.

Another night, another HSCN movie in Southwest

Andrew Bryce

I sat in my room, pathetically alone.

It was a few nights ago, and I was switching the channels, trying to find something anything that was half-way interesting. Nothing was on, obviously by the fact that I began to watch the inspirational flick, Rudy, based on a true story about a scrub who has a dream of suiting up for the Notre Dame football team.

Well, that same scrub got his wish by the end of the film, and I was honestly pretty happy for the little guy. I sat there, just me, and watched it from start to finish. When it ended, I didn't react the way I did after Rocky III, when I shadow boxed with myself in the mirror, or Karate Kid, where my friends and I were attempting flying kicks into the air.

I did admittedly get a small chill at the end, as the 3-foot, 80-pound Rudy got to play for the Fightin' Irish in the waning moments of a blow-out. Regardless, I changed the channel to Letterman.

So, I am sitting there, yet still by myself, tuning into my late-night idol. I hear this screaming and yelling coming from outside. Curiously, I walked to the window and looked out. I see these people outside, one on the other's shoulders, dancing around. I heard people screaming from the surrounding dorms, as well as my own. Everyone seemed so happy. What were they yelling for? Who were they all cheering about?

Rudy.

Apparently, everyone in the Southwest area had tuned into good ol' Housing Services Cable Network, and watched the movie. There I was, thinking I was a despicable toolbox for watching Rudy, and yet, I happily was not alone. I was actually one of many toolboxes in the vicinity who agonizingly survived the flick.

The reaction was amazing. Every room (besides mine of course, because, after all, I was alone, and you just can't yell things out of your room when you are by yourself) was being screamed out of because of the inspiration induced by Rudy. Pandemonium just broke loose around Southwest, as people cheered, screamed, wept and danced for a good hour after the conclusion of the HSCN special.

I was so dumbfounded about the reaction that I made some calls to my friends. Here I am, stuck back in the dorms in my junior year, especially in a maniacal zoo like Southwest, with a variety of sorts chanting a has-been (or never-was) football player's name. And there were my friends, off in some never-never land called off-campus housing.

The bastards.

I called my friend Cameron, and he got a big kick out of the Rudy reaction as I stuck the phone out the window for them. Cameron and his roommates were sitting around, kicking back with some beers. Routinely, when they are all booting it up, they put me on speaker phone, and ask me to say something, so they can all bust out laughing.

It's the kind of thing that's funny for the first five minutes, and then it runs dry. Enough time to tell a few silly jokes to a bunch of intoxicated idiots (just kidding guys,) and have them get a small laugh out of it.

What sucks about it, though, is they usually call me at 3 a.m. when they are piss-drunk, as I am trying to get my nightly five hours of sleep. It amuses me for the first five minutes, and then I'm ready to hit the sheets. Somehow, that does not sit well with them after the case of beer, as they continue to call until I put the phone off the hook.

Ah, the invention of the speaker phone — right up there with the peephole.

I then called my buddy Butchie, and he, too, got a laugh out of the Rudy ordeal. He and his dorm-mates were taking part in consuming booze, as well. They were partying, evident by the fact that, according to Butchie, they used a handtruck to get all the beer into the building. A beer ball, 30-packs, cases of Rolling Rock..

And this was on Wednesday night.

I called my roommate at work, and laughed and laughed as I was telling him about the blathering idiots yelling and screaming about Rudy — and he frustratingly did not find it funny. Man, I hate when that happens.

The moral of this pathetic story?

I don't know. Watch Rudy, I guess, and see if there is a similar reaction. And then call your friends.

But make sure you're pathetically alone.

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

AT THE TOWN MEETING, RUBY KILGORE WAS SKEPTICAL
MR. DOYLE, YOU SAY YOU'RE BUILDING A "SHOPPERS PARADISE."
WELL, WHAT KIND OF VALUE ARE YOU TALKING ABOUT? LIKE, HOW MUCH WOULD A 24-COUNT PACKAGE OF EXTRA-LARGE PAMPERS COST ME?
ONE LOW PRICE — $5.99! YES, $5.99! BUY THREE, YOUR COST IS ONLY $14.99!
GASP!
BOY'S TURTLENECKS, FROM $2.49! RADIAL TIRES, ONLY $29.50!
DON'T LISTEN TO HIM! THESE ARE THE DEVIL'S PRICES!
OOH...
AHH...

Opinion/Editorial

I GUESS THIS IS BETTER THAN HAVING TO FIGHT MY WAY IN...
COME ON IN, AMERICA
YOU WIN! WE SURRENDER!
HAITIAN QUAGMIRE
WELCOME!
TOLES
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND.
©1994 THE BUFFALO NEWS
WHAT IS THIS STUFF?
FERTILE SOIL FOR DEMOCRACY, WE HOPE

Americans problems aren't easily solved

E.C. Thomas

In Europe, indeed maybe even here, crime is synonymous with America. Just as Rome is known for its sexual harassment of women, New York is known for its violence. While European travel programs do showcase American cities, 10 minutes towards the end is always devoted to safety guidelines. "As with every city in America," they begin, "to ensure your well being we suggest you follow these safety precautions."

All cities have crime, so why is it that America has the number on reputation for it? Is it our obsession with violence on the screens of our TV and in our cinemas? Or the gangs, guns and drug wars that dominate the international headlines? Or is this media image really just a mirror of the truth?

What is happening to our cities when second graders are being caught bringing guns to school? When the number one cause of death in young adults ages 16–24 is homicide, or when membership in a gang is as accepted as being a player on a football team. Perhaps what is most important is not all the statistics, but the denial of them. Why does Washington seem to be in denial of the rapid proliferation of such violence in our cities, and overall in our country?

No American would deny that we have a problem. In fact a majority of voters during the 1992 election, stated that their number one concern in America was crime. Yet, those in Washington can't seem to step off their party platforms long enough to do something about it.

Reaching solutions for American problems and concerns, has never been a strong point in Washington, but with the 1996 elections nipping at politicians' heels, it's become a never ending battle between Republican and Democrat. I find this rather offensive and just plain wrong. I don't believe that any American voted Republican or Democrat for the sake of having a powerful party. Rather, the voters of America voted for politicians who they believed would get something done. We didn't place politicians in office just so they could jump on their soap boxes to serve their own or their party's political ambitions – they are there to represent our concerns.

Recently the crime bill was made law. However, because of this never ending battle between Republican and Democrat, the much-needed crime bill was nearly lost. And even though it did pass through Congress, concessions had to be made in order for it to finally be handed to the President.

As it stands now the crime bill makes "three strikes, you're out" the law of the land, increases the number of prisons and police officers and bans some assault weapons. However, what was lost during the Republican versus Democrat contest was the money applied to crime prevention measures. The bill was changed from dominantly crime preventive to dominantly crime punishable; which is a shame, since Americans would probably sleep better at night knowing that all that can be done is being done to prevent crime, rather than all that can be done is being done — after the fact.

Knowing that the number one cause of death in young people today is homicide, how could one possibly argue against a ban on assault weapons? People — children are dying. Yes, dying at an insane rate. And yet some in Washington are arguing to keep assault weapons on the streets of our country. Where is the rationality in that?

Crime affects everyone, Republican and Democrat. Why are the problems that ALL Americans face, becoming bi- partisan issues? While those in Washington are trying to make themselves look better for 1996, we Americans are suffering at the cost of their vanity.

In the end, hopefully Washington will realize that they aren't debating on a party platform, rather a common level of bettering the lives of Americans. Until that time comes, Americans are the ones who are sorely losing, not the 1996 political hopefuls.

E.C. Thomas is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

SGA president

To the editor:

I would like to add my voice to the emerging chorus of support for Student Government Association president Mirran Raphaely.

For the past year I've known her, Mirran has been a tireless worker for the student body, an incisive and brilliant thinker and a good role model for me. If she has criticisms of the University, we would do well to address them rather than her. Such misplaced attacking of our student leaders amounts to shooting the messenger and contributes to the burnout that befalls many of them.

Sharp thinkers like Mirran should be supported, not trashed.

Ben Zeman
Belchertown

Town referendum

To the editor:

On Oct. 4, there will be a town referendum on whether to override Proposition 2.5 in order to fund repairs and additions to the Amherst Regional High School building. Expanded enrollment makes these repairs and additions essential to the maintenance of quality education for Amherst's young people. As always, however, there is a group of persons aggressively opposed to anything that involves even a small increase in taxes. I urge those students who are registered to vote in Amherst to take a few minutes on Oct. 4, between 12 p.m. and 8 p.m., and vote to support this override.

Ellsworth Barnard
Emeritus Professor of English
Class of 1928
Amherst

Laws are necessary

To the editor:

I'm writing in response to Peter Orvetti's article "Running the First Amendment up the flagpole."

His main reasoning against the flying of the South Carolina flag is that it is imposing viewpoint onto the people of the state. Has he ever thought that maybe the people of South Carolina want the flag there as a memorial to the young men who died as a result of the Civil War? More than 70,000 soldiers died on the Confederate side and the vast majority of them were too poor to own slaves. Let's face it, while all the fighting was occurring, all the slave owners were home counting their money and sending the working class out to fight their war as usual.

He also states that we can't "impose views through legislation that someone else might not like." Are you serious? I'm not one of them, but there is a crowd of people who "might not like" the present drug laws. What about those who "might not like" the present immigration policies.

You know what, Peter, why don't we just throw out all the laws that people "might not like?" Because we need order in this country, and no matter what you do, you just can't please everyone. Thank you for your time.

Dixon Ticonderosa
Southwest

Letters to the Editor

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian welcomes and encourages letters to the editor. When writing, please TYPE your letter and keep it to a maximum of 400 words. We would much rather print several concise letters in the limited space available on the page.

The Editorial/Opinion page will occasionally print guest columns, but arrangements must be made in advance. If you feel you have a unique perspective on an issue of general interest, contact the Ed/Op staff before you submit anything longer than a standard letter.

All letters should include a name, address and phone number (for verification purposes only). Students should also include their year and major. The Collegian reserves the right to edit submissions for grammar, clarity and length.

Send all letters to the Ed/Op page, c/o the Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass.

Arts & Living

The Machine brings Floyd classics to Northampton

The 'not a tribute band' act set to perform covers at Pearl Street venue

By Michael MacLean
Collegian Staff

For the past couple of years, The Machine has been on the road bringing their repertoire of Pink Floyd songs to clubs, universities and various other venues around the country. The band usually makes several appearances in the Pioneer Valley throughout the year, and Friday, Sept. 23, marks their first appearance in the area since the start of the new semester.

Constantly growing in popularity, the band has attracted as many as 6,000 fans at several amusement parks in New England. The band has even been recognized abroad in England, where they were they were featured in The Amazing Pudding, a Pink Floyd monthly distributed here and in Europe.

The past year has seen a change for the band in the addition of Wes Nagy on keyboards. Nagy, in the past, has worked with such artists as Gary U.S. Bonds, Bo Diddley, Southside Johnny and Mick Taylor. Nagy joins the lineup of Adam Price on Bass, Joe Pascarell on guitar and vocals, and Todd Cohen on drums.

Being a cover band has certainly worked out well for the band that originally started out jamming in bars in Spring Valley, N.Y. Even though they often get tagged with the "tribute band" label, guitarist Pascarell does not consider the band a "tribute" band.

"I hate that word," Pascarell explained in an interview recently. "That word in general I don't like, but undoubtedly it's going to happen. We're a cover band, basically. But if that's what people want to say, that's what people want to say."

Although some bands who play exclusively someone else's music go as far as to make themselves up to look like the original artist, The Machine does not feel any of that is necessary to perform Floyd's music.

"They [Pink Floyd] don't really even have a look. The music is the main thing with them. We just go up there in street clothes and play the music," Pascarell said.

"The main focus has to be the music," he added, "just the way they [Floyd] are." The band has also been considering the prospect of recording some original material, but for now, the band is happy paying homage to Pink Floyd.

"The biggest thrill we get is when someone comes up to us and says that before they saw us, they didn't like Pink Floyd, but now after seeing us play, they do. And there are a lot of people who do that," drummer Cohen said. "It makes us feel great about what we're doing."

COURTESY THE MACHINE
Adam Price is the bass player for The Machine.

COURTESY THE MACHINE
The Machine's Joe Pascarell

So whether you are an avid fan of Pink Floyd or just curious, Friday you'll get your chance to hear the same great music, without the giant ticket prices and in a much more intimate setting," he added.

The Machine brings their set of Pink Floyd tunes to Pearl St. Nightclub in Northampton on Friday, Sept. 23. The show is 18+, doors open at 8:30 p.m. For more information call (413) 584-7771.

Other Weekend Events:

The Machine isn't the only musical artist set to be jamming this weekend. The Valley has a wide range of musical performers and concerts. Here's a random sampling of acts just waiting to entertain you.

On Friday, Sept. 23, The Black Sheep Cafe in Amherst will host Paul Kaplan. Over at the Hotel Northampton in their Coolige Park Cafe, Mark Nomad is set to play. At the Fire and Water Cafe, also located in Northampton, Cindy Bow will perform.

On Saturday, Sept. 24, The Bay State in Northampton has Flycatcher, Swivelneck and Uncle Joe's Big Old Driver on the program. At the North Star in Northampton, Lafcia is set to perform. Also in Noho, the aforementioned Fire and Water Cafe will host D. Davis and Rik Ekstrom. Paris is scheduled to play Dockside at Brunelle's in South Hadley.

Sunday, Sept. 25 will bring Fred Small to the Green River Cafe in Greenfield, while Katina's on Route 9 in Hadley will host Spring Heeled Jack, Knuckle Sandwich and Gratitude. At the Northampton Brewery, Sarah Burrill and Love Gratitude are set to perform. And finally, '70s heroes Cheap Trick will rekindle some nostalgia at Pearl Street in Northampton.

FOR 26 WAYS to help save the EARTH CALL 1-800-488-8887.
A Public Service of The Ad Council
Earth Share

Pearl Street
• Thursday •
18+ DANCE PARTY
HOSTED BY WHAMP'S NICK DANGER
The Area's Biggest Dance Party
Music by Spin Inc
Downstairs 18+/
Underground at Pearl Street
INSOMNIA
Alternative Dance Music w/ DJ's Wilson & J. Schwartz
• Friday •
RETRO NIGHT
Dance Music From the Late 70s & early 80s with DJ Dennis
9:00pm-1:00pm
*Free Admission With This Ad!
*Duran Duran, Wham!, Modern Romance, Rick Astley, Boulder, Human League, Fiends&Lovers
• Saturday •
SATURDAY NIGHT DANCE PARTY
WITH DJ LANCE
PLAYING CLUB / TOP 40 DANCE MUSIC
• WEDNESDAY •
GAY NIGHT
MUSIC BY SPIN INC
LIVE MUSIC
Fri., Sept 23 8:30pm /18+/ Pink Floyd Tribute
The Machine
Sun., Sept. 25 8:00pm
Cheap Trick Hunk
Tue., Sept. 27 8:00pm /18+/ Free Show!
Leftover Salmon Yeti
Fri., Sept. 30 8:30pm /18+/
Chucklehead Knuckle Sandwich
Sat., Oct 1 1 - 9:00pm /18+/ U2 Tribute
ZOO STATION
Sun., Oct 2 2 - 7:30pm /All Ages/
BIG MISTAKE
Mon., Oct. 3 8:00pm /18+/ SKA Festival
THE SPECIALS
Lets Go Bowling / SMA
Tue., Oct 4 7:30pm/All Ages/
OVERKILL
Pro Pain / Down Nation
Thurs., Oct 6 9:00pm /18+/
MAGGIE ESTEP
Sat., Oct. 8 8:30pm
J. GEILS BLUES
Sun., Oct 9 7:30pm/All Ages/
SAVATAGE
Tue., Oct 11 8:00pm/18+/
DAVE MATTHEWS BAND
Thurs., Oct 13 7:00pm/18+/
LUCIOUS JACK-
Sun., Oct 23 8:00pm/18+/
DEE-LITE
Tickets available at Pearl Street, Strawberries, Tix Unlimited, Northampton Box Office, Affordable Tix, The Record in Amherst, 10 Pearl Street, Northampton, 584-[illegible]

Largest Game Section in Area
The Game Master
In Amherst & Northampton!
Hundreds of video games to rent including Super Nintendo, Sega Genesis, CD Rom.
Try out the games in the store - Rent for 3 days, 2 nights
We also rent video game systems
COUPON MOVIE PASS SPECIAL 10 Movies for just $19.99 One coupon per customer. Expires 9-30-94
COUPON Rent 2 Movies at Reg. Price, GET ONE FREE Good Mon - Thurs. Keep for 3 days and 2 nights Includes new releases One coupon per customer. Expires 9-30-94
SOUNDS EASY VIDEO STORES
Amherst 6 University Drive 549-5200 Sun. - Thurs. 10 - 10 Fri. & Sat. 10 - 11
Northampton Hamp Plaza 586-7260 Sun. - Thurs. 10 - 10 Fri. & Sat. 10 - 10:30
Greenfield 20 Mohawk Trail 772-1441 Sun. - Sat. 10 - 10

Anthony's
"The Biggest Stars Shine Only at Anthony's"
Sept. 25 - Oct. 1
Amber Lynn

18 & Over Allowed!
Monday Thru Saturday
Limited Seating • Positive ID Required
Dancers Wanted – Join the best team in the Northeast
180 FRONTROW SEATS
Mon-Wed 4pm-2am • Thu-Sat 12pm-2am
500 New Ludlow Rd. South Hadley, MA
Rt. 91 North to Mass Pike East to Exit 5
left on Rt. 33, turn right across from BigY (413) 536-0502

100% BEEF
2 BURGS 2 BUCKS
Great Burgs! Great Deal!
QUARTER POUNDERS • OPEN YEAR ROUND
585-0241 ROUTE 9 HADLEY MA
PETE'S

IS THERE SOMETHING YOU MIGHT HAVE FORGOTTEN?
RUSH IGU!
Sept. 24 Sat 1-3 p.m.
Ditch the D.C. - Eat with us!
Sept. 25 Sun 12-3 p.m. Tea on the Porch
Sept. 28 Wed 5-6:30 p.m. Hang out with us.
Oct. 3 Mon 6-8 p.m. Our Last Night
IGU is located at 406 N. Pleasant St.
For more information, please call
Karen Kim at 549-3974

Professor speaks on women's rights

Janice Raymond outlines the causes of international prostitution

By Tracy Kruger
Collegian Correspondent

The Five College Program in Peace and World Security presented a discussion on launching the international sexual exploitation of women and children as a human rights issue last night in Thompson Hall at the University of Massachusetts.

Women's studies professor Janice Raymond's lecture, "International trafficking in women and children: a human rights issue," described this international movement.

Raymond, coordinator of the United Nations non-governmental organization, Coalition Against Trafficking in Women, is actively involved in working with the UN in developing a convention which will establish sexual exploitation as a violation of human rights.

Raymond said the international sex trade is becoming a worldwide plague, especially in Thailand and the Philippines. "These women and children lead lives that are truly lead under conditions of slavery," Raymond said.

She also said the prostitution of women and children in these nations can be attributed to military and economic control.

The United States is responsible for the sex industry that developed during and flourished after the presence of troops in countries such as Cambodia and Vietnam, Raymond said.

"The military regards prostitution as a necessary evil at best," she said.

Nations sell women as beautiful, exotic commodities in order to bring in the foreign currency necessary to pay off their debts to other countries. Raymond said this is a common theme in nations opening up to the international market.

"This [sexual tourism] operates like a multinational corporation does," Raymond said.

Raymond responded to the controversial issue of the ethical interpretation of prostitution. "Beware men's rights posing as women's rights. . . The problem is, why do so many men demand it? And not the right of a woman to sell her body," she said.

"This avoids looking at the conditions that it was created, the role it plays in society. There are no acceptable forms of sexual exploitation. There are no distinctions," Raymond said.

GORDON FENWICK / COLLEGIAN
Janice Raymond

Revamped honors course aids new students

By Gayle Dougherty
Collegian Correspondent

Rather than learning the ropes of the University of Massachusetts by trial and error, the University's Honors Program is offering freshman honors students useful information in a classroom setting.

Last year was the first year of the program, coordinated by Linda Nolan, director of the honors program.

This year's "Meet UMass" class has been revised to include 14 discussion groups led by undergraduates in the honors program. This group of peer mentors consists of 50 to 60 students, many of whom took the course last year and revised its structure for the current class, according to Cory Pols, assistant director of the honors program.

"The peer mentors are a group of dynamic and intelligent people who are close in age to the new students and have a greater understanding of what they are going through," said Deidre Murphy, student advisor and graduate assistant.

The distinguishing difference of this year's class and the pilot program is the discussion sections. In addition to weekly lectures, students will attend smaller, 50-minute classes where issues such as time management, rape and safety, and mediation and conflict resolution are discussed.

"I hope the students in 191A [Meet UMass] get a sense of belonging, a good grasp of what the University offers and how to take advantage of it. I also hope the mentors obtain leadership skills that they can transfer anywhere," said Cohen.

The weekly lectures also offers a variety of topics for students including a stress management workshop, a multi- cultural film festival, and two sexuality lectures by Dr. James Abel, coordinator of pediatric services at the University Health Services.

"This course is important to make the honors program more accessible to more people," said Kara Cohen, a student advisor, "To develop a sense of community and to help make the transition to college a smooth one."

While students will earn one pass/fail credit for attending lectures and discussions, peer mentors will receive two credits.

"As student advisors we have to get materials ready and prepare the mentors for their groups," Cohen said.

The mentors also returned early to attend two days of training before meeting the new students. During the sessions, mentors mingled with their co-workers and learned methods for leading their groups effectively.

"We want to present to the honors students some of the University's resources and opportunities so they can take full advantage of them," said Pols.

Emily Pfeiffer, a sophomore psychology major, took the class last year and is currently a peer mentor.

"So far it [the class] has given me a lot of satisfaction. It is more like a support group," Pfeiffer said. "It's good to see them responding to the new things we're offering."

Pols, Murphy, and Cohen all said they are enthusiastic about the course.

"I think this class is important because the new students will hopefully feel more comfortable bringing up concerns in this structured yet informal environment," Murphy said.

welcome back students

if you gotta have it, get it on sale at strawberries

CD's as low as 9.89!

Your Choice 9.89 CD

6.99 Cassette

Seed Ling — Jack O Pierce Bringing On The Weather — Wynton Marsalis Hot House Flowers — Weather Report 8:30

more Music, more Movies, a better selection!

Hole Live Through This — Heavy D & The Boyz Nuttin' But Love — Stanley Clarke Live At The Greek — The Mavericks What A Crying Shame — Bare Naked Ladies Maybe You Should

Your Choice 10.89 CD

7.99 Cassette

Horse God's Home Movie — 360's Strawberry Stone

12.89CD 7.99Cass Reality Bites Soundtrack — 11.89CD 7.99Cass Grover Washington Jr. All My Tomorrows — 11.89CD 7.99Cass Sunny Day Real Estate Diary — 60's 70's 70's 80's 80's 90's Carson 'n Carson 'n Carson 11.99 Video

Johnny Carson's Favorite Moments
3 Vol. Available
Vol. 1 60's-70's
Vol. 2 70's-80's
Vol. 3 80's-90's

Also Available: The Johnny Carson's LIMITED EDITION 4 Video Collection $49.99 strawberries brings you the best in new music now!

Sale Ends 10/2

Strawberries MUSIC AND VIDEO STORES

HADLEY, Russel St. & Route 9 (413)256-3160
HOLYOKE, 2275 Northampton St (413)536-2222
PITTSFIELD, 241 North St. (413)499-0357
SPRINGFIELD, 1600 Boston Rd. (413)543-1517
W. SPRINGFIELD, Memorial Ave. (413)737-4128
ENFIELD, CT., Rte. 190 Hazard Ave. (203)741-3030

LISTEN AND SAMPLE OVER 40,000 TITLES BEFORE YOU BUY! Station Strawberries, home of the >Station Springfield>Enfield

Yes, it's always a fine day for a barbeque. Ahh nothing like the hot coals to cause a man to break down in a fit of hysterical crying. "WHY DIDN'T I LISTEN TO MY MOTHER AND BECOME A DOG GROOMER!!!!"
COLLEGIAN
NEVER TOO LATE TO CHANGE

We Deliver to UMass

Kai Chi 愷 琪
Chinese - American Cuisine
Restaurant & Bar

LATE NIGHT DINNER SPECIAL!
UP TO 30% OFF!
Friday, Saturday & Sunday • 9pm Closing
No other promos apply / Not available for Take Out
Entrees Starting at $4.50

Kai Chi Restaurant
MT. FARMS MALL • RT 9 • HADLEY • 586-2774
Open Sun. - Thurs. 11:30am - 11:00pm
Fri. - Sat. 11:30am - midnight

Auto Reverse Double Deck!

Artistry in Sound ONKYO TAR-W313 CASSETTE
Sale $209.
Sound & Music
Millbank Place • 351 Pleasant Street • Northampton
584-9547 • VISA & MasterCard accepted

26 YEARS IN THE PUB

THE PUB
Fun, Food & Spirits
Sunday, September 18th
9:30 p.m.
America's Funniest Hypnotist

GEORGE KING
15 EAST PLEASANT-AMHERST

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

Jim's Journal By Jim

Urban Shocker By Deg

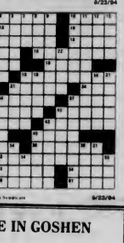
Daily Crossword
Edited by Trudo Michel Joffe

ACROSS
1 Persian, for one
5 Master, under the Raj
10 Stern's opposite
14 Hurok's foe
15 Word in Montana's motto
16 City in Colombia
17 Gordon defensive player
18 Reread
20 Doc
21 Imogenia Arlen
23 J.C. Harris rabbit
24 Health food
25 Reinaca one's steps
28 VCR button
32 Spinach's cousin
33 Translucent
34 Between Pur and Peru
35 Pool table accessory
36 Hand-printing style
37 Poison
38 Wadm
39 Kitchen utensil
40 Barrel and pequeni
41 Debaers
43 — the Saddle Agent
44 Show's cry
45 Lie in wait
48 — Roman (of them all)
49 Rural away
51 Of the epoch
52 Old Persians
53 Repentance
56 Bar cases
57 — Jonson"
58 Integrated
59 Jab
60 Scorn, in Barcelona
61 Hawaiian coffee

DOWN
1 Footpants type
2 — and Thumpson
3 — of credit
4 Evaluative response
5 Actress Bisby
6 Star in the Big Dipper
7 Legal claim, in India
8 Road to Rome
9 Pride like Lady Godiva's
10 Sacred beetle
11 Surprised
12 Caretaker Hicks
13 Ho Chi —
19 Deciduous tree
22 Comedian David
25 Tennessee political family
26 Fanon
27 Consecutive
28 "Fiji — sakai!"
29 Den
30 Bills, in Bologna
31 Fashion designer Calvin
33 Central or Hyde
34 Catcher, for sixsmith
37 Scout's luggage
39 Glass section
40 Chocinera substitute
42 — Jean King
43 "The Last Days of Pompei" author — - Lytton
45 Mrs. Arrowsmith
48 Cartain tide
47 Thwaesbouts
48 Through, archaically
50 Pinwg nymph
51 Preeca
54 Modern music style
55 Dieter's last resort?

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

8/23/94



9/23/94

The Far Side By Gary Larson

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Art Stapleton
Copy Editor.....Jacob W. Michaels
Photo Technician.....Gordon Fenwick
Production Supervisor.....Sandy Bogage
Production.....Joshua Grey, Christina Levere

Quote of the Day

"You're all clear, kid. Now let's blow this thing and go home."

— Han Solo, Star Wars

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH
BBQ "Style" Pork
Grilled Sneeze
BASICS LUNCH
Bean Burrito
Grilled, but on Branola

DINNER
Eggplant Parmigiana
Quarter Pounderll
BASICS DINNER
Eggplant, Oatburgers, Bean Burgers

If you're interested in a regular comic strip, today's the last day for you to bring down a sample to Arthur Stapleton Jr., Managing Editor, in the Collegian offices, or call 545-0719.

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Teamwork pays big dividends now. Take care of paperwork. Your instincts are correct where a newcomer is concerned. It is up to you to make the first move in romance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your mate or business partners goes along with your suggestions. Show appreciation. Come to grips with routine office chores by delegating tasks to reliable associates.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Domestic ties could fray if you are overly brave. You have your own way of doing things and should expect the same courtesy in return. Spend more time with children and pets. Create happy memories.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You know your own desires but may be mystified about what really matters to your loved one at present. Be more revealing than you usually are.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Say neither "yes" nor "no" to a proposed financial transaction. You need more data to make certain you will be getting your money's worth. Show are your competitive talents in a wider, less her or pure.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Stop stirring out over your workload — the beginning of the summer is always rough. Do not hesitate to turn to your friends for assistance. Have fun and watch the Star Wars trilogy.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You will have your work cut out for you today. Major shrinking is in store for you this evening with compliments of the same sex. If you think that's tough, wait until tomorrow when compassion is the opposite we make you party even harder.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Not a good day for a showdown or public confrontation. Keep your cool if someone acts drunkenness or an uncalculated. The afternoon hours look good for controversies or interviews. Be ready to answer probing questions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Arguments could arise at your base of operations. A diplomatic approach will convince holdouts to calm down. Playing the role of peacemaker is more rewarding than you imagine.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Moderation is the key to good health. Replacing bad habits with good ones boosts your energy. Things should be looking up for those who have accepted new internal. Get your papers in better order.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Getting pumped up for a party-filled weekend is very essential. Stay away from unwanted pets, including cats, tomorrow. People on your guest list may decide they are just attending your party to meet your roommates. Have fun and watch the Star Wars trilogy.

Classifieds

- 20¢ per word per day for students
- All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
- Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ACTIVITIES

Bleed—the biological sciences student association will be hosting its first general membership meeting Tuesday September 27 7:00pm Morrill 203 All are welcome

Chi Omega open house rush parties Tues 9/20 6pm-9pm
Wed 9/21 6pm-9pm
Dessert night
Sat 9/24 3:30pm-7:30pm
Please contact Lauren at 549-4351 or Steph at 549-5789 for transportation or any additional information. Come up to Chi O because it makes no difference if we're not on fraternity row!

Kappa Kappa Gamma open house rush dates are as follows: September 25, 1-3pm, 27 8-8pm, 29 5-7pm October 2, 1-3pm, 3 6-8:30pm We are located at 32 Nutting Ave. We look forward to seeing you there

UMass Women's Ice Hockey is back Season starts soon. For information call Cheri 549-7776

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Due to a mistake in our full page ad on Monday, I would like to fix the errors. For more info try DZ, the # is 549-7241 and for tri sigma, the # is 253-0854 There is not a party for DZ on the 28th from 7 to 9, but there is one at KD, same date, same time Sorry for the confusion!!

Take a one way ticket to New Orleans!! Come join us in our Mardi Gras festive! Alpha Chi Omega a fourth rush party is being held on September 25th from 1-3pm. All welcome!

AUDITIONS

UMass Theatre Guild Witness for the Prosecution by Agatha Christie Friday, September 23 at 8:30pm Saturday, September 24 at 11:00 and 8:30 in Cahigua Center room 168a For further information call UMTG office 545-0415

AUTO FOR SALE

1979 Chevy Impala Runs great low miles. $800/bo Dan 253-9405

88 Jeep Wrangler black hard top 4cyl 4 spd, stereo, high miles, excellent condition $4500 bo 549-7721

CHRISTIANS

Alliance Christian Fellowship adds value and balance to your UMass education. We're committed to personal discipleship training, outreach and spirit-filled fellowship and fun. FRIDAYS: Timetest Fellowship 7pm Campus Center

Orthodox Christians and friends are invited divine liturgy Saturday Sept 24th 10am Chapin Hall Amherst College

C.A.S.H. FOR COLLEGE

Do you need $$$ for college??? WE have the solution. Guaranteed results. Write to Corporate Scholarship Service, 2 Oakhurst Terrace East, N. Reading, MA 01864 for free details.

COMPUTERS

DE Computers & Associates whole systems Parts including monitors, drives, cards and more. Free estimates 549-4362

FOR RENT

Blue room for rent 2 cats, a bike and an espresso machine. $215 + . Call Juan at 586-4782

Fridge rentals 253-8742 free delivery

Micro is now! Center of town $300/mo Hot Call Dana 253-7799

FOR SALE AUDIO

Stereo equipment: used/reconditioned. Brad's largest selection, priced to sell! Also tv's, vcr's, dj/ pa equipment, instruments etc. We buy , sell, trade. Call SAV Exchange, 9am-9pm 756-0941

FOR SALE

Computer- IBM compatible 386SX-16MHz incl. monitor, keyboard, mouse, drive, printer, windows 3.1, dos 6.0 good cond. Will sell cheap! 4 mths 546-0434

Dead tickets Boston 9/26 - 9/29 $50 call 585-2364 or b/o

Dorm fridge $75 or b/o 253-7349

Guitar processor digitech rp, Tascam 4 track recording studio 549-5863

Hockey skates Mega1090 size 8 worn only 3x $150 or bo 253-3953

Hundreds of quality silverwood programs for $3.49 call 584-2282 for free list

IBM XT 286 10 meg, color monitor. Excellent for hooking up to a TAU. $250 call 546-3458

Macintosh computer Complete system including printer only $500. Call Chris at 800-289-5685

Pagers at Pioneer Valley Knife and Tool 549-7251

Panasonic printer kx-p2123 Great shape. Free color kit $175 or b/o 546-3713.

Solid oak triple dresser
Excellent condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253-9354

Watch batteries ear piercing, eyeglass and jewelry repairs, great earrings, gifts from glass to gold! custom designed jewelry. Silverscape Designs 264 N Pleasant St Amherst 253-3304

FOUND

Found a walkman, if yours please call 5-5750

FREE

Free hamster with cage looking for a good home! Leave message 6-7301

HELP WANTED

$363.88. Sell funny college T-shirts. Profit $393.60. Risk free. Choose from 19 designs. Free catalogs 1-800-700-4250

Babysitter/ mother's helper in Amherst. Sat and/ or Sun mornings 8:30-12:30 Infant experience car, non smoking $5/hr Call Robin 253-0680 8am-9pm please.

Boston Globe subscriptions delivery and marketing help wanted. Marketing- 1st three weeks, flat hourly. Delivery am all semester. All well-paid! Call 258-1071

Cruise ships now hiring earn up to $2000+/ month working on cruise ships or land tour companies. World travel. Seasonal and full time employment available. No experience necessary. For more information call 1-206-634-0468 ext C5001

Drivers wanted Earn $6-$12/hour 11-2 or 4-11 No grags work Call Delivery Express 549-0077

Drivers wanted Trattoria Gaspetto Italian restaurant, 1177 N. Pleasant St Amherst Apply in person after 3:00 pm 549-7777

Earn $25 in 2 hours. Seniors and first year grads wanted for research study dealing with the GRE. Call Sharon 256-8092

International Employment- make up to $2000- $4000 +/ mo teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan or S Korea No teaching background or Asian languages required For info call 206-632-1146 ext J50011

Jobs for the environment 2Grassroots political organizing Earn $40-60/day Very flexible hours/ casual atmosphere Call Alex 256-6434

Part time manager trainee Firestone needs assistant manager Flexible work schedule20-25 hours/week Call Frank in Northampton at 586 1584 ($8/hour)

Part time technical position available Computer experience a plus 549-0701

Receive up to 288,000 dollars in 18 months! For one amazing free report call 413-525-6480 Mon-Fri 8am-5pm

Resort jobs earn to $12/hr and tips Theme parks, hotels, spas, + more Tropical + in contain destinations world wide Call (206) 632-0150 ext R50011

Telemarketing Service and developer classifieds advertising in the MA, CT, NY, markets for the Advocate + weekly newspapers Customer service and communication skills required. $6/ hr. Flexible schedule Call Steve at 800-442-4208

The Amherst Boys' and Girls' Club needs work study assistants for recreation programs Open 2:30 to 5:00 afternoons 7:00 to 9:00 evenings Workers schedule as time available. $5.25 per hour UM buses stop in front of club at 280 Main St Contact Richard Brin 253-3261

Wanted!! America's fastest growing travel company seeking individuals to promote trips Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida! Easy free travel, fantastic pay 1-800-426-7710

Woman needed Mon-Fri 4-8pm lite cooking, cleaning up plus caring for 2 year old Temp 2-3 months call Michele 256-8632

Workstudy position available $5.50 15 hrs/wk Flexible office work for public foundation Call Nancy at Peace Development Fund 256-8305

Workstudy positions available in Sport Management Macintosh computer skills and office experience preferred Apply at 1 Curry Hicks 5-0441

INSTRUCTION

Need a tutor? Calc, chem, physics, bio Call Al 256-1960

J. CREW CLOTHING

Temporary help needed for large J Crew clothing sale to be held at the Mullins Center, Univ of Massachusetts 10/3- 10/8. Cashiers, baggers set-up/ breakdown To apply stop by our table this Thursday 9/22 10:00am-5:00pm and Friday 9/23 10:00am-11:00pm at the Mullins Center only.

NEED A RIDE

Need a ride to Boston on Friday Sharing expenses Call Dinard 546-5381

PERSONALS

Happy Birthday Scott
Try not to get too high on sunflower seeds Best wishes Marissa

Hey Baby, I've seen you at the Hatch. I've seen you at the Bluewall. I've even seen you at the Whitmore Sr.kicker (my personal favorite). I've come to the conclusion that you like to eat, not that anyone could ever tell by your Dolly Parton-esque figure. If you want to know what it's like to chow down with the best, respond here. Don't miss your chance in gravenstein.

Hey Buster,
Show me your goods. That's it!
Love, Fudgy

PINNOCHIO'S

Hiring drivers full or part time Call 256-4110 or stop by 30 Boltwood Walk Ask for Bob

Proprietor special $6.00 $1.25 each topping, large pizza now 11 extra fee ad.

RESUME WRITING

We specialize in writing resumes and cover letters Over a decade of experience, close to campus 549-0367

ROOMMATE WANTED

1F roommate needed after Oct 2 Single in 2 bdrm apt. $700/mo incl heat/hot water Call or Ruth 256-0954

2 rooms in private home $300/ mo kitchen privileges Kosher/ vegetarian preferred Laundry, parking, furnished 549-4853

Female roomate wanted to share a large bedroom in a three bedroom condo. $240 /month includes hot water. Washer, dryer, garage Call 256-4986

Female to share large bedroom in house Great location Behind Davenport Manor. Immediately September paid! Lease ends June 1st. No summer payment. $256/mo + utilities Call Kristen for more information 549-3992

Single room in 7 bedroom house. Great location. Full use of house. Washer, dryer, dishwasher, garage. 5 students currently there. Quiet persons not encouraged. 1/2 month. Call 256-4980

RUSH SIGMA KAPPA

Escape from the de the weekend! Come to Sigma Kappa's BBQ Saturday 12-3pm No invitation required! 18 Allen St 256-5887

Sigma Kappa welcomes all women to attend our make-your-own healthy snack bar night at our home at 19 Allen St Come dig out at 10pm. No invitation required. 256-5887

SERVICES

Emie's pet sitting service Call for more info 549-0638

I'll sew for you Alterations buttonholes, repairs. Call Allison. 546-0263

Legal questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center 545-1995.

Model search. The 1994 Glamour Models national model search continues. Local test shoots now being conducted by First Impressions Photography. Beginners and experienced models! Makes, females, all categories welcome. 617-327-0787

SCHOLARSHIPS

Apply for private scholarships- we guarantee one or your money back- price $4500- for more information call Janice 549-0972

WANTED

Ann. Drama and medieval performers 2 UMass alumni seek medieval performer, jugglers, entertainer to oversee games of skill and inspire guests at their local 15th century wedding. Please have costume, and desire for a good time. Bill/ Irene 584-4203

Campus representative Kinko products spring break trips "guarantees" best prices + incentives. Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica, S. Padre + Florida We handle the bookkeeping. You handle the sales. Call 1-800-222-4432

LAKEHOUSE IN GOSHEN

2+ bedroom year-round getaway for relaxed reading, writing and 4-season recreation. Extra-large living room and kitchen. Two fireplaces. Two-car garage. $115,000. 586-5742

OPEN HOUSE 9/25, 2-5 pm. From route 9 left at South Main (3 miles beyond Williamsburg). Follow signs to 99 Lake Drive.

INCENSE • SINGLE EARRINGS • COTTON CLOTH IN GREAT RUG • INCENSE • BUDDHA STICKS • LOW PRICE SILVER JEWELRY • T-SHIRTS • BOOKS • POSTERS • CANDLES • SUNGLASSES • STONE PENDANTS • BASKETS • BANDANAS

The Mercantile
Mon-Sat: 10-6 Sun: 12-5 Thurs & Fri til 9
Northampton 18 Center St 584-1205
Amherst Carriage Shops 549-1196

Reach for the Power TEACH

A Public Service of Ad Council Print Publication

Reach for the Power TEACH

IS THERE SOMETHING YOU MIGHT HAVE FORGOTTEN?

RUSH IGU!

Sept. 24 Sat 1-3 p.m.
Ditch the D.C. - Eat with us!
Sept. 25 Sun 12-3 p.m. Tea on the Porch
Sept. 28 Wed 5-6:30 p.m. Hang out with us.
Oct. 3 Mon 6-8 p.m. Our Last Night

IGU is located at 406 N. Pleasant St.
For more information, please call
Karen Kim at 549-3974

"One day I decided to sell my bike and my car, and in the spirit of Walden Woods & Don Henley, I would walk everywhere from now on. I also decided that the best way to get rid of them and make a whole lot of cash (that I wouldn't donate any of to a worthy environmental cause) was to advertise in the Collegian Classifieds. Needless to say, I sold my bike and car, but when I looked to see my classified in the paper I saw a real b-card classified for a motorcycle. Screw the environment, now I ride with the wind and death at my side."
Collegian Classifieds
They really work

Sports

Revenge on the minds of UMass

By Anthony Guido
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts football team will be looking to reverse a few trends this Saturday at Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

The Maine Black Bears [0–3] come to Amherst for the Minutemen's [1–1] home opener and first Yankee Conference game which counts in the season record.

"It's nice to get back home, we had two on the road and three right after this. We need to take advantage of being at home," coach Mike Hodges said.

Maine comes in off a tough 31–18 loss to Boston University, after a loss to preseason No. 1 Central Florida. The Black Bears have beaten UMass in each of the past two seasons, including last season's 17–13 upset in Orono, Me.

"If you look back at the last two seasons, if we manage to win those two games [against Maine], we could have conceivably been in the playoffs. This game is very important to us," Hodges said.

Something has to give on the ground. UMass, led by Rene Ingoglia (328 total rushing yards) and Frank Alessio (149), has the number one ranked rushing offense in the Yankee Conference (317 yards per game). Maine features the number one ranked run defense (119.7 yards).

The battle will pit All–America candidates Ingoglia and Maine's middle linebacker Ross Fitchorn. Fitchorn, a key in last season's upset with 14 tackles, has 19 stops on the season.

"I'm a little bit concerned [about the offensive line] because we are young, but they progressed well last week," Hodges said. "They present us with a scheme we haven't seen yet."

UMass, coming off a 412–yard rushing game last week, will again look to pound it out on the ground. Ingoglia (199 yards last week) will attempt to outgain the opposing team for the third game in a row. Hodges will again rotate his outstanding backfield trio on Saturday, with Alessio and Ron Brockington in the mix.

"That will be standard procedure around here. When we move Ingoglia from fullback to tailback, we have an outstanding player at the other spot," Hodges said.

Offensively, the Black Bears feature a balanced attack headed by Emilio Colon. The fifth–year senior quarterback has thrown for 411 yards and rushed for another 69 in three games. Brian Gaine, a 6–foot 5–inch, 250 pound tight end is Colon's favorite target with 13 catches.

"Colon is a outstanding QB, he can run and he can throw. He's been around a long time," Hodges.

Maine Coach Jack Cosgrove has several running backs he will go to throughout the game. Sophomore running back Bob Jameson leads the way with 160 rushing yards, with fullback Steve Knight close behind at 147. Andre Pam and Ray Baur also figure to see significant playing time.

"They run different backs in there," said Hodges. "It makes it difficult to defend with their rotation. Pam is the quick, fine runner, with Knight as the power blocker as the big back. Jameson is a combination back with all of those qualities."

One player looking to rebound off of last week is place kicker Eric Oke. Oke, three of five on point after attempts, has missed both of his field goal attempts this season.

"I told Eric he's our kicker, to go out and do the things he supposed to do. I fully expect him to do that," Hodges said.

"We need to win this game in order to get our conference schedule off on the right foot. We'd like to perform well in front of our home fans."

The game can be heard on WMUA 91.1 FM, beginning at 12:45 p.m.

COLLEGIAN FILE

Junior DE Vernard Fennell and the University of Massachusetts defense hope to bring down the Maine Black Bears in its home opener tomorrow afternoon.

Minutewomen to battle A–10 foes

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

The undefeated Massachusetts field hockey team will face its toughest tests of the season this weekend with road games at Temple and Rutgers.

UMass has dominated the Atlantic 10 for the past two years, winning the conference's regular season and tournament championships. The Minutewomen have won ten straight A–10 games, dating back to November 1991 when they lost to the Owls in the finals of the A–10 tournament.

"These games are extremely important," said UMass Coach Megan Donnelly. "They are among our most important games of the season. We want to dominate the conference."

It has been a tough start for the Owls, going 2–5 in their first seven games. Their leading returning scorer, Crystal Carr, has only one assist so far this season. Donnelly said that she doesn't read much into Temple's record because the losses have all come against highly–ranked teams.

"Their record doesn't show how good they really are," Donnelly said. "They've lost games to outstanding teams."

Rutgers is on an upswing, winning its last two after starting its season at 1–3.

A year ago, the Rutgers attack focused around the talents of then–seniors Heather Jones and Lauren Jacobson, who accounted for more than 75 percent of the Lady Knights offense. Despite the loss of their contributions, Rutgers Coach Anna Petracco said that her team has moved on.

"We're doing just fine," said Petracco. "The other players have just stepped up. In the past, some teams could shut us down just by shutting down Jones and Jacobson. Now we're more spread out."

"They've lost Heather Jones. Thank God," said Donnelly, whose URI squad was victimized by her four goals a year ago. "But Rutgers is a very aggressive team. They hit the ball hard. They always play very well at home."

In twelve tries, the Lady Knights have never beaten the Minutewomen. If this time is to be any different, Petracco said that the key to contain the UMass offense.

"We need to shut down their attack," said Petracco. "I think it will be a battle of the midfield. Hopefully we can contain them better than last year."

Petracco expects her team to be prepared for the game.

"You know my team is going to play hard because it's Massachusetts," said Petracco.

This will be the Minutewomen's first two–game road trip. Donnelly said she believes the trip will benefit the team.

"I think it's going to be good for them," said Donnelly. "It's always good to just have the team. They can be focused and not have to worry about anything. It will be good to get away and spend time together. I wish we had done it already."

With only one game on turf under its belt, UMass hopes to be successful despite its inexperience on the artificial surface.

"Our team is more of a turf style team," said Donnelly. "We're fast, with a quick passing game and good stick skills. We will play our best games on turf. It will make a huge difference in our penalty corners. We should be so much better on turf."

"Against any other team, I'd think the turf would be an advantage for us," Petracco said. "But UMass can play well on grass and turf. It's going to be a tough game."

NATHAN MARTIN/ COLLEGIAN

Despite breaking her nose in Wednesday's game against Yale, junior Kerry Metelski is expected to play in today's game at Temple.

Wolverines surprise without Wheatley

Anthony Guido

Early on, Michigan wins the big game and we have a Heisman farce. Some things change, some remain the same.

The Wolverines (No. 4 in the nation) can take one more step this weekend towards accomplishing that impossible championship goal. No decision has been made on the return of running back Tyrone Wheatley. Heisman candidate or not, they may not need him.

Freshman running back Tim Biakabutuka appears to be the real thing. Somehow, Moeller started senior Ed Davis for the first three games, and now Wheatley's return may spoil team chemistry. No. 7 Colorado heads to Ann Arbor on Saturday as this week's highlight game.

The Buffaloes pummeled Wisconsin last weekend, with the defense really clicking. The battle comes down to two quarterbacks who have been much maligned. Michigan QB Todd Collins improved by leaps and bounds against the Irish, bringing back the team with a minute left in the game.

Kordell Stewart runs and passes for CU, but Collins and Co. will control the ball. A Michigan–Penn St. battle looms large, as both teams will be undefeated. Wolverines too much on Saturday, Michigan 24–16.

If Bill Walsh is such a genius, why can't he build a successful program at Stanford? The Cardinal (nice tie at Northwestern) have absolutely no defense. Defense is the name of the game at Arizona. Great match–up: the Desert Swarm defense against the offensive guru. The 'Cats will fall, but not this week. Arizona 17–13.

Miami, after pounding a 1–AA school (more on that later) Georgia Southern 55–6, faces a tough Washington team. Husky running back Napoleon Kaufman faces his big test in the hunt for the Heisman. Kaufman's up for it, too bad the rest of his team is too slow. Miami 37–13.

The time has come for a down year at South Bend. The Irish may slip a bit, but in comparison Boston College will fall off a cliff. Dan Henning (worst man for the job) is off to a great start as coach. Scheduling powerhouses from around the country is admirable, just too ambitious for BC at this point.

Being a middle–of–the–pack Big East team might not even be possible. Add sure losses to Miami, Syracuse, and perhaps West Virginia, not to mention Notre Dame (think ND remembers last year?). How long will it be before the House that Tom Built is half empty on Saturdays?

Just how much stock can you put into Steve "Air" McNair and his unbelievable numbers? Sure, he has 15 touchdown passes and 1,369 passing yards. But, you take it seriously playing against Tennesse–Chattanooga and Alabama State?

Any fan on this campus needs only to watch the competition in the Division 1–AA level to realize why McNair puts up those astronomical numbers. Imagine the numbers Georgia's Eric Zeier and Florida's Terry Dean would throw for at that level.

No, he cannot win the Heisman. A great athlete, yes, but not the premier player in college football.

Zeier can win the Heisman and right now he is doing it. Watching him play QB for an undermanned Georgia squad, throwing 50 passes a game and trying to will his team to victory is a constant every weekend. Zeier will be the star in the NFL in the Marino mold; McNair will struggle to make the big jump a la Andre Ware.

Anthony Guido is a Collegian columnist.

Women's soccer gears up for huge tests in UMass Classic

No. 5 Massachusetts hosts one of the most talent-filled tourneys in the nation this weekend

By Mike Reiss
Collegian Staff

It very possibly could be the best assembled four–team field in the country for a tournament this year, minus the annual NCAA Final Four, of course.

This weekend, the 1994 women's soccer UMass Classic is in town at Richard F. Garber Field. And with it comes three nationally ranked teams, along with another highly–regarded entry. No. 5 Massachusetts, No. 11 Connecticut, No. 13 William & Mary and unranked Central Florida comprise the impressive gathering.

This tourney gives us a chance to play outside competition, and compare us with teams from other regions. I think the neat thing is that the four schools in this tourney have been around since the beginning of soccer, and have traditionally been perennial powers.

–UConn assistant coach Wendy Logan

On Saturday, Massachusetts (5–0) meets Central Florida (12 p.m.), while Connecticut faces William & Mary (2:15 p.m.). Sunday pits Massachusetts against William & Mary (12 p.m.) and Connecticut against Central Florida (2:15 p.m.).

"I think this is one of the top three tournaments in the country this year," said Massachusetts Coach Jim Rudy.

"These teams are some of the best in the country," said Central Florida head coach Karen Richter. "It's great to play this type of competition in this type of atmosphere. It certainly will be a major test for us."

A major test for all. Each team enters the tourney on a high note, and all four show no signs of slowing down.

Central Florida hit a minor snag soon early on, losing to Notre Dame (4–3 in OT) and Wisconsin (2–0). But the Golden Knights have recently showed the form which had them slated as an early season Top 25 selection.

"Our schedule put us up against some tough competition throughout the season," said Richter. "We'll look to focus in our game plan, because we haven't seen any of the teams play. We'll attack with as many people as possible."

An interesting twist to the Massachusetts/Central Florida game is the coaching matchup of Rudy vs. Richter. In 1987, while serving as head coach of the Central Florida women's soccer team, Rudy coached Richter, then a goalie.

Tomorrow, the two will be on the same field once again, yet this time on different sidelines.

But the soccer doesn't stop after the Massachusetts/Central Florida tilt. Tomorrow's second game should pack the stands and hill at Garber Field as well.

"I think we're going to have two very tough games," said William & Mary head coach John Daly. "Both UMass and UConn are very good teams. We're looking forward to the trip. All the teams will be up for one another, because everyone has a regional reputation on the line. It's tough, but that's the kind of game we enjoy."

These teams are some of the best in the country. It's great to play this type of competition in this type of atmosphere. It certainly will be a major test for us.

–Central Florida head coach Karen Richter

"This tourney gives us a chance to play outside competition, and compare us with teams from other regions," said Connecticut assistant coach Wendy Logan. "I think the neat thing about this is that the four schools in this tourney have been around since the begining of soccer, and have traditionally been perennial powers."

The collegiate soccer world is buzzing about the 1994 UMass Classic. With some of the top teams in the nation tearing up the turf at Garber Field, this weekend promises to be a treat to the avid soccer fan.

Bonnie Kenny garners 200th victory against Northeastern

By Brian Perillo
Collegian Staff

A winning season in their first year back from reinstatement. A young team with a bright future. A perfect 12–0 record to start this season.

And now, a head coach with 200 wins under her belt.

University of Massachusetts head volleyball coach Bonnie Kenny entered this season twelve wins shy of 200, and when her squad defeated Northeastern, 15–3, 15–12, 13–15, 15–1 Tuesday night to up its winning streak to twelve games, her 200th career victory became the latest on a list of successes for the UMass volleyball team.

"Sure it's special, but every win is special," Kenny said of the feat.

Kenny played her collegiate career at the University of Tennessee, where she was a four–year letter winner, and three–year team captain. She lead the Lady Volunteers to two SEC Championships, three NCAA tournament appearances, and an overall record of 137–56 over her four years.

In her first year after graduation, Kenny immediately took over the head coaching duties at the University of South Carolina, where she guided the Gamecocks to the Metro Conference Championship and the NCAA tournament.

Kenny compiled a 171–137 record in nine years at SC before heading to Amherst to coach a newly reinstated program at UMass in 1993. She now has a 200–151 career record after compiling a 29–14 record so far at UMass.

"This program wouldn't be what it is now if it weren't for (Assistant Coach) Tina (Grutsch). She works hard, and knows how to win," Kenny said.

The Minutewomen used performances by sophomore outside hitter Dionne Nash and freshman Michelle Paciorek to down Northeastern and give their coach the milestone. Nash collected 19 kills to lead the team, and compiled an impressive .432 kill percentage while amassing 11 digs.

"Dionne hit the ball and hard and well," said Kenny.

Paciorek was a pleasant surprise for the UMass squad. The freshman from nearby Sunderland collected eight kills and was in on five of nine team blocks, three of them solo.

"Michelle played excellently," Kenny said. "She was an encouraging sight, and she probably won a starting spot."

Sophomore outside hitter Giza Rivera, who had 14 kills and 14 digs, freshman outside hitter Lesley Nolan, [20 digs and 8 kills], and junior setter Cass Anderson [12 digs to go along with 47 assists] also played well for the Minutewomen.

UMass, who now has eight days off before heading into tough Atlantic 10 play, is one of four University women's teams that remain undefeated. The volleyball squad joins the 4–0 women's tennis team and the nationally–ranked field hockey and women's soccer teams who have not lost a contest.

"This is the pressure time," Kenny said. "Now we're playing the teams we have to beat."

UMass hosts Duquesne next Friday night, St. Bonaventure on Oct. 1 and Rhode Island Oct. 4.

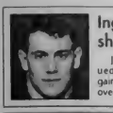
"I'm glad we're playing our first league games at home," Kenny said. "I didn't expect us to be playing at the level we're playing at. We're still a couple of years away from being a national caliber team, but our work ethic and mentality has been great so far."

UMass will use the time off to prepare mentally for the contests ahead.

"I'm glad we have the time off, its a great opportunity to put in a more explosive offense." Kenny said. "We're serving the ball aggressively, but our blocking concerns me more than anything. Now we have a good four to five days to concentrate on UMass before we take three or four days to concentrate on Duquesne."

COLLEGIAN FILE

The University of Massachusetts volleyball team jump back into action next week when it hosts Duquesne on Sept. 30.



Ingoglia continues to shine for Minutemen

Junior fullback Rene Ingoglia continued to put up impressive numbers, gaining 124 yards in UMass' 20-14 win over Maine. (see Sports, page 8).

Native American heritage is explored

Native Americans set out to enrich the multicultural atmosphere of UMass during this weekend's powwow. (Story on page 2.)

Critics have their say on new CD releases

Frentel and Jesus Lizard are just two of the artists featrued in our weekly review column Trax On, Trax Off (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast

Showers likely today with a chance of a thunderstorm, high fo 70. Chance of showers tonight with a possible thunderstorm, low in the mid-50s. Showers are likely on Tuesday.

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 70 LOW: 59	HIGH: 68 LOW: 57	HIGH: 66 LOW: 55

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 10 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Monday, September 26, 1994

UMass student facing tough battle with cancer

By Kelly Spang
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts senior Dave Fontaine ran the Boston Marathon twice. Every day, though, he is faced with what he says is the "ultimate" marathon — cancer.

"Cancer does not mean death," he said, "It means life. It means new challenges and new goals."

Fontaine, a 22-year-old from Seekonk, found out last May he had cancer.

Fontaine, a community college transfer, is a Bachelors Degree with Individual Concentration major, concentrating on "human factors engineering." He said this will allow him to make running shoes and apparel. His lifetime dream is to work for Nike.

Fontaine said having cancer is like taking out the trash. He said there is always trash that needs to be taken out to the garage just as cancer is something he always has to deal with.

"It's like taking out the trash," he said. "Cancer is part of my life. Like taking out the trash, it's just something I have to do."

Throughout the semester he said he had a "tickling" cough which doctors attributed to asthma. Fontaine said he was given antibiotics and cough medicine by a family doctor and a doctor at the University Health Services (UHS).

Fontaine said he was frustrated because his coughing and also a lack of energy kept him from working out and doing some of the things he normally did. He said he missed a few more classes than normal.

By May, Fontaine said the coughing was so violent, his chest would be bruised at the end of a coughing fit. So he went to the UHS where he asked for an X-ray of his chest.

"I asked for an X-ray because I thought I had some kind of infection," he said. "By this time I was a little paranoid because I had never been sick."

Dr. James Abel of UHS first looked at Fontaine's X-ray. Abel is well-known around campus for his lectures on sexuality and sexually transmitted diseases.

Fontaine said he was sitting looking at his X-ray waiting for Abel to look at the picture. He said he could hear Abel whistling and singing as he walked down the hall. When Abel looked at the X-ray, Fontaine said there was a change in Abel's spirit.

"Dr. Abel looked so nervous," Fontaine said. "He scared me to death."

The X-ray showed a large spot which was determined to be a tumor. At the time, however, Fontaine said he was upset because he said the tension he felt in the urgent care section of Health Services was so thick he could "swim through it." He left UHS for a while to have lunch while Abel consulted with other doctors on the X-ray.

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

Senior David Fontaine is recovering from a bout with cancer. He now devotes much of his time to working with the Jimmy Fund.

At the time, Fontaine was working with the New Student's Program. He said the hours were getting long because the students would be arriving within a couple of days. His coughing spells were so violent he said many times they disrupted training sessions.

Fontaine was a Residential Assistant in Orchard Hill Residential Area last semester.

Later the same day Abel first looked at the X-ray, a UHS receptionist went to the Northeast Residential Area quad looking for Fontaine. She was sent by Abel who decided Fontaine's situation was an emergency.

Fontaine said Dr. Contance Lentz drove him to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton. Along the way, Fontaine said she explained what the situation could be.

His parents drove out to Northampton where an oncologist told Fontaine and his family the tumor he had was malignant. The same day, Fontaine received radiation and a CATscan which he said required technicians to be called in because it was a Saturday and a holiday weekend.

Fontaine was diagnosed with non-Hodgkin's Lymphoma. He had tumors in three locations — in his lung, in his neck and behind his sternum, under his heart. The fast growing tumors caused Fontaine's cough because they were pushing on his lung and throat.

"I just want to live," he said. "That is my goal. It is easy to accomplish anything once you know what you want to do and have a goal. I have my goal."

Throughout the summer, Fontaine underwent four cycles of chemiotherapy at the Dana Farber Cancer Institute in Boston. He was part of a study which

Turn to FONTAINE, page 3

Simpson jury search begins

By Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES - After three months of endless publicity in the O.J. Simpson murder case, 1,000 people must look inward and answer a question: Could I be a fair juror for this man?

"People have a personal involvement in this case. Some of them may have been out there on the freeway that Friday afternoon," said Loyola University Law School professor Laurie Levenson. "Both sides have to be scared of jurors with an agenda, people who want to send a message."

Those who raced out to roadsides to cheer Simpson in a Ford Bronco with a gun to his head and police in pursuit would be less than ideal jurors.

But as the first stage of jury selection gets under way Monday, lawyers on both sides are realistic enough to know that no hope exists of finding jurors unaware of the case. Nor would they want such a jury, Levenson said.

"You want someone on this jury who's at least heard about the case, because you want a functioning member of society," she said. Yet jurors also need to be able to put all prior knowledge aside and decide the case on the evidence, Levenson said

At a minimum, prospective jurors will know that Simpson, a former football star whose fame extended into show business, is charged with the slashing murders of his ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend Ronald Goldman.

They will also know that Simpson has declared himself

"absolutely 100 percent not guilty" and that he has the best team of lawyers money can buy.

Issues beyond bias for or against Simpson also must be considered.

Jo-Ellan Dimitrius, the jury consultant working for the defense, has pinpointed a new phenomenon in the Simpson case: jurors who want to get on the case because of its notoriety and the chance they will become rich and famous as a result.

"I've never seen it before," Dimitrius said. "Usually, people want to know how they can get out of serving on the jury. In this case, they're coming up to me on the street asking, "How do I become a juror on the O.J. case."

Now, Levenson said, many prospects may be facing the reality that they can't afford the time to serve. Of the 1,000 people summoned by Superior Court Judge Lance Ito, more than 700 have already returned one-page questionnaires discussing their availability to serve in a trial which could stretch into 1995. About two-thirds have said it would be a hardship.

"It's true that for many of the people, this will be more interesting than anything else happening in their lives," Levenson said. "But reality sets in. The economy is not so good and people will be concerned about taking that much time away from their jobs."

If the judge decides he must sequester the jury to shield them from publicity, that would further limit the pool of available jurors. Many will not want to leave family and friends for the isolation of a hotel where their communications are monitored and visits are supervised by bailiffs.

The pressures that can be added by that process

Turn to SIMPSON, page 6

Riding the bus to school may save student money

UMass students eligible to receive automobile insurance discount for travelling with PVTA

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

Taking Pioneer Valley Transit Authority (PVTA) buses may eventually put money in the pockets of students at the University of Massachusetts in the form of an auto insurance rebate.

The UMass Transit and PVTA have created a system for providing regular bus commuters, such as UMass students, a way to participate in the Public Transit Discount, according to Michelle Goldberg, spokeswoman for PVTA.

Because the transit system around the Amherst area is provided without fee to its passengers, bus passes are unneeded.

"Amherst residents could not participate in the Public Transit Discount, because there was no need for bus passes, so there was no discount," Goldberg said.

PVTA wanted to create a new system which offered advantages to all its patrons, according to Michelle Goldberg, spokeswoman for PVTA.

"(PVTA) wanted to put together a system so passengers on the free fare system could get a rebate on their auto insurance," Goldberg said.

In the past the only way in which bus commuters could receive an auto insurance rebate was by sending their expired bus passes each month into the PVTA, according to Goldberg.

Bus commuters have to send in 11 consecutive months of cancelled bus passes before receiving an auto insurance rebate.

Now regular passengers can receive cancelled bus passes from PVTA to use towards the rebate. Because commuters will not receive the rebate for over eleven months, Goldberg advises people to make use of the new system now.

"People should start now because it takes about a year to get the discount," Goldberg said.

To qualify for the discount, regular bus commuters must complete a pre-registration form, which can be found at the Student Union and send it into the PVTA office, according to Goldberg.

"First of all, passengers need to get the registration form at the Student Union, fill it out and send it in to the address found on the form," Goldberg said.

Commuters who fail to pre-register will be ineligible for the discount.

Passengers in the Amherst area need to fill a monthly form, which can be found on the buses, and send it into the PVTA office before the 20th day of the following month. Each form must be signed by the passenger to make it valid.

Falsification of the form could affect a passenger's eligibility to receive a discount, according to Goldberg.

Passengers who have filled out the proper forms will receive a standard PVTA bus pass stamped "insurance rebate" for that month.

After collecting 11 cancelled bus passes, the bus commuter must send them into the appropriate insurance

Turn to PVTA, page 6

BAAH-HOO! It's Feeding Time!

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

This baby lamb found the refreshments to be the best part of the Book and Plow Festival held on the Amherst Common on Saturday. While he became a glutton for the free food, others partook in the arts, crafts and other activities. The festival was held in honor of the literary history of Amherst in tribute to its farming community. More on the event tomorrow.

Haiti's violence expected to continue; Saturday's firefight just the beginning?

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON—With the flash of a gun barrel ending a week of relative calm, senior officials warned Sunday that the firefight that took 10 Haitian lives may be a forerunner of more violence in that historically violent land.

"This is the first bad incident we've had involving, directly, American troops, but it won't be the last," said Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., a member of the delegation that brokered the deal with the Haitian military on the entry of U.S. forces.

U.S. Marines killed 10 armed men Saturday evening outside a police station in the northern coastal city of Cap-Haitien in a battle ensuing after several of the men emerged from the station and opened fire on an American patrol.

It was the first violent incident involving Americans after a surprisingly peaceful first week of the U.S. occupation and it drew quick comparisons to hostile attacks against U.S. troops in Somalia.

While administration officials responded by assuring the American public, and warning the Haitians, they were ready for more, congressional critics geared up for an attempt to legislate an early withdrawal from Haiti.

President Clinton, in New York for a meeting with U.N. Secretary General Boutros-Ghali issued a statement expressing regret for the loss of life and saying: "It must be clear that U.S. forces are prepared to respond to hostile action against them and will do so."

Speaking at a church in Harlem, Clinton said the Haiti operation "helps to end human rights violations that we find intolerable everywhere but unconscionable on our doorstep and offers them (Haitians) a chance at stability."

Clinton did not mention at the church the violence in Cap-Haitien. But Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Gen. John Shalikashvili said Haitian military leader Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras had been flown to the port city Sunday and the U.S. side was making it "ahundantly clear" what the consequences would be if there were further threats to U.S. troops.

They now know, he said on CBS' "Face the Nation," "what the cost to the Haitians is for picking a fight with the Marines." The officials appearing on the Sunday news programs also sought to remind the American public that no military operation of this sort can be risk-free.

Defense Secretary William Perry, who visited Haiti on Saturday, said he told U.S. troops there that "they have to stand tall for that mission and that they would have difficulties. We fully expected difficulties and the incident we saw yesterday, I think, is just typical of what we expected to see," he said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

But House Minority Whip Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., said the incident underscored Haiti's similarity to Somalia, and said he will press for a resolution this week demanding U.S. withdrawal from Haiti "at the most rapid possible speed."

Gingrich, speaking on CBS, said that after the firefight the American public doesn't "want to wait around for ambushes and for booby traps and for all the things that can go wrong."

American troops left Somalia, another peacekeeping mission that began well, after the loss of 44 American lives, 30 in combat. A decade earlier in Lebanon, the U.S. attempt to keep warring factions apart ended with a suicide attack on the Marines headquarters in Beirut that killed 241 Americans.

Nunn, also a guest on "Meet the Press," said he thought the Senate also would vote this week on setting a "date certain" for U.S. withdrawal

Nunn said he opposed setting a specific date, but also warned against a broad mission of restoring democracy to a land that has had six coups in the last seven years "They've not had the ability to have dissent without violence," he said. "They have had a very violent history and they have not had democracy." Nunn urged deposed Haitian President Jean-Bertrand Aristide to seek an immediate end to the U.N. embargo on Haiti so that the frustrations of impoverished Haitians would not be turned on U.S. troops.

Later on Sunday Aristide said he was asking the U.N. Security Council and individual nations to remove some sanctions as a first step toward restoring democracy, and said he had ordered the Haitian parliament to meet Wednesday to consider the question of amnesty for those who overthrew him three years ago.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Monday, Sept. 26

Community — Candle lighting, Hakafot, evening services, Chabad House, 6:21 p.m., Information: 549-4094

Lecture — Susan Orlean will be speaking, Bowker Auditorium, 8 p.m.

Tuesday, Sept. 27

Lecture — The Dutch Vision of Italy: Dirck Van Bergen's Landscape with Animals and Figure, Mead Art Museum, Amherst College, Free, 12:15 p.m.

Community — Campus Pond Cleanup. Come on down and volunteer! Campus Pond, 7 p.m., Information: 545-0444

Film — Not At The Mall: A series of film experiences you won't find anywhere else, 7 p.m., Bartlett Hall Auditorium, UMass, Free.

Lecture — Town and Country: The Concept of Landscape in Early Antwerp ArtMaking, Wright Hall auditorium, Smith College, 7:30 p.m.

Lecture — Feminist Writing to End Racism, Belle Hooks will be speaking, Bowker Auditorium, UMass, 8 p.m., Free, 545-0046.

Literature — Amherst College creative writing center, Fall reading series presents Bernard Cooper, Wootton's, North Pleasant Street, Amherst, 8 p.m., Free.

Pre-Medica — Elections for officers and general information, all classes and majors welcome, Newman Center, Room 1, 7 p.m.

Meeting — Biosci, The Biological Sciences Student Association is holding its first general membership meeting, 7 p.m., Morrill 203.

Meeting — Cannabis Reform Coalition, general meeting, Campus Center room 101, 7:30 p.m., Information: 665-4910.

Wednesday, Sept. 28

Lecture — Lesbian, Gay & Bisexual Studies Lecture Series, Warren Blumenfeld will speak, Campus Center room 904, UMass, 12 p.m. to 1:30 p.m., Free.

Meeting — UMass Grenadier and Gaming Society, Open House, 7 p.m. to 12 a.m., Campus Center room 101, Information: 527-0252.

Thursday, Sept. 29

Music — Recital, Monica Jakuc, fortepiano, Sweeney Concert Hall, Smith College, 4:15 p.m. to 5:05 p.m., Free.

Film — Fantastic Cinema: Legends, Myths, Adventures, Herter Hall, UMass, Presented by the University Gallery, 7:30 p.m., Free.

Concert — Edmund Battersby, fortepiano, Sweeny Concert Hall, Smith College, 8 p.m., Call 527-7664 for admission prices.

Special Event — Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Speakers Bureau Orientation, Returning members orientation, Crampton House, UMass, Free, 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m., Information: 545-4824.

Other Activities and Upcoming Events

Volunteers Needed - Campus Pond Cleanup at UMass, Sept. 27 & 28, from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. T-Shirts and refreshments will be provided, Call: 545-2317.

Community Service - The Companion Program is looking for volunteers. Call: 253-2591.

Internships - MASSPIRG is offering internships for the fall semester. Earn course credits. Information: 423B Student Union or call 545-0199.

Earn Credits - The Peer Education Program on Sexual Harassment is recruiting 30 undergraduate men and women for its one-credit training session this semester. Information: call Mike at 546-0365.

Powwow fills Cage with culture

Native Americans teach UM students about their heritage

By Jason Stableford
Collegian Corresponden

Combining festive dance, food and arts, the 1994 University of Massachusetts Intertribal Powwow filled the Curry Hicks Cage this weekend with Native American culture.

Sponsored by the Native American Students Association in conjunction with the Dr. Josephine White Eagle American Indian Cultural Center, the Powwow featured performers and artists from nearly 30 different native nations.

The Powwow coordinators hope the event will contribute to the multi-cultural environment on campus.

Joyce Vincent, program coordinator of the Dr. Josephine White Eagle American Cultural Center, believes these events are crucial in maintaining cultural awareness.

"Culture is important to succeed at college," Vincent said. "We want to make sure that the campus climate makes culture as much of a priority as sports and the fine arts. As long as those priorities are elsewhere, we're going to have a hard time."

Due to the threat of bad weather, the event was moved indoors from its original location at the Campus Center Pond.

The festivities kicked off at noon on Saturday and yesterday with a grand entry of dancers, representing the different nations with performers of all ages.

Immediately afterwards, spectators and performers joined hands in a ceremonial blessing led by John Peters, director of the Commission of Indian Affairs for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and member of the Wampanog Nation.

The blessing expressed the importance of accepting and understanding cultural differences, and respecting the uniqueness of people as individuals. Peters is also considered a spiritual leader by many Native Americans.

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

UMass student Justin Beatty displays his Native American heritage during this weekend's powwow.

An assortment of vendors filled the Cage with jewelry, pottery, and other crafts of Native American flair.

Booths explaining current issues and controversies within the Native American community were on-hand with information, and encouraged participation.

Vincent is also pleased at the number of volunteers involved with the powwow.

"We've had students volunteering from different cultural centers on campus, as well as people from the community," Vincent said. "That makes me feel really good to see that people know we're here more than just one week a year."

The Josephine White Eagle Native American Cultural Center has other events planned for this fall, featuring speakers, storytellers, and authors.

Some participants believe student turnout was low because of problems in publicizing the event.

"Most of the student population isn't given a chance in getting involved," Josh Lyons, a geography major, said. "The most recent history is usually the last taught on campus."

THE BODY SHOPS ARE OPEN!

Coolidge 12th Floor / Washington 19th Floor
Totman Gym Rm 8
Webster / Gorman / & Lewis Dorms

YOUR FULL MEMBERSHIP INCLUDES
@ TOTMAN, COOLIDGE & WASHINGTON
LifeFITNESS® STAIRCLIMBERS & STATIONARY BIKES
LANDICE® TREADMILLS
CONCEPT II® ROWERS
NORDICTRACK® Club 900 X-COUNTRY SKIERS
12-18 NAUTILUS® and HYDRAULIC WEIGHT MACHINES
@ WEBSTER / GORMAN / & LEWIS
COMPLETE SETS OF FREE WEIGHTS

USE ALL FACILITIES WITH JUST ONE MEMBERSHIP!!

ALL ARE SUPERVISED BY QUALIFIED STAFF

YOUR COST
$50 / Semester

Pay by Check, Money Order or Cash

TO GET CURRENT OPEN HOURS
CALL THE BODY SHOPS AT THE FOLLOWING TELEPHONE NUMBERS

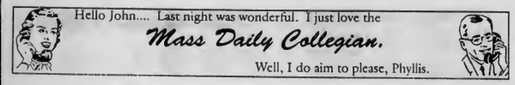
TOTMAN GYM ROOM 6	TELEPHONE 545-6075
COOLIDGE TOWER 12th FLOOR	TELEPHONE 545-3914
WASHINGTON TOWER 19th FLOOR	TELEPHONE 545-3912
HILLTOP FREE WEIGHT CENTER (WEBSTER RESIDENCE HALL)	TELEPHONE 545-2805
CROSSAN FREE WEIGHT CENTER (GORMAN RESIDENCE HALL)	TELEPHONE 545-2937
LEWIS FREE WEIGHT CENTER (LEWIS RESIDENCE HALL)	TELEPHONE 545-3961

14 DAY REFUND POLICY IN EFFECT WITH ORIGINAL RECEIPT AND MEMBERSHIP STICKER ONLY



Chi Omega

Invites All UMASS Women to INFORMAL RUSH

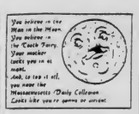
Monday 9/26 5:30-7:30p.m. for dinner
Wednesday 9/28 6:00-8:00p.m. for candle making

We're located at 47 Olympia Drive in Fraternity/Sorority Park.
Please Call Lauren at 549-4351 for transportation and additional information



You believe in the Man in the Moon. You believe in the Easter Bunny. Your mother tucks you in at night. And, to top it all off, you read the Massachusetts Daily Collegian. Looks like you're gonna go far!

COMPLETE OPTOMETRY EXAMS
AT THE UNIVERSITY HEALTH SERVICES

Frederick H. Bloom, O.D.
Director,
UHS Eye Care Program.

We offer. . .
. . .quality, comprehensive vision care at a reasonable cost.
courteous, friendly, professional staff.
. . .reduced rates on eye glasses at participating opticians with a complete optometric examination at the University Health Services for Student Plan members.
. . .a comprehensive contact lens service.

Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Care Program over the years has been consistently excellent

uhs
EYE CARE PROGRAM

"I invite you to use the Eye Services at UHS."

Convenient hours and on campus location.

call 549-2671
X244

If it ain't broke, we don't fix it.

MONRO MUFFLER/BRAKE

mufflers • brakes • shocks • springs • alignments
tires • front wheel drive experts

Hadley: 360 Russell St.....586-0892
Northampton: 326 King St.....586-3266
Chicopee: 461 Memorial Dr.....594-9161
Wilbraham: 1971 Boston Road.....543-8027
W. Springfield: 777 Riverdale St.....739-3860

90 days same as cash!

Coupon Specials

Monro Muffler Brake
Oil, lube & filter
$16.99
Includes up to 5 quarts Kendall motor oil, new Kendall oil filter chassis lube and free undercar inspection. Available for most vehicles. Please call for an appointment. Additional charge for filters or some vehicles.
Coupon valid through 10/22/94
7777

Monro Muffler Brake
$20 off wheel alignments
Take $20 off our regular price on any 2 wheel or 4 wheel alignment service with this coupon. Coupon cannot be used in conjunction with any other offer. Please call for an appointment.
Coupon valid through 10/22/94
7778

40,000 mile limited treadwear warranty from $37.95
Free brake inspection any time!
With no obligation on your part. We only make repairs with your permission. We only recommend repairs if they are necessary.

Nazi case seen as a current lesson

By Jon Marcus
Associated Press

BOSTON — Why press the citizenship case against an ailing, 87-year-old man?

Because, says the government, Aleksandras Lileikis was part of a campaign to murder 60,000 Jews in Lithuania, and even half a century hasn't diminished the zeal for prosecuting aging war criminals.

"The crimes these men committed are just as heinous today as they were 50 years ago," said Allan Ryan, former director of the Office of Special Investigations, the government's Nazi-hunting arm. "Although they are old and although it was a long time ago, if we look the other way, we are saying we don't care any more."

An estimated 10,000 suspected Nazis and their collaborators entered the United States since World War II, according to government prosecutors and Nazi hunters. The OSI has stripped U.S. citizenship from 50 people, 42 of whom have been deported, since the office was set up in 1979. More than 300 others are under investigation. The pace of investigations has accelerated since the opening of former Soviet and eastern European archives.

"They have succeeded in lying low," Ryan said. "They have succeeded in avoiding detection. But they are as guilty now as they were then."

From August 1941 until the German occupation ended in July 1944, Lileikis allegedly ordered the arrest of Jews in Vilnius who violated the Nazis' anti-Jewish decrees and turned them over to a killing squad and the German Security Police for execution. Lileikis emigrated to the United States in 1955 and now lives in Norwood with his second wife.

Lileikis' signature allegedly appears on several dozen orders to transfer Jewish prisoners to the execution squads. They include one file tracing his interrogation of a woman, Gita Kaplan, and her 6-year-old daughter, Fruma, to their eventual execution by the German Security Police.

Holocaust survivors and their children raise an additional argument for prosecution: as a lesson to the people who commit atrocities today against civilians in the former Yugoslavia, Somalia, Haiti and Rwanda.

"Whether (Lileikis) lives to be 5 years old or 500 years old, if he is alive in freedom, then he has to be brought to justice, because that's not the type of signal we want to give: that you can get away with murder," said Rosita Kenigsberg, president of the International Network of Children of Jewish Holocaust Survivors.

"The lesson of the Holocaust is not revenge," Kenigsberg said. "The lesson is to stop putting people into categories, to have tolerance and respect for one another. That's the healing process."

"Although they were old and although it was a long time ago, if we look the other way, we are saying we don't care any more," said Ryan.

Lileikis is accused of heading the Nazi-sponsored Lithuanian Security Police in Vilnius. The government filed suit last week in U.S. District Court in Boston to revoke his citizenship.

"Does the world stand for what we tried to say at Nuremburg?" asked Shelly Shapiro, director of Holocaust Survivors and Friends in Pursuit of Justice. "We tried to say that there were certain rules of civilization."

Lileikis has refused to comment on the case. He has 30 days to respond to the complaint, which was filed Wednesday. No court date has been set.

Described by government officials as the first senior Lithuanian police official to be prosecuted in connection with Nazi-era crimes, Lileikis was investigated when his name allegedly was found on documents detailing executions and deportations of an estimated 60,000 Jews.

He is accused of illegally concealing his alleged involvement with these executions when he applied for immigration to the United States in 1955 and for U.S. citizenship in 1976.

Council offers wide variety of answers

By Emily Marino
Collegian Staff

For college age men and women alike, the Family Planning Council of Western Massachusetts (FPCWM) is providing information, counseling, testing and birth control in the hopes of making this area more healthy.

The organization has 22 locations in the immediate area, and offers extensive reproductive health care that is both confidential and affordable.

After over 20 years of providing services to thousands of men and women, the FPCWM remains one of the most significant sources of information and assistance regarding contraception, HIV/AIDS, breast and cervical health and economic issues affecting economically disadvantaged parents of infants.

The Family Planning Council of Western Massachusetts offers not only a variety of birth control options, but counseling by trained professionals, examination and instruction to ensure the comfort and health of patients. The Council offers the latest in birth control options, including the contraceptive insert Norplant, the three-month pill Depo Provera, low-dose oral contraceptives, and the just-released female condom.

The FPCWM guarantees privacy to its patients, and does not release information without the patient's written consent.

The Council also offers information and counseling regarding HIV/AIDS. By calling 1-800-750-2016, one can receive the answers to any questions about the virus, including transmission routes, personal risk of contracting HIV, and the locations and hours of 86 local testing sites. Counseling by trained staff, as well as free, anonymous testing is also provided.

Free legal help is also offered to those who have contracted the virus through the FPCWM HIV Law Consortium. The Consortium provides services including estate management, wills, housing/health care discrimination, and child custody arrangements. Call (413) 734-1843 for more information.

The FPCWM AIDS Allies Program provides education, outreach, a resource library, early intervention/case management services, and a Buddies/Companeros program for people infected with and by HIV/AIDS in the local area. For more information call (413) 747-5144.

Another service offered to those whose lives are affected by HIV/AIDS is the AIDS Services of Franklin County. This is a FPCWM community-based program, and services include case management, a Buddies Program, support groups, transportation, and prevention education. For more information call (413) 773-8888.

In terms of breast and cervical health, the FPCWM offers check-ups (especially if there is a family history of disease) including cervical exams or pap smears, breast exams, lab work, public education and referrals for free mammographies and colposcopies thruugh the Breast and Cervical Health Project (BCHP).

Services are free to uninsured women, and determined on a slide scale basis for others, who will pay a reasonable price. The Council encourages monthly self-exams, regardless of whether or not their services are sought. Call 1-800-698-7752 to schedule an appointment at a special BCHP clinic.

The FPCWM also offers assistance to parents in need of making their food dollars stretch. With the help of Springfield WIC programs, thousands of women, infants and children are provided with nutritional counseling and vouchers for supplemental food, including baby formula. Call (413) 584-3591 for more information or to schedule an appointment.

The Young and The Musical...

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN

UMass Marching Band Director George Parks coordinated Band Day at Saturday's football game; featuring 58 high school marching bands.

■ Fontaine

continued from page 1

involved higher doses of radiation in a shorter amount of time.

Out of the 23 people in the study, Fontaine said 17 people are in remission, including himself. He said about two weeks ago he was told his cancer was under control — it is not growing or spreading.

Fontaine attributes his remission to being part of the study because he said he would still be undergoing treatment right now if was not part of the study and he also said the remission rate in the study was much higher than the rate for normal treatment. He said less than 25 percent of individuals with his disease survive.

Now that he is in remission, Fontaine said he is going to stay busy. He decided he would not return to UMass this semester and would work for the Jimmy Fund, an organization which raises funds for cancer research.

In October, there will be walk-a-thon along the Boston Marathon route to raise money for the Jimmy Fund. Fontaine will be participating by bringing together teams of walkers and the children for which the teams are walking.

Fontaine also participated in Fantasy Day at Fenway Park in August. Twenty-seven four-person teams played baseball to raise money for the Jimmy Fund and the Dana Farber Cancer Institute.

Fontaine, in his last cycle of chemotherapy, had gotten out of the hospital four days before he played at Fenway. He hit the wall, the "Green Monster," twice which earned $1,000. Hitting the ball out of the park would win $2,000. The wall is 315 feet from home plate.

He has several ideas to bring cancer and its reality to campus. He said he would like to develop a support group on campus, create programs for RAs, and link UMass with the Jimmy Fund.

Presently, the Jimmy Fund is based mainly in the eastern part of the state, but Fontaine said he would like to be its Western Massachusetts connection.

Fontaine believes part of his therapy is helping people. From the UMass community he said he would like to raise awareness, not necessarily money because he said he knows college students do not have much money.

Fontaine is also writing a book which will focus on living with cancer. He said most of what he has right now are collections of thoughts. He said he has written about 25 pages so far.

Fontaine said there is a dual purpose for writing the book, both as a release of his own emotions and also in hopes of inspiring someone to embrace life.

"I want to give people a fresh attitude on living and not taking it for granted," he said.

!! IBM XT COMPUTERS!!
*Includes monitor, 10 meg hard drive. (printers, modems also available) $168.00!!!
*14 day replacement guarantee.
*delivery available.
call 256-8094

August the First
Beads
Jewlery Supplies
Finished Jewlery
44 Main Street, Amherst • 2560276
22 Main St, Northamnpton • 586-7182
20% off until Oct. 3 with this Ad

Open Your Mind
Sigma Delta Tau
Fall Rush!!
All University Women are invited to join us for fall rush:
9/26 Skit Night 6-8 PM
9/27 Dinner at SDT 5-7 PM
9/28 House Tours 6-8 PM
10/3 Skit Night 8-10 PM
Please call Kristin at 549-7361 for more information.

STeVeN wRIgHT
LIVE IN CONCERT
THURSDAY
SEPTEMBER 29, 1994
8:00 PM
SPRINGFIELD SYMPHONY HALL
SPRINGFIELD, MA
$19.50 Reserved
Tickets at all Ticketmaster locations, the Civic Center Box Office, Filene's - Holyoke Mall, Movies & More - Chicopee, Main Music - Springfield, Video Galaxy - Enfield, all Connecticut Filene's or charge by phone at 733-2500 or 787-6600

IF YOU HAVEN'T YET, NOW IS THE TIME!
Register now through September 26 for over 200 evening credit courses and noncredit workshops.
University of Massachusetts/Amherst
Division of Continuing Education
Goodell Building
545-2414
A quality education at affordable prices

"We Take People Out In The Woods And Do Things With Them" Hiking
Mountaineering
Canoeing
Kayaking
Caving
UMOC
UMASS Outing Club
Cross-Country Skiing
Rock Climbing
Ice Climbing
Backpacking
...and more!
UMass Outing Club is having it's first meeting of the semester.
Monday, September 26 • Campus Center Auditorium

DAILY COLLEGIAN

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Gunley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor
Position vacant Black Affairs Editor
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor
Evelyn A. Delrisus Multicultural Affairs Editor
Kelly Spang News Editor
Nathan K. Martin Photography Editor

Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Position vacant Women's Issues Editor
Marie I. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
John Khachadourian Finance Manager
Jim Roode Circulation Manager
Eric Abenante Subscriptions Manager
Maureen Marcewski Senior Bookkeeper
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Dressing for success — college style

Emily Marino

When I was four-years-old I had this favorite green plaid jumper that I wore everywhere. From my tricycle to the sandbox at preschool, my happiest childhood memories happened in that jumper.

Within a couple of years, I discovered the merits of pants, and my esteemed jumper was replaced by a pair of pink pants (still plaid), which proved to be much more comfortable in situations (like bicycle riding, training wheels intact) involving physical activity.

Since then, I have developed a sort of, well, complex about dresses and skirts. I think that throughout my junior high and high school career I could count on two hands the number of times I succumbed to wearing a skirt. The proms that I went to in high school serve as my only recollection of donning a dress during this period, and I can't say that I remember being very happy about it.

I went to a suburban high school where the students wore outfits and accessorizing was not a priority, it was a way of life. My own wardrobe consisted mainly of jeans, and I was more concerned about comfort than anything else.

When I got to college, I was elated. It was actually acceptable to wear cut-offs and t-shirts — heck, a lot of people would even wear their pajamas to early classes.

Sure there were the women who spent hours getting ready for a day of treading around campus in high heels, as well as guys who needed to exercise self control when applying hair gel and Drakkar. But I could just write these folks off as deviants of the standards of the common college slob.

I explained to my housemate once that while I have clothes, she has outfits. Appalled, she asked, "But why? Why is this an outfit, and yours are clothes?" I pointed out her coordinating shoes and belt, jewelry and hair scrunchy, and then my own worn jeans and "Tanglewood" t-shirt.

"Oh," she said. "But you wear outfits too, I know I've seen you." Suddenly, a debate about adhering to fashion laws became a personal attack. I mentally reviewed my wardrobe. Had I worn an outfit recently? Was I a hypocrite?

For the next few days I scanned crowds of students, on the look-out for accessories and coordination. Skirts, blouses sweaters, khaki pants — even ties were everywhere. I attributed the high number of outfits to the fact that it was the first week of school, and people wanted to start off on the right foot, looking and feeling good.

And then it happened.

One of my professors called me and invited me to dinner with a guest lecturer for whom I have a lot of respect. I was thrilled to be invited, and thought about the questions I would ask and how I would communicate my respect for her.

Glancing at my closet, I realized I had nothing to wear. I took a survey about what would be the "appropriate attire," and got a pretty good idea that this dinner would inevitably entail at least dress pants, if not a skirt or dress.

It was at this moment that I threw the white flag into the air and admitted that it was time to grow up and suck it up, so I headed to the mall. I could no longer skirt around (sorry) the dressing-up issue by avoiding situations in which I could not wear my favorite pants and a baseball hat.

Everyone has heard the old adage that growing up means doing things that you don't want to for the sake of undergoing situations from which you will grow. Although wearing a dress wasn't going to be particularly fulfilling for me, having dinner with this lecturer was, and that is what I had to keep in mind.

Since the outfit conversation with my housemate, I have also taken note of the thousands of students who dress exactly the way I do — mangy baseball hat and all. I took a certain amount of comfort in knowing that not everyone looks as though they have just stepped out of a J. Crew catalogue.

I also took comfort in the knowledge that fashion is in the eye of the be-outfitter, and that, despite the times that I have to think about dressing to impress (like a lecturer or professor), my Levi's and I will be just fine more often than not.

Emily Marino is a Collegian columnist

Conversations with the dogs

Nathan Crick

"I'm still cold," said Eustacia Fields, cradling her coffee in her hands and sipping quietly. The sun had faded behind a cloud, causing a slight breeze to rise up, ruffling the napkins on the cafe table outside.

"Soft from too much sun in Italy I guess," said Kent O'Brien as he put his feet up on the nearest chair. He glanced at a couple of girls walking past, and returned his gaze to the traffic patterns down the road.

"Hmmmm," she said. A dog came walking past, and stopped to sniff Eustacia's foot. "Aw, hello puppy!" she exclaimed. She scratched its head and it looked up for a moment, and then kept on its determined route down the sidewalk.

"I missed dogs so much over there. Just cats, everywhere."

"I myself have grown to hate them. I don't appreciate my lawn becoming a big dung heap."

Down the street, a bus pulled over to a halt and opened its doors. People on. People off. The sun came back out.

"Yeah, if you care about that kind of thing."

"Eustacia," he laughed, shaking his head. "You've changed." He grabbed his cup and rested it on the arm of the chair. "Ever since you've been back. I don't get it."

"I suppose."

"Christ, what's the matter with you? It's like you're eternally on codeine. Dead to the world."

Eustacia smiled weakly. "I don't know, Kent. Sometimes I just don't feel like talking anymore," she paused. "I think I like talking to myself more these days. Maybe I'm too egotistical and think I have more important things to say to myself than anyone else I meet."

"That may be so, but I would guess that would kind of put a damper on the effectiveness of knock-knock jokes."

"Oh, shut up," she laughed. "That's not what I mean."

"Well what is so awful about being back, then?' I got the impression from your letters that you were the regular social animal back there."

"Well, I guess I was, but it's still not the same. Everything there was an adventure, like Indiana Jones. I was living, Kent," she said, bringing her hands to her chest. "Seeing and feeling more than I've ever felt. And then, pfft," she said, throwing up her hands and looking around. "Nothing."

He looked down into his coffee, swirling it methodically. "Why is there so much better than here, though? Just because I don't speak Italian, does that make me somehow less of a person? Or do we just cultivate mediocrity more in this country?"

"Well, I didn't mean it like that. It's not the people, I don't think. I mean I made a lot of good friends there, but they were mostly American of course," she shrugged. "It was just different, Kent. It felt more real."

"You don't feel real in Amherst?"

"Yeah, I do. It's just that other people don't."

They both stopped talking, and went back to watching as the marching forms of pedestrians passed by, feet crunching in the growing layer of dead leaves. An old man stopped and sat on a bench, with the occasional raucous laughter from a group of guys across the street as background music.

"I'm done," Kent said, placing his empty cup on the table. "Let's go."

Eustacia drained the last off her drink and picked up her newspaper. They both headed towards the bus stop.

"People are always going to be the way they are, Eustacia," Kent said, sticking his hands in his pockets. "You've got to know that, and you can't run away from it."

"I can try."

"No, you can't. Until you are happy with what's up here," he said, pointing to her forehead, "can you ever even come close to being content with what's out there. Don't base your happiness on what others can give you."

"You are so deep, Kent," she laughed. "But I know what you are saying. I thought of that too, but for some reason things keep pulling me back down again. Sometimes I wish I were invisible, so I could just sit down and cry in the middle of people without putting on this stupid act. I wish sometimes I didn't feel so fake, even to myself."

"Yeah. It's an awful thing, culture," said Kent, stopping as the bus pulled up in front of them. "Makes you a liar."

Beside them, people started milling together to get on the bus. As the Eustacia got on, she heard the voice of a young woman behind her talking.

"I bet you don't get asked this very question very often," she was saying with a friendly voice.

The doors closed, and the old man sat quietly and watched the bus drive away.

Nathan Crick is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

THE ASSEMBLED CITIZENRY COULD SCARCELY BELIEVE THEIR EARS...
WAL-MART?
YES, WAL-MART!
NOW, WE KNOW YOUR CONCERNS, BUT BELIEVE ME, THE OUTLET WE ENVISION HERE WILL BE THE PRIDE OF THE REGION!
FIRST OF ALL, IN THE DESIGN OF THE STRUCTURE, WE'LL RESPECT THE UNIQUE AGRARIAN CHARACTER OF THE SURROUNDING COUNTRYSIDE — TO THE POINT OF PLANTING SOY-BEANS ON THE ROOF!
THE DREAM TAKES SHAPE
B.B. Trudeau

Opinion/Editorial

I'VE BEEN WORKING AT THIS JOB FOR FOUR YEARS AT LESS PAY THAN MY FORMER JOB AND I CAN'T MAKE ENDS MEET ANYMORE.
FACTORY OPERATING RATES ARE RISING SHARPLY AND PROFITS ARE WAY UP.
MAYBE NOW I CAN ASK FOR A RAISE.
The threat of inflation
TOLES ©1994 UNIVERSAL PRESS SYNDICATE ©1994 THE BUFFALO NEWS
I FIGURE IT'S NOW OR NEVER.
YOU GOT THAT HALF RIGHT.

An open letter to the President

Robert M. Dunn, Jr.

Dear President Clinton,

Well, it's that time again. Rally 'round the flag boys, get all decked out in your best red, white and blue and break out those Lee Greenwood records, it's time for another invasion. (For invasion, read police action, war, what have you.)

The stratagem is a shrewd one Bill, and it's worked before, most notably for your predecessor. Your position in the polls slips, hell, stomp on a tiny country while wrapped in the flag and cite some sort of ambiguous "national interests" in order to whip the snarling masses into some sort of feeding frenzy.

Only it didn't work this time did it? Why not? Perhaps it was the presentation. Maybe a few carefully placed references to Hitler would have helped. Maybe it was the opposition. Where was all of this unwillingness to "risk American lives" when the decision was made to invade Kuwait? What made that cause all more noble than this one? It seemed to have it all. It had a ruthless military junta taking over a country run by a democratically elected president who we think is pretty keen. It had a clearly drawn line between good and bad guys. And it had all the earmarks of great wartime melodrama, including a guest shot by Jimmy "Superman" Carter, as "The Wunderkind."

Maybe you talked over their heads Bill. All this talk of hemispheres and such. Perhaps some visual aids would have helped. You could have commissioned Matt Groenig to whip up something for next to nothing, perhaps even for the promise of doing a guest voice on "The Simpsons." Hell, they got better ratings than "Arsenio" did anyway.

But, after all is said and done, Bubba, maybe everyone is just tired of all this "Pax Americana" brouhaha. Public apathy is a tough hurdle to jump, especially when they keep raising the damn thing, don't you think? I don't really think the fault is all yours buddy. Your playmates in Congress certainly aren't helping things at all, the hypocrisy is pretty thick in there. Since when has Bob Dole been for open immigration and against kicking the crap out of a tiny country and planting Old Glory on it's newly annexed shores? Makes you think.

Best thing to do for now, Billy-boy, is cover your self. We've got plenty of problems on our side of the sandbox to worry about anyway (anyone remember the "Bay of Pigs?"). So for now enjoy your victories, weather your defeats, and tell Bob Dole to lighten up. Good luck and all the best.

Robert M. Dunn, Jr. is a UMass student.

The truth needs to be heard early

Alex Casas

First Reunion — Class of '98 will be remembered as the most controversial convocation in UMass history. By now word has spread around campus about SGA President Mirran Raphaely's warm welcome to the new students.

Entering the William D. Mullins Center, I expected to hear some more advertising for UMass. As an entering student I had been subjected to an endless series of solicitations by the University faculty. Even at orientation, the New Students Program staff spent as much time as possible praising the the school, never mentioning the negatives — never mentioning the other side of UMass. Should it have been called orientation, or you'll see the real UMass when you get here?

Raphaely finally brightened the dim light illuminating this fine institution. Now I see the real UMass. She did not possess the politician's image I encountered far too often on campus.

She asked us why we were here — why we chose UMass. Her answer was that she didn't know. Officials I had spoken to praised me for making the "right choice." Right for whom? Them? No one can possibly know what is right for each of us.

Raphaely continued by finally exposing the doctrine of the financial aid department: "bait–and–switch." Now I won't be shocked when I open my aid package next year and find an insultingly diminished number — if that's possible.

We were also prepared for professors who don't care about us and T.A.s who don't speak English. My first impression was "Come on, they might not care, but at least they'll speak English." Then I walked into one of my Philosophy classes for the first time.

The professor began by passing out the syllabus, stating that if we looked at it we'd see we were supposed to have read a Platonic novel for that day's lecture. Upon finishing his announcement, several students walked out of the auditorium. The instructor continued by saying, "For those of you who were not able to add this course there appears to be some new openings."

Afterward the instructor introduced us to his T.A.s. When he repeatedly — yes, the T.A. did not speak English very well — asked one of them where his office was located, the instructor was dumbfounded by the answer. "Oh, you're across the hall from me!" Along with several students, I am no longer registered for the class.

Raphaely also informed us that we could "smoke pot on campus." She must be wrong, people don't do that here, do they? She didn't say it was legal. She did, however, tell the TRUTH.

Now there's talk about having some "course of action" taken against Raphaely, that her speech was inappropriate for incoming students. I find it very insulting that members of the UMass staff want to hide the truth about the University.

As a first–year student I am glad and honored that Mirran Raphaely had the courage to complete our orientation. I love UMass and am proud to call myself a UMass student. We may not be in the Ivy League, but we sure are in a league of our own.

Thanks, Mirran.

Alex Casas is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

A night uptown

To the editor:

Shirts tucked in. Stuff from catalogues. They all looked kind of the same. You know what I'm talking about. I'm not even going to say which team I think some of them play for (one of them was wearing a hat every body could read).

There were more of them than anyone else at two o'clock in the morning. Thursday night uptown, you know what I'm talking about.

Two women come in and they're pretty, so these guys are gawking. They give these girls the elevator eyes and one of them starts making ignorant comments about how one of them is dressed. He's loud and everybody can hear and he's obviously a jerk. Silently we all laugh at his machismo. Everybody's quiet because there are more of them than anyone else. Thursday night uptown.

So, nobody says anything and he and his friends start to leave and all of the real people in the room are relieved. They say they are going back to "Southie," which can only mean those think–tanks around the horseshoe. They yell about getting laid as the herd moves through the door.

The two women get their pizza (cheese slices were all that were left at two in the morning) and they sit down. I see them smiling and I think how beautiful they are, laughing at all of that obviousness.

And then I'm embarrassed to be part of it all.

Dwayne Hoover
Amherst

COLUMNIST INFORMATION

The columnist list for Fall '94 has been posted on the corkboard next to the editorial desk. If you applied to be a columnist please come on down and check it out.

If you were chosen to be a columnist, please have your columns ready this week (if you're bi–weekly, ask if you are scheduled for this week or next). You are required to type your columns into the computer.

Regular contributors should come down and speak with the editor or associates. All others, please keep coming down and contributing to the page and the paper. Thanks everyone who applied.

Arts & Living

Buckley shines, Frente! doesn't

GRACE
JEFF BUCKLEY
COLUMBIA RECORDS

Jeff Buckley desperately wants to be an artiste. Early hype painted him as some sort of young revisionist, playing alone with his guitar in seedy dumps, and publicly denouncing any musical ties with his father, legendary folk singer Tim Buckley.

After the release of his debut EP "Live At Sin–e" it was clear that Buckley was indeed all of the above, but still had a ways to go before he could live up to the "musical savior" label that the press has eagerly tagged on him. At times the bare bones renditions of his songs embarrassingly revealed many of the weaknesses that tend to haunt his music. Revealing him as maybe just another sensitive Bohemian– type who maybe consumed one to many cups of java.

Blame it on time, or the fact that he is finally being backed by a competent ensemble of musicians, but Grace, Buckley's first full length release, is a subtle shift in the right direction. Abandoning the "solo" style that he preferred to use in his early days, Buckley has ventured into the studio with flushed out arrangements of some new songs, as well as some of his old standards.

In the lyric department not much has changed. Buckley still walks that wobbly tightrope between articulate poet and mystical nerd without so much as a glance down. Lines such as "Hypnotized by a strange delight/Under a Lilac Tree/I made wine from the Lilac Tree/ Put my heart in its recipe" hints that Buckley may have been sharing too many slices of American pie with the likes of Don McClean. But no matter, it is the music itself with is this album's saving grace.

Delicate shades of guitar and percussion, carefully interwoven with Buckley's boyish sigh, highlight Grace throughout it's ten tracks.

Sometimes folksy, sometimes jazzy, and at its best encompassing both, Buckley knows how to pen an interesting arrangement that compliments his short–comings, and draws attention away from the sometimes dopey lyrics. Songs such as the title track and "So Real" conjure up a thousand images instantly without ever sounding to fragile or sappy. Buckley, like his father, has a confident grasp on how to use music to convey a certain feeling.

The tracks on Grace run through the emotional gamut. From the unsettling mysticism of "Mojo Pin" to the love–lorn longing of "Lover, You Should've Come Over", it doesn't take long to realize that Buckley has read and mastered the singer/songwriter's handbook.

Buckley still has a lot to prove before he reaches the ranks of the singers/songwriters he obviously emulates (Van Morrison, Nick Drake etc.). While he is fully aware of the reasons which made his heroes become the legends that they are, he still has to overcome some of the cliches that are associated with the style in which he operates. Hopefully if he stays the'currant track he's on, it should only be a matter of time before he gets the recognition he so desperately wants. B
(Matt Audette)

Frente!
COURTESY MAMMOTH RECORDS

Trax On Trax Off

MARVIN THE ALBUM
FRENTE!
MAMMOTH/ATLANTIC RECORDS

This summer, Frente! gained the public's and the critic's attention with their cover of New Order's "Bizarre Love Triangle," and their simple yet catchy "Labour of Love."

The problem with Marvin The Album becomes evident immediately after "Labour of Love" and that is the fact that the songs all seem to follow a pattern of being overly simplistic.

By the time the song "Most Beautiful" comes along, one begins to wonder where the rest of the band is. Lead singer Angie Hart is left to carry most of the songs while backed by arrangements that are sparse at best. This problem creates songs that sound more like an advanced Sesame Street tunes than adult attempts at music.

The simplistic arrangements could be overlooked if Hart's voice didn't often sound naive and childish, but in a time where female vocalists with amazing talent like Harriet Wheeler of The Sundays and Dolores from The Cranberries are setting the standard, Hart comes up as just a tad bit trite.

The album starts to pull itself up by its boot straps through tracks like "Explode," "Dangerous," "Accidentally Kelly Street" and "See/Believe." But the fact of the matter is that on an album of 14 songs it's a little too late to save Marvin The Album from wallowing in mediocrity. C (Mike MacLean)

DOWN
THE JESUS LIZARD
TOUCH AND GO RECORDS

With their first full–length studio LP in nearly two years, the Jesus Lizard silence any accusations of "selling out," stemming from the major–label subsidiary release of their live album Show earlier this year.

Down finds the boys from Chicago back where they're most at home and doing what they do best, making aggressive yet complex music like no one else can.

The album opener "Fly On The Wall" sets the tone for great things to come with a rhythm section as methodical and relentless as the advance of some conquering army.

"The Associate," with it's creeping bassline and David Yow's sinister, spy–novel whispers, marks the band's greatest musical progression, even featuring a rare solo from unorthodox guitarist Duane Denison.

The organ on "Horse" is also a new direction for the Lizard, adding the perfect element of funeral gloom to this eerie tale of fratricide.

Down is the best album to date by what is probably the most talented group of people making loud, original music today. A (Matthew Justin Farber)

CLICHES
ALEX CHILTON
ARDENT RECORDS

Even though many critics and musicians consider Alex Chilton to be a musical genius, he has never received the success he has deserved.

During the 1960s he sang the lead vocals to the Box Tops' hit song "The Letter" while in the 1970s he was the leader of the legendary band Big Star. Since then he has been hiding in the shadows of the pop music world while bands such as Teenage Fanclub and the Posies have cashed in on his influences.

Cliches is Chilton's first domestic release in several years and it is long over–due.

Even though Alex Chilton is best known as a songwriter, Cliches is an album filled with his versions of old classics that were popular many years before I was born. Chilton covers songs by Cole Porter, Ray Charles, Johanne Sebastian Bach, and many more. His version of Ray Charles' "Funny (But I Still Love You)" is simply beautiful. Although this song was written for piano, Chilton rearranges it flawlessly for acoustic guitar. Cliches is a true solo album as Chilton sings and plays acoustic guitar with no accompaniment.

In an age where many popular artists are using all types of technology to create an artificial sound in the studio, Chilton records the old fashioned way, no overdubs and no nonsense. He is also not trying to sell out to the MTV culture. When was the last time you heard pop singer cover a song that was written over 300 years ago? But that is just what Chilton does as he performs his version of Bach's "Gavotte: First Suite For Orchestra C Major."

The only problem with this album is the inclusion of the popular holiday song, "The Christmas Song." I just don't enjoy listening to Christmas songs in September.

To say the least I was surprised by this album. I expected a bunch of uninspired covers of classic songs. Instead this album is filled with the magic that made Big Star so special. Maybe on his next album Chilton could cover songs by Teenage Fanclub and the Gigolo Aunts who owe an unmeasurable debt to his songwriting.

On Cliches Chilton confirms that he is still a wonderful musician and his voice sounds as good as ever. Hopefully this album will help Chilton receive some of the credit he so rightfully deserves. B+ (Michael Burke)

Fundraising benefit a huge success

Doc Hopper ignites crowd with explosive set of punk rock

By Matthew Justin Faerber
Collegian Correspondent

ARISE/ASP BENEFIT CONCERT
Earthfoods Commonwealth Room
September 22, 1994

This past Thursday night, the Earthfoods Commonwealth room was the site of the first, and what may very well prove to be the best, on–campus concert of the semester. The show, headlined by Boston area punk heroes Doc Hopper, was a fund–raising benefit for the low income rights group Arise for Social Justice, as well as the Alliance for Student Power and the Liberator newspaper.

Before going on, Doc Hopper distributed free pixie sticks to those in attendance in order to get them properly wound up but it was the explosive set which followed, rather than any sugar rush, that kept the crowd in motion for over an hour.

Due to some personnel problems, their regular four–piece line–up was lacking one guitarist, somewhat limiting their repertoire. The result was a barrage of crowd–pleasing old–school covers including pseudo–classics by Devo, The Descendants, and even G.G. Allen. Anyone who has any doubts as to whether real punk rock is alive and kicking should check out Doc Hopper live. They just don't make it like this anymore.

Also on the bill were DH's label–mates Sinkhole, who put on a very impressive performance with lightening–fast guitars and a good dose of melody to create honest, catchy pop–punk.

U–Mass' own Knuckle Sandwich opened the show with possibly their finest effort to date, combining old favorites from their "Vito Mack" demo with a handful of brand new songs.

The only blemish on an otherwise flawless bill was the presence of Art is an Enemy from D.C. whose tired formula of hardcore/metal and predictably poor rapping resulted in songs which were both abrasive and dull.

Kenneth Miller of the Alliance for Student Power called the fund–raiser a success and predicted more such happenings in the future from the ASP. He also encouraged students to get involved with the ASP, a campus organization which he described as "a forum where students can learn more about left–wing ideology."

> "[The ASP is] a forum where students can learn more about left–wing ideology."
> –Kenneth Miller

The primary beneficiary of this event was the low income rights group Arise for Social Justice which operates out of Springfield. Founded by four welfare mothers, Arise is a non–profit organization made up of low income people helping each other and working for social reform," says member and concert–organizer Charles Lenchner.

Those students interested in further information on Arise, the ASP or the Liberator should go to the ASP office located at room 413 of the Student Union.

FIRST WALKING Co-Ed FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA Co-Ed DISTANCE CHOICE
253-3539
The Valley's Leading Weight Training Facility
175 University Drive • Amherst • 253-3539

COME JOIN US AGAIN!
AEΦ
WILL BE HOLDING OPEN RUSH
TONITE from 7:30 - 9:30 pm
and WED. Sept. 28th from 8 - 10 pm
IN THE CAMPUS CENTER.
Call Emily 256-8701 or
Laurie 549-7960 w/ questions

Commander Jetsony to Space Command
OK. Yeah, it's me Mom, can you bring me and Tony some hotdogs and soda to the tent. Eh, and a beer. Miss Daily Collegian!!!

Sure I'm innocent! For one thing I own my own corks. Yes, you could call me a regular "Do-it-yourselfer." I love organizing my corks. Yes, it is one of my few joys. I know MANY things about my corks, I'd tell you about them... but I don't know you very well.
You may have guessed, COLLEGIAN

bell hooks
Distinguished Visitors Program

Book signing – Sponsored by D.V.P. & The University Store
Tuesday Sept. 27
3-5p.m. Campus Center, Arcon Desk Lower Level.
20% Discount with UMass I.D.
Limit 2 books / person
Lecture
Tuesday Sept. 27
8p.m. Bowker Auditorium
Free of Charge

FRANCE AUSTRALIA RUSSIA ENGLAND
Global Internship and Language Programs
a representative will be on campus:
Amherst College
Monday, September 26, 1994 4:30 - 6:00 p.m.
McCaffrey Room
Smith College
Tuesday, September 27, 1994 2:00 p.m.
Wright Hall, Common Room
Students from 5 College Consortium
BOSTON UNIVERSITY
International Programs
For program details please write or call:
Boston University International Programs
232 Bay State Road, Box Q, Boston, MA 02215 • 617/353-9888
FRANCE AUSTRALIA RUSSIA ENGLAND
SPAIN GERMANY ENGLAND ISRAEL BELIZE U.S.A. ITALY
SPAIN CHINA FRANCE ECUADOR NIGER U.S.A. ITALY

Job opportunities await students in Building Materials program

By Heather Redfern
Collegian Staff

Working with wood can be a rewarding task for many. To students involved in the University of Massachusetts Building Materials Technology and Management Program, discovery of career returns are proving to be prosperous.

As one of the most rapidly growing fields, the lumber business has transformed in recent years to be a wide-spread industry of modern distribution networks filled with wholesale companies, home centers and retail yards.

Students trained in materials technology and management are finding their studies are opening doors to several career options.

Paul Fisette, director of the Building Materials Technology and Management Program, said upon graduation this past May, students involved in the University program received on average, three job offers with salaries starting at $26,000.

Already, seven job offers from major industries await wood technology majors who will be graduating this May.

A key to insuring wood technology majors a career in their field is the programs affiliation with a building materials technology and management board.

Working with this 28 member board allows faculty to work with top industries such as The Home Depot, the National Kitchen and Bath Association and Georgia Pacific to discuss the needs and requirements of the industries including advanced skills in sales and marketing.

Georgia Pacific as the largest wholesaler in the country grosses approximately $11 billion per year said Fisette.

"We recognize that it is our job as faculty to call and introduce companies to students," said Fisette, "We actively recruit businesses to be interested in students."

With only sixty students in the program at the present time, Fisette said professors and advisors are able to work closely with the students.

"I had come from a small high school and the size of the department appealed to me," said 1991 UMass graduate Emily Ross.

Ross currently works as a marketing coordinator under the vice-president of sales and marketing at Rex Lumber in Avon, Massachusetts.

Lyle Core, a senior majoring in wood technology, said he has seen some growth in the program with 20 new students entering the major this year.

"It's a good field to be in," said Core. "There are a lot of sales positions."

Natural resource profession, chemistry and forest botany are a few of the fields students majoring in wood technology study as part of the Building Materials Technology and Management Program.

Looking to expand the program, the University will work with students majoring in wood technology as part of a two year program at the Massachusetts Bay College.

Students in the Massachusetts Bay College program will soon have the chance to matriculate into a four year program at the University or receive an Associates of Science degree at Massachusetts Bay college.

"This opens an opportunity for students to get into the program at the University," said Fisette.

The streak continues...

UMASS MEDIA RELATIONS

Nicole Roberts drew praise from Massachusetts Coach Jim Rudy for her heads-up play at the UMass Classic.

■ PVTA

continued from page 1

agent and request the discount.

"After collecting 11 consecutive months of cancelled bus passes, you have to send them into the insurance company to receive the discount," Goldberg said.

Passengers can receive a discount of up to 10 percent off their auto insurance premium, according to Goldberg.

"Commuters can receive no more than $75 off their auto insurance premiums," Goldberg said.

To qualify for any Massachusetts automobile insurance rebate program for regular use of public transportation for commuting purposes, passengers must follow state regulations, according to Goldberg.

For more information about the insurance rebate program, send a self addressed, stamped envelope to PVTA, 1500 Main St., Springfield MA 01105.

■ Simpson

continued from page 1

are illustrated by other famous cases which have had sequestered juries. In the Charles Manson case, where jurors were in a hotel for nearly a year, the judge was forced to release them for a time when families demanded their return after an earthquake. Within days, a reported threat to the jury panel required they be sequestered again. More recently, jurors in the Reginald Denny riot-beating trial reported disputes while they were sequestered. One alarmed her colleagues when she ran down a hotel corridor screaming "I can't take it anymore!" and demanding to see her boyfriend.

The ultimate question is whether 12 jurors and eight alternates can get along with each other in close quarters and whether sequestration itself can affect their decision.

The makeup of the jury probably will not be known for at least a month as jury questioning is likely to be long and tedious. And the public, used to watching every phase of this trial on television, is in for a period of withdrawal. On the judge's orders, jury selection won't be televised.

■ field hockey

continued from page 8

Rose once again kept UMass in the game recording nine saves.

"Hilary is very experienced," said Donnelly. "She was outstanding today and everyday, but she can't do it all herself."

On the other side of the coin, Rutgers goaltender Becky Donahue was equally impressive, registering 13 saves.

"She (Becky) was outstanding, she was stopping everything we shot at her," said Donnelly.

Even though UMass tied against Rutgers, they remain undefeated in their last 14 A-10 games.

After this weekend's games the Minutewomen stand at 5-0-1 overall record and a 1-0-1 mark in the A-10.

The Minutewomen will return home Wednesday afternoon for a contest against regional rival Northeastern. The Huskies are currently ranked No. 1 in the Northeast Region. UMass is currently ranked second and will attempt to overtake the top spot on Wednesday.

■ women's soccer

continued from page 8

"I chose [to come] here because of the coaching I knew I would receive," said Dion. "I knew coach has done some good things with other keepers. Also to have the chance, at least for a year, to work with Briana. I wanted to capitalize on that opportunity."

"We're real pleased she decided to come to UMass, and take the gamble to keep up the tradition of great goalkeepers we've had here," said Rudy.

So far, the decision has yielded an experience that has been more than she could have ever imagined. "I'm so excited to play with a team of this intensity, and this togetherness," said Dion. "You don't want to let anyone down because you know everyone is out there working there hardest for you."

And yesterday was no different, as UMass continues to play fabulous soccer. Yet unlike the first six games, the shots came a little more frequently, and perhaps a little harder, at Dion. But the saves were made, and the call was answered.

No doubt, it was her time to shine.

NFL Scores

New England	23	Green Bay	30
Detroit	17	Tampa Bay	3
Minnesota	38	Houston	20
Miami	35	Cincinnati	13
LA Rams	16	San Francisco	24
Kansas City	0	New Orleans	13
Cleveland	21	Chicago	at
Indianapolis	14	NY Jets (Late)
Atlanta	27	Denver	at
Washington	20	Buffalo (tonight)

Week Four

THE NEW YORKER
ON CAMPUS
A Series in Conjunction with The New Yorker Education Program
Presents Staff Writer
Susan Orlean
With Insights On
"American Voices: Popular American Culture"
Monday, September 26, 1994
8:00 P.M. Bowker Auditorium
University of Massachusetts, Amherst
Meet the author at a reception following the discussion
Free and Open to the Public
For information and directions contact Journalism Department University of Massachusetts (413) 545-1376
Sponsored by TIAA CREF

That's me, Mr. Shiny Shoes. Thanks to the Mass Daily Collegian I'm a new man. I shine my own shoes now. They're the shiniest you've ever seen. Careful, if you stare too long they could blind you.

COLLEGE PIZZA
Welcomes back all the UMass students, and wishes them a happy, healthy and successful year.
College Pizza
The Closest Location, The Hottest Pizza
Located at Patterson Corner of Southwest
549-6098 • 549-6073

Stuck in an office?
– learn woodworking
Carpenter?
– learn creative writing or photography
DIVERSIFY!
Speak only English?
– learn another language
Trouble with English?
– learn English as a Second Language
Need a job?
– learn bartending
Learn about yourself, about other people, other cultures, other languages, other times.
Nearly 100 noncredit workshops are offered this fall by the UMass Division of Continuing Education.
Call now for your free course and workshop catalog — 545-0474.
A quality education at affordable prices.
DIVISION OF CONTINUING EDUCATION
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST

Rafters SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
ZIMA CLEARMALT
COACH'S CORNER
every Monday night
7:30-8:30
Talk UMass Football with Coach Hodges.
Live from
Rafters Sports Bar & Restaurant
University Drive, Amherst
T-shirts, Prizes, ½-time appetizers.
Tune into CNN WTTT AM 1430
University Drive & Amity • Amherst • 549-4040

Spirit Haus
Refrigerator Rentals
256-8433
253-5384

Legal Problems?
Call UMass Student Legal Services Office!
Housing - Family - Student Rights
Civil Rights - Workers Rights
Criminal and Consumer Law
and more...
Call 545-1995
for an appointment
UMASS/AMHERST STUDENTS ONLY

The times are tough. I see it every time I look in my pocket and get a shock when all of pocket is lost. The other day I looked under my couch cushions and found only four bottle caps. That, sometimes you have to scrape a little.
COLLEGIAN
TODAY, NOT FURTHER

The Collegian under stands your needs. We hear your concerns and are sympathetic to your worries. In fact we have taken measures to insure that we deal with those issues...
The Collegian ... Looking out for our readers who are looking out for us as we are looking out for they are you...

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

LOOK, HOBBES, I CUT A PIECE OF CARDBOARD TO MAKE A TV SCREEN.
SEE, I JUST HOLD IT UP AND IT'S LIKE I'M ON TV.
NOW, YOUR OWN SHOW!
TOO BAD I CAN'T REALLY FORCE MY WAY INTO MILLIONS OF PEOPLE'S HOMES EACH DAY.
BUT ON THE OTHER HAND, NO ONE IN THIS HOME CAN TURN ME OFF!

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Jim's Journal By Jim

Today Mr. Peterson was rambunctious.
Steve said, 'Don't you have any toys for this cat?"
I realized I didn't, except for crumpled-up paper, which she likes.
'Mr. Peterson is deprived!" Steve said.

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Urban Shocker By Deg

LOOK, URBAN! THERE'S A STRANGE, NEW ANIMAL IN OUR NEIGHBORHOOD!
I SEE!
HE'S DIFFERENT LET US BEAT HIM TO WITHIN ONE INCH OF HIS LIFE
OH, THAT WOULD BE JUST GRAND!
FORTUNATELY, POLITICAL CORRECTNESS HAS NOT YET REACHED THE ANIMAL KINGDOM!

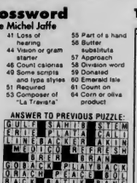
Daily Crossword

Edited by Trude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Very foolish
5 Got up
10 Canine comments
14 Spoken
15 Part of AWOL
16 Distort
17 President Clinton
18 Record
19 Precinct
20 Greeted
22 Equipment for Sampras
24 — -roaring; noisy
25 Stabs in a lanca
26 180th meridian
30 Pouncas
34 Reverenca
35 Give instruction
37 Uncle Millie
38 Dog in "Peter Pan"
40 Irritated
42 Miami's county
43 Upright
45 Attracted
47 Far each
48 Bird dog
50 Deserters
52 "— Lucy"
54 Tarot
56 Congregate
58 Natural number
62 Sheltered from the wind
63 Hum
65 Defy danger
66 Authentic
67 Blue pencils
68 Diabolic
69 Sharp-bowed boat
70 Farm buildings
71 Republicans

DOWN
1 Sasdogs
2 Melody
3 Audacity
4 Attraction
5 More drowsy
6 Oversee
7 Feedbag morsel
8 Appearerd
9 Throw off course
10 Roused
11 Uncommon
12 Sit and stew
13 Restorative resorts
21 Knightly activity
23 Kind of sandwich
25 Hide
26 Copenhagen natives
27 Coopmzent
28 Doctrina
29 Catch redhanded
31 Baccchus' fruit
32 One of aga and experience
33 Oracles
36 Mister, in Munich
39 With energy
41 Loss of hearing
44 Vision or gram starter
46 Count casiones
49 Some scripts and type styles
51 Required
53 Composer of "La Travata"
55 Part of a hand
58 Butter substitute
57 Approach
58 Division word
59 Donated
60 Emerald Isle
61 Count on
64 Corn or olive product

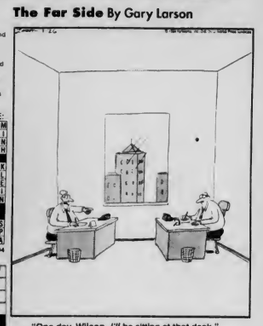
ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



9/24/94

9/26/94

The Far Side By Gary Larson



Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19) The time is money you invest in a pet project will pay rich dividends. Daily exercise will keep your energy level high. Romance gains momentum when you reveal what is in your heart. Plan ahead.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In your determination to achieve you some times try to do too many things at one time. Know your priorities. Get better organized and stick to a schedule. Describe a complicated task step by step.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Credit problems cannot be ignored. Discovering something ill-at-ease been going on behind the scenes could win you a point. Do not vow to carry on a battle you cannot win.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) There is an important difference between you and a competitor. Stick with what you know and eventually you will emerge on top. Service to your community will earn you widespread praise.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Romance enjoys highly favorable influence this week. A family member's intervention may provide the best solution to a problem. A timely investment will mean lasting tenure of security.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You have every reason to be optimistic about the future! Unanimous agreement is needed to make a plan work. Invest in a child and his prospects will improve. There is more to a bargain than meets the eye.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) A major breakthrough is possible if you continue to apply yourself. Give employees the tools they need and there will be no limit to what you can achieve.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Do not let a disappointment drag you down. Stand tall and defeat will soon give way to victory. Answer mate's questions before they are asked. Travel is favored. Pursue romance on your own timetable.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Postpone signing off on a project until next week. Take advantage of an offer that will be in effect for a limited time only. Romance will prove unforgettable for those who are truly in love.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Help someone who is trying to create a whole new in-hnology. Profits will rise when you find a way to reduce costs. A diet will work best if you choose food that you truly enjoy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) The grace and charm of a newcomer stirs something deep in your heart. Help children develop a love for excellence and they will find pleasure in meeting high standards. Relax at home this evening.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) An associate could behave erratically, putting a business deal in jeopardy. A financial triumph is still possible if you follow your intuition. Get more involved in your community. Say "no" to romance on the rebound.

The Massachusetts Daily
Collegian
invites you to our
FALL OPEN HOUSE
Friday, September 30, 1994
12 Noon - 4 p.m.
113 Campus Center
Come Check Out
the Collegian
and find out what it's all about!

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Tri-County Sandwich	Philly Cheese Steak
Egg Roll & Fried Rice	Barbecued Chicken
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Garden Chili	Tri-Bean Casserole
Egg Roll & Fried Rice	Carrot Bean Schine

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Brian Gormley
Copy Editor.....Jeff Crofts
Photo Technician.....Jessica Taverna
Production Supervisor.....Marni E. Helfner
Production.....Christina Levere, Jon Lupo

Quote of the Day

"I'm always making a comeback but nobody ever tells me where I've been.

—Billie Holiday

Classifieds

- 20¢ per word per day for students
- All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
- Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ACTIVITIES

Biosci—the biological sciences student association will be holding its first general membership meeting Tuesday September 27 7:00pm Morrill 203 All are welcome

Chi Omega informal rush dinner party Monday 9/26 5:30-8:30pm For more information and transportation please call Lauren at 549-4351

UMass Women's Ice Hockey is back Season starts soon For information call Cheri 549-7776

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Sigma Delta Tau invites all University women to Saturday night live at SDT! Please call Kristin 549-7361 Show time is 8-8!

AUTO FOR SALE

1979 Chevy Impala Runs great! low miles $900/bo Dan 253-9405

1984 Ford Escort 50Km AT, 4dr, runs strong, needs some work, cheap at $900 253-5998

1969 Mustang Classic 8/8 Mustang electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, best offer call Beth at 6-6434

1989 Hyundai Excel 47K AC, auto stereo cassette sunroof $3000 Call 253-4012

89 Jeep Wrangler black hard top 4cyl, 4 wd, stereo, high miles, excellent condition $4500 bo 549-7321

BOXING LESSONS

Recreational + competitive boxing lessons for men and women with retired professional G. Dalla Bumpus 549-5752

CHRISTIANS

Alliance Christian Fellowship adds value and balance to your UMass education. We're committed to personal discipleship training, outreach and spirit-filled fellowship and fun FRIDAYS: Timeout Fellowship 7pm Campus Center

C.A.S.H. FOR COLLEGE

Do you need $$$ for college??? WE have the solution. Guaranteed results. Write to: Corporate Scholarship Service, 2 Oakhurst Terrace East, N Reading, MA 01864 for free details

COMPUTERS

BK Computers & Associates whole systems. Parts, including monitors, drives, cards and more. Free estimate. 549-4362

ENTERTAINMENT

Drunk a high energy alternative original cover band call Chris at 253-5898

FOR RENT

Blue room for rent, 2 cats, 4 lake, and an espresso machine $215 + Call Juan at 586-4762

Fridge rentals 253-8742 free delivery

Move in now! Center of town. $300/ mo flat. Call Dana 253-7799

FOR SALE AUDIO

Stereo equipment used/ reconditioned, area's largest selection, priced to sell! Also tv's, vcr's, dj/ pa equipment, instruments etc. We buy, sell, trade Call SAV Exchange, Sam Bjorn 256-0941

FOR SALE

Brand new tires p195/75 r14 Toyo touring radials 253-4012

Dorm fridge $75 or b/o 253-7349

Dorm fridge 3 cu ft $75 Call Jon 549-7648

Guitar processor digitech rp, 1 assam 4 track recording studio 549-5862

Hockey skates Mega1090 size 8 worn only 3x $150 or bo 253-3953

Hundreds of quality shareware programs for $3.49 call 584-2782 for free list

Macintosh computer Complete system including printer only $500! Call Chris at 800-789-5685

Pagers at Pioneer Valley Knife and Tool 549-7331

Solid oak triple dresser Excellent condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253-9254

Trendy computer system w/ drives, mon, printer Tons of software Asking 225 or bo Call Joe 6-7348

Watch batteries ear piercing, eyeglass and jewelry repairs, great earrings, gifts from grass to gold, custom designed jewelry Silverlace Designs 284 N Pleasant St, Amherst 253-3324

FREE

Free hamster with cage looking for a good home! Leave message 6-7301

HELP WANTED

$363.60 Sell funny college T-shirts. Profit $363.60 Risk Free Choose from 19 designs Free catalogs 1-800-700-4750

Babysitter/ mother's helper in Amherst Sat and/ or Sun mornings 8:30-12:30. Infant experience, car, non-smoking. $5/hr Call Robin 253-0880 8am-9pm please

RESUME WRITING

We specialize in writing resumes and cover letters Over a decade of experience, close to campus 549-0357

ROOMMATE WANTED

1F roommate needed after Oct 2 Single in 2 bdrm apt $200/mo incl heat/hot water, Jen or Ruth 256-0954

2 rooms in private home $300/ mo kitchen privileges- Kosher/ vegetarian preferred Laundry, parking, furnished 549-4853

Female roommate wanted to share a large bedroom in a three bedroom condo $740 /month includes hot water Washer, dryer, garage Call 256-4960

SERVICES

Anna's pet sitting service Call for more info 549-0838

I'll sew for you Alterations, buttons, hems, repairs Call Allison 546-0263

Model search The 1994 Glamour Models national model search continues Local test shoots now being conducted by first Impressions Photography Beginners and experienced models Males/ females/ all categories welcome 617-523-0367

SCHOLARSHIPS

Apply for private scholarships- we guarantee one or your money back- price $4500- for more information call Janice 585-0977

TRAVEL

 Spring Break 95 *****

America's # 1 spring break company! Cancun, Bahamas, Daytona and Panama! 110% lowest price guarantee! Organize 15 friends and travel free! Earn highest commissions! (800)327-TRAVEL

WANTED

Attn: Drama and medieval performers 2 UMass alumni seek medieval performer, jugglers, armourer to oversee games of skill and inspire guests at their local 15th century wedding. Please have costume and desire for a good time. Bill/ Irene 584-4203

Campus representative Kaplan products spring break trips "guaranteed" best prices + incentives Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica, S. Padre + Florida We handle the bookkeeping You handle the sales Call 1-800-222-4432

LOST

Gold soft bangle bracelet Please contact Kristy 253-3653

PERSONALS

Happy Birthday Scott. Try not to get too high on sunflower seeds Best wishes —Marissa

PINNOCHIO'S

Hiring drivers full or part time Call 256-4110 or stop by 30 Bothwood Walk Ask for Bob

University Barbers
(Campus Center)
549-0123
Hours:
Weekdays
8 a.m. - 6:45 p.m.
Sat. 9 a.m. - 1:45 p.m.
No Appointment Necessary

MEN NEEDED!!
Are you a male student living on campus interested in preventing sexual harassment? The Peer Education Program on Sexual Harassment is recruiting 30 undergraduate men and women for a one-credit training session this semester. Fifteen women have already signed up. After successfully completing this course, Peer Educators working in male/female teams will provide workshops to other undergraduates in the spring 1995 semester and receive practicum credit.
For more information, call Mike at 546-0365.

Sports

Minutemen beat jinx, upend Black Bears

Ingoglia and Alessio provide spark in Hodges' first win against University of Maine

By Anthony Guido
Collegian Staff

In front of a packed Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium, the University of Massachusetts football team got the biggest monkey off its back during Coach Mike Hodges' tenure.

UMass 20
Maine 14

Hodges, a Maine alum, defeated the Black Bears for the first time in three tries in front of a raucous Band Day crowd. Losing to Maine the past two years arguably has cost UMass consecutive playoff births.

"This was a good team, and a good win for our team. Our defense made huge stops in the second half, and when we run the ball like that (268 yards) we shouldn't lose very many," Hodges said.

Once again led by 100-yard rushing performances from Rene Ingoglia and Frank Alessio the Minutemen (2-1, 1-0 in Yankee Conference) defeated Maine 20-14.

"We played smashmouth football today. The monkey is gone now," Ingoglia said.

Ingoglia ran for a game high 124 yards on 26 carries with Alessio right behind with 115 yards on 24 attempts. Each contributed a touchdown as the Minutemen dominated time of possession, holding the ball for over 35 minutes.

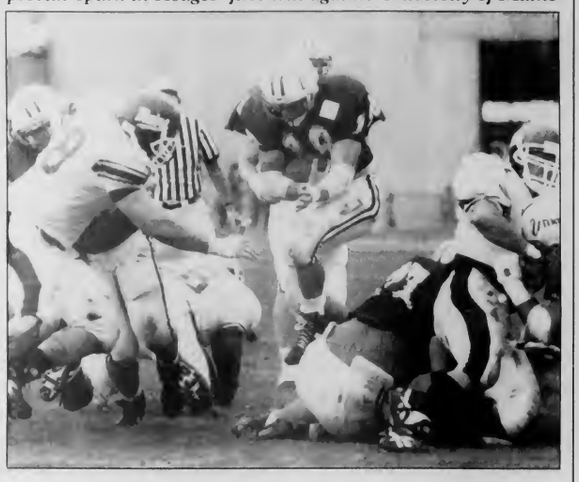
"Most of the credit has to go to the offensive line, our job is just to run through them," Alessio said.

The Minutemen got off on the wrong foot when Ingoglia fumbled on UMass' second play from scrimmage. Five plays later Maine quarterback Emilio Colon went in for the game's first touchdown, an eight yard run around the end.

UMass answered back on the ensuing possession exclusively on the running of Ingoglia and Alessio. The two running backs accounted for a 7-play 55 yard drive culminating in a 25 yard field goal by Eric Oke, his first of the season.

Even with Oke's early season struggles Hodges had no doubt on whether or not to go for the first down facing a fourth and three situation from the Maine seven yard line. He sent in Oke, and put points on the board.

The Minutemen took the lead for good at the start of the second quarter with an impressive 84 yard drive in 13 plays, mixing things up on the ground and through the air.



NATHAN MARTIN COLLEGIAN

Junior tailback Frank Alessio ran for a career high 115 yards against Maine.

The successful running game allowed UMass to open up things downfield for its wideouts. Quarterback Andrew McNeilly found tight end Matt Stefanski (3 catches for 15 yards) twice and wide receiver Kevin Bourgoin (5-29) once on the drive.

A key play was a 15 yard pass interference penalty against the Black Bears, as McNeilly looked deep to wideout Matt Read. Ingoglia capped the drive with a 6 yard burst up the middle to put his team on top, the third TD of the season for the junior fullback.

After Maine went three-and-out on the next possession, the Minutemen offense picked up right where it left off. This time Alessio was able to cash in on a quick 5-play 51 yard drive with a 13 yard TD run.

The terribly inconsistent Maine offense again failed to produce a first down, with coach Jack Cosgrove rotating quarterbacks every two series. Neither Colon nor Joe Marsilio could maintain any offensive continuity on the day.

"Our quarterback had some physical and mental exhaustion after last week, so we thought rotating would keep them fresh," Cosgrove said.

UMass threatened to blow the game open at the end of the first half, however McNeilly (10-18 for 75 yards passing) was intercepted for the second time, ending the drive at the Maine 25 with under two minutes left in the half.

The Minuteman defense, as it has throughout the season, dominated the second half. The Black Bears managed just two first downs in the quarter, again with the quarterbacks struggling and a non-existent running game (75 total yards).

Defensive lineman Brian Corcoran and Ben Albert picked up two sacks each. Ken Bello intercepted Colon mid-way through the third. The reserve lineman read the play perfectly, deflecting a pass and having the presence of mind to make the catch.

"This was the biggest win since my freshmen year, they've ruined two of our seasons, we were geared up," cornerback Tony Williams said.

Eric Oke, two for three on field goal attempts for the day, capped the UMass scoring with a 42 yard field goal after the Interception. Maine struck back at the end of the third quarter, on a 23 yard pass from Marsilio to James Rice, narrowing the score to 20-14.

UMass sticks to strength Rushes to second victory

By Andrew Bryce
Collegian Staff

One play late in the third quarter of Saturday's Massachusetts Maine football game depicted the choice system of the Minutemen offense.

It was third down and 30, on its own 13 yard line, and Massachusetts [2-1 overall, 1-0 in Yankee Conference] had two obvious choices — put the ball in the air, and hope to get a first down or close to one; or stay with the strength that has carried you throughout the whole year thus far, and run the ball.

The Minutemen opted for the latter, and proceeded to hand it to Ron Brockington on the ground. A gain of two failed to get the first down, and forced a punt. Maine's Steve Cates returned the punt 30 yards and produced good field position as the Black Bears [0-4, 0-3] went on to score.

Regardless, Massachusetts defeated Maine 20-14 for the first time in three years, and first since Mike Hodges became head coach in 1992. The game at Warren McGuirk Alumni Stadium was played before a Band Day crowd of 14,873, the most since the 1987 game against Holy Cross.

The Minutemen went into the game, planning to throw the ball a bit more since they were playing against the top rushing defense [allowing just 119.7 yards per game] in the Yankee Conference. Junior quarterback Andrew McNeilly did just that, throwing a season-high 18 passes, completing ten of them for 75 yards.

The option to run for 30 yards rather than pass for the first down did not surprise McNeilly.

"The way our passing game is set up, even when we do throw it a lot, we don't air it out downfield," said McNeilly. "That's not the way our offense is. I wasn't surprised, I thought that was a fairly decent call.

"Third and 30, you can really pick on any call, what the hell are you going to do?" said McNeilly.

In last year's 17-13 Maine upset over Massachusetts in Orono, ME, McNeilly threw a career-high 38 passes, completing 18 of them for 169 yards. Saturday's game was different — less air game and this time, a Minutemen victory.

"Last year, we threw the ball 38 times against Maine, and we lost — I'd rather take a win any day," said McNeilly. "There are games when I'll throw the ball 6 times, but when we win, it doesn't matter."

The main reason why the Minutemen succeeded in knocking off the team who's win against them scratched chances of making the postseason Division I-AA tournament during both the 1992 and 1993 seasons? The backfield, of course.

The Massachusetts ground game accumulated 268 rushing yards, with two backs going over the 100 yard mark on the day for the second straight week. Junior Rene Ingoglia ran the ball 26 times for 124 yards, while sophomore Frank Alessio chalked up a career-high 115 yards on 24 carries.

It was the third straight week that the All-American candidate Ingoglia outrushed the opposing team, and the second straight occasion for Alessio.

"We've got two backs that are running for over 100 yards, you gotta' win the football game," said Hodges. "You really should do that."

McNeilly, who upped his career record as a starting QB to 14-6, has proved to be steady and reliable. While Maine relied on two players to share the QB duties in Emilio Colon and Joe Marsilio (combined 9-23, 87 yards), McNeilly took every snap on the day, not to mention the first two games, as well.

Hodges was pleased with the overall offensive effort.

"We showed great poise today [on offense]," said Hodges. "This was a frustrating game to play from an offensive standpoint because you need to throw the football, and we're ahead and like to run the ball anyway.

"We were very careful with the ball," Hodges said.

Dion shines in net with Classic effort

By Mike Reiss
Collegian Staff

It was her time to shine. Her time to standout, much like the flamboyant turquoise goalie shirt on her back.

Often times, she would stand in the goalmouth, awaiting the action to make its way down the field. And when the action did come, Danielle Dion, playing in her first-ever collegiate tournament, had the final say. Yes, it was her time to shine.

Take a little over three minutes into the game, for example. Darting down the right side of the field, a William & Mary player blasted a shot to the near post. Fully extended in the air, the save was made, as she clutched the ball into her hands.

"It was one of her more active games," said head coach Jim Rudy. "On the fully stretched save, that's a ball not many goalies can catch."

But that wouldn't be the only time Dion's pony tail would be flopping around behind her. Later in the game, with a high-lofted ball headed toward the net, an outstretched hand tipped the ball over the crossbar. "A perfectly executed long range touchover," said Rudy.

Dion was undoubtedly in fine form this weekend at the UMass Classic, one of the finest soccer tournaments in the country this year. In Saturday's 2-1 win over Central Florida, and even more so in yesterday's 2-0 blanking of No. 15 William & Mary, she was a backbone in which the Minutewomen could rely on.

Minus the team's 1-0 overtime win at Rutgers earlier this season, it was the first time a consistent threat has been mounted against the freshman netminder from Atlanta, Ga.

"I felt like I actually participated," said Dion. Yet no signs of rust or nervousness were evident, as her stunning stops were proof-positive of that.

"She's very aware of what's going on out on the field," said senior defender Heidi Kocher. "She played an excellent game today. We couldn't have asked for anything more."

Dion feels the game success hinges off the team's practices, and that's where teammate Nancy Kieser plays a key role. Kieser is the team's backup goalie. "It's been great having her there," she said. "Everyday, it makes me want to work twice as hard. She pushes me in practice, and we learn a lot of things from each other."

The results have been overwhelming. Through seven games, Dion has some impressive statistics – a 0.16 GAA, .968 save percentage, 30 saves, one goal surrendered and 4.5 shutouts. The only goal given up was a counter attack tally in which Central Florida's Jennifer O'Connor slipped past the UMass defense, before unleashing a perfect shot to the upper right side of the net.

The fine quality of play is something that is quite common from goalies here at UMass. Rudy is nationally respected for his ability to work with goaltenders, the most recent being Briana Scurry, who starred on the U.S. National Team.

Turn to WOMEN'S SOCCER, page 6

Minutewomen outstanding at UMass Classic

By Candice Flemming
Collegian Staff

The UMass Classic was hyped to be a weekend filled with great soccer.

Great soccer indeed.

UMass was by far the best team in the field, and they showed it by winning the tournament.

On Saturday the Minutewomen were up against the University of Central Florida, Coach Jim Rudy's former team.

The game was a close one throughout, with both teams having great opportunities early on.

The Minutewomen had a chance to score in the first minute when Amy Powell served a ball to Melissa Mitchell but Mitchell's shot was high.

Central Florida had a chance of their own two minutes later, but the shot was saved by freshman goalkeeper Danielle Dion.

UMass finally broke the scoreless tie when Mitchell served a perfect ball to Rachel LeDue who headed it past the keeper at the 37:42 mark.

The Minutewomen kept the offensive attack going in the second half with shot after shot but could not come up with a score due to the stellar play by UCF keeper Heather Brann.

UMass had a great opportunity early in the second half when Mitchell served the ball to Nicole Roberts, who had to beat the keeper to the ball, but the shot missed.

UCF got on the board at the 67:29 mark when Jennifer O'Connor scored on a breakaway to make it a 1-1 game.

The goal by UCF seemed to change the momentum for a little bit but not enough to affect UMass' play.

"We were a little down but that just caused us to play a little harder," said LeDuc.

Both teams had more scoring chances but the game remained tied until there was 2:27 left to go and LeDue once again came through with a score to win it for UMass.

"Rachel's a winner," said Rudy. "She finds ways to win and she did [Saturday]. She wins games."

LeDuc's two goals were extra special considering it was her mother's birthday.

"Yesterday I gave her a call and I said 'I'll definitely score for you, I'll try to score for you, do something special for your birthday,'" said LeDuc.

Freshman goalkeeper Danielle Dion gave up her first goal of the season but still performed well.

"That's the best we've played and that's probably the toughest opponent we've played," said Rudy. "We played well, we minimized the opportunities defensively while we created a lot."

STEVE PEDULLA COLLEGIAN

Erin Lynch was a defensive force this weekend at the UMass Classic.

"Their keeper [Brann] kept them in it. I felt like they spent large periods of time trying to figure us out as opposed to large periods of time playing against us, and that was a big difference," Rudy said.

On Sunday the Minutewomen took on another tough foe, William & Mary. Last year in Virginia the Tribe beat UMass 2-0. Yesterday the Minutewomen returned the favor by beating them 2-0.

The game was scoreless until the 18:25 mark of the half. Heidi Kocher served a perfect ball in the air off a corner kick and Rebecca Myers headed the ball into the net.

"I remember April [Kater, assistant coach] telling me on headers to jump first and then head," said Myers. "I didn't even think, I just worried about getting my head on the ball and it just happened to go in, so it made it even better."

Myers almost had a second goal with 15 minutes left in the game when she had an open shot but missed high.

"I got excited, I saw it before it actually happened, and then I choked," said Myers.

UMass got its second goal at the 76:41 mark when Sandy Shimogaki served the ball to Erin Lynch who put it into the net.

"It was only my second goal of the season so I feel good about it," said Lynch. "I think this was the best we've played so far all year."

W & M almost got on the board with seven minutes left but Nikki Ahrenholz made a great defensive stop to help preserve the shutout for goalkeeper Dion.

"I think we played really good as a team," said Myers. "We got it together and we're getting better with each game."

In the second game on Saturday William & Mary beat the University of Connecticut 2-0 and in the second game on Sunday Connecticut beat Central Florida 2-1.

UMass finished with a 2-0 record while UConn and William & Mary finished at 1-1 and Central Florida at 0-2.

UMass' record improved to 7-0-0. They return to action next Saturday at Santa Clara.

Field hockey earns win, tie versus Temple and Rutgers

NATHAN MARTIN COLLEGIAN

Senior All-America candidate Natalie Hart scored the game winning goal in UMass' 2-1 win over Temple Friday.

By Mike Pinder
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts field hockey team suffered a disappointing weekend coming away with a 2-1 victory over Temple, and a 0-0 tie against Rutgers.

UMass was flat in both games according to Coach Megan Donnelly and it showed, nearly being stunned by a much less talented Rutgers team, while narrowly defeating Temple.

In the first game of the weekend the Minutewomen needed a late game-winning goal by senior All-American candidate Natalie Hart to quell a upset bid by the Owls.

Hart scored the game-winner off a penalty corner with 10:40 left in the game. Assisting on the goal was fellow All- American candidate Danielle Borges and junior Andrea Cabral.

Temple struck first when the Owls' Kelly Trexler scored with 3:50 left in the first half. Trexler was assisted by Cherifa Nouri and Heather Tomlin.

The goal marked a couple of firsts for the Minutewomen. It was the first time a team has scored against UMass and it was the first time a team has registered a goal against freshman goaltender Hilary Rose.

Despite the goal, Rose had another stellar performance turning aside four shots by the Owls.

Temple goalie Deb Brown played well, stopping nine shots on goal. UMass also held a 7-5 advantage in penalty corners.

UMass answered the Temple goal when freshman midfielder Amy Ott scored her second goal of the season on an unassisted strike just forty seconds later.

UMass, once again came out flat in the first half, but turned it up in the second as has been characteristic in most of the games this season.

"We came out really flat in the first half, but played a little better in the second," said Donnelly.

UMass improved to 5-0 overall and 1-0 in the A-10 going into Sunday's game against Rutgers.

In New Jersey, the Minutewomen played their worst game of the year against the Scarlet Knights.

Rutgers came out storming against a very lethargic UMass team and nearly pulled off the upset.

In Megan Donnelly's opinion it was an upset.

"This is a huge setback for us, we played very flat the whole game and didn't finish our plays," said Donnelly. "Rutgers came out on fire and I give them credit. They played hard."

In a very closely contested game the Minutewomen edged the Scarlet Knight in many statistical categories. UMass led with a 17-16 shot advantage, and a 20-9 penalty corner advantage.

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 6

Local artists featured in gallery show

Phil Schirmer's egg tempera paintings of rocks are just some of the works featured in "Literature and the Land." See Arts & Living, page 5.

Students can make a difference

A question on this fall's ballot will help student lobbyists in their quest for furthering the issues of students in the legislature. See story, page 3.

Soccer gains another win

Senior goalie Mark Wolf recorded his third shutout of the season as he led the men's soccer team to an upset win over Rutgers. (see page 9)

Extended Forecast

The forecast is looking bleak. Today: Rain with a chance of thunderstorms. Wednesday: cloudy with a chance of showers. Thursday: mostly cloudy with a chance of showers.

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 70 LOW: 60	HIGH: 78 LOW: 65	HIGH: 70 LOW: 50

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 11 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Tuesday, September 27, 1994

U.S. troops welcomed by Haiti at Port–au–Prince downtown

By Jeffrey Ulbrich
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Jubilant crowds welcomed American military police Monday as they set up shop in local police stations, including the notorious precinct that launched the coup which overthrew President Jean-Bertrand Aristide three years ago.

At the downtown dock, 221 Haitian refugees arrived home on a U.S. Coast Guard cutter, having chosen to leave the U.S. base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. They were greeted by U.S. Ambassador William Swing, given $40 in Haitian money and taken to the nearby bus station to complete their journeys.

In the countryside, Marines traveling outside Cap-Haitien, the second-biggest city, were welcomed in the towns and sugar cane fields they passed through or helicoptered over.

The United States also announced a cash-for-weapons program to start Tuesday, hoping to encourage more Haitians to turn guns taken from the hated Haitian army and police over to U.S. troops.

Many residents in Cap-Haitien did just that Sunday, apparently prompting Haiti's military-installed government to issue a communique Monday urging citizens to surrender weapons at Haitian army outposts.

American MPs seemed overwhelmed by the throngs of Aristide supporters that gathered outside the precinct building near an open-air market. It was from here that police chief Michel Francois, then a captain and now an army lieutenant colonel, kicked off the Sept. 29, 1991, coup.

Haitians used to avoid or hurry past the dreaded building where their neighbors were jailed and tortured.

Now many are becoming bolder as U.S. forces begin spreading throughout this city of 1 million.

"I wasn't scared. The Americans were with us," said a man who nevertheless, to be safe, identified himself only as Casseus, age 36.

U.S. officials announced last week that MPs would be stationed at six police stations to work side-by-side with Haitian police and try to reduce human rights abuses. By Monday, MPs were in at least three stations.

"We came here to make a presence and ... exchange ideas," said Capt. Randy Durdian of the 101st Airborne Division as his men moved into a station in suburban Petionville.

"We are here to learn from them how to do things in their own structure and show them how to do things in a democratic society so we can make the transition a smooth one."

The festive downtown gathering didn't last long, but it showed Haitians' increasing optimism that a rule of law was being enforced, and that Aristide really may be coming home soon.

At the United Nations, President Clinton lifted travel, trade and most other U.S. sanctions against Haiti on Monday and urged other nations to follow suit.

Aristide himself had urged an end to the sanctions on Sunday.

Clinton suggested the sanctions were no longer needed, with American and other forces firmly in place in the Caribbean country to enforce the U.S.-brokered agreement to restore Aristide to power by Oct. 15.

But Clinton said some sanctions would remain in force — including a freezing of bank accounts and other assets — against Haiti's military leaders and their supporters.

As American MPs entered Port-au-Prince's police headquarters, Ambassador Swing and the U.S. military commander in Haiti were at army headquarters, meeting with army chief Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras.

In suburban Petionville, crowds stopped a Haitian policeman from dragging a man to the police station, which had a U.S. military police contingent inside it.

Haitian Capt. Patrick Bastien didn't sound enthusiastic about the benefits of U.S. cooperation.

"We are happy to cooperate and hope that we will profit and benefit from it," said Bastien.

But he added, "I'm Haitian. It's not something we would want, but it is better than a forced invasion. It's going smoothly so it's fine."

At the port, a crowd of about 3,000 gathered for the arrival of the first refugees to return since the U.S. occupation began a week ago.

They are people who have chosen to return to a safer and more secure Haiti," U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schrager said. A second Coast Guard cutter was expected with more refugees Tuesday.

Food shelter caters to Amherst

By Ben Geman
Collegian Staff

Watching football. Attending church. Mowing the lawn. Washing the car and maybe going for a walk. Relaxing.

The stereotypical American Sunday is supposed to include at least one of the above.

But for dozens of low-income and homeless men, women and children, Sundays are a time to eat what may be one of their only hot meals of the week.

Every Saturday and Sunday between noon and 2 p.m., the Not Bread Alone soup kitchen serves meals to between 20 and 60 people in the basement of the First Congregational Church on Main Street in Amherst.

The volunteer program began in 1989 and receives financial support from numerous civic and religious groups, student organizations and individuals. The annual budget is about $20,000.

"Just about everyone who comes is low-income," said Project Coordinator Kim MacDonald. "Everyone's struggling. We try to help out by providing hot meals and a friendly place to be. That's as important a resource as the food."

The food Sunday included quiche, sandwiches, biscuits, salad and rice and beans, all being prepared in a bustling atmosphere quite unlike the serene religious services taking place overhead.

Sunday saw volunteers from the First Congregational Church, Amherst College and Amherst High School cooking for a larger turnout than usual. By 1 p.m., an extra table was set out.

"They're just not seen. It's very easy for them to fall between the cracks. For a lot of people, these are their one or two good meals a week," said volunteer Sandy Graham, surveying Sunday's larger-than-average turnout.

Despite the hardships faced by many of the visitors, the atmosphere remains upbeat and communal.

"These sandwiches are hard as rocks," joked one visitor. But the same sandwiches are eaten up quickly.

The Not Bread Alone soup kitchen is part of the Center for Human Development (CHD), an Amherst–based human services agency serving Western Massachusetts.

Other programs administered by the CHD include the Family Recovery Program, treating substance-abusing women and their children, the Helen Mitchell Outreach Project, providing low-income assistance and Jessie's House, a Northampton homeless shelter.

Much of the food served at Not Bread Alone comes from the Western Mass Food Bank in Hatfield. The food bank stores bulk food donations from retailers, wholesalers and government agencies like the Department of Agriculture and the military. Programs like Not Bread Alone can obtain bulk quantities for a maintenance fee of about 14 cents per pound.

Not Bread Alone also receives food from local super markets like Super Stop & Shop and Bread & Circus. Guests at the soup kitchen may also take home groceries made available and leftover food.

"It helps a lot for people that are broke like me," said one visitor Sunday afternoon. "I have no money today."

STEVE PEDULLA / COLLEGIAN

Susan Orlean, of The New Yorker.

New Yorker writer Orleans focuses on ordinary folks

By Heather Redfern
Collegian Staff

"Almost everybody I write about has never been written about and probably will never be written about again," said esteemed New Yorker writer Susan Orleans.

Orleans spoke at Bowker Auditorium last night with insights on "American Voices: Popular American Culture."

Orleans, who is currently focusing her attention on a series of American popular culture column called Popular Chronicles, said it has been goal of hers since coming to New York City four years ago to write about the lives of ordinary people, not celebrities.

"I have a desire to identify and impress upon other people a sort of dignity of ordinariness," said Orleans.

With her most recent piece depicting the lives of three professional Bulgarian tennis players, Orleans said she chooses subjects who represent a world she is interested in.

"I sometimes write about things that catch my eyes and suddenly strikes me," said Orleans.

The University of Michigan graduate began her career in journalism writing non-fiction for several small magazines in Oregon.

Since then, Orleans has published over 50 talk pieces as well as profiles ranging from the life of a Queens City cab driver to Harlem high school basketball star, Felipe Lopez, for the New Yorker.

Wanting to always live in New York City, Orleans said the city provides a diverse atmosphere with an enormous number of subjects to write about.

In order to learn who her profile subjects are and their impacts on the world no matter how small or large, Orleans said she spends vast amounts of time with her subjects absorbing and processing their personal characteristics.

As a staff member of the New Yorker since 1992, Orleans said she has been given a great deal of freedom, time and space to have her voice as a writer come through her subjects.

Prior to joining the New Yorker, Orleans wrote on several figures in the music and fashion industry as contributing editor at Rolling Stone and Vogue magazine as well as working as a columnist first for the Boston Phoenix and then for the Boston Globe Sunday Magazine. She has also written for Spy, Esquire and The New York Times Magazine.

Orleans has published two books. Red Sox and Blue Fish is a compilation of columns she wrote for the Globe Sunday Magazine. Saturday Night is a journal of essays of Orleans describing her experiences while spending Saturday evenings with different individuals in a number of communities throughout the country.

Orleans, whose first story in the

Turn to ORLEANS, Page 2

Potential jurors pass first cut after initial questioning

By Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — O.J. Simpson quietly sang, "A new day has begun ... " before facing some of his potential jurors Monday as the most-watched murder trial in U.S. history got underway. Jury candidates were identified only by numbers, and the first to be questioned was No. 0032. Simpson wore No. 32 as a college and professional football star, and that didn't go unnoticed.

"I don't know if this is an omen," said Superior Court Judge Lance Ito.

After questioning potential jurors about whether serving would be a hardship, Ito excused 112 of the first 219 called.

The judge divided those remaining into groups who said they definitely could serve and those who said they might be able to, then asked them one-by-one to explain their positions. Sixty-five had said they definitely could serve.

Of those called, 212 reported Monday and had to pass a phalenx of news crews, demonstrators and entrepreneurs outside the courthouse hawking everything from T-shirts and caps to buttons reading: "O.J. Juror Reject, Didn't Make the Cut."

Inside, they gathered in a large 11th-floor jury assembly room, and Ito introduced the principal players in the case, including Simpson. The former football star then stood up and said, "Good afternoon."

He is charged with the slaying deaths of ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman on June 12.

Simpson sat at a table, hands in his lap, and tried to make eye contact with the jury candidates, but few looked at him.

Just before they were brought in, he hummed and sang quietly. A pool reporter could make out the words, "A new day has begun ... " but didn't know the name of the song.

"This is probably the most important decision you'll make in your personal life," Ito told the group. "It's the most important decision of any American citizen. I need a fair jury."

Among those excused were at least one person who was physically disabled and some whose employers would pay for only 10 days of jury service.

"Five dollars a day doesn't quite make it," Ito said of the money the county will pay the jurors.

The trial could last up to six months and some jurors were apparently scared off by the prospect they might have to be sequestered. But the biggest problem, the judge indicated, was financial.

Those who made the first cut were told to fill out a 75-page questionnaire probing their personal lives as well as their attitudes toward the Simpson case. A groan came up when Ito told the crowd how long the form was.

bell hooks to appear for new book signing, lecture at Bowker

By Matthew Pottinger
Collegian Correspondent

bell hooks will be at the University of Massachusetts today for a book-signing and lecture. She has visited the campus before, a few years ago and is back on campus to promote her new book.

hooks, who will begin her lecture at 8 p.m. this evening at Bowker Auditorium, free of charge, will be discussing "Feminist Writing to End Racism."

bell hooks, the pseudonym used by Oberlin College English and Women's Studies professor Gloria Watkins, is a self-avowed African American feminist and renowned author on personal empowerment and the issues of race, gender and class.

Her books include Ain't I a Woman: Black Women and Feminism, and Yearning: Race, Gender, and Cultural Politics. She is also noted for her collection of essays Black Looks: Race and Representation in which she exposes the connections between racial representation and domination in literature and American pop-culture.

"It is only as we collectively change the way we look at ourselves and the world that we can change how we are seen," hooks wrote.

hooks will be signing copies of her most new book, Sisters of the Yam: Black Women and Self-Recovery, from 3 to 5 p.m. at the Arcon Desk in the basement of the Campus Center.

In Sisters of the Yam hooks discusses self esteem, self-actualization and the psychology of oppression for African American women.

The lecture will be the first this semester in a series sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Program (DVP). The DVP, which is a student run organization, is currently seeking new members.

London Bridge is being built

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Well, it's not exactly London Bridge. Sontra Yim, a junior civil engineering major, grabs screws to fasten decking to a bridge near Groffs Park in Amherst, as Mark Dogacz, also a junior civil engineering major, holds the wood in place.

UM alum awarded chair at Baylor dentist school

By Matt Yarrows
Collegian Correspondent

Dallas might be more than a hop, skip and jump from Amherst, but for University of Massachusetts alumnus Dr. David Carlson, the distance does not diminish the many fond memories he has of UMass.

In August, Baylor College of Dentistry in Dallas, Texas, named Carlson chairman of biomedical sciences.

With his appointment to the chair position, Carlson also became the director for the Center of Craniofacial Research. The center is a leader in promoting a greater understanding of treatment of disorders in the craniofacial region.

His responsibilities as chairman include coordinating the research activities of the medical center.

"This center is about supporting research in the field of craniofacial research," he said.

One of the center's aims under his direction is to bring many diverse scientists together to work toward a common goal.

Carlson has the distinction of holding Baylor College's first endowed chair. The $1.2 million chair is named after Dr. Robert E. Gaylord, a pioneer in orthodontics at Baylor.

Carlson, considered an international expert in craniofacial biology, received a doctorate in physical anthropology at UMass in 1972.

"UMass was particularly outstanding in the area of biological anthropology," Carlson said.

"The entire anthropology department was among the best in the country.

"Anthropology is such a broad field, and incorporates biology at all levels."

With a degree in anthropology, there are many opportunities available, he said.

Carlson became interested in the growth of the skull and the craniofacial region while studying as an undergraduate at UMass. This interest comprises the majority of his work today.

"The key is to understand how the face grows," he said.

Once that is understood any abnormality can be altered, Carlson said.

A deformity in a growing face is targeted, and then treated. The bones in the face are guided to grow, with various appliances and the deformity is corrected.

"Braces would be a basic example," Carlson said.

Because UMass had no health science center while he was a student, he was unable to realize the implica-

Turn to CARLSON, page 2

Police Log

Compiled by Kelly Spang from University reports

Arrests

Sept. 14
Clifford E. Yee, 20, of 636 Dedham St. in Newton was arrested on a warrant on North Pleasant Street.
Charles L. Williams, 20, of 1 Shandon Road in Dorchester was arrested on a warrant on Hicks Way.
Henry M. Stanziale Jr., 19, of Port Washington, N.Y. was arrested on a warrant on Hicks Way.

Sept. 15
Hamind Shariau, 22, of 108A Forest St. in Watertown was arrested on a warrant. He was also charged with operating an uninsured motor vehicle, operating an unregistered motor vehicle in the form of a trailer, and operating after revocation of registration plate.

Sept. 21
Christopher Manna, 23, of 207 Pishgah Road in Huntington was arrested for being a fugitive of justice. He is wanted by Florida authorities for parole violations.
Phillip Robinson, 18, of 167C Brittany Manor was arrested on a warrant.

Sept. 22
Police responded to bottles being thrown from Pierpont Residence Hall. During their investigation, police arrested David Milligan, 19, of 3 Dana Drive in Westford on an outstanding warrant from the Amherst Police Department.

Larceny

Sept. 14
Three individuals reported stolen backpacks from the Textbook Annex.
An individual reported a leather bag stolen from the Textbook Annex.

Sept. 16
An individual returned to her room in Grayson Residence Hall and found that her pocketbook was stolen valuing over $125.

Sept. 18
Two individuals reported their room in Dickinson Residence Hall had been entered and an alarm clock and a camera were stolen valuing $70.

Sept. 21
Two individuals reported their wallets stolen from their unlocked room in Cashin Residence Hall. One wallet, minus $45 cash was found outside the residence hall. The other wallet was found in the northeast area of campus by a student with $250 in cash and checks as well credit cards were stolen.

Sept. 22
An individual reported that items were stolen from his backpack somewhere on campus. His checkbook was stolen, along with a digital camera belonging to the School of Management. The estimated value was $550.

Bike Theft

Sept. 20
An individual reported his bike stolen from the rack outside of Duda Hall valuing $165.

Sept. 21
An individual reported a stolen bike from Cashin Residence Hall valuing $700.

Sept. 22
An individual from James Residence Hall reported her bike stolen.

Burglary/Breaking and Entering

Sept. 18
An individual reported a break into his vehicle in Lot 32. The radio was damaged and 25 cassettes were stolen, total value of the theft was over $200.

Sept. 21
An individual reported his room in Coolidge Residence Hall on the 20th floor had been forced open in an attempted break. Apparently nothing was taken from the room. The estimated damage was $300.

Vandalism

Sept. 14
An individual reported his vehicle in Lot 44 near Sylvan Residential Area was broken into and his stereo was stolen. The estimate of the damage and theft is over $650.

Sept. 16
An individual reported damage to the door and lock on her vehicle in the North Village parking lot. Damage was estimated at $250.

Sept. 17
Staff reported homographic graffiti written on walls in Coolidge Residence Hall.

Sept. 18
Staff reported racial graffiti written on a wall near an elevator in John Q. Adams Residence Hall.
An individual was awakened in Coolidge Residence Hall by someone kicking her door. Damage to the door and the lock was estimated at $75.

Motor Vehicle Traffic Stops

Sept. 14
Kenneth L. Lenoir, 25, of 214 King St. in Springfield was stopped on Massachusetts Avenue for operating a motor vehicle with unnecessary noise, operating a motor vehicle without a current inspection sticker, operating after revocation of registration plate, operating an uninsured motor vehicle, and operating after license or right to operate is suspended.

Sept. 15
Robert J. Hunt, 24, of 146 Montague Road in Leverett was stopped on North Pleasant Street for operating a motor vehicle while drinking alcohol, operating a motor vehicle after licenses or right to operate is suspended, and failure to have rear license plate illuminated.

Sept. 16
Malo L. Brown, 21, of 57 Beverly Lane in Springfield was stopped on Massachusetts Avenue for operating a motor vehicle negligently so as to endanger and operating a motor vehicle without license in possession.

Sept. 18
Jeffrey M. Lincoln, 20, of 24 Champlain Dr. in Hudson was stopped on Phillips Street for operating after his license or right to operate is suspended, operating a motor vehicle without license in possession, and failure to stop at a stop sign.
Gregory S. Kett, 22, of 100 Tower St. in Hudson was stopped on Fearing Street for operating under the influence of alcohol, failure to stay within marked lines, and failure to comply with tire tread depth.

Sept. 20
Shawn C. Sudler, 21, of 23 Abbey St. in Chicopee was stopped for receiving a stolen motor vehicle, operating a motor vehicle without a license, operating an unregistered motor vehicle, attaching plates to a motor vehicle, operating an uninsured motor vehicle, failure by owner to have the motor vehicle inspected, operating a motor vehicle with defective equipment.

Sept. 21
Christian Kunciw, 23, of 16 Falls Lane in Sunderland was stopped for operating under the influence of liquor, speeding, and operating a motor vehicle with defective equipment.
Sheila Randolph, 25, of 55 Algonquin Road in Newton was stopped for operating after suspended license which was her second offense and for operating a motor vehicle without a current inspection sticker.

Sept. 22
Christopher Tunney, 21, of 1190 North Pleasant St. was stopped for operating a motor vehicle without a current inspection sticker and operating after license or right to operate was suspended.

Annoying Phone Calls

Sept. 16
An individual of Lincoln Avenue reported receiving several annoying calls from a male subject.

Sept. 18
An individual of Sunset Avenue reported a call from a male subject who offered her money.

Sept. 19
An individual on Sunset Avenue reported numerous annoying calls from a former boyfriend.

Sept. 21
An individual reported receiving several calls from a male subject that were sexual in content in Whitmore Building.

Motor Vehicle Theft

Sept. 17
An individual reported his vehicle stolen from Lot 22 on University Drive. The vehicle was later recovered in Hartford, Conn.

Sept. 19
An individual reported her 1984 Honda stolen from Lot 40.

Suspicious Activity

Sept. 18
An 18-year-old individual at the bus stop by the Fine Arts Center was place in protective custody.

Sept. 19
Staff reported find a 38 .cal bullet outside of a room on the third floor of Leach Residence Hall. Investigation revealed a subject employed by an Armored car company inadvertently dropped it from his coat pocket.

Lost and Found Property

Sept. 19
Staff reported finding a 22 .cal bullet in one of the classrooms on Hicks Way.

Annoying Behavior

Sept. 19
Four individuals reported a subject entered their room in Kennedy Residence Hall and took a case of beer from them. The subject and the property were located.

Noise Complaint

Sept. 21
Responding to a loud music complaint coming from a room in Hamlin Residence Hall, police confiscated a small amount of marijuana. Officers advised the occupants of the laws and policies of the possession of drugs.

Accident

Sept. 21
A vehicle, to avoid another vehicle making a turn, pulled into the left lane of travel on Commonwealth Avenue and collided with a third vehicle which was also northbound. there were no injuries. One operator was cited. The damaged was estimated at $2,500.
Two vehicles collided at the crossover leading to President's Drive on Massachusetts Avenue. One operator, Sherry Kramf, 20, of Livingstone, N.J. complained of minor injuries. An ambulance responded, but did not take her to the hospital. One operator was cited. The estimated damage was over $1,750.

Drug Offense

Sept. 21
Alan Maziarz, 17, of 26 Lantern Lane was arrested for illegal possession of a Class D substance (marijuana), possession of a Class D substance with intent to distribute.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, C/o the News Editor.

Tuesday, Sept. 27

Lecture — The Dutch Vision of Italy: Dirck Van Bergen's Landscape with Animals and Figure.
Mead Art Museum, Amherst College, Free, 12:15 p.m.

Community — Campus Pond Cleanup, Come on down and volunteer!
Campus Pond, 7 p.m., Information: 545-0444.

Film — Not At The Mall: A series of film experiences you won't find anywhere else, 7 p.m., Bartlett Hall Auditorium, UMass, Free.

Lecture — Town and Country: The Concept of Landscape in Early Antwerp ArtMaking.
Wright Hall auditorium, Smith College, 7:30 p.m.

Lecture — Feminist Writing to End Racism, Belle Hooks will be speaking, Bowker Auditorium, UMass, 8 p.m., Free, 545-0046.

Literature — Amherst College creative writing center, fall reading series presents Bernard Cooper.
Wootton's, North Pleasant Street, Amherst, 8 p.m., Free.

Pre-Medica — Elections for officers and general information, all classes and majors welcome, Newman Center, Room 1, 7 p.m.

Meeting — Biosci, The Biological Sciences Student Association is holding its first general membership meeting, 7 p.m., Morrill 203.

Meeting — Cannabis Reform Coalition, general meeting.Campus Center room 101, 7:30 p.m., Information: 665-4910.

Wednesday, Sept. 28

Lecture — Lesbian, Gay & Bisexual Studies Lecture Series, Warren Blumenfeld will speak.
Campus Center room 904, UMass, 12 p.m. to 1:30 p.m., Free.

Meeting — UMass Grenadier and Gaming Society, Open House, 7 p.m. to 12 a.m..
Campus Center room 101, Information: 527-0252.

Thursday, Sept. 29

Music — Recital, Monica Jakuc, fortepiano, Sweeney Concert Hall, Smith College, 4:15 p.m. to 5:05 p.m., Free.

Film — Fantastic Cinema: Legends, Myths, Adventures, Herter Hall, UMass, Presented by the University Gallery, 7:30 p.m., Free.

Concert — Edmund Battersby, fortepiano.
Sweeney Concert Hall, Smith College, 8 p.m., Call 527-7664 for admission prices.

Special Event — Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Speakers Bureau Orientation.
Returning members orientation, Crampton House, UMass, Free, 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m., Information: 545-4824.

French Club — The French club will be meeting at 7 p.m., The Cafe Mediterrancan, Amherst, New members are encouraged to come.

Friday, Sept. 30

Pep Rally — Get psyched for Homecoming, Southwest horseshoe, Passing Strangers and many other talents performing, 5:30 p.m.

Film — The family, tearjerker classic E.T., Gamble Auditorium, Mount Holyoke College, Show times: 7 p.m. and 9:15 p.m., $2.50.

Film — She's Gotta Have it, a very sexy movie, Campus Center Theater, Amherst College, Show times: 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m., $1.75.

Music — Annual Mutiband Pops, showcase of 500 performers, Mullins Center, UMass, 8 p.m., Call TicketMaster for prices at 733-2500 or call Mullins Center Box office at 545-0505.

Theater — Brenda Wong Aoki in The Queen's Garden, Bowker Auditorium, UMass, 8 p.m., $6 or $5.50 for students and elders.

Concert — James David Christie, organ.
Abbey Chapel, Mount Holyoke College, 8 p.m., Call 527-7664 for admission prices.

Pianist — Ruth Laredo, Buckley Recital Hall, Amherst College, 8 p.m., Free.

Other Activities and Upcoming Events

Volunteers Needed - Campus Pond Cleanup at UMass, Sept. 27 & 28, from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. T-Shirts and refreshments will be provided, Call: 545-2317.

Community Service - The Companion Program is looking for volunteers. Call: 253-2591.

Internships - MASSPIRG is offering internships for the fall semester. Earn course credits. Information: 423B Student Union or call 545-0199.

Earn Credits - The Peer Education Program on Sexual Harassment is recruiting 30 undergraduate men and women for its one-credit training session this semester, Information: call Mike at 546-0365.

The Homework Club — volunteers needed to help in after school program to help children from non-English speaking family do their homework. Information: contact Scott, Heap or Seng at 253-0696.

■ Orleans

continued from page 1

New York Times covered how Bennoton employees train their employees on how to fold sweaters, said even the most ordinary of places can be absolutely astonishing.

The writer, who began her career at the magazine by submitting clips to an impersonal receptionist, reminded the audience that even the most ordinary story can be made poetic.

Orleans went on to remind writers to rely on their memories and to write what was felt at the moment of meeting the subject.

"Being a journalist means holding yourself to a certain standard," said Orleans, "Coming back and writing what you felt you saw to me, is the morality of writing."

■ Carlson

continued from page 1

tions of what he was studying until later.

Prior to joining Baylor College of Dentistry in 1993, He was a professor of orthodontics at the University of Michigan's School of Dentistry.

The field of craniofacial research and development is a growing one, Carlson said.

New developments are being implemented daily in this career avenue.

Most of the field is treatment- oriented, he said, but he is mainly concerned with the research aspect. and hopes to do more with it.

Carlson said he still remains fond of the University.

"UMass was key in my development," he said.

Sinn Fein leader visits with Rosa Parks

By David Goodman
Associated Press

DETROIT — Irish nationalist leader Gerry Adams met with American civil rights pioneer Rosa Parks on Monday, thanking her for civil rights inspiration that spread far beyond U.S. shores. Adams is president of the Sinn Fein party, the political wing of the Irish Republican Army. He is making his first U.S. tour since the Clinton administration lifted a travel ban issued against him because of IRA terrorism.

The IRA last month declared a cease-fire as efforts toward a compromise between Britain, Ireland and the two sides in Northern Ireland progressed.

"We have in Ireland right now a very great opportunity to build upon the peace process," Adams said.

The black civil rights battles of the 1960s in the United States inspired nationalists in Northern Ireland, Adams said.

"As a teen-ager in Belfast, we took succor from the people in this country who struggled for civil rights," he said. The voice of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. "was brought into our homes through the medium of television."

He also spoke of Parks' refusal in 1955 to give up a bus seat to a white man, which sparked the Montgomery, Ala., bus boycott and opened the modern civil rights movement.

"That sent a message of how one person's action can start a whole mass movement," Adams said.

At a City Hall ceremony, Adams gave Parks with a Waterford crystal bowl.

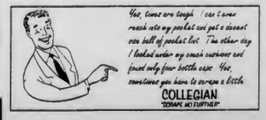
"I'm very happy to receive this bowl," said Parks, 81. "I applaud the civil rights struggle in Ireland and here in the United States."

"In other communities where smoking prohibitions have gone into effect, the restaurant owners' gross volume has declined precipitously, some people say up to 30 percent," said Philip J. Shine, a lawyer for the

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian.

Your student newspaper which reaches more than 17,000 people. Do you know where we are?
We are located in the glorious sunlit filled Campus Center Basement and we are having visitors. Yes, visitors.
You and all your friends are invited down to visit the Collegian offices, meet the staff, and schmooze with the people who put out your daily paper. Those chicken pucks just wouldn't taste the same without the comics page, would they?
On Friday, September 30 (that's this Friday) from 12 p.m. to 4 p.m. we are having an Open House and we love visitors.
So come by and visit us. We get so lonely down here (by the way, the sunlit thing is a lie. There really are no windows, so we can't look out on campus. So we want campus to come to us.)
Come and hang out. See you there.

Bob commands you to eat a big serving of live wiggly completely indifferent clams — Collegian... What's with the clams?



Last time we taught / ate some mussels ate my pocket and got a discount. was full of pockets but The other day / looked under my couch cushions and found only four bottle caps. Not enough for a meal. You sometimes have to scrape a little.
COLLEGIAN
"ESCAPE NO FURTHER"

Rafters
SPORTS BAR & RESTAURANT
SHARK NIGHT
☞ IS HERE
Single Elimination Pool Tournament
• Free Pizza for Players
• $2.00 Entrance Fee
Sign Up: 7:30-8:00
WINNER TAKE ALL!!!
University Drive & Amity
Amherst • 549-4040

$129/Semester
Co-Ed FLEX FITNESS CENTER AMHERST, MA Co-Ed
The Valley's Leading Weight Training Facility
175 University Drive • Amherst • 253-3539
WALKING DISTANCE

DON'T BE LEFT OUT IN THE COLD . . .
THIS WINTER . . . JOIN THE . . .
UMASS SKI CLUB
SKI CLUB MEETING
GENERAL INFORMATION
7 PM SUNDAY OCT 2, 1994
EARTHFOODS RM
Student Union

Student lobbying to be on ballot

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

Student Advocacy Agencies at the University of Massachusetts have a particular interest in the upcoming Student Senate elections.

This Thursday, September 29, the ballots for the student senator nominees will also include a question regarding policy on student lobbying.

The question states: Should the Advocacy Agencies of the Student Government Association [Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA), Commuter Services and Housing Resource Center (CSHRC), Student Legal Services Office, and the Office of Third World Affairs (OTWA)] be designated as official representatives of the student body for purposes of promoting, opposing or influencing legislation and/or actions of governmental officials for matters affecting the general welfare of students?

Current legislative policy states that students working for a student organization must be registered as lobbyists, according to Lynn Robitaille, student coordinator of SCERA.

The policy restricts the power of the advocacy agencies on campus to work for the student body, said Robitaille.

"The laws against lobbying cause students working for Registered Student Organizations (RSO) to register to lobby, which costs money," said Robitaille. "We need to be recognized by the students as their representatives."

If students turn out and vote yes on referendum Question 1, agencies on campus like SCERA will be able to better work for the students, said

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Lynne Robitaille, of the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA).

Robitaille.

The referendum would allow student working for the advocacy agencies to be hired by their organization to lobby for a certain issue, according to Robitaille.

"It would give any UMass student who wants to work for advocacy agencies more power to lobby the statehouse," said Robitaille.

The referendum will help lobby for the students in areas such as tuition and classes, renovations for the buildings on campus, increases and financial aid, and off campus housing, said Robitaille.

"We will be able to influence state legislation, lobby for the UMass budget, and financial aid," said Robitaille. "We can even help commuters control rent by a state law so landlords cannot raise cost outrageously."

According to Mirran Raphaely, president of the Student Government Association, the SLSO Advisory Committee voted to endorse the referendum.

Robitaille sees no problem with passing the referendum but urges students when they are voting for the senators, to vote yes on Question 1.

Restaurant owners sue Northampton over smoking ban

NORTHAMPTON, Mass. (AP) — A group of restaurateurs in this gastronomic mecca are suing the city over its plan to ban smoking in restaurants.

One restaurant owner said Monday he would even accept a regulation forcing him to post a sign warning patrons that his restaurant welcomes smokers — as long as freedom of choice is preserved.

"This is a free country, and let people be accountable for themselves," said the restaurateur Claudio Guerra, who owns both the Spoleto restaurant and Pizzeria Paradiso. He said he is a nonsmoker.

In the lawsuit filed Friday in Hampshire Superior Court, nine restaurant owners ask that a judge strike down the no-smoking regulation adopted July 18 by the city's three-member Board of Health. It takes effect Nov. 1.

The restaurant owners say the ban on all smoking would put them at a disadvantage with nearby communities that allow smoking. The city, which is home to Smith College and a busy tourist trade, is known around the region for the number, variety and quality of its restaurants.

"In other communities where smoking prohibitions have gone into effect, the restaurant owners' gross volume has declined precipitously, some people say up to 30 percent," said Philip J. Shine, a lawyer for the

A super hero for the 90s

Craig Stevens (Captain Condom), a public health graduate student, comes to the rescue and hands out condoms to Aaron J., a first-year journalism and communication student.

Police provide Scope to aid campus

Cavanaugh heads push to better inform students, staff

By Heather Redfern
Collegian Staff

UMass police and the Division of Public Safety are looking for new ways to improve communications with staff members of the University's Housing Services.

By contributing articles to the University Health Services Magazine, Scope, UMass police and members of the Division of Public Safety will work to inform housing staff of current events and policies, said UMass Courts and Records Officer Phil Cavanaugh.

"Scope is an organ internal to housing services. it is by staff, for staff," said Associate Director for Housing Services David Cambel.

Scope produces 800 issues monthly to inform resident directors, resident assistants and housing staff of recent occurrences in the residence halls as well as to describe various activities of staff members.

Cambel said the contribution of articles from UMass police and the Division of Public Safety will provide resident directors and resident assistants information to share with students living in the residence halls.

Having only contributed one article in the monthly magazine, Cavanaugh said he along with the Division of Public Safety and UMass police will make all efforts to increase entries this year eventually becoming regular participants in Scope.

Last year, Cavanaugh wrote of the consequences of being a minor in possession of alcohol.

Cavanaugh informed readers of an immediate arrest and fines if caught as a minor in possession of alcohol.

An individual arrested must pay a non-returnable $25 bail commissioner fee, a $50 fee if it is the individual's first offense, and a standard $30 victim witness fee.

Money from the victim witness fee goes to fund the victim witness attorney program.

In the case of illegal transportation of alcohol as a minor, there is a potential loss for the individual to lose his/her drivers license for 90 days.

According to Cavanaugh, future articles will discuss the activities and programs of the Division of Public Safety.

"All areas in the Division of Public Safety will have an input," said Cavanaugh.

In addition, Cavanaugh said future articles will inform staff members of the results of those who cause damage in residence halls and throughout campus.

According to Cavanaugh, the housing services staff will be informed of restitution received by the University residence halls after an individual has been found guilty and fined for damaging University and fellow student property.

$15,000 of restitution fees were distributed to different areas of the University last year, said Cavanaugh.

Cavanaugh plans to discuss the provisions of the drunk driving law as well as the lowering of the legal blood alcohol content in Scope's November issue.

University offers HELP to theft victims

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

The Division of Public Safety at the University of Massachusetts has put together a program to safe-guard materials and reduce theft of property. The program, Help Eliminating Losing Possessions (HELP), works through identification, marking and listing of valuables.

Operation Identification makes electric engravers accessible at the Division of Public Safety, free of charge. The service is available to everyone on campus, Larry Holmes, associate director of public safety, said.

The electric engraver is used to inscribe a social security number or license number on a visible and irremovable part of the article, preferably the bottom or underneath portion. Once the article is engraved, the owner is urged to put a card on the door to forewarn prospective thieves of the engraved materials.

"The key is to prevent the crime before it occurs, and this program offers a strong deterrent in preventing theft," Holmes said.

Normally, University bar codes are tagged on materials and listed with Property and Inventory Control. Only recently has Public Safety become involved with the process, Holmes said.

With enlistment of the new program, owners receive a bar code and get their property engraved at the same time.

"The whole purpose is to work in tandem with the different departments to prevent theft," Holmes said. "It's so simplistic that people overlook it."

Some of the most commonly-stolen items on campus are televisions, stereos, cameras, radios, hub caps, bicycles, typewriters, musical instruments, hand tools, calculators and sporting goods. Most of these items can be engraved.

A large proportion of thefts on campus occur during the daytime from unlocked offices. It only takes a thief anywhere from 18 to 60 seconds to remove some items, according to the Division of Public Safety.

This program is meant to protect people's belongings while they are on campus and after they leave as well, Holmes said. If the equipment is stolen off-campus, the Division of Public Safety will still be able to track it.

"This program helps us to support the University in providing a quality education by insuring its resources," Holmes said.

Health care plan stalled by legislature

November elections will finally decide issue for Americans

By Christopher Connell
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Health care reform, moribund for weeks, was pronounced dead Monday for this session of Congress by Senate Majority Leader George J. Mitchell.

The Maine Democrat blamed Republicans, saying he had been unable to find the 60 votes needed to end an inevitable GOP filibuster.

"It is clear that health insurance reform cannot be enacted this year," Mitchell said at a news conference.

Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole denied the Republicans were to blame and said it was overwhelming public opposition, not parliamentary roadblocks, that undid the Democrats' health plans. "They never had 50 votes for any of their plans," the Kansas Republican said.

In New York, where he was attending a United Nations session, President Clinton said of the defeat of his major domestic initiative: "I am very sorry that this means Congress isn't going to reform health care this year. But we are not giving up on our mission to cover every American and to control health care costs. Although we have not achieved our goal this year, Hillary and I are proud - and our allies should be proud as well - that we were able to bring this debate further than it has ever progressed," the president said.

"There is just too much at stake for all the American people and we have come too far to just walk away now," he added in a statement.

The battle over health reform now will be played out in the November elections.

Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas, who led the conservative opposition to the Clinton plan and its descendants, said he was "grateful that the president and the Democrats have now abandoned their crusade for government-run health care, at least for this year."

He said voters should "express their opinion on health care in the November election by electing or rejecting Clinton allies at the polls."

Other Democrats echoed Mitchell's charges of Republican obstructionism. They said the problems of the 39 million Americans without health insurance won't disappear and they would fight for changes next year.

"The health care crisis has not disappeared. The situation is worse than it was a year ago," Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said in an emotional speech on the Senate floor. He vowed, "I will never give up the fight.'

House Majority Leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., said, "Reforming our health care system is one issue that will not go away."

He vowed to "press the fight for guaranteed, affordable health care in the coming Congress."

"Congress has done the right thing by not rushing health care reform," said Richard L. Lesher, president of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

In pulling the plug, Mitchell ignored advice from liberals who wanted to push forward a stripped down bill covering children, if only to force Republicans to vote against it.

The action came one year and four days after Clinton went before Congress to unveil his vision of "health care that's always there" — guaranteed insurance for all Americans regardless of their health or wealth. Hillary Rodham Clinton helped draft the plan and was its foremost saleswoman.

Clinton ran into a wall of opposition from small businesses, the insurance industry and others alarmed by his 1,342-page proposal.

It featured mandatory employer contributions, compulsory health insurance purchasing alliances for most Americans and standby price controls on insurance premiums.

Last January, during his State of the Union address to Congress, the president waved his pen and threatened to veto any bill that failed to guarantee private insurance for all American.

Clinton later softened the rhetoric. By July, he was telling the nation's governors that 95 percent coverage might be good enough. He made clear his willingness to compromise.

Democrats pushed four separate bills through committees in the House and Senate but they were unable to muster a clear majority for any of them.

TOTAL FITNESS
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES • TREADMILLS • LIFESTEPS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • FREE WEIGHTS NORDIC TRACK
STUDENT SPECIAL $139
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST AEROBICS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 WEST ST. ON BUS ROUTE OPEN 7 DAYS

Get Involved!
with campus health issues
SHAB*
• Sponsor health projects
• Represent student health care concerns
• Review UHS budget
• Serve on UHS Search Committees
• Meet other students interested in health care
COME SEE WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT
Meeting: WEDNESDAY, September 28
Where: UHS Room 302
Time: 5:30 P.M.
*Student Health Advisory Board (est. 1971)
University Health Services

You know Bobby, copying these answers from our family encyclopedia for your science project reminds me of my college days. Ahh.... those were the good ole' days, cheat sheets on the inside of my Ivy league muffler, paying off the students at the state school to take my exams. Summa Cum Laude! God bless those snivilling staties! I did love them so!
DAILY COLLEGIAN
State school intelligence free every weekday

Immigration Law
Hans & Curran, P.C.
30 Years of Experience in Immigration Law
1163 Main Street Springfield, MA 781-6370
13 Old South St Northampton, MA 584-3232
50 Congress St Boston, MA (617)722-0043
Free Consultation for Five College Students/Faculty

Hunan Garden Restaurant 湖南園酒家
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over; $2 charge for orders under $15
NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet Every Night 5-8 p.m.
Sunday Brunch 11 a.m.-3 p.m.
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3 p.m. - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup
TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

Welcome back to lecture halls, all-nighters, pizza breakfasts, and Kinko's.

with this coupon
2½¢ copies
Offer applies to self-serve, black and white 81/2" x 11" copies on 20lb white bond. One coupon per customer per visit. Not valid with other offers. Good through October 31, 1994 at the Kinko's listed.
kinko's the copy center
AMHERST: 220 N. Pleasant St. 253-2543 Open 24 Hours
NORTHAMPTON: 34 Bridge St. 585-5560 (Across from the Post Office) HOURS: 8am to 12

DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Parsenne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Gainey Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jen Lopo Arts & Living Editor Andrew Beyer, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Position vacant Black Affairs Editor Position vacant Women's Issues Editor
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor Maria E. Hefner Editorial Production Manager
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Position vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Jim Roode Circulation Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Eric Abeiram Subscriptions Manager
Evelyn A. Deleon Multicultural Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Kelly Spang News Editor Merry Pappas Classified Advertising
Nathan K. Martell Photography Editor Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Opinion/Editorial

Free speech is disappearing

Peter Orvetti

The preservation of free expression has never been easy. Attempts to curtail it go as far back as the Alien and Sedition Acts of John Adams's presidency, on through the union–smashing of the 1870s, the Red Scare, the imprisonment of opponents of World War I, and McCarthyism, to name just a few. But today, we are witnessing something new: repression of free speech from the left, as well as the right. We college students like to call it being Politically Correct.

Nowhere is it stronger than in the Pioneer Valley. This is no surprise; it is targeted at fairly liberal colleges. At the University of Massachusetts last year alone, we witnessed abortion–rights supporters, pro–choice in abortion but not opinion, oppose the Collegian's right to sell advertising to an anti–choice group. In contrast, opponents of hate speaker Louis Farrakhan did not question the minister's right to his disturbing views, they just peacefully asked others not to adopt them.

Political Correctness, though, is something else altogether. It is not an effort to create equality in language. It is not a silly attempt by flaky pseudo–lefties. Rather, it is a right– wing plot.

It sounds crazy. P.C. is too stigmatized, too unrealistic, too... well, too trivial to be a plot! That is precisely the point.

Over the past few decades, speech has rightly evolved in a non–racist, non–sexist direction. Folks who were called Negroes thirty years ago are now Blacks, or African– Americans. Hispanics (a term which, literally, applies only to people from Haiti or the Dominican Republic, not Mexicans, Puerto Ricans and so on) are Latinos and Latinas. Women are no longer girls, chicks or babes. Conservative elements noticed this trend, and created P.C.

It was a brilliant scheme. This trend would be fostered to extreme proportions, and while the liberals were busy coming up with new words — and condemning anyone who did not use them, thereby fracturing their own political alliances — the right wing could attend to other business. Meanwhile, the right could also use P.C. against the liberals, attacking it as a sign of their excesses.

It worked. Liberals — well–meaning ones — ought to glance up from their newly–edited dictionaries and see what is going on. The Christian Right now controls the Republican Party in more than a dozen states. Anti–gay measures are on the ballot throughout the country. Health care is a lost dream. A Democratic president just signed a bill into law that allows execution for 60 new offenses. Pathological criminal Ollie North is the front–runner for a U.S. Senate seat in Virginia. Among the frontrunners for the 1996 GOP presidential nomination are Pat Robertson, Pat Buchanan and Dan Quayle. And the liberals are fighting over whether the word should be spelled "womyn" or "wimmin."

P.C. went even further than the right had hoped. Now, liberals too are calling for censorship. While some colleges may now expel students for uttering certain words, left legal scholars Catherine MacKinnon and Andrea Dworkin have crafted a measure which would outlaw pornography as sexist and discriminatory. Their plan, which has been criticized by no less an authority than First Amendment attorney Floyd Abrams, has been enacted in Canada. There, shipments of books have been stopped at the border, and offending materials not allowed into the country. Banned materials include novels, magazines and even a cookbook.

The word is less important than the intention. That is what we have all forgotten, in our pursuit of language that will offend no one. When the right–wing wins the White House, will it matter if it is "Blacks" or "people of color" who make up a disproportionate amount of those sentenced to death? Will it matter if "women" or "wimmin" lose their reproductive rights? Will it matter that we once had freedoms, including the freedom to say whatever we like, when those freedoms are gone?

Peter Orvetti is a Collegian columnist.

Simpson case is more than hype

Arthur Stapleton Jr.

Orenthal James Simpson — guilty or not guilty? That is the question many of us with delusions of grandeur would like to be answered.

Yet, unlike on many of the soap operas pre–empted throughout this whole trial, the ending of the Simpson case will not be as clear–cut — at least in the courtroom.

This soap opera mentality pervades our society; when the audience votes in for the season premiere of Melrose Place, there is a reason: something is always going on, keeping us from changing the channel. We follow the lives of Amanda, Michael and Sydney, their torment and absolutely ridiculous problems.

All summer long, with the O.J. trial, we wanted to see some action, just like on Melrose.

Society expected to see Simpson vindicated or convicted when the pre–trial hearings were aired on every channel. Anywhere we look this week, we'll see O.J., Robert Shapiro, Marcia Clark and Judge Lance Ito.

Where else but in America would throngs of people hold their breath to find out what Kato Kaelin has to say?

Was the bloody glove planted on the Simpson estate? If O.J. didn't do it, who did? If Simpson was the murderer, how did he do it?

People created O.J. jokes, O.J. t–shirts, O.J. comic books, O.J. bumper stickers, O.J. lighters, Kato on talk–shows, an O.J. made–for–T.V. movie ... however, there was one major problem: these people were not on a cast of a mini–series. The case will not take place on the season finale and resolve itself on the premiere in four months.

We didn't get an O.J. verdict, so, in our minds, we created one. It's not totally the fault of the media; it is the fault of the audience which demands the coverage. The broadcasting system deals with television, sponsors and the audience.

If there isn't going to be an audience, there is not going to be a show — if a tree falls and no one's around to hear it, it didn't happen.

All of this hoopla about the Simpson trial is irrelevant.

Make no mistake about it — this case is a front–page story. O.J. Simpson will be the lead story on the nightly news, not because people will watch but because it is news. Don't let anyone tell you that this case is all hype.

The courtroom drama which began yesterday and is unfolding right before our very eyes is anything but a drama.

Judge Lance Ito's verdict will have legal ramifications, some of which will impact our judicial system in the long run. To blow this case off as just another tabloid coup to sell newspapers is a joke.

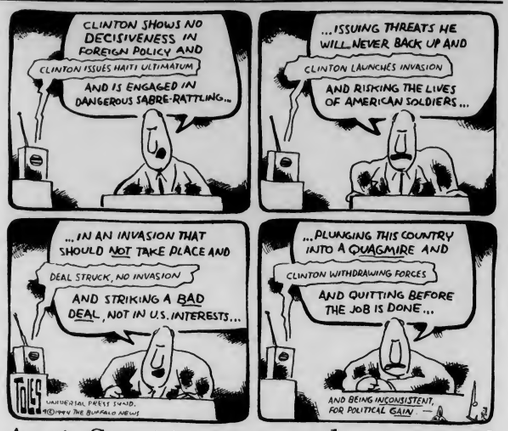
The media is society's scapegoat. In this case, though, the trial and its ramifications will transcend newspapers, radio and television.

Society will be watching, from the jury selection right on down to the verdict, not because of the media, but due to the celebrity of the defendant.

The people are used to seeing Simpson on the field reporting from football games; now they are going to see him on trial. Ito will continue to try to keep the media out, yet it wasn't the newspapers which made this such a big story.

Members of the media didn't build the case against O.J. Simpson; the state of California did. It's similar to leading a horse to water — it may not drink but is more likely to take a sip if you submerse its head in it.

Arthur Stapleton Jr. is a Collegian columnist.



CLINTON SHOWS NO DECISIVENESS IN FOREIGN POLICY AND CLINTON ISSUES HAITI ULTIMATUM
AND IS ENGAGED IN DANGEROUS SABRE-RATTLING...
...ISSUING THREATS HE WILL NEVER BACK UP AND CLINTON LAUNCHES INVASION
AND RISKING THE LIVES OF AMERICAN SOLDIERS...
...IN AN INVASION THAT SHOULD NOT TAKE PLACE AND DEAL STRUCK, NO INVASION
AND STRIKING A BAD DEAL, NOT IN U.S. INTERESTS...
...PLUNGING THIS COUNTRY INTO A QUAGMIRE AND CLINTON WITHDRAWING FORCES
AND QUITTING BEFORE THE JOB IS DONE...
TOILS
HISTORICAL PRESS SYND. ©1994 THE BUFFALO NEWS
AND BEING INCONSISTENT FOR POLITICAL GAIN

Anti–Semitism cuts a deep wound

Geri Sahn

Throughout my entire life, people have always asked me what my nationality is. I have black hair with a light olive complexion, so people want to know if I am Greek or Italian. I'm not either.

Then there is the "what is Sahn?" question. Well, it's a last name with an origin that I'm not too sure of.

And then there is the question, "Isn't Jewish your nationality?" Judaism is a religion, not a nationality. But this is the question, that for a long time, I dreaded to get asked.

Up until college, I feared that if someone knew I was Jewish they would treat me differently. When you are young, fitting in is very important. I didn't want to be considered different.

Jewish people are minorities, yet you can't tell is someone is Jewish externally; unless of course they wear a yarmulke or are a Hasidic Jew. So whenever people talked about religion, I was very hush–hush about mine.

My family always used to ask me why I wasn't proud of my religion. Pride had nothing to do with how I was feeling. I was just confused.

For many years in Hebrew school we studied the Holocaust. I could never comprehend why "my people" were being killed. I wondered if the same thing repeated, would I be killed?

Growing up I never wanted to be discriminated again. Which is why when people asked me when my birthday was, and I said December 22, I agreed how I would be gypped on presents since my birthday was so close to Christmas. I never bothered to stop and say I celebrated Hannukah.

In many cases, I gave up on trying to explain my religion to people. It was very difficult to talk about the Jewish holidays when they would ask, "what is that cha ha ha ha nuu ca holiday anyway?" I was never angry. I just accepted it with the attitude of "why bother."

So I came to college and I grew up in many ways. I began to appreciate my religion, my heritage, my family and learning more about who I was.

I started to become proud of being Jewish and learning about its special meaning. I also began talking about the Jewish religion with my close friends; who for the most part were not Jewish.

And in the height of not being scared of saying, "I don't celebrate Christmas, I celebrate Hannukah," I had an anti– Semitic experience.

This summer I worked at a bank in a small town. It was the type of workplace where everyone knew everything and the same people would come in every day. But one day, which I will always remember, a 17–year– old boy came in to cash his paycheck.

The check was for $115.24 and I was about to give him the change when he told me to keep it. I said to him that I had to give him the 24 cents because my drawer had to come out even at the end of the day.

"Well you keep it, or I'll throw it on the ground for the rest of the Jews to get," he said.

Before I knew it he left the bank with his attitude, and I was left with tears coming out of my eyes. I know that these remarks are constantly said by people, but to have them said to your face is a completely different experience.

It's sad that after finally overcoming my fear of being Jewish, something like this had to happen to me. But I have realized that things like this always have happened, and probably will happen again.

I'm happy to say that I didn't return back to my old fears. So I didn't change. But what really bothers me is that he didn't either.

He had no clue that what he was saying was wrong. The whole incident happened too quickly for me to actually say anything to the kid. But what would I say anyway.

Geri Sahn is a Collegian staff member.

Bikers and pedestrians both beware

Henry Brier

"Any recreation has dangers. . ." stated Newsweek magazine (June 20, 1994), as it then proceeded to itemize those activities which necessitateu medical care. I found the timing and content of this article ironic. The United States Consumer Product Safety Commission had tallied the specific recreational events which had required emergency room visits, based on 1992 data.

In ascending statistical order, the top three listed were football with almost 250,000, baseball with nearly 286,000, and bicycling resulted in more than twice as many injuries as its predecessor. Just about 650,000 bike riders had mishaps.

Unfortunately, the accidents and their related injuries were not noted. It would have been interesting to read about how they had happened, so that individuals who partake in each respective sport could gain knowledge which would be useful in attempting to avoid potential agony.

Although lessons are most profound when they are primary experiences, please heed my words: bikers beware and beware of bikers.

Football is a game by which strategy compels players to forcibly manhandle the opposition, thus, injuries such as a dislocated shoulder occur.

Baseball players are not imposed to collide with the opposition, although injuries result, one of which may be torn ligaments. Bicyclists, according to the USCPSC, accounted for more than the combined number of football and baseball–related injuries.

At 9:55 a.m. on Monday, May 9 of 1994, my bike ride proved to be fateful. It was less than a week before last semester's final examinations, and I was coasting down Worcester path from Orchard Hill towards Worcester Dining Commons.

While walking this route takes at least 5 minutes, bicycling is far more efficient. Without exaggeration, getting from Dickinson to the D.C. takes no more than 25 seconds. Additionally, an adrenaline rush is a direct result of the expedient and successful venture.

What occurred was that a woman, who had been walking straight down the path, suddenly cut sideways at the wrong time, and slammed into me. The left side of my jaw absorbed the initial impact of her right shoulder, and I went flying off my bike. This accident was paradoxical because the pedestrian struck the biker.

Deep lacerations on my chin, left forearm and right shin were comparatively nothing. She, whom had been standing upright all along, began to whimper, and I am not sure why. As she walked away and abandoned any responsibility and all respectability, I felt a dull throb in my right wrist, and then observed the formation of a largely–swollen sphere. University Health Services x–rays later indicated four fractures in the dominant hand I needed to take finals.

The day after my last of four oral finals, some of which were more pointed than others, I found myself in an operating room at Brigham & Women's Hospital in Boston. My first day of summer break entailed hours of heavy sedation and the impaction of three L–shaped metal pins in my wrist, all of which protruded through my flesh.

My four months of summer revolved around close contact with an orthopedic surgeon and an occupational therapist. This trial's peak of intensity was five weeks after the procedure, as I sat in the surgeon's office with my bare wrist exposed. Evidently, my distal radius had fused, so, in separate steps he clenched the shorter tip of each metal pin with a pliers, and proceeded to extract each 2–inch implement from my bone as I watched. Although the office was dead–silent, the experience was shrill.

My intention in publicly divulging the finer and more intricate details is to spare anyone similar anguish.

Although lessons are most profound when they are primary experiences, please heed my words: bikers beware and beware of bikers.

Luckily, the fact that my head was unprotected was insignificant. I had always been told to wear a helmet when I ride, yet I consistently disregarded these suggestions. These days, each time I see an uncovered head upon a biker, I cringe, but I am grateful when considering my wrist's resiliency.

As of now, my mountain bike is indefinitely at my parents' house. Many people have told me that if I do not hop back on now, I never will. If this is what it takes to avoid another ordeal, so be it.

Henry Brier is a Collegian staff member.

Letters to the Editor

Heisman choice questioned

To the editor:

If last Friday's column (September 23) is any indication of Anthony Guido's knowledge of football, one could easily question his expertise. However, the tenor of his piece shows that he has rather strongly defined notions of race.

In disparaging the likelihood of Black quarterback Steve McNair (of Division I–AA Alcorn State) winning the Heisman in order to cast his own vote for Eric Zeier (of Division I–A Georgia), he makes analogies that don't rely on similarities in style of play nor on level of competition, but that are based solely on the skin color of the QB in question.

Guido claims that McNair has no rightful claim to the Heisman because of the inferior level of competition and that McNair will likely be a bust in the NFL, "a la Andre Ware." Interestingly, McNair has nothing in common with Ware. McNair is a multi–ability QB who runs well and can throw deep. Ware was known (much like Zeier is known today) for his precise passing and execution, not for his strong arm, nor for his running ability. While McNair amasses his stats against lowly Tennessee–Chattanooga and Alabama State, Ware broke NCAA records playing against Texas A&M and Arkansas, the same caliber of competition against which Zeier excels. In fact, overall the style of play and the collegiate accomplishments of Zeier much more resemble those of Andre Ware than of McNair. The quarterbacks McNair and Ware resemble one another in only one respect, in much the same way that Zeier resembles Dan Marino (to whom Guido likens him) in one respect. (Unlike Zeier and Ware, Marino is overweight and absolutely immobile, and the primary strength of his game lies in his quick release.)

If anything, McNair probably most resembles Heath Shuler, the Washington Redskins' first round draft choice this year. Both are big men, fast, with cannons for arms. Shuler did not win the Heisman. If Guido's prediction comes true, Shuler and McNair will have that in common, too. Whether Shuler turns out to be a bust in the NFL or not, only time will tell. Most experts think not; he was considered the best quarterback in last year's draft and one of the premier pro prospects to come out of the college ranks in years. Should Shuler fall flat in the NFL, will Guido compare his disappointing career to Ware's? Probably not. Guido seems to categorize quarterbacks based on other criteria.

David Wright
Graduate student
Department of English

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

JERB BAUSER, OF HERB'S SUNDRIES, TAKES ON THE MAN FROM WAL MART.
HOW'S THE LOCAL MERCHANT SUPPOSE TO SURVIVE IN YOUR SHADOW?
TELL HIM, HERB!
YOU'LL KILL OFF OUR DOWNTOWN!
THAT'S JUST A MYTH, HERB! ONCE THEY ADJUST, LOCAL BUSINESSES WILL FLOURISH AS NEVER BEFORE!
YOU SEE, BECAUSE OF OUR OBVIOUS ADVANTAGES, WE'LL FORCE YOU TO RUN A SHOPPER OPERATION— MUCH MORE FOCUSED AND RESPONSIVE TO YOUR CUSTOMERS!
WELL, GOSH! YOU'D DO THAT FOR ME?
HECK, YES! IT'S ALL PART OF OUR TOUGH LOVE PROGRAM FOR LOCAL RETAILERS!

Arts & Living

Lame plot leaves Terminal Velocity Dead on Arrival

By Daniel Pellegrini
Collegian Staff

TERMINAL VELOCITY
Directed by Deran Serafian
with Charlie Sheen, Nastasia Kinski

Terminal atrocity. Starting a few years ago with 1991's Point Break, a gust of adrenaline–emphasized action movies (Cliffhanger, Speed) have swept across Hollywood with the intention to please those who seek the "ultimate rush" in a dark theater for a couple of hours. Some, like this summer's Speed, have enough juice to break through a flat storyline and an equally flat leading character to appeal to the average filmgoer. Others, i.e. Terminal Velocity, will burn out fast and will quickly find a home on our own HSCN network.

The bland storyline of Terminal Velocity revolves around international espionage. Kris (Nastasia Kinski) is a beautiful young ex–KGB agent on a mission to save Russia from another cold war. She visits a sky–diving ranch in Arizona where she poses as a first–time diver seeking a lesson from an on–the–edge maverick named "Ditch" Brody (Charlie Sheen).

Inevitably hotshot Sheen has other things in mind for the illustrious spy besides sky–diving, but his plan goes somewhat sour when she unhooks her harness from the line attached to Sheen's and free–falls 4,000 feet — without pulling the chute.

At this point the film had potential. We know Kinski's not dead, and Sheen, who is charged with manslaughter for "reckless" instruction compounded with a history of flight violations and suspensions, must find the girl or go to jail.

But Terminal Velocity withers once the first mystery is solved and Sheen and Kinski hook up again in an old broken–down shack in the middle of the Arizona desert. She confesses she's a spy, he buys it no questions asked, and the two go on to become a pair of uninteresting ego–maniacs who run around blindly through a confused movie.

The reason Terminal Velocity is muddled is because it has the premise to be a respectable, intelligent action–thriller but instead backs down to bad, fast–paced one–liners, and action that's either tedious or outlandish. If the film concentrated on a more elaborate story and more convincing characters rather than effortlessly falling into pretentious cliches (Sheen as the rough–edge loner with a "need for speed" and Kinski as the beautiful, deft spy), it perhaps could have muscled out something of the caliber of Lethal Weapon 2.

The rest of Terminal Velocity is literally just a mess to watch. While Sheen and Kinski scramble around through the night running from spies and trying to meet their objective, the movie never really explains to us where they are or in fact what they're doing. Characters appear and disappear, and the script is merely lost dialogue, never pertaining to the point of the movie.

So if it's a spy–thriller you want to see, rent the 1981 classic Eye of the Needle starring Donald Sutherland and Kate Nelligan. If it's the adrenaline–high you're looking for, you're probably better off watching one of those Planet Reebok commercials. D

Do you like movies, television, music, concerts, artwork, photographs, magazines, books and just about anything in the world?

Well, it's all part of Arts & Living, something that you could be part of too. The Arts & Living desk is always looking for interested people (and interesting people for that matter) to come on down and write. Don't be shy. Arts & Living isn't just a desk, it's a way of life.

Gallery hosts new 'Literature & the Land' exhibit

UMass alum and artist Phil Schirmer displays varied egg tempera paintings

JESSICA TAVERNA / COLLEGIAN
Phil Schirmer's egg tempera paintings of rocks are featured at the "Literature & the Land" exhibit at R. Michelson's Galleries.

By Ashley E. Vondrasek
Collegian Staff

R. Michelson Galleries, located in Amherst, is presently taking part in celebrating literature and the land in their latest exhibit, appropriately entitled "Literature and the Land." The exhibit was coordinated in conjunction with the Amherst Book and Plow Festival.

The event highlights works of local landmarks and literary figures by one dozen artists including featured artist Phil Schirmer.

Schirmer, a UMass graduate of the class of 1974, has a new series of egg tempera paintings displayed in the show. Egg tempera is a mixture of dry pigment and egg yolk that is applied in layers with a sponge on Masonite. The result is a painting with dimension and textures giving it life–like qualities.

Works from his new series include paintings of libraries such as the Jones Library of Amherst, Forbes Library of Oakham, Lily Library of Florence, Tilton Library of South Deerfield, and Emily Willston Memorial Library of Easthampton.

Rather than painting the traditional front exterior of the libraries, Schirmer instead focused on such things as windows, a side view of a library with two chimneys, and entrances.

The reason Schirmer decided to paint libraries is that he found them to be some of the most beautiful buildings in the area. Schirmer was attracted to the buildings' stone work and architectural detail, as well as their beauty.

"I try to notice things other people do not notice." In addition, painting libraries was a "testament to how much we value knowledge," Schirmer said.

Also included in the new series are Schirmer's paintings of rocks from the Quabbin Reservoir, his preferred subject whether they are on the ground or the exterior of a building.

"You do not become an artist until you can communicate a feeling towards a subject," Schirmer said.

After viewing his art work, one will understand just what he means.

"Literature and the Land," featuring egg tempera paintings by Phil Schirmer as well as works of local landmarks and literary figures by other regional artists, will be featured at the R. Michelson Galleries at 25 S. Pleasant St., Amherst through Oct. 21. Call 253–2500 for more information.

Margaret Cho is ready to be an 'All–American' television star

By Dara Akiko Tom
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Margaret Cho loves being a part of the glitz and glamour of Hollywood.

She loves the late–night lifestyle of Hollywood's young, decadent, up–and–coming stars. It's even better when strangers snap her picture as she's walking into a club.

But outside the limelight, Cho admits privately that she's come to an important realization.

"I'm a big egomaniac," she says.

Though her transition from standup comedy to situation comedy has been fairly smooth, Cho, star of "All–American Girl," Hollywood's first sitcom featuring an Asian–American family, admits that the move was difficult at first.

"I'm coming from a place where I had complete control," she says of her solo standup routines. "I never thought I had an ego."

All that changed when she began sharing the spotlight with eight cast members of ABC's "All American Girl," which airs at 8:30 p.m. Wednesdays.

Initially, she says, "I always want to be the funny one. I always want to be the center."

But she's found that yielding to others isn't so bad.

"You have to be really kind of focused," she says, "and that does not lend itself to the one always being funny."

Cho admits that her rise has been relatively swift. After being kicked out of Lowell High School in San Francisco, she graduated from an arts school.

At age 18, she was doing standup and, by 20, she was appearing in cable shows. She recently starred in her own HBO special. Now, at 25, she's ready for prime time — and vice versa.

The idea of an Asian–American family on the networks is nothing new, but it has taken a few years for television executives to give such a show their blessing.

The San Francisco native isn't shy about touting "All–American Girl" as a first for Hollywood.

"I think it's a really important thing to say that that's what it is," she said in a recent telephone interview from Los Angeles.

There are other people, including Asian–American actors, who tire of touting ethnicity as part of the show, she admits. "I've always looked at mine as an incredible advantage. I don't think it's ever been a negative thing at all. I celebrate it, if anything," she says. "I haven't felt like I've compromised myself culturally or artistically. I've felt very fortunate that I haven't had to change."

"All–American Girl" follows a Korean household of two immigrant parents, a grandmother, and a daughter and son.

Cho plays the 22–year–old Margaret Kim, a college student working at a department store. Her younger brother, played by B.D. Wong, perhaps best–known for his role in the Broadway play M. Butterfly, is a model citizen whom the parents favor.

In the show, similar to her childhood, Cho struggles with holding onto Korean traditions while lapping up American pop culture.

"It's a combination of cultural differences with the kind of grim reality with people in their 20s and over having to still live at home," she says.

In real life, Cho and her younger brother grew up mostly at their parents' Polk Street bookstore, Paperback Traffic. She says she spent a lot of time with the employees, who were mostly gay and lesbian.

At home, her parents pushed their only daughter to learn Korean and pursue a more traditional career.

Cho says it was tough convincing her parents that leaving their native country in 1964 in hopes of providing better opportunities for their children wasn't a mistake.

"When they realized It was something I wanted to do in my life, that really worried them," she says of comedy.

"I think they thought I'd be throwing my life away," she says. In fact, the Chos had never seen their daughter perform live — in school plays or comedy clubs — until watching a filming of "All–American Girl."

"They're really happy now," she says.

Cho says Richard Pryor has been a major influence on her comedy, especially his concert film, Live on the Sunset Strip.

"He just talked about his life in an honest, insightful way. It was like he was sharing so much from his life that you almost didn't notice that cultural difference. He's so wonderful, but very, very black. He's just a genius."

She hopes that her show will have the same effect, Asian–American style.

"It will help (viewers) understand our life, understand our foreignness, show the idea of what America is and how America has changed with immigration," she says.

"My agenda is the agenda of the Asian–American community. That is a positive honest portrayal of the family. And it will be incredibly validating and powerful."

Elsewhere in television ...

WOODSTOCK, ONE MORE TIME: On the heels of pay–per–view's live two–day coverage of Woodstock '94 in August, a four–hour Woodstock '94 highlights special will air on pay–per–view this Friday beginning at 9 p.m. EDT. Performances from that farm In Saugerties, New York, include Aerosmith, Bob Dylan, Green Day, Melissa Etheridge, Metallica, the Neville Brothers, Nine Inch Nails, Red Hot Chili Peppers, the Rollins Band, Salt 'n Pepa, the Spin Doctors and more. The suggested retail price for the program is $9.95. Call your local cable company for information, get out your tie–dyes and boogie.

Hello John.... Last night was wonderful. I just love the Mass Daily Collegian. Well, I do aim to please, Phyllis.

TOTAL FITNESS
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES • TREADMILLS • LIFESTEPS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • FREE WEIGHTS NORDIC TRACK
STUDENT SPECIAL $139
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST AEROBICS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 WEST ST. ON BUS ROUTE OPEN 7 DAYS

STeVeN wRIgHT
LIVE IN CONCERT
THURSDAY SEPTEMBER 29, 1994 8:00 PM
SPRINGFIELD SYMPHONY HALL
SPRINGFIELD, MA
$19.50 Reserved
Tickets at all Ticketmaster locations, the Civic Center Box Office, Filene's - Holyoke Mall, Movies & More - Chicopee, Main Music - Springfield, Video Galaxy - Enfield, all Connecticut Filene's or charge by phone at 733-2500 or 787-6600

Eating Disorder Programs • 1994/95
Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Treatment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.

Friends and Family Group
Single session for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Mondays (except holidays) 4:30-6:00 p.m. Campus Center Room Number posted by elevator.

Peer Health Connections
A confidential phoneline for help around eating disorders - yourself,or someone you know. 549-2671, ext. 168.

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
For travel beginning this winter!
One Way / R'n'dtrip
LONDON $183 $345
PARIS $214 $428
MADRID $250 $500
SAN JOSE/ COSTA RICA $224 $448
TOKYO $749
Fares from over 25 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia. Some tickets valid to one year. Most tickets allow changes & stopovers issued on the spot.
Customer reservation & departure taxes apply. Fares subject to change without notice. Int'l. student ID cards may be required.
PRISM TRAVEL
540 Madison Ave., NY, NY 10173
800 272-9877
212-986-9470
In NYC

Mandatory Photo Meeting
All New and Returning Photographers
Wednesday at 7:00 p.m. in the Collegian

The Book and Plow Festival

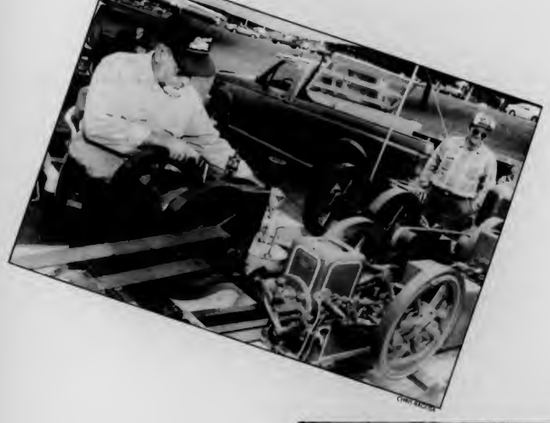
The Book and Plow Festival held on Saturday served in bringing Amherst's history of abundant agriculture lands and academie to a head at the Amherst Common.

The celebration consisted of a farmer's fair and other events celebrating the resources and history of enterprise and expression in the region. There were guided walks and open houses throughout the town. The historical tours took people into libraries and famous homesteads that were occupied by famous people, like Emily Dickinson.

The farmer's fair was the center of all activity. It brought town folk together to demonstrate crafts and educate the community. With musicians playing flutes and recorders in the background, those who attented found delight in the agricultural demonstrations held afoot.

Historical farm processes, such as cow milking, meal making and cider pressing were demonstrated, as well as shearing of wool taken from animals in the petting zoo.

Award-winning honey bees were on display as well as a collection of antique cars, farming equipment and a tree climber from the Stockbridge School. There was a hut of hay where kids could play and search for hidden candy and a seperate hut was alotted for pumpkin decorating.



PED 189
INTRAMURAL OFFICIATING CLASS
UNDERSUBSCRIBED

ADD NOW Under Education 310922 189 Sec 1: 3 credits: MWF 2:30pm: Boyden 223 CONTACT Franklin Wright, 215 Boyden, 5 2663/0092

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycles
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080

My eyes teared as I hacked my desert dry cough at the road dust that swirled up from behind the passing semi. Yes, I was lost... a long way from the rotting New York cul-de-sac I had called my home. Why HAD I eaten that moldy bread. Why DID I let that circus bear break my heart
Mass. Daily Collegian
Wherever you go, There you are!

TOTAL FITNESS
STAIRMASTERS · LIFECYCLES · TREADMILLS · LIFESTEPS
KEISER · NAUTILUS · FREE WEIGHTS NORDIC TRACK
STUDENT SPECIAL $139
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST AEROBICS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 WEST ST. ON BUS ROUTE OPEN 7 DAYS

AFTER THE 26 YEARS 1968-1994
THE PUB
Fun, Food & Spirits
TUESDAY
Live Entertainment
with
New Horizons
and special guest
Mentos
Reggae - Calypso
9:30-1:00
Nachos $2.00
9:30-10:30
15 EAST PLEASANT-AMHERST

Sports

Minutemen pull off upset at Rutgers

By Ted Kottler
Collegian Staff

Sophomore striker Dave Siljanovski tallied twice as the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team scored its most critical victory of the season thus far on Saturday evening, upending defending Atlantic 10 champion Rutgers 2-0, in Piscataway, New Jersey.

Rutgers wound up with nothing on the scoreboard — courtesy of keeper Mark Wolf's third shutout — but its opportunities were plentiful. Besides taking nine corner kicks to UMass' one, the Scarlet Knights peppered 22 shots, but Wolf made eight saves as the Minutemen remained unscathed on the A-10 slate (2-0).

UMASS 2 Rutgers 0

Rutgers did outshoot UMass by a wider margin than any previous opponent, but the visitors still managed to end a two game scoreless drought.

"We stuck to our game plan," said Coach Sam Koch. "To shut them out is a great accomplishment."

The game plan apparently did not call for excessive pressure on the Rutgers goal, for the Minutemen sent only seven shots on Steve Widdowson, who made but three saves. But Siljanovski, a Pompton Lakes, N.J. native, seemed quite comfortable on his home state's turf, as he single-handedly propelled his team to an inspiring upset.

In the 33rd minute, Siljanovski began a magnificent solo assault, with the net behind Widdowson his target. Dribbling from 45 yards away near the left touch line, he decked Rutgers' sweeper and bent a blistering shot into the top shelf, right side.

"He's putting it in the back of the net the way we need him to," said Koch. "And the way we expect him to."

Siljanovski has consistently met his coach's lofty standards. He led all returning scorers from 1993, when he netted four goals, and again he paces his club (3-1-7).For his second goal against Rutgers, in the 47th minute, again he worked on the left, finding a seam before rendering Widdowson clueless, vaulting another ball over the head of the ill-positioned goaltender. No doubt Siljanovski was the man of this match, and the quality of his game was even greater considering he had missed an open net and nailed the crossbar against New Hampshire.

Wolf would perhaps have earned the No. 2 star, but Koch was quick to praise his team's united effort.

"The defense worked with [Wolf] very well," said Koch. "He made a couple of great saves, but [the defense] made his shot-stopping ability that much better. They almost made his job easy."

"It was just a good all-around performance. We moved the ball well and played great in the midfield. We played pretty well against UNH, but we definitely played better [against Rutgers]."

Rutgers may have fallen on hard times. Bob Reasso's squad has been ranked as high as No. 2 nationally and its members have represented the United States on the national team. This loss dropped the Scarlet Knights to an uncharacteristic 2-4-1. They are tied for second with St. Joseph's in the conference standings, behind UMass. The Minutemen are currently ranked 7th in the New England Division I poll.

Corner kicks: Through seven contests, UMass and its foes have fired the same number of shots, 99-99.

Those striking fear in keepers' hearts most are Siljanovski (24), freshman phenom Mike Butler (20) and veteran Brad Miller (13). Seven Minutemen have started each match: Siljanovski, Colin Johnson, Mike Doyle, Joel Pittman, Dan Chagnon, Benny Sheally, and Karsten Bremke.

Here a Hawk, there a Hawk: Following Wednesday's match with the regionally eighth-ranked Hartford Hawks, those of St. Joseph's will descend on Garber Field for a Saturday 1 p.m. tilt. St. Joe's boasts this week's A-10 Men's Soccer Player of the Week, junior forward John Sharp. Sharp scored two goals and two assists in the Hawks three wins. West Virginia midfielder Seth Perkovich captured the league's Rookie of the Week award.

Mens water polo sweeps at Navy tourney

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

If the beginning of the season for the University of Massachusetts men's water polo team was one of one step forward-two steps back, the effort put forth this past weekend was one of leaps and bounds.

This last weekend at the Navy Invitational in Annapolis, Md., the No. 13 nationally ranked Minutemen solidified their status with a sweep of the event.

By increasing their current winning streak to nine games, the third longest in school history, the Minutemen (9-3, 8-2 in the Eastern Water Polo Association) have bounced back extremely well from an early season slump.

The teams playing in this Invitational were by no means "cupcakes." In the four team format, all were ranked either in the Top 20 nationally at the start of the season or still are. To Coach Russ Yarworth, the wins mean nothing but progress towards setting a basis for better things to come.

"We got all the parts together, now we have to get them working in the right order," said Yarworth. "They have to feel comfortable with their roles, which we're starting to understand. Then I have to, as a coach, figure out exactly what everyone's role is going to be. That's what this part of the season is for."

In the barnburner of the weekend, the Sunday contest with No. 9 Air Force proved to be a true test of the team's will. By far not playing their best, the team had to weather a storm caused by lack of concentration.

But led by senior co-captain Adolfo Oliete's two-point goal in the third period, the Minutemen squeaked by this top-rated opponent with a tough 8-7 win.

Trailing by a 7-4 margin at the end of two periods, the UMass defense shut down their nationally ranked foe in the final two frames to earn the triumph.

Oliete (14 goals, 25 points in 40 quarters played) netting the game-winner is one thing, blanking a Top 10 team going down the stretch, when you are not at your best, is another.

"It's going to take us a while to get into it. Everyone is starting to recognize their goals, what they have to do and what their job is," said senior co-captain Javier Gonzalez. "We're much better than we were two weeks ago. Hopefully, we'll be that much better two weeks from now."

In their Saturday match with No. 15 Bucknell, the Minutemen once again followed their leader, this time co- captain Gonzalez, and came up with a 15-7 win. Shooting percentage was the key for Gonzalez, the team's leading scorer with 55 points, as he scored seven goals in seven attempts.

Coupled with a staunch defensive scheme that held Bucknell to one score in the first two periods and sophomore Frankie Mariani's two goals, UMass was able to hold off a late game surge by the Bisons and emerge with the victory.

This was a key early season game for the Minutemen.

In one of their first three losses, Bucknell just outlasted UMass with a final second shot. The revenge factor was evident, as the team wanted to prove that in the long run they are the better team.

Consistency proved to be the team's best asset in their other Saturday match against the University of Richmond Spiders.

Scoring stride for stride with the pre-season Top 20 nationally ranked Spiders every period, UMass weathered the attack and got the 14-10 win.

Junior Luis Limardo (48 points in 36 quarters played), the team's leading goal scorer, was the top gun tallying six goals for a total of 34 on the season, and Gonzalez once again led by example netting four goals.

"We are going to keep working, these meets are the way to test ourselves," said Gonzalez. "The important tournament is November 5th and 6th, the Eastern Championships. That's what we're thinking about right now."

Note: The men's water polo team will have it's first home contest this Thursday night 16:00 p.m.), when it will face Boston College at the Amherst College pool.

Turn to POLO, page 8

Women's cross country team splits tri-meet at Vermont

By Leigh Torbin
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts women's cross country squad split a tri-meet, defeating host Vermont, and falling narrowly to the Boston University Terriers, in Burlington, Vt. on Saturday, improving the team's record on the season to 3-2.

Sophomore Melissa Langevin completed the first mile in 5:20 and pushed the pace the entire way, leading the pack for over two and a half miles, before eventually succumbing to a combination of an unyielding hill and the superior sprinting of the Terrier's Chrisaine Stief.

The Minutewomen finished up with 33 team points, a narrow two points behind heavily favored BU, while the Catamounts were hardly a factor in the race. Vermont's 65 team points kept them out of contention for the entire afternoon.

"We didn't expect to be quite this close to BU because BU beat Dartmouth and they're very strong," said coach Julie LaFreniere. The Terriers are a team comprised mostly of seasoned veterans, their top three runners all being of German nationality. "I was very pleased by the team's results. BU's a tough program, maybe one of the top five in New England, and we stayed with them."

Freshman Rebecca Donahue, in her coach's words "did a great job," placed second for UMass, and fifth overall, with a time of 18:47. Donahue's performance included a shocking victory as she outpaced UVM's Gabrielle VanRhyn, one of New England's top runners. Meanwhile, Julie Moreau (19:07, seventh overall), Kirsten Bringardner (19:20, ninth), and Kristin Donaldson (19:26, tenth) played important roles, assisting in the Minutewomen's strong performance and near upset.

LaFreniere hopes to get Donaldson running up in the pack with Donahue in time for the upcoming tournaments which commence October eighth with the Paul Short Invitational at Lehigh, in Bethlchem, Pa. Donaldson's abilities are "night and day" to her performances a year ago, according to her coach, and should prove a powerful asset at the upcoming Paul Short, New Englands, Atlantic 10s and ECACs.

"This is not the same kid from last year," said LaFreniere.

In any event, the Minutewomen could use the assistance as a strong UMass team finished fourtcenth at last year's Paul Short.

"Our goal is to tighten it up a little bit. If we can get Donaldson running up there with Donahue we'll be quite respectable, " said LaFreniere, who points to both Donaldson and Donahue along with the consistent dominance of Melissa Langevin as keys to her team's success.

With nearly all of their top runners either sophomores or freshmen, and Katie Greenia redshirting her sophomore season, the future possibilities are substantial. Greenia placed second amongst UMass runners with a 18:16 at last year's ECAC Championships held at George Mason.

As freshmen Donahue and Bringardner adapt to the more rigorous pace of the college level this team will only get stronger. Although New England is a tough region, look for the Minutewomen to finish high in their upcoming tournaments.

Minutemen place second despite absence of top two runners

By Rich Wicker
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts men's cross-country team placed second in last weekend's tri-meet against a tough Boston University squad, and the University of Vermont, in Burlington, Vt. Saturday.

The Terriers, who won the meet, have 75 percent of last year's team returning that was ranked No. 11 nationally in 1993.

In an attempt to challenge his younger runners, Coach Ken O'Brien left his top two runners, Eric Nadeau and Ted Towse, behind.

"In order to see how the team would react, and in an attempt to put some pressure on some kids who are not normally front runners, a couple of the best runners were left at home," said O'Brien. "In one respect we were taking a little bit of a risk, but what we are trying to do is make an investment in the team."

UMass finished second behind BU's 15 points with 46 points, followed by Vermont with 77 points.

The Minutemen were led by hard running sophomores Mike Maceiko (25:41) in sixth place, and Jon Way (25:52) in eighth place. Senior Rick Copley (26:13) finished in ninth place and junior Mark Buffone (26:20) rounded out the top ten on the eight kilometer course.

"I am disappointed by the loss," said O'Brien. "But at the same time we did not miss our objective by too much. We beat Vermont and we did have a couple of kids step up."

O'Brien was particularly pleased by Maceiko's showing.

"Although BU won the meet," said O'Brien. "If we have a couple of kids respond like Mike did Saturday in the next two or three races, I think we will be ready for the championships."

Macieko flourished in the his opportunity to be the lead runner. He took the responsibility upon himself to run his race and place as best he could.

"The conditions were good for me Saturday," said Maceiko. "I told myself to just keep running. I knew if I just kept running hard, I would have a good time."

O'Brien used the meet as a measuring stick to determine where his team is at this point in the season, and what was needed to do to in the next six weeks to put them in good shape for the championships.

"We have focused this year on trying to develop the ability to compete with teams that are better than us as long and as hard as we can," said O'Brien. "We are a relatively young team and we would like to establish a reference point, to try and find out how far we have to go to catch teams by the time the end of the season comes. We will be looking at this meet as a barometer to find out how much distance there is between us and a nationally ranked team and the second goal is a win over Vermont."

With the win and the loss this weekend, the Minutemen's record stands at 8-2 for the season with the only other loss coming at the hands of Iona College back on September 17th.

UMass will be in action again this Saturday at the Paul Short Invitational in Bethel, Pa. Top runners Towse and Nadeau are expected to be back in action for the race.

California Dreaming

STEVE PEDELLA/COLLEGIAN

Melissa Mitchell and the rest of the women's soccer team are preparing for this weekend's games against Santa Clara and Santa Barbara.

Can professional soccer make it big in this country?

•Soccer is one of the greatest spectacles

Anthony Guido

The entire world stopped for a month to be consumed by it. Three billion people watched its culmination. It was held right here in the United States of America.

The World Cup, one of the greatest spectacles in sports. Soccer played at its highest level by some of the greatest athletes from around the globe.

Every stadium throughout the United States was sold out for the tournament. Soccer has even risen to great heights among today's youth, surpassing baseball as the most popular sport in terms of youth participation.

A favorite commercial of the summer was the ESPN spot with the balding British man. One example talks about Colombia's star midfielder Carlos Valderama:

"To his soccer fans around the world, Jordan is a small country in Africa."

So why hasn't this sport taken a prominent place in American sports? Well, the time has come for the sport to take hold.

The American sports fan is driven by goal scoring. Those who are critical of soccer cannot appreciate the subtleties of the sport. Teams can play varying styles, from the bruising longball defensive strategy, to tactical counterattacking, to the beautiful passing game. Soccer has it all.

Do you like a 450-foot home run? Then a Roberto Baggio blast to the upper left hand corner of the net from 30 yards out is for you. Enjoy a Dominique Wilkins breakaway slam dunk? Then Bergkamp one-on-one with a goalie is the thing to watch.

Do you like a amazing save from Curtis Joseph? Goalkeepers like Thomas Ravelli make spectacular saves defending their huge goal. Prefer a bonecrushing hit from Bruce Smith? Watch Aleksi Lalas go up and level attackers out of the way to clear the ball.

One of the greatest events of the sports year happened in the World Cup quarterfinal. The Netherlands vs. Brazil. Brazil jumps out to a 2-0 lead early in the second half as the beating

Turn to SOCCER, page 8

•Soccer won't be able to cut it in the US

Matt Vautour

Cut the ticker tapes. Open the ticket offices, and get ready for the next American Soccer League that is going to fail.

Don't let the hype fool you. Next spring's professional soccer league is not going to be the fifth major American professional sports league. In fact, after the initial novelty wears off, it will draw fewer fans than Arena Football.

Why?

Americans find soccer boring.

Among other reasons, soccer is successful overseas because there really are no alternatives for sports fans in most countries. There are no top level sports leagues to offer alternatives in many of the soccer loving nations.

Even in the nations that do have basketball and hockey, the level of the games is considerably limited. They're options tend to be soccer or...cricket. Nine out of ten sports fans anywhere would follow soccer given that option.

With professional football, baseball, basketball and hockey thriving in the United States, fans aren't going to all of the sudden flock to soccer games.

The fact remains soccer on a world class level is much too boring for the standards of the typical American sports fan.

"You Yanks don't appreciate the skill it takes to play our game," a critical British immigrant said, when the channel was switched from the World Cup.

This is not quite a fair statement. Americans appreciate their skill, the same way they appreciate those of a trapeze artist, but we still don't watch the circus on TV.

American sports fans want to see offense and scoring. The NBA and NFL have recognized this and made rule changes to increase their offense. Realistically, soccer on a world class level lacks enough scoring to keep our TVs tuned in.

Soccer enthusiasts point to the World Cup as the big turning point

Turn to CUT IT, page 8

■ Soccer

continued from page 7

of the samba drums incurs the volume of the partisan crowd.

The frenzy hushes as Dutch star Dennis Bergkamp nets a goal moments after Brazil's second. Netherlands midfielder Alain Winter puts home a perfect aerial header off a goalmouth cross to knot the score. Brazil's Branco then blasted a bender from outside the box for a dramatic 3-2 win with less than 10 minutes left, the best game of the tournament.

In the old days of soccer, a team was hurled down 2-0. But, FIFA, soccer's governing organization, has altered rules to increase scoring chances. Americans like the increase in scoring, and that figures to continue.

Major League Soccer is set to kick off in early April of the upcoming year. This league will work where others have failed. Interest has never been higher in this country, evidenced by the over 20 cities placing applications to acquire a franchise.

Baseball has a serious cloud over its head as to whether it will return for next spring, hockey likely will face the same problems. A lot of the sports dollar will be up for grabs. How about Soccer Night in America. A national TV deal has already been struck by ESPN, and the potential exists for an increase in coverage to fill the baseball void.

Quality of play is a major concern for the casual sports fan. International stars like Jurgen Klinsmann (Germany) and Ruud Gullitt (Netherlands) have expressed interest in playing in an American League as have nearly all of the U.S. squad.

Anthony Guido is a Collegian columnist.

■ Cut it

continued from page 7

for soccer in the United States.

"Look at the attendance and TV ratings of the World Cup," they say. "This will translate into success for professional soccer in America."

Hate to burst your bubble, but it just doesn't work that way.

The World Cup was successful as a novelty. It only comes every few years and it had never been played in the United States before. We figured that it might be worth checking out what the rest of the world was so crazy about. Some Americans became fans, but not enough to support a league.

The cup's final game proved to be a major disappointment as well. After a very competitive game, they decided the champion on penalty kicks, the equivalent of deciding the NBA finals by a free throw contest...ridiculous.

Even people that followed the U.S. team in the World Cup would be disappointed in a professional league. For the league to hold any fan interest, it would need to promote the players from the national team.

These players, however, won't be there to promote. They have taken their skills back to the much more competitive European professional leagues. They have no desire to waste their talents in a fledgling, watered down American league, when they can play where the sport is sacred and the fans will appreciate them. Without them there will be no name recognition of players As long as football, basketball and hockey are still around, soccer isn't going anywhere.

Matt Vautour is a Collegian columnist.

■ Polo

continued from page 7

In their contest earlier in the season at the Cambridge Invitational, the Minutemen clipped the Eagles wing's with a 19-6 victory.

Also, with a triumph over Boston College, the team would give Coach Yarworth his 130th win in his eighth season and tie the second longest consecutive victories record at 10. That mark was established last season, while the longest winning streak is at 19 straight, set in 1992.

Sports Notice

There will be a informational meeting for anyone interested in the UMass women's hockey team on Wednesday, September 28th at 7:00 in Campus Center Room 803. Any questions call Cheri Ruane at 549-7276.

Anyone interested in becoming a Minutemaniac, sign ups will be at the volleyball game, Tuesday October 4th. No lines can form until 15 minutes before the game.

"Simplify, simplify."

Henry David Thoreau

"Hey, that's not a bad idea."

AT&T

AT&T Universal MasterCard.
The credit, cash and calling card. All in one.

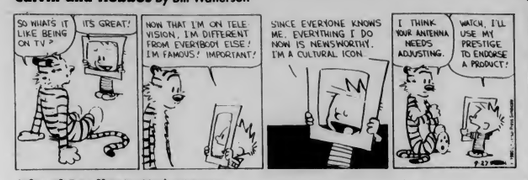
The AT&T Universal MasterCard. No annual fee—ever. Access to cash at over 350,000 locations. Plus an AT&T calling card. Because life should be contemplated. Not complicated.

Call 1 800 438-8627 to request an application.

Look For FREE STUFF at The AT&T Universal MasterCard Table

AT&T

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson

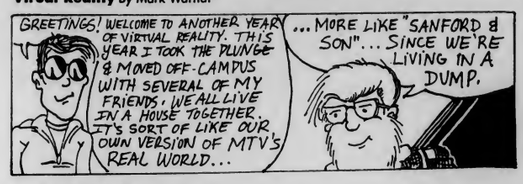


SO WHAT'S IT LIKE BEING ON TV?
IT'S GREAT!
NOW THAT I'M ON TELEVISION, I'M DIFFERENT FROM EVERYBODY ELSE! I'M FAMOUS! IMPORTANT!
SINCE EVERYONE KNOWS ME, EVERYTHING I DO NOW IS NEWSWORTHY. I'M A CULTURAL ICON.
I THINK YOUR ANTENNA NEEDS ADJUSTING.
WATCH. I'LL USE MY PRESTIGE TO ENDORSE A PRODUCT!

Jim's Journal By Jim

Today I went to the pet store to buy a toy for Mr. Peterson.
They had little fake mice, balls with bells in them, and everything.
I decided to get a rubberry ball thing.
I threw it at Mr. Peterson and she sat and stared at it for a second, then walked away.

Virtual Reality By Mark Warnat



GREETINGS! WELCOME TO ANOTHER YEAR OF VIRTUAL REALITY. THIS YEAR I TOOK THE PLUNGE & MOVED OFF-CAMPUS WITH SEVERAL OF MY FRIENDS. WE ALL LIVE IN A HOUSE TOGETHER. IT'S SORT OF LIKE OUR OWN VERSION OF MTV'S REAL WORLD...
...MORE LIKE "SANFORD & SON"... SINCE WE'RE LIVING IN A DUMP.

Big Man on Campus By Dave Schneider

UMMM... ACCORDING TO MY SCHEDULE, THIS IS WHERE MY "WILDLIFE 101" CLASS IS HELD SINCE I'VE MISSED THE FIRST 2 WEEKS OF CLASS, WE COULD BE HAVING A TEST TODAY! I DON'T KNOW ABOUT... I SHOULD SIT NEXT TO SOMEONE WHO LOOKS LIKE HE KNOWS A LOT ABOUT WILDLIFE...
THE QUESTION IS... WHO?
WILDLIFE 101
SCHNEIDER

Virtual Reality By Mark Warnat

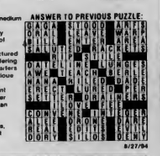
OK- SINCE WE ARE GOING TO BE COOKING & EATING TOGETHER WHY NOT GO AROUND THE TABLE & STATE WHAT YOU CAN MAKE IN THE KITCHEN.
ICE.
ICE.
ICE.
MAINE
...A MESS.

Daily Crossword
Edited byTrude Michel Joffe

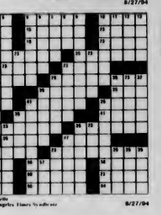
ACROSS
1 Foot or back beginning
5 Snitch lightly
10 TV supashot
14 Experte
15 Home to
16 Across
18 Money exchange premium
17 Insistent insect
18 Frightening fish
19 Defense gp
20 School term
22 Turkish inn
24 Long poem
25 Hose mishap
26 Oaler character
29 Without warning
33 Smallish plot
34 Happy face
35 Expression of surprise
36 Took to court
37 Part of a place setting
38 Muscat's country
39 Greek letter
40 Be generous
41 Workplace
42 Drega
44 Fabric from India
46 Joseph's was colorful
47 Insect nests
48 Small branches
51 Frightening creature
56 Lerr a letter
58 Separated
58 Notion
59 Hammer or tongs
60 Clatter
61 Sponsorship
62 Fill to repletion
63 Like some kitchens
64 Capitol VIP's

DOWN
1 Sacks
2 Skin problem
3 Paper measure
4 Thought highly of
5 Beantown
6 Wishes for
7 Cook slightly
8 Old salt
9 Light
10 Cops
11 Culture medium
12 Locale
13 Owl's cry
21 Resort, of a sort
23 Manufactured
25 Hotel offering
26 Headquarters
27 Very serious
28 Fear
29 Intelligent
30 Title giver
31 Himalayan capital
32 Bronx Bombers, for short
34 Tilt
37 Game bird
38 Unusual llama
40 Pollution problem
43 Jack Frost creation
44 Coined
45 Newspaper items
47 Norwegian
48 Matched pairs
49 Meley boal
50 Uprising
51 Postal concern
52 Rim
53 Rider's need
54 Back talk
57 Hawaiian dish

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:



8/27/94



By Eliza M. Kelly
©1994 Los Angeles Times Syndicate

8/27/94

The Far Side By Gary Larson

"Oh my gosh! You know what that is, Mooky? ... My dad had one when I was a kid!"

Your Horoscope
By Jeane Dixon

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A partner could fall victim to wishful thinking now. It is up to you to get things back on track. A gentle approach will work better than criticism. Be sympathetic.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A loyal mate can be settled in your favor. Get your facts and figures straight before you ask someone to represent you. Your honesty will attract a kind response to your com dirty work.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Launch a get project today. Luck is on you side. Stick to what you know best. A newcomer may be difficult to read. Who try? Rely on information and people you can check out. Don't trust anyone right now, your power is in the wrong alignment. Stick with your instincts.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Not a good week to take unnecessary risks. Refuse to become entangled in a friend's crazy schemes. Students would be smart to be the books this evening. Review bank statements for possible errors.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your mate or business partner will go along with your suggestions today. Show appreciation. Adventure beckons. Delegate household chores to youngsers who want to learn and earn.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Creative ideas abound this week. Jot them down for future reference. Self-improvement activities prove more fun than anticipated. Keep any diet and exercise resolutions. News from you family will send your spirits soaring.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your good deeds will not go unrewarded. A romance with an older person could be the real thing. Leave nothing to chance where a business deal is concerned. Meet with new people this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The employers today is on teamwork and cooperation. New business will result from a group effort. Seek investment advice from the experts. A former foe could do a complete about face. Seek the limelight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Search for knowledge and you will find the truth. A business deal shapes up according to plan. Take advantage of a unique career opportunity. New financial options could help a family situation. Perserve.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You stinning is superb! A late minute schedule change will work in your favor. Romance is in the air. Use it up while you can. Try taking a special someone to dinner or out for a romantic moonlit stroll.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A work deadline requires you full attention now. Someone challenges you to make a dream come true. Your enthusiasm for a special project could be dampened by someone's comments. Patience is essential for progress.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Others will be happy to make concessions if you explain your situation. Stay alert! Socialize with newcomers tonight.

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Macaroni and Cheese	Chicken Fajitas
Fishburger	Tacos
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Macaroni and Cheese	Chicken or Tofu Fajita
Lentil Chili	Vegetable Taco

Today's Staff

Night Editor.....Tracy Monahan
Copy Editor.....Caleb Cochran
Photo Technician.....Steve Pedulla
Production Supervisor.....Tony Morse
Production.....Wendy Rae Nutter, Tony Caterina

Quote of the Day

"If life was fair, Elvis would be alive and all the impersonators would be dead."

—Johnny Carson

SYRACUSE ABROAD

Looking for a good exchange rate to study abroad next semester?

3.75 GPA and up=$1,500 Scholarship 3.50 GPA and up=$1,000 Scholarship
Study abroad grants based on need also available.

Syracuse University sponsors study abroad sites in Florence, Italy London, England Harare, Zimbabwe
Madrid, Spain Strasbourg, France

SU credit ■ Field trips/Traveling seminars ■ Internships ■ Study for a semester, year or summer Courses taught in English and in host country language

SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY
DIVISION OF INTERNATIONAL PROGRAMS ABROAD ■ 119 Euclid Avenue, Syracuse, New York 13244-4170
1-800-235-3472 ■ 315-443-3471

Classifieds

• 20¢ per word per day for students
• All ads must be paid cash/2 days in advance
• Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

ACTIVITIES

Biosci—the biological sciences student association will be holding its first general meeting/sign up drive Tuesday September 27 7:00pm Morrill 203 All are welcome

UMass Women's Ice Hockey is back Season starts soon For information call Cheri 549-7276

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Delta Zeta open rush Tuesday 6-8pm 11 Phillips St Questions? Call Carrie 549-7341

Do you have any say in what goes on at Health Services? You bet you do! Come by the Student Health Advisory Board's first meeting of the semester and find out how Wednesday, September 28 UHS rm 302 5:30

Sigma Delta Tau is hosting dinner this evening for any interested University women Dinner will begin at five and everyone is welcome to stay until 7 Please call Kristin at 549-7387

AUTO FOR SALE

1984 Ford Escort, 50K/m AT Air, runs strong, needs some work, cheap at $600 253-5990

1968 Mustang Classic 68 Mustang electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, best offer call Beth at 6-4434

1987 Mazda 323 deluxe wagon Excellent condition, carefully maintained, stereo cassette, 97,000 miles $2500 549-2819

1989 Hyundai Excel 47K AC, auto stereo cassette sunroof $3000 Call 253-4012

89 Jeep Wrangler black hard top 4cyl, 4 wd, stereo, high miles, excellent condition $4500 bo 549-7321

BOXING LESSONS

Recreational competitive boxing lessons for men and women with retired professional G. Dana Bumpus 549-5752

CHRISTIANS

Alliance Christian Fellowship adds value and balance to your UMass education. We're committed to personal discipleship training, outreach and spirit-filled fellowship and fun FRIDAYS Timpout Fellowship 7pm Campus Center

C.A.S.H. FOR COLLEGE

Do you need $$$ for college??? WE have the solution. Guaranteed results Write to: Corporate Scholarship Service 2 Oakhurst Terrace East, N Reading, MA 01864 for free details

COMPUTERS

BK Computers & Associates enhance systems Parts including monitors, drives, cards and more Free estimate 549-4382

ENTERTAINMENT

Gronk a high energy entertainer original cover band call Chris at 253-5996

FOR RENT

Blue room for rent 2 cats, a lake, and an espresso machine $215 + Call Juan at 586-4362

Fridge rentals 253-9742 free delivery

Move in now! Center of town $300/mo flat Call Dana 253-7799

FOR SALE AUDIO

Stereo equipment used/reconditioned, area's largest selection, priced to sell! Also tv's, vcr's, dj/ pa equipment, instruments etc. We buy , sell, trade Call SAV Exchange, 8am-9pm 256-0941

FOR SALE

Adrock's Puma Clydes autographed Fresh bboy artifact Buy em 4 freshness 545-7875 ask 4 Beety

Brand new tires 215/75 r14 Toyo touring radials 253-4012

Dorm fridge $75 or b/o 253-7349

Dorm fridge $30 obo 253-2385 Reg

Dorm fridge 5 cu ft $75 Call Jon 549-2648

Hundreds of quality shareware programs for $3.49 ea! 584-7780 for free list

Macintosh computer Complete system including printer only $500 Call Chris at 800-789-5685

Pagers at Pioneer Valley Knife and Tool 549-7331

Snowboards, Burton Performer Elite and Sims Shredder $75 a piece Call Dan at 549-0367

Solid oak triple dresser

Excellent condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253-9764

Tandy computer system w/ drives, mon, printer Tons of software Asking 325 or bo Call Jing @ 7-2195

Watch batteries, ear piercing, eyeglass and jewelry repairs, great earrings, gifts from glass to gold, custom designed jewelry Silversmith Designs 264 N Pleasant St Amherst 253-3574

FREE

Free kittos, white/ blue eyes deaf Call 665-7756

HELP WANTED

$363.60/wk Earn money college T shirts Profit $363 60 Risk Free Choose from 18 designs Free catalogs 1-800-700-4250

Babysitter/ mother's helper in Amherst Sat and/or Sun mornings 8:30-12:30 Infant experience car, non-smoking $5/hr Call Robin 253-0680 9am-9pm please

Cruise ships now hiring earn up to $2000+/ month working on cruise ships or land tour companies World travel Seasonal and full time employment available No experience necessary For more information call 1-206-634-0468 ext C50011

Drivers wanted Trattoria Gepperto Italian restaurant, 1117 N Pleasant St Amherst Apply in person after 3:00 pm 549-7777

Earn $25 in 2 hours. Seniors and first year grads wanted for research study dealing with the EPA Call Sharon 256-8092

International Employment— make up to $2000 $4000 +/ mo teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan, or S Korea No teaching background or Asian languages required For info call 206-632-1146 ext J50011

Part time manager trainee Firestone needs assistant manager Flexible work schedule20-25 hours/week Call Frank in Northampton at 586-1584 ($8/hour)

Receive up to 288,000 dollars in 18 months! For your amazing free report call 413-525-6480 Mon-Fri 8am-5pm

Spring break '95 Sell trips, earn cash and go free! Student Travel Services is now hiring campus representatives Lowest rates to Jamaica, Cancun, Daytona, and Panama City Beach Call 1-800-648-4849

Wanted!!! America's fastest growing travel company seeking individuals to promote trips Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida! Easy free travel, fantastic pay 1-800-426-7710

Woman needed Mon-Fri 4-6pm lite cooking, cleaning up plus caring for 2 year old Temp 2-3 months call Michele 256-8022

Workstudy position available $5 50 hr/ask for the office work for public foundation Call Nancy at Peace Development Fund 256-8306

HEY ANDY

Happy B-Day Thanks for 21 yrs of giving a damn

LOST

Gold cat bangle bracelet Please contact Trinity 253-3553

PERSONALS

Happy Birthday Brandon. I wanted to get you something no one probably ever got you, before! Have a great 18th B-day! I love you Jill

Happy Birthday Scott.
Try not to get too high on sunflower seeds Best wishes -Melissa

PINNOCHIO'S

Hiring drivers; full or part time Call 256-4110 or stop by 30 Boltwood Walk Ask for Bob

PRINCESS MEG

I love you You are beautiful Love Andy

RESUME WRITING

We specialize in writing resumes and cover letters Over a decade of experience, close to campus 549-0367

ROOMMATE WANTED

1F roommate needed after Oct 2 Single in 2 bdrm apt $200/mo incl heat/hot water Jan or Ruth 256-0954

Female roommate wanted to share a large bedroom in a three bedroom condo $240 /month includes hot water Washer, dryer, garage Call 256-4988

Male/female, south Amherst, $275+ Electric/heat Great house wooded about 4 miles from campus H253-5531 W256-0870

RUSH SIGMA KAPPA

Wanted fun, down to earth, friendly, social UMass women to attend Sigma Kappa's open rush Please join us Sept 27 & 28 8-9pm, Oct 2 12-3pm Call for info 256-0987 We are located at 19 Allen St behind Hillel House

SERVICES

Computer bulletin board system The Perimeter Scan Phone 3-4040 19200 baud -8N1 Sysop Ralmon

Ernie's pet sitting service Call for more info 549-0838

Fundraising choose from 3 different fundraisers lasting either 3 or 7 days No investment Earn $$$ for your group plus personal cash bonuses for yourself Call 1-800-932-0528 ext 65

I'll sew for you Alterations, buttons, hems, repairs Cal Allison 546-0283

Legal questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee paying students Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Model search, The 1994 Glamour Models national model search continues Local last shoots now being conducted by First Impressions Photography Beginners and experienced models Males, females, all categories welcome $17-523-0367

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support 549-1906

SCHOLARSHIPS

Apply for private scholarships- we guarantee one or your money back -- price $45 00 for more information call Janice 585-0977

WANTED

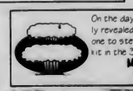
Attn Drama and medieval performers 2 UMass alumni seek medieval performer, juggelers, armourer to oversee games of skill and inspire guests at their local 15th century wedding Please have costuming and desire for a good time Bill/ Irene 584-4703

Campus representative Kodak products spring break trips "guaranteed" best prices + incentives Cancun, Nassau, Jamaica S Padre + Florida We handle the bookkeeping You handle the sales Call 1-800-727-4432

The Collegian understands your needs. We hear your concerns and are sympathetic to your worries. In fact we have taken measures to insure that we deal with those issues...

The Collegian ...
Looking out for our readers who are looking out for us as we are looking out for those who are...

Spirit Haus
Refrigerator Rentals
256-8433
253-5384



On the day of the apocalypse Gail finally revealed to Bridget that she was the one to steal her 'Mrs. Pretty' make-up kit in the 3rd grade.
Mass Daily Collegian
"Make Amends Now"

We believe in the Man in the Moon
We believe in the Creek Fairy
Jack and the magic bean
And, to top it all,
we know the Commonwealth Daily Collegian
Looks like you're gonna be alright

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS CLUB

More than 25 aerobics classes a week!!

Join now for our 15 week Semester Special ($169) & get a free HFC T-Shirt!

The Area's Most Complete Club • 256-6446
90 Gatehouse Road
"Off Rt. 9 2 miles East of Town Center"

• PVTA bus route to Rolling Green •
• pool • aerobics • aqua-aerobics •
• steps • nautilus • racquetball •
• free weights • jacuzzi • sauna •
• massage • bikes • tennis •
• rowers • treadmills •

© 1994 Citibank (South Dakota) N.A.

HOW TO HANG ON TO YOUR DOUGH.

(WITHOUT CRAMPING YOUR STYLE.)

✍ Separate "needs" from "wants."
Hint: A bed is a need. A Mr. Microphone is a want.

✍ Split the bill but only pay your share.
Why put in for someone else's swordfish if all you got was soup?

✍ Set aside money for emergencies.
Unless you'd rather call your parents for it instead.

✍ Keep your eye on your wallet.
Have a Citibank Classic card in case you lose it. The Lost Wallet℠ Service can get you emergency cash,* a new card usually within 24 hours and help replacing vital documents.

*Based on available cash line

WE'RE LOOKING OUT FOR YOU.℠
To apply, call 1-800-CITIBANK.

Apply for the Citibank Classic card by completing the application in this issue or by calling 1- 800 - CITIBANK

The head of the pack

Goalie Mark Wolf is in the midst of his best season yet. The senior leads the A-10 with 0.82 goals against average for the 3-3-1 men's soccer team.

Smokers lose the right to inhale in Newman

Smoking at the Newman Center is now a thing of the past. Where will a student be able to smoke in peace? See story on page 3.

Writer wins lawsuit over TV show concept

A screenwriter was awarded damages in a suit alleging "Northern Exposure" was a copy of the writer's 1981 script. See Arts & Living, page 5.

Extended Forecast

Mostly cloudy, chance of afternoon showers, highs in the mid-60s the rest of the week. Tomorrow the rain will be in the early morning with night time temperatures in the low 50s.

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 67	HIGH: 65	HIGH: 67
LOW: 55	LOW: 45	LOW: 51

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 12 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Wednesday, September 28, 1994

Police claim reported racial attack a hoax

By Darienne J. Hosley
Collegian Staff

Police and district attorney officials said yesterday that they believe an Amherst Junior High School student fabricated a series of racist incidents that spurred an outpouring of anger and frustration from students, parents and community leaders.

Amherst Chief of Police Donald N. Maia said he and Northwestern District Attorney Elizabeth D. Scheibel are seeking criminal complaints against a 13-year-old female student for "intentionally and knowingly making false reports of a crime to the police."

The unnamed student, a Black Muslim who lives in Amherst, first reported receiving two threatening notes in her locked school locker on Sept. 8, police said.

She reported receiving two more notes the next day, and on Sept. 12 said she had been assaulted in a second-floor bathroom.

Gus Sayer, superintendent of the Amherst-Pelham School District, said the student claimed two girls approached her from behind, tightened a scarf around her neck and threatened her.

The notes were signed "KKK" and included threats to the girl and another student, Maia said. Sayer said one note included a picture of a hanged Black person.

The teen-ager stayed out of school until Sept. 20 and was accompanied by a personal aide hired by the school, Maia said, and that day she produced another note from her backpack.

Police confiscated the note and the backpack and found "several pieces of evidence" suggesting the incidents are a hoax, according to the chief. He said the paper the notes were written on were the same as the notebook paper in her backpack.

"The prints of two notes were still embedded in the following pages of the notebook," Maia said.

Police have filed complaints against the student and are waiting for a show cause hearing to be scheduled in Hampshire County District Court.

No motivation for faking the alleged incidents was offered by police. "I can't hazard a guess," Maia said, adding that the investigation is continuing.

School officials said they have not yet taken any disciplinary action against the student, but she has not attended classes since reporting the fifth note.

Sayer said the student will probably face disciplinary consequences if the police's allegations hold true.

About 70 junior high students walked out of the school on Sept. 16 to protest the alleged attack.

The next day, the Amherst Community of Concerned Parents, Students and Educators rallied over what many people in the community feel is a history of racism — both subtle and overt — in the Amherst school system.

A number of students and parents have told of threatening notes and other racially-motivated incidents that weren't brought to the attention of school officials or police.

Co-Principal John Burrutto said one such note was reported last spring to the police and was followed by a letter to parents and a school-wide discussion.

Sayer said he did not learn of the complaints filed by the police until yesterday morning. A letter would again be sent to parents, he said.

Responding to criticism of the school's handling of the most recent reports, co-Principal Wendy Kohler said faculty and students have engaged in informal discussions in addition to the school district's focus on diversity issues.

"When a situation is of a serious nature and involves police investigation, we have an obligation of confidentiality and cooperation with the police in respect to the investigation and the rights of minors," she said.

JUAN JOSE CHACON QUIROS / COLLEGIAN
Amherst Police Chief Donald Maia

Public school racism is not always blatant

By Darienne J. Hosley
Collegian Staff

Allegations of threatening, racist acts in the Amherst Junior High School have pushed the problem of racism in the schools into the community spotlight.

The Amherst Police Department's claim that a student lied about a series of racially harassing incidents will not cancel tonight's meeting on the issue, according to Reynolds Wilson, president of the Amherst NAACP branch and director of the University's minority engineering program.

"It's unfortunate if that was the case, that it's not true," he said. "[Racism] is a societal problem that surfaces in schools across the country and Amherst has not escaped."

Members of the UMass Black Student Union will attend the meeting, scheduled to begin at 6:30 p.m. in the junior high school cafeteria.

If the most recent claims prove false, the underlying issue of discrimination and racism still must be addressed, said Amherst-Pelham School District Superintendent Gus Sayer.

"With 1,000 kids from very different backgrounds, there is potential for some acts of violence," he said.

"We don't have many blatant incidents like this one, or this one was supposed to be. But there's an ongoing concern about the schools and the atmosphere that we will continue to address."

Questions about the truthfulness of a Black student's claim that she was assaulted should not overshadow the importance of examining racism in its more subtle forms, according to Helen E. Page, an assistant professor of anthropology at UMass and an Amherst resident for four years.

Turn to SCHOOL, page 3

Military active in Haiti; first U.S. fatality

By Jeffrey Ulbrich
Associated Press

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — American troops expanded their mission Tuesday from disarming the Haitian military to taking up posts around the Parliament building and City Hall in anticipation of Haiti's return to civilian rule.

The U.S. forces suffered their first fatality Tuesday. An American soldier was found shot to death at hillside mansion being prepared for legislators returning to Haiti for Wednesday's Parliament session.

Pentagon spokesman Dennis Boxx said the soldier's death was being investigated as "an apparent suicide." He was part of the 10th Mountain Division from Fort Drum, N.Y., and his identity was not immediately released.

Military police strung concertina wire in front of the white colonaded Parliament building, a day before the Haitian legislative body was to begin discussing a bill authorizing amnesty for the country's top military leaders.

The amnesty measure was part of a deal worked out Sept. 18 between the U.S. delegation led by former President Carter and Haiti's military junta.

A soldier posted on the roof of the Parliament scanned the area with binoculars, and others took up posts at the gate. Army vehicles stood watch in front of the building.

Small crowds of Haitians gathered in front of the building, and others sat under trees in a park across the street, watching the U.S. Army activity.

At City Hall, U.S. military police in armored vehicles were posted inside the compound and Army Humvees, machine guns mounted on their tops, took up guard just outside.

Mayor Evans Paul, exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide's former campaign manager, is expected to come out of hiding and return to his office on Thursday, U.S. officials said.

Paul, who had been targeted for assassination, has been out of sight for most of the three years since Aristide — Haiti's first democratically elected president — was overthrown by the military. The first U.S. fatality came as American troops were refurbishing the Villa d'Accueil, a Haitian state guest house during the dictatorship of Jean-Claude Duvalier that now houses the independent Electoral Council, which is to oversee elections. "They found him dead," said U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schrager. "They don't know if this was a sniper or self-inflicted."

But Boxx said in Washington that the shooting was being investigated as "an apparent suicide."

Witnesses said they heard two shots about 11 a.m. on the northern side of the Villa d'Accueil, adjacent to a private golf course and country club.

Helicopters hovered over the area after the shooting, and platoons of American soldiers stood guard behind twin rows of concertina wire. They walked openly, however, showing no signs of the tension that would follow a sniper killing. They refused to talk about the death.

Another 142 refugees from camps at the U.S. base in Cuba came home voluntarily Tuesday. One, Vilia Picant, said she had mixed feelings about returning.

"I spent all my savings, $60, to leave and now we'll have to start all over," said the young woman, her 2-year-old son by her side and another baby due soon.

In the capital, not all welcomed the U.S. preparations for Wednesday's special Parliament session.

Hundreds missing, feared dead after ferry sinks in Baltic Sea

By Matti Huuhtanen
Associated Press

HELSINKI, Finland — An Estonian ferry carrying more than 850 people capsized and sank in a storm in the Baltic Sea early Wednesday, and officials said hundreds of people were missing and feared dead.

Eight hours after the ferry Estonia sank, Finnish authorities said 50 people had been rescued from the 54-degree water. The sinking threatened to become one of the worst passenger ship disasters in recent years.

"We saw about 40 small lifeboats," said Swedish rescue helicopter pilot Stefan Carneros. "Unfortunately, most of them were empty." He said waves in the area were as much as 20 feet high.

Stormy seas and winds topping 56 mph were preventing rescue operations near the site of the disaster, about 23 miles from the Finnish island of Uto off the country's southwestern coast.

Rescue ships from Finland and Sweden were at the scene. Estonian authorities said they were sending rescue crews. At least five other passenger ferries also were trying to find victims in the stormy, dark waters.

The Estonia sank sometime after midnight (6 p.m. EDT). The ferry sent out a distress signal before it went down.

At least a dozen survivors were rescued by another ferry, the Mariella, said its information officer, Per Erik Sederqvist. At least 10 others were brought aboard the ferry Symphony, said Harry M. Whipple, an American passenger on the Symphony.

Four people — a kitchen helper, orchestra member and two passengers — arrived between 2 and 3 a.m., and then six more were brought by helicopter at about 6 a.m., he said.

Turn to FERRY, page3

Race isn't an issue for men only bell hooks addresses rage, race and feminism in her new book

By Matthew Pottinger
Collegian Correspondent

Renowned feminist theorist and cultural critic bell hooks spoke to a full house at Bowker Auditorium last night. Among the topics she discussed were feminist discourse on race and the mass media's distortion of African Americans' rage.

"Public discourse on race tends to always be presented to us as a discussion between men," hooks said.

bell hooks is a pseudonym used by Gloria Watkins, an English professor at City College in New York. She does not capitalize her writing name as a proper noun.

In discussing the conception that the only relevant Black intellectuals in America today are men, hooks cited as an example an article on Afrocentrism in yesterday's issue of the Boston Globe.

"Every Black speaker they made reference to was a Black male," she said.

hooks is a nationally recognized author of personal empowerment and issues of race, gender and class.

hooks claimed "the whole contemporary discourse of race and racism is really seeing a sort of renewal from feminist thinking and feminist discussion," noting that "in so many ways the feminist discussions of race and racism have been much more visionary and much more positive [than men's]."

hooks said the mass media portrayal of the man who shot passengers on a Long Island commuter train last year was misleading.

hooks claimed that "unlike mass media, Black folks can recognize that it is ethically and morally wrong to kill folks even as we can also sympathize with mental illness [which is perhaps caused by the white supremacist patriarchy]."

She argued that by portraying the man's rage as exclusively aimed toward Whites rather than against Whites and Blacks alike, the "White-dominated mass media" used the incident to continue a long line of what Black novelist Toni Morrison calls "race-talk."

In defining "race-talk," she quoted from an editorial by Morrison entitled "On the Backs of Blacks." Morrison criticized the media's daily insertion "of racial crime and symbols which have no meaning other than oppressing African Americans to the lowest level of the racial hierarchy."

On the issue of representation of Black Americans by popular icons, hooks cited the film The Bodyguard as an example of a positive, albeit accidental, intervention on racist and sexist assumptions.

hooks, who said she saw the film 10 times, found it refreshing that the leading role in a box office hit was played by a Black woman.

As she signed copies of her new book, Killing Rage, yesterday afternoon, hooks spoke on the ways people can intervene on negative representations in a society dominated by consumerism. She used the O.J. Simpson case as an example.

"If people weren't watching it, it wouldn't be happening," she said. "We have this voyeuristic public which is eager to consume this.

"We have to exercise our power as consumers, and we can only do that through certain kinds of awareness and that's what education and critical consciousness is about."

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN
bell hooks speaks with students while signing copies of her book yesterday in the Campus Center.

Accident injures man in wheelchair

By Kelly Spang
Collegian Staff

AMHERST — A man in a wheelchair was struck by a car on Triangle Street last night in front of Copy Cat Print Shop.

The Amherst Police Department was at the scene but refused to disclose any details pending completion of their report. Police declined to reveal the identity of the man.

The unidentified man was taken by ambulance to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton at around 7:30 p.m. Police refused to discuss his condition.

Cicely Klolb of Northampton, driver of the Volkswagen that struck the man, said she was driving when she suddenly saw a man in the wheelchair sitting in the middle of the road.

Klolb said she was driving in second gear and came to a stop as she hit the man.

"I just don't even know," Klolb said. "Nothing like this has every happened to me before."

The accident occurred during a heavy rain shower.

Before police arrived on the scene, the man was laying in the road to the left-hand side of the car towards the middle of the street on his back. He appeared to be conscious.

The wheelchair, still in the middle of the road after the man was transported to the hospital, was crumpled on the ground in front of the car.

Three police cruisers blocked off one lane of traffic on Triangle Street heading toward Main Street.

Klolb said the police told her this sort of incident has happened before involving the same man and that police knew the man by face.

Klolb said the only damage to her car was a piece of metal that came loose from the front end.

Police officials said a report would be available this morning detailing the events. As of last night, Klolb was not cited for any violations.

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN
An Amherst police officer directs traffic around the scene of an accident that sent a wheelchair-bound man to the hospital.

It's Back to School Time

10% off with Student I.D.

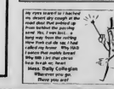
Not valid with other discounts
Does not apply to oil changes
Discount valid only at time of purchase
offer expires 10/16/94

Free Midas Shuttle to Campus

MIDAS

MUFFLERS BRAKES SHOCKS STRUTS
COMPUTERIZED ALIGNMENT
RTE. 9/HADLEY
586-9991
Near Hampshire Mall

Dear Diary,
Last night when I was up in my favorite tree stargazing I began to ponder my fate. I realized that some of my favorite things were no longer part of the new pop culture, and that many of my best loved activities were out of style. I enjoyed Pac Man and now there is Mortal Combat II. My one Barbie was fine for all seasons, but now there is a Barbie for every month and special event. I used to think rollerskating around my neighborhood in my neon, shiny jacket with my name on the sleeve was fun, but now everybody has rollerblades and they can go much faster. I used to enjoy trips to the grocery store with my mom until she told me it was wrong to eat candy from the big bins. The more I sat and thought about how my interests were different than most others I remembered that I had read The Daily Collegian that morning, and I knew that it was the hip thing to do because everybody was reading it. Wow! The Daily Collegian saved me from an identity crisis! I climbed happily down from the tree.



For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Wednesday, Sept. 28

Lecture — Warren Blumenfeld, Lesbian, Gay & Bisexual Studies Lecture Series, Campus Center room 904, UMass; 12 p.m. to 1:30 p.m. Free.
Meeting — UMass Grenadier and Gaming Society, Open House, 7 p.m. to 12 a.m., Campus Center room 101. Information: 527-0252.
Hillel — Student council meeting, Hillel House Conference room, 7:30 p.m. Information: 549-1710
Meeting — Debate Union meeting, 5:30 p.m., East Machmer lobby, all interested please attend.

Thursday, Sept. 29

Music — Recital, Monica Jakuc, fortepiano, Sweeney Concert Hall, Smith College, 4:15 p.m. to 5:05 p.m. Free.
Film — Fantastic Cinema: Legends, Myths, Adventures, Herter Hall, UMass, Presented by the University Gallery, 7:30 p.m. Free.
Concert — Edmund Battersby, fortepiano, Seeney Concert Hall, Smith College, 8 p.m. Call 527-7664 for admission prices.
Special Event — Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Speakers Bureau orientation for returning members, Crampton House, UMass, Free, 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Information: 545-4824.
French Club — Meeting at 7 p.m., The Cafe Mediterranean, Amherst. New members are encouraged to come.
UVC — General meeting for UMass students interested in joining UVC's "UMass Update" news team, 7 p.m., at Union Video Center. Information: 545-1336.
Info Meeting — 1995 UMass Program in Sienna, Italy, 7:30 p.m., Herter Hall, 3rd floor lounge.
MASSPIRG — General meeting, 7 p.m. in Earthfoods. Information: 545-0199, or stop by the office in the Student Union room 423B.

Friday, Sept. 30

Pep Rally — Get psyched for Homecoming, Southwest horseshoe, Passing Strangers and many other talents performing, 5:30 p.m.
Film — Tearjerker classic E.T., Gamble Auditorium, Mount Holyoke College. Show times: 7 p.m. and 9:15 p.m., $2.50.
Film — She's Gotta Have it, a very sexy movie, Campus Center Theater, Amherst College. Show times: 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m., $1.75.
Music — Annual Mutiband Pops, showcase of 500 performers, Mullins Center, UMass, 8 p.m.. Call TicketMaster for prices at 733-2500 or call Mullins Center Box office at 545-0505.
Theater — Brenda Wong Aoki in The Queen's Garden, Bowker Auditorium, UMass, 8 p.m., $6 or $3.50 for students and elders.
Concert — James David Christie, organ, Abbey Chapel, Mount Holyoke College, 8 p.m. Call 527-7664 for admission prices.
Pianist — Ruth Laredo, Buckley Recital Hall, Amherst College, 8 p.m. Free.

Saturday, Oct. 1

Film — "Art to Art," profiles of Asian American women artists, Hillyer 117, Smith College, 2 p.m.
Conference — "Write Angles" for writers at one-day Conference at the School of Management, UMass. Information: 545-0474.
Theater — Tales from the Pacific Rim, Bowker auditorium, UMass, 8 p.m.
Music — Schumann Abend, faculty recital, Bezanson Recital Hall, UMass, 8 p.m.
Festival — Apple Harvest and Crafts Festival, Amherst Town Common, 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Other Activities and Upcoming Events

Volunteers Needed - Campus Pond Cleanup at UMass, Sept. 27 and 28, from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. T-shirts and refreshments will be provided. Call: 545-2317.
Community Service - The Companion Program is looking for volunteers. Call 253-2591.
Internships - MASSPIRG is offering internships for the fall semester. Earn course credits. Information: 423B Student Union or call 545-0199.
Earn credits - The Peer Education Program on Sexual Harassment is recruiting 30 undergraduate men and women for its one-credit training session this semester. Information: Mike, 546-0365.
The Homework Club — Volunteers needed to help in afterschool program to help children from non-English speaking family do their homework. Information: Scott, Heap or Seng, 253-0696.

August the First
Beads
Jewlery Supplies
Finished Jewlery
44 Main Street, Amherst · 256-0276
22 Main St, Northampton · 586-7182
20% off until Oct. 3 with this Ad

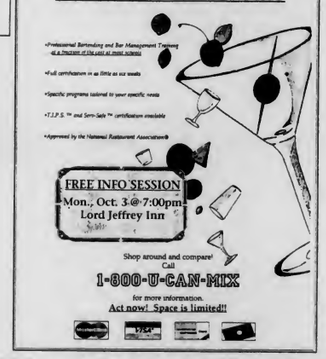
TOTAL FITNESS
STAIRMASTERS · LIFECYCLES · TREADMILLS · LIFESTEPS
KEISER · NAUTILUS · FREE WEIGHTS NORDIC TRACK
STUDENT SPECIAL $139
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST AEROBICS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 WEST ST. ON BUS ROUTE OPEN 7 DAYS

On the day of the apocolypse God finally revealed to Bridget that she was the one to steal her "Mrs Pretty" make up kit in the 3rd grade.
Mass Daily Collegian
"Make America Now"

RUSH
ALPHA CHI OMEGA
Thursday
September 29,1994
6 - 8 p.m.

DON'T BE LEFT OUT IN THE COLD . . .
THIS WINTER . . . JOIN THE . . .
UMASS SKI CLUB
SKI CLUB MEETING
GENERAL INFORMATION
7 PM SUNDAY OCT 2, 1994
EARTHFOODS RM
Student Union

RETURNING TO THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS THIS FALL...
THE MOST SUCCESSFUL NATIONAL BARTENDING SCHOOL
PRESENTS
UNIVERSITY BARTENDING™



FREE INFO SESSION
Mon., Oct. 3 @ 7:00pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn
Shop around and compare!
Call
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
for more information.
Act now! Space is limited!!

Gain Valuable "Real World" Experience on Campus!

The Collegian Business Office is looking for ambitious, organized Sophomore SOM majors for the position of

Associate Business Manager

Direct supervision received from the Collegian business manager, as well as the assistant business manager. Applications may be obtained at:

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center (the basement)

Resumes and cover letters may be directed to:

Michael McRae, Business Manager

Application Deadline: October 17

The Collegian is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer

The Boston Globe Offers UMass Students Delivery for 50% OFF

UMass/Amherst	Full Year 9/25 - 5/14	Fall Term 9/25 - 12/18
6 Days MON-SAT	$52.00	$25.25
5 Days MON-FRI	$30.00	$14.25
SUNDAY ONLY	$22.00	$11.00

To order a Boston Globe subscription ON CAMPUS ONLY mail payments to:

The Boston Globe
Campus Program, P.O. Box 2378
Boston, MA 02107
or call 1-800-858-4275 ext.0

If you're a student living OFF CAMPUS we have special discount rates for you too...
Just call 1-800-622-6631 ext.549

Smokers' safe haven is no more

By Damien Becker
Collegian Correspondent

The Newman Center went smoke-free earlier this month in accordance with the town of Amherst's comprehensive smoking ban.

All businesses in Amherst are now non-smoking, except for the bars that will lose their smoking rights in July 1995.

Amherst's anti-smoking law followed the University of Massachusetts ban that went into effect November of last year.

The only places on campus where smoking is presently allowed are certain rooms of the Campus Center Hotel and designated areas in residential halls determined by Housing Services.

The Newman Center, which is considered part of the town of Amherst rather than part of the University, allowed smoking last year, offering a haven to smokers on campus.

Cigarettes are still on sale at the center but smokers are forbidden to light up until they step out of doors.

There are different opinions about the smoking ban's effect on business at the Newman Center.

"It's ruining their business," said one smoker outside the center. "Look inside. Usually at this time [5 p.m.] people would be in there smoking a butt, grabbing an early dinner or a cup of coffee. Now it's empty."

The Newman Center Cafeteria Director Dicky Buffum said, "It's still a little early in the semester, so it's hard to tell. But so far there doesn't seem to be much of a difference. It seems like the people who don't smoke in here because they can't smoke have been replaced by people who are happy with the policy."

The only part of the Newman Center that seemed to be suffering from a lack of smokers were the arcade games, Buffum said.

So far, Buffum said, there have been no problems with enforcing the ban. There are numerous "No Smoking" signs, donated to the center by the Amherst Board of Health, posted throughout the cafeteria.

"I'm actually surprised at the lack of resistance, especially considering the population around here," Buffum said.

Buffum also said there was a plan last year to allocate one room for smoking with an exhaust fan but due to the new law, this will be impossible.

The Amherst Board of Health decided to make Amherst smoke-free in March which had large support from residents.

■ ferry

Continued from page 1

"What's interesting is that as cold as it is they just brought these six aboard," Whipple, who is the publisher of The Cincinnati Enquirer, said by telephone to the Associated Press.

"I can see life rafts all over the place," he said, counting at least 30 black-and-orange inflatable rafts, six to 10 of which had capsized. Whipple said the rafts were enclosed, preventing him from seeing whether there was anyone on them, and he said helicopters were checking each raft.

The Estonia was listed as carrying 867 people — 679 passengers and 188 crew members, said Finnish Coast Guard officer Ilkka Karppala. It was en route from the Estonian capital, Tallinn, to Stockholm, Sweden, Karppala said.

Those aboard included 444 Swedes and about 200 Estonians. The nationalities of the other passengers and crew were not immediately known.

The German-built Estonia was equipped with several restaurants, bars, a duty-free shop and a sauna. It belongs to the E-Line shipping company, which is owned by the government Estonian Shipping Company.

One of the rescued passengers, a Swedish man in his mid-20s, told rescuers the disaster happened too quickly for most people to prepare, according to Sederqvist.

"He said it all happened so quickly that apparently in the space of five minutes, the ship listed and sank," Sederqvist said to Finnish radio. "He himself didn't know how he ended up in the water."

■ school

Continued from page 1

"This incident and its invalidation could mean people will breathe a sigh of relief and say, 'Now we can go back into denial,'" she said.

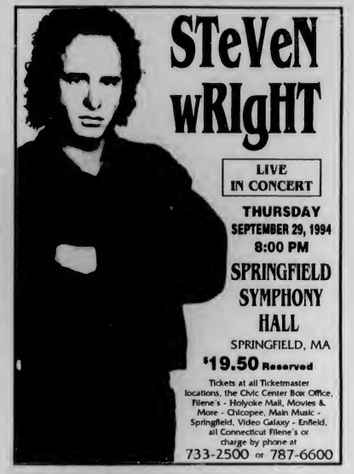
"I think that people need to believe that there is no racism because of the multicultural flavor of Amherst and the Five College community so we have an image of being progressive."

Page said she has heard "too many parents' stories" about issues of racism in the Amherst schools to disregard the most recent claims.

Digging in the dirt

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN
Despite yesterday's rain and mud, Chancellor David K. Scott lent a hand to the effort to clean up the campus pond.

SUICIDAL?
LAY IT ON THE LINE.
617-247-0220
The Samaritans



STeVeN wRIgHT
LIVE IN CONCERT
THURSDAY
SEPTEMBER 29, 1994
8:00 PM
SPRINGFIELD SYMPHONY HALL
SPRINGFIELD, MA
$19.50 Reserved
Tickets at all Ticketmaster locations, the Civic Center Box Office, Filene's - Holyoke Mall, Movies & More - Chicopee, Main Music - Springfield, Video Galaxy - Enfield, all Connecticut Filene's or charge by phone at 733-2500 or 787-6600

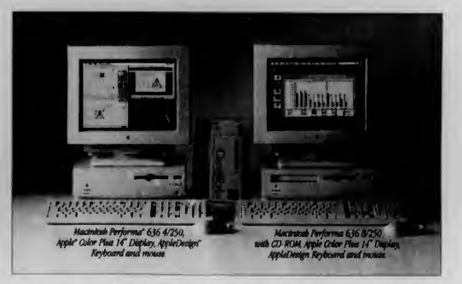
haircuts always $10!
BUCCI
a hair space
29 N PLEASANT ST AMHERST 256-0733

Research Interviewers
Evening and Weekend Hours
No Selling Involved
Interesting part-time telephone assignments to collect data on a variety of research topics. Absolutely no selling involved. Computer/typing skills required. Monday-Friday, 5pm-10pm, Saturday 11am-5pm and Sunday 1pm-9pm. Must work a minimum of 20 hours per week. Start at $5.25/hour with paid training and earn up to $7.00/hour.
We're in the Mountain Farms Mall which is a stop on the free bus line. Interested candidates, please call between 9am-7pm, Monday-Friday, (413) 586-8615.
Abt Associates, Telephone Research Center, Mountain Farms Mall, Rt. 9, Hadley, MA 01035. An Equal Opportunity Employer.
Abt

TOTAL FITNESS
STAIRMASTERS · LIFECYCLES · TREADMILLS · LIFESTEPS
KEISER · NAUTILUS · FREE WEIGHTS NORDIC TRACK
STUDENT SPECIAL $139
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST AEROBICS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 WEST ST. ON BUS ROUTE OPEN 7 DAYS

For less than a dollar a day, both will give you the power you need to survive this semester.

One java, piping hot, no sugar and hold the moo juice.



Macintosh Performa 636 4/250, Apple Color Plus 14" Display, AppleDesign Keyboard and mouse.
Macintosh Performa 636 8/250, with CD ROM, Apple Color Plus 14" Display, AppleDesign Keyboard and mouse.

With an Apple Computer Loan, it's now easier than ever to buy a Macintosh personal computer. In fact, with Apple's special low interest and easy terms, you can own a Mac for as little as $23 per month.* Buy any select Macintosh now, and you'll also get something no other computer offers: the Apple student software set. It includes a program designed to help you with all aspects of writing papers. A personal organizer/calendar created specifically for students (the only one of its kind). And the Internet Companion to help you tap into on-line resources for researching your papers. It even includes ClarisWorks, an integrated package complete with database, spreadsheet, word processing software and more. All at special low student pricing. With an offer this good, it's the best time ever to discover the power every student needs. The power to be your best.* Apple

POWER through it.

UNIVERSITY STORE
CAMPUS CENTER 545-2619
M-F 9 am - 5 pm
SAT 11 am - 3 pm

Talk to Apple Representatives & see the latest MACINTOSH PRODUCTS Sept. 27 & 28, on the concourse in front of the U Store.

Offer expires October 17, 1994, available only while supplies last. © 1994 Apple Computer, Inc. All rights reserved. Apple, the Apple logo, Macintosh, Performa and "The power to be your best." are registered trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. AppleDesign and Mac are trademarks of Apple Computer, Inc. ClarisWorks is a registered trademark of Claris Corporation. * $23 per month is an estimate based on an Apple Computer Loan of $1485.71 for a Performa 636 system. Prices and loan amounts are subject to change without notice. See your Apple Campus Reseller or representative for current system prices. A 5.5% loan origination fee will be added to the requested loan amount. The interest rate is variable, based on the commercial paper rate plus 5.35%. For the month of August 1994, the interest rate was 10.10%, with an APR of 11.36%. If your loan term with no prepayment penalty. The monthly payment shown assumes no deferment of principal or interest. Students may defer principal payments up to 4 years, or until graduation. Deferment will change your monthly payments. The Apple Computer Loan is subject to credit approval.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Darienne J. Hooley Editor in Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McKee Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Ganley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor
Position vacant Black Affairs Editor
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor
Evelyn A. Delerzo Multicultural Affairs Editor
Kelly Spaeg News Editor
Nathan K. Martin Photography Editor
Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Position vacant Women's Issues Editor
Martin I. Hellner Editorial Production Manager
John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Jen Roode Circulation Manager
Eric Abenaim Subscriptions Manager
Maureen Magerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Turley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Watching feathers fall down

When I was younger, my mother used to tell me I'd get a feather for every good deed I did. Eventually I'd have enough feathers to make wings and then I would be able to fly to heaven and be crowned with an official halo made of gold.

Having not grown up in a strictly religious home, the fear was never put into me that if I didn't have enough feathers, I'd end up falling into the fiery pits of hell. I know now that my mother meant to be poetic, but back then the idea of accumulating feathers was never much of an incentive to run out and do good. Other kids got gummy bears. I got feathers. . . so much for poetry.

I never truly believed I was a superhero but I suppose I never willfully admitted that I was human either.

E.C. Thomas

Feathers or no feathers, I was still a little angel in my mother's eyes. So, at 21, when I asked her what it meant to be a good person, she seemed utterly bewildered. I guess it hasn't hit her yet that her eyes have not always been on me. And well, when they weren't, I might as well have had two little red horns coming out of my head. And to be perfectly honest, those horns seem to keep getting bigger and bigger no matter how hard I try . . . and I have been trying.

There are two people in my life who are just inherently good. One has been my best friend since the seventh grade and the other I met in college. They have enough feathers to fly everyone in the valley to heaven. They are just extraordinary people who exude goodness. How they can be friends with a little devil like me, I've never been able to figure out. Maybe because they know I try.

In fact, during the nine years I've known my best friend, I've always tried to be like her. For nine years I've tried to figure out and understand why it is I get myself into so much trouble and she always seems to avoid it. And for those nine years, I've never had a clue.

I can't say what started my recent fascination with good and evil, but this summer I made a sincere promise to myself that I would be a good person this year. I was going to make every possible effort to avoid any and all potential forces of evil and just do good. Well, it's been nearly a month and I've never been so frustrated. While my friends are looking more and more like Raphael paintings, I'm feeling more and more like the Macintosh the Queen gave Snow White.

Of course I know there are certain people on this earth, and indeed at this school, who might very well be having afternoon tea with Satan every week. Luckily I don't believe I've gone to such extremes and I pray that I don't have that potential. But the other night my efforts at goodness were put to the test and I failed miserably. I might as well have been a duck flying across a hunting range — there were feathers falling everywhere. And to the two who got caught in the crossfire, my humblest apologies.

At different times the next day, I rather shamefully confessed my sins to the two guardian angels in my life. "I'm evil," I started. "I don't know how or why this happens to me, but I'm evil. I'm a magnet for it."

Of course both laughed. "You're being ridiculous," they each said. "You are not evil, you just made a mistake."

"Yeah, a rather large one," I pointed out.

"But a mistake all the same," they echoed.

Since both know of my concerted effort at goodness, they tried to be patient with me throughout the proclamations of my poisonous ways, but my best friend finally had heard enough.

"You are being ridiculous. What do you think is a good person anyway? Someone who doesn't make any mistakes? You are setting up these unrealistic expectations for yourself," she said sternly. "You made a mistake, and it's not as if you didn't have any help in making it either."

"So then what do you think is a good person?" I asked.

"You are a good person. An evil person is someone who has malicious intents and you are not anything near malicious. A good person is someone who thinks about others and is honest and genuine — which you are. But you are also human, you make mistakes, we all do."

Well, I never truly believed I was a superhero but I suppose I never willfully admitted that I was human either. Maybe accepting that fact is what I've needed all along. Trying to avoid and/or altogether conquer evil without any official membership to the Hall of Justice is really impossible. And to think I have always thought being Spiderman would be tough, this human thing has me going in circles.

Indeed being human means making mistakes. Some are bigger or more frequent or more humiliating than others, but they are nevertheless mistakes. And nowadays having the courage to face up to and possibly suffer through the consequences of them can often take more courage than being a superhero. Maybe having that courage is the key to what makes a good person.

More importantly, maybe I have a few more feathers than I thought I did.

E.C. Thomas is a Collegian columnist.

We're turning our backs on violence

The gun itself was nothing spectacular. It might have been a .38, or maybe a .22. There are millions of revolvers in America, in every city and town, and in thousands of homes owned by people whom you and I know and respect. This gun was different.

Thomas E. Akyali

It wasn't locked away in a suburban cellar, it wasn't intended to be used to defend anyone's home or family, nor was the owner a hunter or outdoorsman. This particular weapon was in a schoolbag, and that schoolbag lay about ten feet from the blackboard upon which my mother was outlining her lesson for the day. That's what bothers me.

Myriad viewpoints abound on the issue of gun control. Some gun ownership groups endorse a stance whereby our entire population might be equally armed. Such reasoning assumes that every well-adjusted citizen could pull the trigger when confronted by an armed assailant. With the criminal element aware that every victim might be armed, I can only imagine that muggers might be more inclined to shoot first and fastest.

Such a Wild West mentality is the antithesis of where our Natural Born Killers society needs to go. It is an unreasonable proposition that we arm our school teachers with high caliber handguns to protect them from the dangers inherent with modern schools. Besides, I don't think my 56- year-old mother is quick enough on the draw to defend herself while conjugating verbs.

What we need to do is consider unlicensed gun possession a more serious offense. By giving a gun license to any citizen who doesn't have a prior record of criminal or psychological problems, we can isolate the social element representing the greatest potential danger.

Just as prior DWIs would probably represent the population sector most likely to be driving without a license, law enforcement officials will be able to assume that anyone picked up with an unlicensed gun must either have a record, or have intention to use the gun to commit a crime. Furthermore the registration and serialization of every handgun and piece of ammunition, including computerized recording of when and to whom the weaponry was sold, will reinforce the criminality of unlicensed possession.

Undoubtedly the student detained by security officers in my mother's classroom last week will be back in the New York City school system eventually. Or perhaps he'll be transferred to another school in the district. He may even spend some time in a city reform program. But one day soon he'll be back at home, back where everyone can see that he's no worse off for the experience.

Certainly the focus on reform of young offenders is an admirable one, but to his peers the lack of punishment represents the laxness of our criminal justice system.

Only by giving school-aged first-time gun offenders a minimum sentence of at least one year, perhaps in an educational reformatory outside of his community, can we simultaneously educate the perpetrator and instill in our most violent communities a sense of respect for the law.

Over the long term, the incarceration of so-called "habitual criminals" may remove from inner-city schools the most incorrigible offenders. Perhaps one day the students at Adlai Stevenson High School will know unquestionably that if they bring a gun to school they will be punished harshly. Maybe then they will be able to focus on the demands of learning.

We need to wholeheartedly protect the interests of the educators and social workers who venture daily into these crime-ridden neighborhoods.

I want to know that my mother can go to work without fear. I want to rest assured that she is doing her job without worrying every time she turns her back on her classroom. So long as the atmosphere in our schools remain poisoned by violence, the real losers will be the students struggling against impossible odds to succeed.

Thomas Akyali is a UMass student.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

LOCAL PHARMACIST GILBERT QUAY HAD HEARD ENOUGH!
IT'S NOT FAIR! I'M A THIRD GENERATION DRUGGIST! YOU'LL RUIN ME!
NOW, GIL, YOU HAVE NOTHING TO WORRY ABOUT. WAL-MART WILL SERVE AS A MAGNET, OFFERING FOR ALL LOCAL SCRIPTS!
OH, RIGHT.
YOUR 20,000 SQ. FT. SUPERPHARMACY IS GOING TO ACT AS A DRAIN FOR MY POOR SO I'LL DRIVE STORE ? I DON'T THINK SO!
THEN SELL SOMETHING ELSE! LOCAL CRAFTS! CORN COBPIPES!
CORN COB PIPES?
I COULD SOURCE THEM FOR YOU, GIL.

Opinion/Editorial

LOOKING OVER YOUR CHART
...THERE YOU ARE...
I THINK IT'S TIME TO TRY ANOTHER APPROACH...
HEALTH CARE REFORM
SENDING YOU OVER TO THE LOBBYISTS FOR TESTS MAY HAVE BEEN A MISTAKE
TOLES
UNIVERSAL PRESS SYND.
©1994 THE BUFFALO NEWS

A simple term for simple minds

While flipping through one of the more popular current event magazines, I came across a curious term whose origins are unknown and whose application creates more confusion than lucidity.

Being of collegiate age and mildly influenced by the aspects of youth culture, I have been led to believe that it somehow applies to me as well as my peers. I imagine that the first time someone uttered the words "Generation X," it was as a fill-in-the-blank type expression to cover the youth of our society for lack of a better term.

Paul Sarkis

As time wore on the search for a more suitable term was abandoned and Generation X was stamped on everyone from eighth grade mall-rats to professionals just out of graduate school. So how did such a large portion of the populace gain the honor of being labeled by a variable?

It is simple really: those whose jobs entail creating and promoting labels could not possibly conceive the multiplicity they were attempting to somehow unify. They were bound by the laws of the past, and guided by the principles of business and finance. It is then plain to see why the elders of society could not see that this one generation was anything but one generation.

Born in the confusion of the early Seventies, we spent our childhood and adolescence under the threat of global annihilation. Whether or not we escaped this fate was almost academic considering the fact that we would still inherit a world decimated by those who came before us, a world riddled with the type of political and social ills that seem a harbinger for some Biblical Armageddon.

Is it really any wonder that from all of this was borne a generation whose only unifying theme could be "What's the Point?" That's the one question that the Baby Boomers, flower children and hippies alike never had to ask. So now as the middle-agers and over-the-hillers have come to realize how society has decayed through their ignorance and greed as they prepare to pass the flickering torch, it has become imperative to figure out who exactly they are passing it to.

Well then, it may be asked wherein lies the key to this distilled fragment of society? MTV? Not quite. The millionaires who control this operation have captured as few of the realities of life to an American Young Adult as Bill Clinton has captured approval rating points.

In their feeble attempt to create a pop culture, they have displayed some of the most inane, tacky and exceedingly boring broadcasting in the history of television. The majority of their audience is now comprised of pre-teens being led to believe that being a young adult is about dancing half-naked on the beach and resurrecting old T.V. shows for weekend marathons.

Kurt Loder's fierce journalistic style notwithstanding, MTV falls far short of defining the youth of America. So why is it this type of pseudo-culture is so often mistaken for our own? Once again greed rears its ugly head by forcing the movers and shakers of the '80s to create hideously moronic attempts at bridging the chasm (it may have been a gap five years ago) between generations in order to make a buck.

Every promotion, commercial and printed advertisement targeting young audiences is a farce of out-dated lingo with players clad in the latest mall fashions and some lame jingle resembling whatever is on the Billboard Top Ten.

Having failed miserably at their attempts to improve our world, it would seem logical that those trying to label our generation are getting nowhere fast and will soon be put out to pasture while we're left holding the bag.

Dismal as it may seem, the future remains perched on the limbs of our withered existence like so many vultures awaiting the final desperate gasps of a wounded gazelle. After all, the only certainty of the future is that it will come to be, and for all the increasingly misguided attempts at trying to predict and understand it, the only glimmer of hope that can be seen in the blackened horizon is that those who ruined today will not have the chance to spoil tomorrow.

For if our generation is understood, it will most certainly be subverted and reconditioned to a more normative philosophy. For this reason alone, let them be content with labeling us Generation X so they may remain as clueless in the ways of our society as they were to their own. lest we be robbed of the identity we will someday create ourselves, for better or worse.

Paul Sarkis is a UMass student.

The possibility of uncertainty

If you are a University of Massachusetts student like me and you have parents that are anything like mine, you might be a little frustrated by having everyone tell you what career to get into. My father has been relentlessly trying to get me to change my career choice ever since I told him what it was.

"I want to dance, Dad. I want to perform, choreograph and teach." There. I had said it. End of conversation. My mind was made up.

Laurel Kleinschmidt

Well, that was two years and three million lectures ago — lectures that I am still receiving today. He truly believes that someday all of his wisdom will reach me and I'll miraculously enroll myself in business and finance courses. Poor soul, he chooses to blind himself to the fact that math is my worst subject, not to mention the fact that I'd never be happy.

And that's what it's all about, isn't it folks? You have to pick something that you know in your heart is going to be rewarding for you. If you choose a career because Ma and Pa think you'd be great at it and you'd make tons of money doing it, but you loathe the job, doesn't that defeat the purpose? Life is so short, why not be happy with what you do?

For me, it's kind of tough. I hail from a family infested with accountants, lawyers and doctors. And that's just my mother's side. My father is a financial analyst whose job description now includes managerial duties.

My older sister has just graduated from Massachusetts College of Pharmacy with honors, is licensed, and makes 50 grand a year. My younger sister is a sophomore at Ripon College in Wisconsin, where she double majors in German and chemistry.

I, uh, just want to dance.

Yes, I do get frustrated when people automatically assume upon hearing my career choice that I'm "dumber than a doorknob," and "oh, isn't it too bad that she'll never live comfortably because as everyone knows, there's no money to be made in the arts, but bless her heart for trying, right?" Um. . . bite me.

What it really comes down to is this: THIS IS MY LIFE. I will do what I want with it, and hold myself fully responsible for all the consequences that occur as a direct result of my decisions. I want to move through space on a daily basis, feeling the warmth of the blood in my veins, the sweat on my skin, and the music in my ears.

I want to feel my muscles working, the soreness, the fatigue, and the callouses as they build up on the soles of my feet. I want to place my body in gut-wrenching positions to stretch it out, because it feels really good. The only reason I can say this and not really care about the money factor is that all of these feelings mean something. They make me feel alive.

I realize that my father is looking out for my best interests, and I love him dearly for it. But there comes a point in everyone's life when they have to start making up their own minds in regards to how they want to spend their time. Only you know how you want to spend the rest of your life and it all starts here, with your education.

While you are in college, you will make decisions and mistakes. You'll choose classes and change majors. At the end of it all if you truly feel comfortable with what that paper in your hand represents, you will be successful. No question about it.

My grandmother used to say that life has an abundance of two things: uncertainties and possibilities. I say, hold on to things in your life that you are certain of because these will bring you security and comfort when you need it most. When all of the external voices around you start to ring in your head, and the only thing you're sure of is that you are confused, listen to what your heart says. Believe me, it knows.

Laurel Kleinschmidt is a UMass student.

Columnists:

Please come and see Tracy before the week is out. Columnist photos will be taken this week and if you have any questions, please call 545-1491.

Letters policy:

The Collegian welcomes letters to the editor. Typed submissions are limited to 400 words and must include the author's name and phone number for identification purposes.

Arts & Living

Basquiat reconsidered at MHC

Whitney Museum curator to examine controversial artwork

By Tara MK Connelly
Collegian Staff

The work of controversial contemporary artist Jean-Michel Basquiat will be examined tomorrow night in a lecture at the Mount Holyoke College.

Thelma Golden, associate curator at the Whitney Museum in New York, will present "Reconsidering Basquiat" at 4 p.m. in Gamble Auditorium. The lecture is one of several programs being offered with the exhibition, Jean-Michel Basquiat: The Blue Ribbon Paintings at the MHC Art Museum.

Basquiat's meteoric rise to critical and financial success generated considerable discussion and controversy throughout the art world. Although his career ended with his death in 1988, the debate about his place in the history of twentieth century art continues.

MHC Art Museum curator Wendy Watson explained that the exhibition is an excellent opportunity to view an interesting example of contemporary American expressionism.

"There is a lot of controversial notions surrounding Basquiat," Watson said. "A lot of people thought he was just another '80s flash in the pan, but he had great talent."

Basquiat was heavily influenced by street culture and obsessed with the language and symbols of modern society. The artist possessed a powerfully absorptive style that he combined with an instinctive compositional elegance, brilliant, surprising color and bold lettering to express a unique interpretation of his environment.

His explorations of materialism, prejudice, sexuality and other contemporary issues have been fiercely criticized by some as sensationalist and vacuous. Others argue that his work should be exonerated for its raw, dynamic and brutally honest reflection of the modern world.

"He painted a series of 11 [paintings]. It was also around the time he first met Andy Warhol. Warhol and Basquait painted a group together and it was the first time he used the method of silkscreen on canvas," Watson said.

In an essay on Basquait's Blue Ribbon Paintings for the Whitney Museum of American Art journal, author Bruce Guenther wrote that, "to encounter the works of the late Jean-Michel Basquiat is to experience formation of an ambitious new visual language of global cultural fusion.

"One of the most compelling and complex artists to emerge from his generation, Basquait gleaned the encyclopedic debris of the late twentieth century to create a potent essay in cultural self-definition . . . Basquait's work gives immediate voice to the Multicultural realities of urban America on the brink of the second millennium."

The Blue Ribbon Paintings highlight the best of Basquait's revolutionary use of silkscreening that he created before his battle with cancer ended.

Thelma Golden is associate curator at the Whitney Museum of American art and branch director of the Whitney Museum at Philip Morris. A 1987 graduate of Smith College, Golden has taken part in the organization of a series of important and ground-breaking exhibitions, including the 1993 Whitney Biennial Exhibition and the Golden Element Inside Gold. She has also written numerous articles and essays and has lectured widely on American and African-American art.

The Mount Holyoke College Art Museum is open Thursday and Friday, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday and Sunday, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. This lecture, as well as admission to the museum, is free and open to the public.

Timecop tops weekend box office results

By John Horn
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The action film Timecop topped the box office and Terminal Velocity had a strong debut, while Quiz Show performed well in its first weekend of national release. Timecop's $8.2 million gross was padded by Saturday sneak previews for The River Wild, also produced by Universal Pictures. Income from sneaks are added to the films with which they play.

Terminal Velocity was second in ticket sales, Monday figures showed.

Quiz Show had a large per-screen average while playing in 219 locations.

Among new films, Tim Robbins' The Shawshank Redemption looked mildly promising, but Eric Stoltz's Sleep With Me was weak. A re-release of Schindler's List proved unpopular. The Top 20 movies at U.S. and Canadian theaters over the weekend, as compiled by Exhibitor Relations Co. from actual returns and studio estimates:

1. Timecop, Universal, $8.2 million, 2,251 locations, $3,665 per location, $23.9 million, two weeks.
2. Terminal Velocity, Disney, $5.5 million, 1,794 locations, $3,066 per location, $5.5 million, one week.
3. Forrest Gump, Paramount, $5.46 million, 2,365 locations, $2,308 per location, $263.6 million, 12 weeks.
4. Quiz Show, Disney, $2.9 million, 219 locations, $13,359 per location, $4.1 million, two weeks.
5. Clear and Present Danger, Paramount, $2.8 million, 1,791 locations, $1,539 per location, $112.9 million, eight weeks.
6. Natural Born Killers, Warner Bros., $2 million, 1,602 locations, $1,255 per location, $42.7 million, five weeks.
7. The Mask, New Line, $1.6 million, 1,674 locations, $939 per location, $108.6 million, nine weeks.
8. Milk Money, Paramount, $1.47 million, 1,328 locations, $1,107 per location, $15.1 million, four weeks.
9. True Lies, 20th Century Fox, $1.46 million, 1,251 locations, $1,171 per location, $139.4 million, 11 weeks.
10. Corrina, Corrina, New Line, $1.41 million, 972 locations, $1,457 per location, $16.2 million, seven weeks.

Judge rules 'Northern Exposure' idea unfairly swiped from screenwriter

By John Horn
Associated Press

COURTESY BARRY WETCHER
"Northern Exposure" star Rob Morrow

LOS ANGELES — The concept for "Northern Exposure" was lifted from a screenwriter and the show's distributor must pay him $7.3 million in damages, a Superior Court jury ruled Monday.

The jury found that MCA Inc. and its Universal City Studios unfairly helped develop writer Sandy Veith's 1981 script "Coletta" into what eventually became the CBS hit drama series "Northern Exposure," which debuted in July 1990.

Both "Coletta" and "Northern Exposure," are about a New York doctor whose medical school tuition is paid for by another party. In "Coletta," it is the residents of a small town.

In "Northern Exposure" it is the state of Alaska. In both scripts, the doctor travels to a new location far outside the big city to pay off the debt and encounters various eccentric characters. The lawsuit didn't specify where Coletta would be located.

Veith's lawyers contended that the story line of their client's screenplay was "virtually identical" to the story line of "Northern Exposure."

Veith wrote the "Coletta" script while under contract at Universal. Several networks expressed interest in the project, but it was not produced, the lawsuit said.

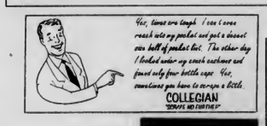
The jury was convinced that Universal executives familiar with the concept conveyed its ideas to Joshua Brand and John Falsey around 1988 while the Emmy Award-winning writing pair were under contract at Universal, said Glen Kulik, an attorney for Veith.

Louis Petrich, an attorney for MCA and Universal, said Brand and Falsey developed "Northern Exposure" independently, and based it in part on the real-life experiences of a friend of theirs. He said the similarities between the stories were "sheer coincidence."

An appeal was being considered, Petrich said.

The large jury award includes compensation owed Veith for the show and a monetary calculation of how his career would have benefited from being associated with its creation.

Brand and Falsey, credited as the creators of "Northern Exposure," were not named as defendants in the breach of contract lawsuit because Veith did not have an agreement with them, Kulik said.



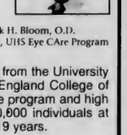
TOTAL FITNESS
STAIRMASTERS • LIFECYCLES • TREADMILLS • LIFESTEPS
KEISER • NAUTILUS • FREE WEIGHTS NORDIC TRACK
STUDENT SPECIAL $39
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
BEST AEROBICS
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB 256-0080 460 WEST ST. ON BUS ROUTE OPEN 7 DAYS

We still want you!

Even if you missed our meeting last week, we're still interested in having you write for Arts & Living. Swell your ego. . . c'mon. . . you know you want to. Call 545-1361 for more information.

THE PUB
26 YEARS 1968-1994
Fun, Food & Spirits
TONIGHT
West End Blues Band
Any Menu Nachos
$2.00
9:30 - 10:30
15 EAST PLEASANT·AMHERST

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AT AMHERST
University Health Services
Amherst, MA 01003
545-2671



Frederick H. Bloom, O.D.
Director, UHS Eye CAre Program

An open letter to the UMass Student Community from the Director of UHS Eye Care Program, Fall 1994

MY name is frederick Bloom. I graduated from the University of Massachusetts in 1971 and the New England College of Optometry in 1975. I am very proud of the program and high quality eye care delivered to the over 80,000 individuals at the UHS Eye Care Program over the last 19 years.

I have been on the teaching faculty of the New England College of Optometry. Recently I co-authored an article with Dr. Abel, a UHS physician, that was published in a national optometry journal. I am also credentialed in diagnostic ocular pharmaceuticals by the Massachusetts Board of Optometry.

Services include:

- Complete optometry examinations
- Reduced rates on spectacle frames and lenses from local participating opticians
- Emergency eye care
- Comprehensive contact lens service

Our staff takes great pride in being able to fit many people who have had difficulty in the past wearing contact lenses.

Patient feedback of those who have used the UHS Eye Care Program over the years has been consistently excellent.

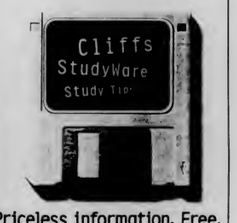
"I invite you to use the eye services at UHS"

EYE CARE PROGRAM

Convenient Hours and Camus Location

CALL 549-2671 EXT 244

HUGE SAVINGS AT THE NEW SALVATION ARMY SUPER THRIFT STORE
STUDENT DISCOUNT EVERY THURSDAY ON CLOTHING 50% OFF WITH ID
159 N. Pleasant St. Amherst, MA • 253-4747



Priceless information. Free.
Change your study habits for the better with our free study tips disk. Ask for it when you check out Cliffs StudyWare® for test preparation and course review, we cover tests from the SAT I to the GRE, and classes from biology to statistics. (Ask about our boxer shorts offer, too.) Details of...
Cliffs
University Store
Campus Center • 545-2619

WE WANT YOU!!!
to be a
HEARING BOARD MEMBER

If You...
• are interested in Campus Leadership
• wish to improve your communication and listening skills
• are a full time student
• have at least a 2.0 G.P.A.
• are not on Judicial Sanction

Apply now to be a Hearing Board Member:
Training Held Oct. 18, 19, & 20
7:00 p.m. - 10:00 p.m.

Applications available at
RESIDENTIAL CLUSTER OFFICES &
THE DEAN OF STUDENTS OFFICE
227 WHITMORE

ANY QUESTIONS?
CONTACT:
Paul Vasconcellos, Assistant Dean of Students
Dean of Students Office • Whitmore • 545-2684

■ field hockey

continued from page 8

goalie this year. They're very well coached and very disciplined and that's going to make them tough," Donnelly said.

With NU and UMass being from the same region, the matchup has extra significance for both squads. Regional ranking plays a large role down the road when NCAA bids are given out. Donnelly believes the pressure is on Northeastern.

"This is our first opportunity to make a change in the ranking," she said. "Looking at their schedule they only have two more opportunities to make a change. We have another six. The pressure is on them. They're running out of opportunities."

Donnelly warns against looking too far ahead.

"We can't think about the ramifications. We don't know how we're going to do the rest of the year," she said. "We're just thinking that we gave a subpar effort on Sunday. We're not happy about it and this is our next opportunity. We want to go out and do it right."

■ Patriots

continued from page 8

They already have matched or exceeded their win total for two of the last four years.

"We feel unfortunate not to be 4—0," Bledsoe said referring to narrow losses of 39—35 to Miami and 38—35 to Buffalo.

"We're playing for now, for this year," said Turner, in his third NFL season. "I think we're going to be battling for a playoff spot right down to the end."

In 1988, Goad's rookie season, the Patriots missed the playoffs when they lost their final game and finished 9—7. Their best record in the five seasons since then is 6—10.

The season "is kind of just starting over now," Parcells said. "The first month's over. We're just a 50—50 team. We've got some tough, tough games coming up."

■ NHL

continued from page 8

Eddie Shore mean very little. Baseball will survive without a World Series. Without a Stanley Cup, hockey is in big trouble.

If you take the NHL away from the enthusiastic new fans now, you may lose them forever. Many of them haven't followed the sport long enough to miss it.

Don't look for television to remain faithful either.

Ray Bourque can't play forever. Wayne Gretzky's days are numbered and several other veteran stars' careers are winding down. A year away could take the edge off their skills as well.

What about the hallowed Boston Garden? This is/was to be the final year for the old stadium. Could we have seen the final hockey to be played there barring a few bonspot games?

With baseball dormant, the NHL not far from it, and now the NBA even talking about a work stoppage, could we be heading for some kind of sports apocalypse?

The effects could be far-reaching. The New England Sports Network is feeling the strain. Without the Bruins and Red Sox, the reasons to subscribe to their pay service are few. Sports magazines are equally endangered. Without hockey and hoop there is very little to read about in the winter months. This is not a pleasant prospect for those of us looking toward sports journalism careers.

Matt Vautour is a Collegian hockey columnist who may have very little to write about for a while.

Soccer Basketball
Collegian
Field Hockey SPORTS Rugby
Has got it all.
Football Water Polo Baseball

Yesterday I was lounging around with my friends trying decide how to start off this year's Homecoming Weekend when I heard from the boy next door that The Mass Daily Collegian was having their Fall Open House on Friday! Needless to say I immediately grabbed my daily planner and penciled them in from 12 - 4. The thought of being able to see first-hand how the largest college daily operates was breathtaking! I also hoped that I would run into some of the cool people who write the cool stuff for my favorite paper. My friends and I sat in delight at the prospect of our Friday afternoon. What a glorious day it would be. I would have to tell my other friends about it because they would be jealous if I went and they didn't. And just think - it was all because of the boy next door."

KNOW MVXD
BZTTDGHL
IPWHOPGD
ILJKECNF
OMZCODE℠

dial 1 800 CALL ATT

ALWAYS COSTS LESS
THAN 1-800-COLLECT.

Hello? Want the lowest price for a collect call?
Lower than that other number? Then dial this one.
Because THE CODE always costs less than 1-800-COLLECT.

Your True Voice.
AT&T

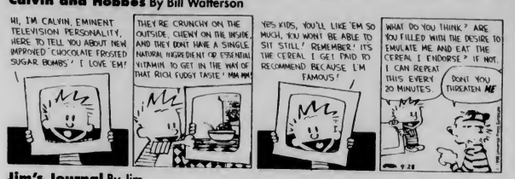
©1994 AT&T FOR ALL INTERSTATE CALLS.

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycles
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

Spirit Haus
Refrigerator Rentals
256-8433
253-5384

TRAVEL SMART!
FROM NEW YORK
for travel beginning November 1
One Way Round Trip
LONDON $183 $345
PARIS $214 $428
MADRID $250 $500
SAN JOSE/ COSTA RICA $224 $448
TOKYO $749 Roundtrip
Fares from over 75 US cities to all major destinations in Europe, Asia, Africa, Latin America and Australia
Some tickets valid to one year
Most tickets allow changes
Eurail passes issued on the spot
Prism Travel
142 Madison Ave. NY, NY 10173
800-272-9676
212-986-8420*
*in NYC

Calvin and Hobbes By Bill Watterson



HI, I'M CALVIN, EMINENT TELEVISION PERSONALITY, HERE TO TELL YOU ABOUT NEW IMPROVED CHOCOLATE FROSTED SUGAR BOMBS! I LOVE 'EM!
THEY'RE CRUNCHY ON THE OUTSIDE, CHEWY ON THE INSIDE, AND THEY DON'T HAVE A SINGLE NATURAL INGREDIENT OR ESSENTIAL VITAMIN TO GET IN THE WAY OF THAT RICH, FUDGY TASTE! MM-MM!
YES KIDS, YOU'LL LIKE 'EM SO MUCH, YOU WON'T BE ABLE TO SIT STILL! REMEMBER, IT'S THE CEREAL I GET PAID TO RECOMMEND BECAUSE I'M FAMOUS!
WHAT DO YOU THINK? ARE YOU FILLED WITH THE DESIRE TO EMULATE ME AND EAT THE CEREAL I ENDORSE? IF NOT, I CAN REPEAT THIS EVERY 20 MINUTES!
DON'T YOU THREATEN ME

Bruno By C. Baldwin

Jim's Journal By Jim

I decided to make Mr. Peterson a toy out of paper, which she likes to play with.
I crumpled up a piece of paper and tied it to some string.
Mr. Peterson seemed to like it, jumping up at it when I whipped it around.
Also today I worked the evening shift at the copy store and hardly anybody came in.

Urban Shocker By Deg

Without Porpoise By Kennet Dall

YOU'RE PROBABLY WONDERING WHAT HAPPENED TO JD. WELL, IT'S REALLY VERY TRAGIC.
HE WAS ON A MODELING JOB WHEN HIS MAKEUP SPONTANEOUSLY COMBUSTED.
HE LIVED, BUT NOW HE IS BACK TO BEING A RAT. HE'S HAULING IT IN TRUE JD FASHION.

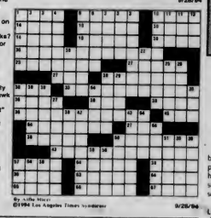
Daily Crossword
Edited byTrude Michel Jaffe

ACROSS
1 Box
5 Provencal love songs
10 Stumble
14 Cook book
15 Tilted
16 Long-eared creature
17 Near as —
18 Bressler size
19 One of the 50, in Paris
20 Tippy veggies?
23 Computer types
24 Manure
27 Grand Tour site: Abbr.
28 Sweet girl of song
30 Norm, for short
33 Decarded greens?
36 Opera highlight
38 Hosiery
39 Early capital of Japan
40 Pampered omens?
45 Ooze/mix
48 Attlie was one
47 Amtrak and B & O
49 Pull a scam on
50 Sea cow
54 Inlaid mollusks?
57 Roman orator
60 Hokkaido island port
61 "— a song go..."
62 Finished
63 New York city on the Mohawk
64 "— but the Lonely Heart"
65 Clumsy
66 Language of Sri Lanka
67 Remnants

DOWN
1 — Flow
2 Pay a casual visit
3 Luciano's girlfriend
4 Imbeta
5 Rodgers-Hammerstein musical
6 Is ahead
7 Insult
8 Nice heavenly creature
9 Took the helm
10 Actor
11 Spill the beans
12 George's brother
13 Darling
21 Clumsy one
22 Sesames
25 Chou- —
26 Approaches
26 He played Grant
29 Chinese leader Xiaoping
30 Pouch
31 Ménage à —
32 "If I — Care" ink Spora hit
34 Faction
35 Hoover, for example
37 Not mandatory
41 Telltost Irish
42 Surpass by a small margin
43 Little by little
44 Lip — sing, in a way
48 Binny
50 Thanks, in Tours
51 Claw
52 Correct
53 Basso Simon
55 "— boy!"
56 Injure
57 Massachusetts cape
58 "— Maria"
59 Countdown start

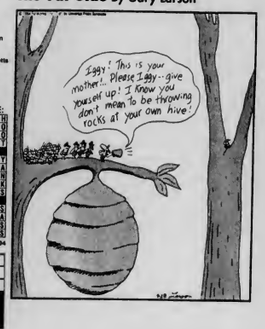
ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE:

9/28/94



©1994 Los Angeles Times Syndicate 9/28/94

The Far Side By Gary Larson



Your Horoscope
By Joane Dixon

ARIES (March 21–April 19): A business trip may have to be postponed. You are needed at home to make important decisions. A member of the opposite sex shows real integrity.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20): Let your pleasant personality shine through during a telephone conversation. Kind words will work miracles! An older person provides you with confidential information.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20): A desire to serve your community may be in conflict with your personal needs. Wait a few weeks before starting a major project. You soon will have a better idea of what you were to accomplish.

CANCER (June 21–July 22): Everything you touch today could turn to gold. Take advantage of this lucky period by investigating any job opportunities that arise. An introduction by an old friend could lead to a new romance.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22): Watch your spending or you soon could be in need of a loan. Reaching an understanding with an older person may be more enjoyable then expected. Let your mate know what is bothering you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22): Take a chance! Good luck is on your side in both career and financial matters. Health problems improve with a new diet and exercise regimen. Show an estranged loved one that you really care.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22): A change in your work environment boosts your productivity and self-confidence. Admit a secret longing to your mate if your relationship is more harmonious than in recent days.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21): Modernizing your home office will make you more efficient. Following a financial hunch will result in cause for celebration. Gifts come from those who hold you in high regard. Reward these admirers' lasting loyalty.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21): Leave for work early to avoid a traffic snarl. Extra effort will be needed to impress someone influential. Attend a speech or lecture that could provide valuable inspiration. Guard against the ploys of manipulative people.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19): Although you cannot afford to totally let down your guard, you can learn to worry less. Grant your romantic partner more breathing room.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18): Handle career and business matters with extra care. Information previously withheld suddenly becomes available. Use it wisely and you will be in a position of power. Romance flutters but does not fly. Look elsewhere.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20): Some parental advice comes in handy when making a tough career or business decision. The unexpected could happen where romance is concerned. Be worried about your weight, join an exercise group.

Get Involved!
with campus health issues
SHAB*
- Sponsor health projects
- Represent student health care concerns
- Review UHS budget
- Serve on UHS Search Committees
- Meet other students interested in health care

COME SEE WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT
Meeting: WEDNESDAY, September 28
Where: UHS Room 302
Time: 5:30 P.M.

*Student Health Advisory Board (est. 1971)
University Health Services

Commander Jimmy to Space Command
DE Thah it's me Hoss can you bring me and Tony some Rotos and soda to the tent Dr. and a beer Hoss Baby Colleguan!!!

Classifieds

- 20¢ per word per day for students
- All ads must be paid cash/d days in advance
- Ads may placed at 113 Campus Center Monday through Fnday, 8 30 a.m. to 3 30 p.m.

1968 MUSTANG

Classic '68 Mustang Way Cool Wheels FOR SALE!! Electric metallic blue, exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, 2 door, great way to pick up chicks and studs alike. Best offer Call Beth at 8 4434.

ACTIVITIES

Chi Omega informal rush party. Candle making on Wednesday, 9/28 from 8 9pm For more information and transportation please call Lauren at 549 4351

Macrobiotic discussions on natural health. 8 Sundays 2 4 pm Munson Library South Amherst Oct 2- Nov 20 253- 2777

Interested in Women's Ice Hockey? Come on down to Campus Center room 803 at 7 00 Feel free to call Cheri Ruane at 549 7776, with any questions (about hockey).

ANNOUNCEMENTS

All University women are invited to rush at Sigma Delta Tau this evening between 5 and 8 Please call Kristin for info at 549 7361

Come join the women of ALPHAtor open rush tonite at 338 Locust Ave from 8 10pm Call Laurie 549 7990 Emily 256 8701 with questions/directions

Do you have any say in what goes on at Health Services? You bet you do! Come by the Student Health Advisory Board's first meeting of the semester and find out how Wednesday September 28 UHS rm 302 5 30

AUTO FOR SALE

1968 Mustang Classic 68 Mustang electric metallic blue exterior, black interior, hard top, straight six, best offer call Beth at 8 4434

81 Olds Cutlass New parts Needs minimal work $700 or best offer Call Chad 546 1123

1987 Mazda 323 deluxe wagon Excellent condition, carefully maintained stereo cassette, 87 000 miles $2500 549 7619

1989 Hyundai Excel 42K AC auto stereo cassette sunroof $3000 Call 253 4012

89 Jeep Wrangler black hard top 4cyl, 4 wd, stereo, high miles, excellent condition $4500 bo 549 7321

Honda Prelude 82 95 shop mic Sun roof Runs great needs brake work Greg 585 0540 $850

BOXING LESSONS

Recreational + competitive boxing lessons for men and women with retired professional D Darla Burnpot 549 5252

C.A.S.H. FOR COLLEGE

Do you need $$$ for college??? We have the solution Guaranteed results Write to Corporate Scholarship Service, 7 Oakhurst Terrace East, N Reading, MA 01864 for free details

COMPUTER SALE

486DX2 66, 4mb ram 270mb hd 3 5" floppy 14" SVGA monitor, keyboard $1175 other systems and hardware (motherboards, CPU and memory) Call sales rep Paul 549 4453

COMPUTERS

SR. Computers & Associates whole systems Parts including monitors, drives, cards and more Free estimate 549 4362

ENTERTAINMENT

Grunk a high energy alternative original cover band call Chris at 253 5996

FOR RENT

Blue room for rent 7 cass, a sax, and an espresso machine $275+ Call Joan at 586 4782

Fridge rentals 253 8742 free delivery

Move in now! Center of town $300/ mo Flat Call Dana 253 7799

FOR SALE AUDIO

Stereo equipment used/ reconditioned, area s largest selection, priced to sell! Also tv's, vcr's, dj/ pa equipment, instruments etc We buy, sell, trade Call SAV Exchange, 9am 9pm 256 0961

FOR SALE

1993 Trek 720 Bought last year for $340 Need cash must sell for $175 Free cable lock and extra set of offroad tires Call Mike 6 1994

Adrock's Puma Clydes autographed Fresh bboy artifact Buy em 4 freshness 545 2879, ask 4 Bobby

Brand new tires 195/75 r14 Toyo touring radials 253 4012

Dorm fridge $75 or b/o 253 7349

Dorm fridge $30 obo 253 7385 Rob

For sale: sweaters, slacks, coats, dresses, suits, etc from $3 75 to $20 00 Call 413 323 8674

Grateful Dead Boston Garden Oct 7 & 8 MSG Cen 14 2 tickets per each night Best offer 546 0882

Guitar pre amp Tube works real tube !! Two channels, foot switch Sounds excellent less than one year old Must sell soon! $250 Call Adam 256 1942

Leather jacket, men s large, brown, very nice hardly worn $125 (orig $285) Bootleg Eagle Creek "convertible" $20 (orig $50) Ted 586 3172

Microwave must sell ! Only $50 Good condition Call 549 4725

Pagers at Pioneer Valley Knife and Tool 549 7331

Snowboard 159cm Grateful Dead board Awesome The season s here $270 546 0618

Snowboards, Burton Performer Elite and Sims Shredder $75 a piece Call Dan at 549 0362

Solid oak triple dresser Excellent condition $75 or b/o Call Kelly 253 9354

Tag sale Amherst 415 Meadow St 10/1 10/7 8 4pm Quality name clothing, much more Huge sale

Tandy computer system w/ drives, monitor Tons of software Asking 325 or b/o Call Joe 5 7348

Watch batteries ear piercing eyeglass and jewelry repairs great earrings gifts from glass to gold custom designed jewelry Silversmith Designs 264 N Pleasant St Amherst 253 3374

FREE

Free kitten, white blue eyes deaf Call 665 7756

HELP WANTED

$363 00. Sell funny college T shirts Profit $363 00 Risk free Choose from 19 designs Free catalogs 1 800 700 4250

Cruise ships now hiring earn up to $2000+/ month working on cruise ships or land tour companies World travel Seasonal and full time employment available No experience necessary For more information call 1 206 634 0468 ext C50011

Drivers wanted Trentoria Geppetto Italian restaurant, 1177 N Pleasant St Amherst Apply in person after 3 00 pm 549 7777

Earn $25 in 2 hours Seniors and first year grads wanted for research study dealing with the GRE Call Sharon 256 8092

International Employment– make up to $2000- $4000 +/ mo teaching basic conversational English in Japan, Taiwan, or S Korea No teaching background or Asian languages required for info call 206 632 1146 ext J50011

Jobs for the environment Grassroots political organizing Earn $40 60/day Flexible hours/ casual atmosphere Call Alex 256 6434

Receive up to /88,000 dollars in 18 months! For your amazing free report call 413 525 5488 Mon Fri 8am 5pm

Spring break '95 Sell trips, earn cash and go free! Student Travel Services is now hiring campus representatives Lowest rates to Jamaica, Cancun, Daytona and Panama City Beach Call 1 800 648 4849

Wanted!! America s fastest growing travel company seeking individuals to promote trips Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida! Easy free travel, fantastic pay 1 800 426 7710

INSTRUCTION

Learn to bartend with University bartending Get certified for 1/3 the price of other schools, right here in Amherst Free info session Mon Oct 3rd Lord Jefferey Inn or Call 1 800 U CAN MIX

LOST

HAS ANYONE SEEN MY WATCH????
Anyone anyone Buehler?
I lost my women s Freestyle watch with leather band SOMEWHERE on campus Please if you find it bring it on down to the good ol' Collegian office located at 113 Campus Center (the basement) Thanks in advance good samaritan

Lost silver blue faced watch around Hasbrouck/Morrill Please call Mark at 549 7928 sentimental value

MOTORCYCLES

89 Ninja 600. New parts, runs excellent Call 665 7694 for info

MUSICIANS

Guitarist seeking to form 5 piece rock band Originals and covers Mark 253 4927

PERSONALS

Bella,
It's about time you came to your senses Meet me at the bandpool and we'll discuss the future possibilities of hot erotic nights P S I shave my whole body
Gaston

Buster– I've seen the goods Now see what I have to offer Love Fudgy

Happy 21st birthday Wendy Love Lisa Tera Bem

Happy Birthday Brandon. I wanted to get you something no one probably ever got you before! Have a great 18th B day! I love you Jill

Happy Birthday Scott.
Try not to get too high on sunflower seeds Best wishes –Melissa

John Montoya Walk to a payphone and call me (preeaas) Tom L 253 7823

PINNOCHIO'S

Hiring drivers! full or part time Call 256 4110 or stop by 30 Belmwood Walk Ask for Bob

Proprietor special $6 00 1 25 each topping large pizza now!! With this ad

RESUME WRITING

We specialize in writing resumes and cover letters Over a decade of experience close to campus 549 0367

ROOMMATE WANTED

Female roomate wanted to share a large bedroom in a three bedroom condo $240 /month includes hot water, Washer, dryer, garage Call 256 4986

Male/female south Amherst $275+ Electric/wood heat Great house wooded about 4 miles from campus H253 5531 W256 0870

RUSH SIGMA KAPPA

Wanted Fun, down to earth, friendly, social UMass women to attend Sigma Kappa s open rush Please join us Sept 27 & 28 6 8pm Oct 2 12 3pm Call for info 256 6887 We are located at 19 Allen St behind Hillel House

SERVICES

"Balloon view" cartoon characters Makes great gifts! $25 fun! color! Satisfaction guaranteed! For details call Paul (413) 586 6447

Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 927 Campus Center, 545 1995

Erica's pet sitting service Call for more info 549 0838

I'll sew for you Alterations, buttons, hems, rippers Call Allison 546 6953

Model search. The 1994 Glamour Models nationwide model search continues. Local test shoots now being conducted by First Impressions Photography Beginners and experienced models Males, females, all categories welcome 617 573 0367

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright for free testing and caring confidential support 549 1906

SHAREWARE

Free!! Shareware listing hundreds of quality software programs only $3 49 each Call 584 7822

TRAVEL

Spring Break 95 America s #1 spring break company! Cancun Bahamas, Daytona & Panama! 110% lowest price guarantee! Organize 15 friends and travel free! Earn highest commissions! (800) 32 TRAVEL

WANTED

Arts Drama and medieval performers ? UMass alumni seek medieval performer jugglers, armourer to oversee games of skill and insane quests at their royal 15th century wedding Please have costume and desire for a good time Billy Irene 584 4203

Campus representative Kodak products giving break trips "guaranteed" best prices + incentives Cancun Nassau Jamaica S Padre + Florida We handle the bookkeeping You handle the sales Call 1 800 222 4432

Dining Commons Menu

LUNCH	DINNER
Chicken a la King	Stir Fry Beef and Veggies
Burger on a Roll	Veal Parm
BASICS LUNCH	BASICS DINNER
Chicken a la King	Stirred Veggies and Tofu
Golden Burgers	Cheesy Spinach Squares

Today's Staff

Night Editor ..... Darienne Hosley
Copy Editor ..... Géri Sahn
Photo Technician ..... Nathan Martin
Production Supervisor ..... Greg Iafrate
Production ..... Kori Carter, Kevin Farrar, Marni E. Helfner

Quote of the Day

"I'm a freshman, can't you tell?"
—Overheard

Oh No!, I wouldn't give up my flame shag ring for all the clams in the intravenous needle littered sea!!! Nay, Nay!.. The ring truly matters to me! I CARE for it!!! @#$!* the j%$@#$!! CLAM!!!
Collegian
Look... It's still got the name to the right.

CAREER FAIR
October 12, 1994

OLDE, America's Full Service Discount Broker℠ is looking for motivated people to establish a career in the brokerage business.

OLDE offers:
12-18 month paid training program
Potential six-figure income
Excellent benefits

If you possess excellent communication skills, general market knowledge and the desire to excel, see us at the Career Fair on October 12, 1994.

If you are unable to attend the Career Fair call:
1 800 937-0606
or send resume to:
OLDE Discount Stockbrokers
National Recruiting
751 Griswold Street
Detroit, MI 48226

OLDE
DISCOUNT STOCKBROKERS
Member NYSE and SIPC
An Equal Opportunity Employer

at zanna...loggers

Women's Shoes, Clothing & Accessories
Zanna • 187 N. Pleasant St. • Amherst
413.253.2563

Sports

A-10's stingiest keeper is an aspiring pro

By Ted Kottler
Collegian Staff

Three years ago, a sports writer approached a University of Massachusetts men's soccer goalkeeper following a Minuteman victory. He thought it was Jon Gruber ('92), the then-No. 1 netminder who had just shut out his opponent.

Instead, he found himself talking to Mark Wolf, who modestly resembles Gruber— they're both tall and blond— but had nothing to discuss except another afternoon riding the pine as a freshman.

Today, Wellesley's Wolf finds himself rapidly climbing UMass' all-time goaltending charts: 182 saves, 10 shutouts and a goals against average of 1.31 entering this season - which in 1994 is a New England second-best 0.82, the top mark in the Atlantic 10.

The only bench-warming Wolf has done lately was last spring for a pair of English Football Association clubs, Rotherman United of Division 2 and Torquay United of Division 3. He was not capped, but was gratefal for the experience.

"England was unbelievable," Wolf said. "I didn't play any games, but [the teams] were kind enough to let me train with them. It was amazing. It gave me confidence I could play at that level."

In 1993, Wolf was not getting much opportunity to prove he could play in the NCAA. Following a fine sophomore campaign, he started only eight games last season as Brackie Reyes poised himself to become the man.

"I was really set back," Wolf said. "It was a learning experience. At times I was really obnoxious, really selfish about it [playing time]. But I'm glad it happened."

Wolf is built like the quintessential goalkeeper: 6-foot-4 inches, long-limbed and in peak physical condition. He knows he has all the physical attributes to succeed between the posts.

"For a while I relied on athleticism, but it only gets you so far. When I got to UMass, I realized I had to start working at it to be good, so I put the time in," he said.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Senior goalie Mark Wolf has shined so far this season as the Minutemen hope to return to the post season.

Before each game Wolf meets with the three key fullbacks, Dan Chagnon, Joe Jacobson and Benny Sheally, to confer about strategy. Sheally recognizes the effectiveness of this practice, particularly when it carries over to the pitch.

"Good communication starts with Mark," Sheally said. "From him it filters through to everybody. We're all pretty vocal."

Wolf added, "If we're all talking and working together, that's how we win."

If the rear guard did its homework for today's match with the University of Hartford, it knows there will be an Elvis sighting on Garber Field. Not Mr. Presley, but one Elvis Thomas, as accomplished a scorer as the UMass defense will mark.

Thomas, a senior, is Hartford's most experienced and successful player with 38 goals in 59 career games. He is complemented in a formation similar to UMass' by sophomore Rob Jachym, who is equally dangerous with 17 goals in 29 career games. Each striker has five goals and an assist this season.

Wolf has seen his share of top guns, and many have scored on him. But today will be Wolf's 34th collegiate appearance and he has learned to maintain his composure when he can not make the save.

"It's a thing I've been working on a lot lately," said Wolf, who has been beaten just six times this year. "Basically, you just don't think. Anytime I start thinking about the past, I lose focus on the present. If they score, I don't care. The game goes on."

Wolf, a senior sports management major, hopes to return to the English FA upon graduation or take a stab at Major League Soccer in the United States. With the dearth of Americans playing professionally worldwide, it would be a significant triumph if he should succeed.

"I don't want to be 40 and say 'what if,'" Wolf reasoned. "I want to see how far I can take this."

Women's tennis rolls on

The 6–0 squad still seeks recognition

By Derek Milosavljevic
Collegian Staff

There's another women's team making a lot of noise at the University of Massachusetts.

The nationally ranked soccer and field hockey teams may grab most of the headlines, but the Minutewomen tennis team has quietly jumped out to a 6–0 start.

The latest victims in the path of the Minutewomen were the Universities of Vermont and Maine.

Playing away from home for the first time this season at Durham, N.H., UMass showed no signs of road sickness and won both matches easily, 8–1 over UNH and 9–0 over Maine.

Head Coach Judy Dixon said her team was talented enough to win both games but the real tests for the Minutewomen would come at the end of the fall and in the spring season.

On Sept. 20 the Holy Cross Crusaders made the journey to the Boyden tennis courts and got roughed up, 8–1, by a team that seems to be growing stronger and more confident as those tougher matches approach.

One reason for the team's early success is Noelle Orsini. A member of the Minutewomen's strong freshman class, Orsini turned in her best performance of the season against the Crusaders. She had little trouble handling her No. 2 singles position opponent Kathy Melli, 6–0, 6–1.

Orsini said the key to her playing so well was confidence.

"In my other matches, I was a little nervous," she said. "This time I kept my mind on hitting the ball deep and being aggressive. I was able to end the points quicker and be more confident."

Her confidence showed as Orsini, at only five feet, three inches, served up three aces and several more service winners.

Leading the charge for UMass was junior Liesl Sitton. Sitton made quick work of her No. 1 singles opponent, Stephanie Raymond, 6–0, 6–1.

> "As a team we've handled the pressure really well. It's tough for the freshmen because they're nervous, but they've really come through."

Yet to drop a set this season, Sitton showed again why she is considered among the best players in the region. As team captain however, she was quick to deflect praise of her younger teammates.

"As a team we've handled the pressure really well," she said. "It's tough for the freshmen because they're nervous, but they've really come through."

In addition to Orsini's win, the two other freshman starters for UMass came away with straight set victories. Caroline Steele had little trouble at No. 3 singles defeating Sharon Cox, 6–3, 6–3, and Lana Goredeskaya pounded the Crusaders' Liz Quarta, 6–2, 6–2.

Sophomore Liz Durant was the final singles victor for the Minutewomen. She was leading 5–0 in the first set when her opponent defaulted.

Yesterday's scheduled match with Providence College was postponed due to rain. They will be rescheduled to play on Oct. 11 at 3 p.m. on the Boyden courts.

For now the Minutewomen find themselves stuck in a category familiar to so many UMass women's teams . . . undefeated.

Lockout looming over NHL season

Doomsday approaches.

As the Oct. 1 deadline approaches, the National Hockey League management and players union are nowhere close, setting the stage for a lockout and prolonged work stoppage.

This will be a severe blow to the league.

Matt Vautour

In the 1993–94 season, the NHL advanced itself by leaps and bounds. The league now has footholds in places hockey never dreamed of. Franchises were beginning to flourish in San Jose, Anaheim, Dallas, Miami (Florida Panthers) and Tampa Bay.

Marketing is sky high. The trendy uniforms of the new franchises as well as some of the popular traditional logos are selling better than ever before.

The Stanley Cup's return to the Big Apple, combined with lackluster NBA playoffs, ignited interest in the NHL last spring as hockey fans all over were rejoicing in their game's newfound success.

Television noticed too. In addition to the All-Star game on NBC and the late season Sunday afternoon broadcasts on ABC, ESPN was showing more games than ever and the deuce (ESPN2) picked up some as well.

For the upcoming season, FOX signed on to cover games late in the season. The long-awaited regular national television coverage was well on its way to becoming a fixture.

It almost seemed too good to be true.

It was.

The league management is dangerously close to pressing that fateful self destruct button. No hockey this season would be two giants steps backward from last year's forward progress.

The fans that blame the players in the baseball strike need to look the other way in the NHL. The players are easily the lowest paid athletes in the four major professional sports. They are looking to increase their free agency and avoid a salary cap.

Unlike Major League baseball, the players are willing to make compromises, including a rookie salary cap. It is the owners who are being the hard liners.

Commissioner Gary Bettman claims it will not be a lockout because the training camps will still be open. There just won't be any games until an agreement is reached. This difference is comforting nobody.

Bettman says the entire season will be played even if it is started late. Don't buy it. There is no way the NHL will be playing in July because it would finish too close to the start of the 1995–96 season.

What Bettman and the rest of the management do not understand is that hockey is not baseball.

When the baseball strike ends and the boys of summer return to the playing field, after a short period of time the fans will return. Baseball is a part of Americana. The game is part of our history and our culture, and the game will endure.

Hockey does not have that strength behind it. It has been a regional sport for most of its existence. Almost every American knows the names of Ruth, DiMaggio, Mantle and Mays. Except for the diehard hockey fan, the names Bobby Hull, Stan Mikita and

Turn to NHL, page 6

Field hockey looks for intensity against NU

By Matt Vautour
Collegian Staff

Undefeated, but still unhappy.

Despite going 5–0–1 in their first six games, the University of Massachusetts field hockey team is displeased with their performance so far.

"We're dominating teams, but by our standards we didn't play well," said first-year Coach Megan Donnelly.

The Minutewomen have shown flashes of brilliance and their defense has been almost perfect. But they have yet to put together a strong performance over the course of an entire game.

The intensity has been a question mark.

"I was disappointed because we are capable of playing at such a high level," Donnelly said. "When you know that and you don't see it, you get upset. There are a lot of good things, but it's not as sharp as it should be."

The low point came last Sunday as the Minutewomen played to a 0—0 tie with a less talented Rutgers College team.

"It was an away game, on the opposite surface that we play on, that finished in a double overtime tie," said Donnelly. "If you're going to screw up, that's the way to do it."

Donnelly believes that Monday's session of watching the game on video was a big step toward getting back on track.

"It helped to have them sit down yesterday," she said. "It wasn't fun for them. We kept rewinding every mistake. When you are an athlete, and see yourself not doing basic things, it upsets you. These kids have a tremendous amount of pride. We'll be fine."

They will need a strong showing this afternoon. Today's matchup features a battle of the top two teams in the New England Region. The No. 2 Minutewomen will try to take over the top spot from the No. 1 Northeastern Huskies this afternoon at 3:30 p.m. at Totman Field. Donnelly said this will be the game to get the Minutewomen on track.

"This is what we need," she said. "We're playing a regional opponent, a traditional rival. We're fired up."

The grass field at Totman will be a big lift for UMass against Huskies who are used to the artificial surface.

"It's great," said Donnelly. "We need to be up on our field. It's a great advantage for us to be at home against anybody, but especially against a regional opponent. Our team feels that this is their home and they take it up to another level. They love to play here."

Traditionally, the Huskies have always given the Minutewomen tough games.

"They are always a dangerous team. They got a transfer

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 6

NATHAN MARTIN / COLLEGIAN

Goaltender Hilary Rose has been a key to the success of the Minutewomen so far.

New England Patriots looking at potential playoff berth

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

FOXBORO, Mass. — For his six full seasons, Patriots nose tackle Tim Goad has been in the middle of the misery, his body bruised in weekly battles with offensive linemen. And for what? Not a single playoff game.

Linebacker Vincent Brown has been there all six years. Tackle Bruce Armstrong has suffered through seven seasons. He joined New England in 1987, the year after their last playoff appearance.

"We look at each other and say, 'I'm ready to win,'" Goad said.

They have been with the Patriots longer than anyone. They have been through four coaches, four owners and no playoff games. But with new owner Robert Kraft and second-year coach Bill Parcells, the playoffs suddenly seem possible.

"We're in this race a little bit," Parcells says.

His rebuilding program is progressing rapidly. Drew Bledsoe has thrown for more yards than any NFL quarterback. The Patriots have won two straight road games for the first time since 1988. They are tied for third in the AFC East with a 2—2 record, trailing Miami and Buffalo by one game, teams they nearly beat in their first two games. No team in the division has been consistently strong.

"This division could beat itself up a little bit. Miami's got to play Buffalo twice," Parcells said. The division "is closer than what it has been in recent years."

The Patriots lead the NFL with 124 points. But the defense, which played its best game in last Sunday's 23—17 win at Detroit, has been vulnerable.

"We'd have to be a lot more consistent than we've been to win the division," Parcells said. "I'm not playing to show improvement. I want to get in the race."

From Bledsoe to second-year pass-rusher Chris Slade to wide receiver Michael Timpson to tight end Ben Coates to fullback Kevin Turner to a solid offensive line, improvement has come quickly for a team that was in tatters when Parcells became coach.

The Patriots were 14—48 in the four seasons before he arrived. Now, only 15 players remain from the pre-Parcells era.

The most shocking strides have been made by the offense. The Patriots have scored more than 30 points in five of their last six games after doing it just four times in the previous 109 games. They are 6—2 in their last eight games. Their 124 points this year are just 57 less than they had in 1990 and more than half last year's total of 238.

Turn to PATRIOTS, page 6

Rose unscathed in goal

Sophomore goalkeeper Hilary Rose made a season-high 18 saves in the No. 12 UMass 0-0 tie against No. 8 Northeastern (See Sports, page 14).

New program brings laptops to classrooms

The UMass physics dept. brings modern technology into the classroom with Classtalk, a program featuring individual laptop computers (Page 3).

Gag me with a spoon! It's an 80s flashback!

Get out the acid wash jeans, it's a look back at the decade that gave us as many memories as John Hughes movies (See Arts & Living, page 5).

Extended Forecast

Mostly cloudy today with more showers likely, and a high near 60. Expect more of the same throughout the early weekend, with slightly lower temperatures.

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 60	HIGH: 60	HIGH: 60
LOW: 45	LOW: 50	LOW: 45

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 13 • New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 • Thursday, September 29, 1994

Community seeks answers after meeting

Forum discusses racism at Amherst schools in response to incident

By Kelly Spang
Collegian Staff

AMHERST — Parents, students and other members of the community met last night to address what many claimed to be an underlying racist problem in the Amherst School System.

The forum, mediated by Reynolds Wilson, president of the Greater Amherst Chapter of the NAACP, comes in the wake of an alleged racial assault on a 13-year-old African American Muslim Amherst Junior High School student.

"We need to take this problem and turn it into opportunity," Wilson said. "We need to use this opportunity to find solutions, which is why we are here."

The student reported earlier in the month she had received several letters containing racist material signed by the "KKK" and one letter with a picture of a Black that had been hanged.

The student also reported of an attempted strangling in the girls' bathroom a couple of days after receiving the notes.

Tuesday afternoon, the Amherst Police Department announced its investigation led officials to believe the claims by the girl were bogus. Police officials, along with officials from the Northwestern District Attorney's Office, said they will be seeking criminal charges against the student for making a false report.

Members of the school board, the Amherst Select Board and other town officials met in the cafeteria of the Amherst Junior High School along with parents, residents and students to discuss not only the issues surrounding the 13- year-old student, but also to bring to light more broad issues of racism in the school system.

Many parents expressed anger and disappointment at the lack of diversity and multiculturalism in the school system. Many said they believe the problems which ex in the Amherst schools are from a lack of addressing issues of racism as they occur and also from not teaching multicultural issues in school.

NATHAN MARTIN/COLLEGIAN

Reynolds Wilson, president of the Greater Amherst Chapter of the NAACP, listens to Town Manager George Levinger speak last night at Amherst Junior High School.

Several parents with students of all ages and in several schools throughout Amherst relayed stories of racial assaults and threats which their children bring home to them.

"We need to know why diversity is beauty," said Amherst High School sophomore Stefania Vanin. "Why diversity is not a problem." Vanin is the daughter of the University of Massachusetts Dean of Students Jo-Ann

Turn to FORUM, page 11

Students say that school system handles racism incidents poorly

By Jessica Taverna
Collegian Staff

AMHERST — Inside the Amherst Public Schools, the consensus seems to be that the alleged victim was, in fact, victimized, and the school administration should be the ones on trial for handling the incident poorly.

"Amherst schools don't deal with the racial problems going on," Lani Sherlock, an Amherst High School junior, said. "They hide it because they're embarrassed; Amherst is supposed to be so liberal."

People are puzzled as to why one would fabricate a racial incident, and the rumors are running wild. The girl accused of writing her own threat letters has come to friends with her own defense.

"She admitted to writing the last two letters. She said she did it because they weren't doing anything about it," Tashina Robinson, an Amherst High senior, said. "She thought that if she got more letters, they'd have to do something."

After everything that she and her family have gone through, and because of her religion, she would never have bothered lying about it, Robinson said.

"If she had lied, it would've been the only way she could've thought of to expose the racial problems in the school," Robinson said.

Following the incident, the girl stopped attending school, her brother, who chose to stay unidentified, said. Her family had encouraged her to stay home from school until things blew over.

"I have five brothers and three sisters, and she's the quietest one of all," her brother said. "I was really surprised when I heard the police say that [she had forged her own notes]; you would never think she'd do something like that."

Her brother said that she had received notes and pictures in her locker, which could easily have been broken into. The lockers have the built-in locks that are easy to "pop" open.

"They probably decided to pick on her because she wears [a Muslim turban] on her head," her brother said.

The day after the attack occurred, Amherst High Principal Lorraine Kavanaugh made an announcement over the intercom during the morning announcements. She stated that the police had been notified, but did not elaborate on the situation, Sherlock said.

"She should've made a stand and said that that kind of stuff wasn't acceptable," Sherlock said. "These people are teachers; we're supposed to look up to them. They should've said something. They

Turn to STUDENTS, page 11

The Pub manager looks for exemption from smoking ban

By Ben Geman
Collegian Staff

AMHERST — Citing a "competitive disadvantage," the manager of a downtown restaurant and bar last night asked the Amherst Health Department for a partial exemption to the ban on smoking in enclosed work places in Amherst.

Jerry Jolly, manager of The Pub, told the department the current regulations unfairly prohibit smoking during certain hours at the East Pleasant Street establishment.

The health department's ban, instituted at the beginning of the month, includes restaurants but not bars. Bars are defined by the department as establishments earning more than 60 percent of their revenue from alcohol sales. A ban on smoking in bars will take effect in July, 1995.

Last night, Jolly told the department that The Pub, which based on its food and alcohol sales is defined by the health department as a restaurant, stops serving food at 9:30 p.m. and thereafter becomes a bar.

Jolly asked the health department to grant him a "variance" to the regulations, allowing patrons to smoke in a designated section of The Pub between 10 p.m. and 1 a.m.

"For these three hours, The Pub is a college bar with no food being served, and it has been this way for the past 26 years," said Jolly, who linked the ban on smoking in The Pub to a decrease in business since the beginning of the University of Massachusetts fall semester.

"Sales at The Pub are off 20 percent and the customer count is off 30 percent since the semester began. To

Turn to THE PUB, page 11

Campus group pushes to legalize through smoke-in

By Christopher Hassett
Collegian Correspondent

Officials of the University of Massachusetts Cannabis Reform Coalition say they do not advocate drug use, but are preparing a series of "survival tips" on how to use drugs without getting caught and strategies to legalize pot.

At a general meeting Tuesday night, plans for legalizing marijuana and other strategies for increasing membership and awareness were discussed.

According to fliers distributed by the organization, the coalition does not encourage the use of any drug, including marijuana.

"As an organization, we do not support smoking marijuana," said Owen Mann, a member of the coalition. "As persons, our opinions are different."

Lance Brown, public relations director of the Cannabis Reform Coalition, said workshops are being planned to educate people on how to safely use marijuana without getting caught.

Representatives of HEMP, the Hampshire Educational Marijuana Project, were also present at the meeting. Plans were discussed for a late October "smoke-in" at Hampshire College.

Prospective member Nicole Maranto, a freshman computer sciences major, said she and her friends are there because "we want to see what we can do [to make marijuana legal]."

Shirly Richardo, a pre-med freshman, said she came "to learn more about getting [marijuana]."

Plans for legalizing marijuana include increasing membership to "take over" UMass and later to pursue school administration on their policies toward marijuana use, according to Brown.

According to member Brian Julin, long term legalization goals of the coalition include running a statewide ballot to remove laws making marijuana illegal in Massachusetts from the books. Regardless of state laws, marijuana would still be illegal through federal laws.

Kristie Matisko, president of the coalition, said in her closing remarks the other night, "Keep growing and smoking it."

Brown estimates that there are 10,000 to 15,000 marijuana users on campus. According to Brown, the coalition should be "colossal."

In an effort to reach this perceived silent majority, Matisko encouraged members to try to bring five others to the next meeting.

Participants at the meeting questioned coalition officials on confidentiality of the group and legal issues regarding possession of illegal drugs.

Coalition officials adamantly assured prospective members that membership lists were completely confidential and the lists are kept on a close-circuited portable computer.

Brown told the group police do need a search warrant to enter dorm rooms after the issue of search and seizure was addressed.

During a fire drill, Brown suggested hiding any illegal drugs and paraphernalia.

Keyra Reyes, a freshman pre-med major, said, "I love herb and I want to know more and more about it. I want it to be legal."

Power outage leaves part of Amherst in the dark

By Heather Redfern
Collegian Staff

Several University of Massachusetts students and Amherst residents began their Wednesday morning without the usual cup of coffee due to a power outage which left part of the town and campus without electricity.

An underground cable fault left the east side of campus, as well as several areas in downtown Amherst without power from 8:07 a.m. to 8:55 a.m., according to Robin Brown, a spokesperson from Western Massachusetts Electrical Co. located in Hadley.

UMass spokeswoman Kay Scanlan said there are two power circuits on campus, one in the east areas and one in the west areas.

Campus buildings in the west circuit such as the Tower Library, areas of the Campus Center, and the Thompson tower lost power.

Electricity was restored by re-rooting power from the east circuit to the buildings without power in the west circuit, said Scanlan.

The Tower Library went without electricity for almost two hours, according to Richard MacDonald, the business manager of the library.

The loss of electricity caused no long-turn problems for library employees, said MacDonald.

The Campus Center did not have its power restored until around 9:30 a.m.

REBECCA PETERSON/COLLEGIAN

Ed Sutherland, Heather Olsen and Craig Diminico play cards outside the UMass library, waiting to enter.

Employees of the Coffee Shop, located in the Campus Center, kept busy brewing coffee at the Hatch in the morning hours and then carrying containers of coffee to anxious customers waiting in the shop.

"Without electrical power, it limits what you can cook," said Joyce Meyer-Frederick, the interim manager of Campus Food Services. "During the time of the power outage, we were open on a limited menu basis."

Dredging up muck at the campus pond

Volunteers working on project to beautify UMass campus

By Matthew Wurtzel
Collegian Correspondent

The past couple of days volunteers dredged through mud and muck to beautify the University of Massachusetts campus pond.

The volunteers ranged from students, alumni, faculty, employees and members of the community. Some of the students came representing organizations, while others came independent of any groups.

About 60 people volunteered their time Tuesday and worked in the rain. Yesterday, Karen Drumm of the University Alumni Relations Office said she expected over 100 people would show up to clean the pond.

The volunteers did various activities to beautify the area surrounding the pond. They planted mums near the library and behind the Old Chapel. Some picked up trash, while others cleared brush surrounding the pond.

Kathleen Scott, wife of Chancellor David K. Scott, helped spear head the program to clean the pond and the campus and said, "since the pond is central to student life, we felt it was a good place to start."

For Scott, projects like this are not new. Scott worked on a similar program in East Lansing, Mich., for the planning commission when her husband was the chancellor of Michigan State University.

REBECCA PETERSON/COLLEGIAN

Tina Johnson, a junior HRTA major and sophomore apparel marketing major Heather Mcneice clean up the pond.

The Campus Pond clean-up is part of a larger program to beautify the campus known as the "Mass Transformation" program. The clean-up is under the jurisdiction of the Campus Beautification Committee, the University's office of Alumni Relations, and the University's Physical Plant.

The program will take over a year to complete because the University still needs to get permits from the Federal and State Government to use heavy equipment to clean the silt from the pond, according to Peter Wozniak, director of the Physical Plant.

The volunteers had various reasons for coming out.

Beckie Borowski, a freshman landscape architecture major, said she chose to volunteer because she loves the area and thought it would be a good experience.

Panel discussion brings forth issues affecting many women of color

By Heather Redfern
Collegian Staff

Women in the Five-College Community are asked to join together in a discussion of multicultural issues facing females of color.

Everywoman's Center and The New World Theater are co- sponsoring a panel discussion and play on Friday, Sept. 30, to introduce women to collective resources in the Five- College Community.

The panel discussion entitled "Women of Color: The Struggle For Justice In Our Communities" will include speakers sharing personal knowledge of multicultural issues as well as provide students with potential resources and support systems.

Scheduled speakers include Carmen Rose, a registered nurse who is a school committee member on the Springfield School Committee; Chantha Bin, a UMass student, who is an advocate and interpreter for the Cambodian American Association in Amherst; Marsha Burnette, who is the Director of Community Self-Reliance Center of the Arise for Social Justice Project in Springfield; and Maria Morales Loeble, who is the Executive Director of the Spanish- American Union in Springfield.

The discussion is scheduled for 1 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium and admission is free.

"This event is to honor and give visibility to women of color who work," said coordinator of the Women of Color program Lisa Scott-Crump.

Yuri Kochiyama, a Japanese American human rights activist and community organizer in Harlem, N.Y., will speak at 3 p.m. in the Campus Center

Turn to WOMEN, page 11

Police Log

Compiled by Geri Sahn from University reports

Child Rescue
Sept. 24
Police officers, alerted to a report of a child hanging out of a fifth floor window in the Campus Center Hotel, gained entry to the room and rescued the 3-year-old boy.
Officer Mark Whelihan and John McGrath rescued the boy.
The mother reported that she and her two sons had fallen asleep and got up to look out the window to see if it was raining.
A passerby spotted the child and alerted the Campus Center Security and Whelihan.

Computer Theft
Sept. 27
Staff reported several computer hardware and software units described as "Network Equipment" have been stolen from a secure area in the property office of the Goodell Building. The property belonging to the Controllers Office had been stored since early August and was estimated to be valued at over $17,000. The theft is under investigation.

Assault and Battery with a Dangerous Weapon
Sept. 27
An individual reported he was allegedly struck by another individual wearing a cast on his arm during a basketball game in Boyden Gym. The victim suffered contusions to his face and eye. He was treated at the University Health Services. The incident is under investigation.

Alarm-Fire
Sept. 23
An RA discovered toilet paper on fire in a bathroom in Thatcher Dorm and extinguished it. Police responded.

Disturbance
Sept. 23
Two groups of individuals were involved in a fight in Moore Dorm after a confrontation over subjects trying to "penny" a kick of an individual's room. One individual received a broken nose and was taken by ambulance to Cooley Dickinson Hospital. Involved parties did not wish to press charges. The area was disinfected.
Sept. 24
Lee Robinson, 18, 103 Old Colony Drive in Mashpee was arrested for assault and battery by a dangerous weapon (shod foot).

Larceny
Sept. 23
An RA in Van Meter reported that her books were stolen from a second floor hallway, valuing $110.
Sept. 23
An individual reported his wallet stolen from the main lobby in the library.
Sept. 27
An individual in Prince Dorm reported a microwave and refrigerator which she left in the custody of another person to be presumed stolen. The person who had custody of the property has left UMass.

Vandalism
Sept. 23
An individual reported his vehicle broken into in Lot 13. The stereo, speakers and a radar detector were stolen, valuing over $500.
Sept. 24
An individual reported a window smashed on his vehicle parked on Fearing Street.
An individual reported her vehicle in Lot 13 broken into and her stereo stolen.
An individual reported scratches on her vehicle in Lot 11.
An individual reported her vehicle in Lot 13 broken into and her stereo stolen.

Liquor Law Violations
Sept. 23
Brian Castagnaro, 20, 160 Clark Hill Road was arrested for a minor transporting and carrying alcoholic beverages and for being in possession of an altered license.
Jeremy Hurewitz, 19, of Suffern, N.Y. was arrested on University Drive for minor transporting and carrying alcoholic beverages.
Garth Camara, 18, of 40 Hollyhock St. in New Bedford was arrested on University Drive for a minor transporting and carrying alcoholic beverages.

For Your Information

FYIs are public service announcements which are printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the News Editor.

Thursday, Sept. 29

Music — Recital, Monica Jakuc, fortepiano, Sweeney Concert Hall, Smith College, 4:15 p.m. to 5:05 p.m. Free.
Film — Fantastic Cinema: Legends, Myths, Adventures, Herter Hall, UMass. Presented by the University Gallery, 7:30 p.m. Free.
Concert — Edmund Battersby, fortepiano, Sweeney Concert Hall, Smith College, 8 p.m. Call 527-7664 for admission prices.
Special Event — Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Speakers Bureau orientation for returning members, Crampton House, UMass, Free, 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Information: 545-4824.
French Club — Meeting at 7 p.m., The Cafe Mediterranean, Amherst. New members are encouraged to come.
UVC — General meeting for UMass students interested in joining UVC's "UMass Update" news team, 7 p.m., at Union Video Center. Information: 545-1336.
Info Meeting — 1995 UMass Program in Sienna, Italy, 7:30 p.m., Herter Hall, 3rd floor lounge.
MASSPIRG — General meeting, 7 p.m. in Earthfoods. Information: 545-0199, or stop by the office in the Student Union room 423B.

Friday, Sept. 30

Pep Rally — Get psyched for Homecoming, Southwest horseshoe, Passing Strangers and many other talents performing. 5:30 p.m.
Film — Tearjerker classic E.T., Gamble Auditorium, Mount Holyoke College. Show times: 7 p.m. and 9:15 p.m., $2.50.
Film — She's Gotta Have it, a very sexy movie, Campus Center Theater, Amherst College. Show times: 7:30 p.m. and 10 p.m., $1.75.
Music — Annual Mutiband Pops, showcase of 500 performers. Mullins Center, UMass, 8 p.m., Call TicketMaster for prices at 733-2500 or call Mullins Center Box office at 545-0505.
Theater — Brenda Wong Aoki in The Queen's Garden, Bowker Auditorium, UMass, 8 p.m., $6 or $3.50 for students and elders.
Concert — James David Christie, organ, Abbey Chapel, Mount Holyoke College, 8 p.m. Call 527-7664 for admission prices.
Pianist — Ruth Laredo, Buckley Recital Hall, Amherst College, 8 p.m. Free.
Meeting — "Breakaway" meeting of Campus Crusade for Christ, singing, skits and short talk, Campus Center room 174, UMass, 7 p.m.

Saturday, Oct. 1

Film — "Art to Art," profiles of Asian American women artists, Hillyer 117, Smith College, 2 p.m.
Conference — "Write Angles" for writers at one-day Conference at the School of Management, UMass. Information: 545-0474.
Theater — Tales from the Pacific Rim, Bowker auditorium, UMass, 8 p.m.
Music — Schumann Abend, faculty recital, Bezanson Recital Hall, UMass, 8 p.m.
Festival — Apple Harvest and Crafts Festival, Amherst Town Common, 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Sunday, Oct. 2

Meeting — UMass Fire and First Aid Unit, meeting for new members, 7 p.m., Morrill N406. Information: 665-2101.
Conference — Student leadership conference, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Student Union Ballroom. Information: 545-3600.
Film — Forgotten Tenor, Stirn Auditorium, Amherst, 7:30 p.m.

Other Activities and Upcoming Events

Volunteers Needed - Campus Pond Cleanup at UMass, Sept. 27 and 28, from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. T-shirts and refreshments will be provided. Call: 545-2317.
Community Service - The Companion Program is looking for volunteers. Call 253-2591.
Internships - MASSPIRG is offering internships for the fall semester. Earn course credits. Information: 423B Student Union or call 545-0199.
Earn credits - The Peer Education Program on Sexual Harassment is recruiting 30 undergraduate men and women for its one-credit training session this semester. Information: Mike, 546-0365.
The Homework Club — Volunteers needed to help in after-school program to help children from non-English speaking family do their homework. Information: Scott, Heap or Seng, 253-0696.

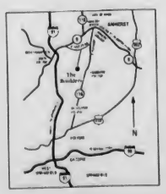
SUICIDAL? LAY IT ON THE LINE. 617-247-0220 The Samaritans

University Barbers (Campus Center) 549-0123 Hours: Weekdays 9 am - 4:45 pm Sat. 8 am - 1:45 pm No Appointment Necessary

Thank you for your Patronage The Krapczak Family
Seasons
DELIVERY HADLEY/AMHERST AREA HOURS: MONDAY - SATURDAY
DISCOUNT LIQUORS • BEER • WINE • KEGS • ICE
PRICES EFFECTIVE THROUGH 10/5/94 NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS
Rte. 9 • Hadley • 584-8174 • Between Burger King & Dunkin Donuts

NATURAL LIGHT 24-12oz. cans $8.69 + dep.	BUD/BUD LT. 12 pack bottles $6.99 + dep.	BUSCH LT. 24-12oz. cans $9.99 + dep.	BUD DRY 24-12oz bar bottle $10.99 + dep.	SAM ADAMS 6pk bottles $4.99 + dep.	LITE 24-12oz. cans $12.99 + dep.	AMERICAN 24-12oz. cans $7.29 + dep.	ROLLING ROCK 24-12oz. bar bottles $12.99
BUSCH 1/2 BBL $36.99 + dep.	BUD & BUD LT 1/2 BBL $39.99 + dep.	NATURAL LT 1/2 BBL $32.99 + dep.	ROLLING ROCK 1/2 BBL $43.99 + dep.	M.G.D. & LT 1/2 BBL $39.99 + dep.	MICHELOB & LT 1/2 BBL $39.99 + dep.	LITE & LITE ICE 1/2 BBL $39.99 + dep.	MOLSON ICE 1/2 BBL $74.99
10+ CASE BEER SPECIALS!		FREE ICE! with keg purchase and coupon		KEG OF THE WEEK 1/2 BBL ICE HOUSE $39.99 + dep.		Easy to Find! 4 Seasons	Stop & Shop Hampshire Mall
M.D. 20-20 750 ml $1.99	GIRO TEQUILA 1.0 L $6.99	GO UMASS!	SOUTHERN COMFORT $6.99 750 ml	JIM BEAM Bourbon 750 ml $6.99	HOMECOMING HEADQUARTERS	BARTLES & JAMES Coolers 4pk $2.69 + dep.	ANDREA CHAMPAGNES $2.89

Live in Luxury at...
THE BOULDERS
■ New Huge 2 Bedroom Apartments Available:
• NEW APPLIANCES • NEW COUNTERS/CABINETS • NEW CARPETS & TILE
■ New Exercise Facility FEATURING STAIRMASTER, LIFECYCLE & NAUTILUS
■ Newly Renovated Hallways, Stairways & Entrances
■ Free Heat/Free Hot Water/5 College Bus Stop on Property
■ New Parking Areas & Landscaping



The Boulders Apartment Complex is conveniently located 1/2 mile from Downtown Amherst. Come check our "Move In Special" today.
156 A Brittany Manor Drive
Amherst, MA 01002
(413) 256-8534
Office Hours: M-F 8:30 - 5:30 Sat 9 - 4
Directions to THE BOULDERS from Amherst Center & Rt. 9
essex partners An Essex Partners' Community

CLIFFSIDE APARTMENTS
248 Amherst Rd.
Sunderland, MA 01375
(413) 665-3958
Office Hours: M-F 8:30-5:30 Sat. 10-2
Cliffside - Priced to Let You Live Alone!
• Eff., 1, 2 & 3 Bedroom Apartments
• Rents from $460 includes all utilities
• W/W Carpeting • On Site Laundry Facilities
• On Bus Route (Free Fare) • Pool & Tennis Courts
• 28 Acres of Wooded Hiking Trails
Only Minutes to UMASS, Shopping & Rt.91

New Classtalk system puts computers in classrooms

By Jacob W. Michaels
Collegian Staff

Students sit at their desks in the lecture, listening to the professor ask questions about the diagram on the overhead projector. However, instead of the usual silence brought on by a professor's lecture, the tapping of keys can be heard as students enter their answers into small laptop computers.

Sound like something from science fiction theater? It isn't. It's the Classtalk system now being used in some classes at the University of Massachusetts.

The system consists of three main parts: the central computer where the professor can access "task-files" with various problems designed for the lecture, as well as collate data entered by students; a projector that can display data from the central computer on a screen to make it visible for the whole class; and about 25 "palm tops," which plug into phone jacks attached to the lecture seats.

According to Professor William J. Gerace, of the UMass physics and astronomy departments, the system "will permit a whole variety of responses from students that can be multiple choice, numeric, single word or text string." The system also allows the professor to send a single question, or a set of questions, and allows students to answer individually or as a group.

When the students have answered the questions, the professor can use the central computer to tabulate the data into a graph which is then displayed on the projector screen. The students can then discuss their reasoning behind their answers.

Gerace said, "On the average, it takes about a couple of hours prep for each lecture."

UMass is one of only eight schools that are using the system. Other schools that are using the system include Harvard, Carnegie-Mellon, Michigan State, Ohio State, Christopher Newport, which was chosen because of its proximity to the Classtalk system's developer, and two high schools, one near Chicago, and the other on the West coast.

The system was installed at UMass in March 1992, when it was used for three weeks before the central computer was stolen. It took about a month to get a replacement, Gerace said, but it was then used for the rest of that semester, as well as all of last year.

"The University of Massachusetts has a very active physics educational research group, and it turns out that with one exception, all of the sites that were chosen to play a role in the original grant were places where physics educational research was being done," said Gerace.

The system, including wiring the room so the palm tops would work, initially cost nothing to set up for UMass, although it later had to pay $5000 for the central computer.

"The name of the game, in some sense as far as I'm concerned, is communication," said Gerace. "This kind of a system doesn't enforce, but certainly invites a much larger fraction of the students to play a role. The questions can be used to reveal misunderstandings, certain kinds of problems the students may be having, and you get to address them right on the spot."

A grant from the National Science Foundation has enabled the department to study "the pedagogic" value of the Classtalk system for two more years, said Gerace.

Aaron Krupf, a graduate student majoring in education, said, "It allows the teacher to design a lecture in real time as to what we need, as opposed to having a canned lecture that does not address the issues we need to have help with."

The system is being used in two classes this semester, Physics 181, taught by Gerace, and Physics 283, taught by Professor Jose P. Mestre. Next semester, Gerace said he will use the system in Physics 182, and Mestre in Physics 114.

NATHAN MARTINO/COLLEGIAN
Professor Gerace of the physics department works with the Classtalk system. The system allows both the professor and students to present and respond to questions through individual laptop computers in the classroom.

Students petition against Bluewall's early closing

By Amy Scott
Collegian Correspondent

Shortened business hours at the Bluewall and at other eateries in the Campus Center and Student Union have raised enough concern to start a petition in favor of keeping the Bluewall open later.

For the past two weeks, students have been signing their names on a petition kept at the coffee counter in the Bluewall to show Roberta Potter, the new director of Campus Center Food Services, that many students want the Bluewall to once again stay open until 11 p.m. Since school has been in session, the Bluewall has been closing its doors at 9 p.m. instead.

"Students coming in have been expressing outrage at the illogic of closing before peak hours," said Kirsten Andelman, a student worker at the Bluewall's coffee counter. "It really closes the door on a cozy campus."

Students and employees alike are saying that the Bluewall has a steady night crowd of students and socialites who are being kept away from their favorite place as a result of the early closing. The Coffee Shop across from the Campus Center Print Shop and the Barber Shop is now open until 11 p.m., but some students say they don't think it's quite the same.

"They should have at least one place open until one," said Raymond Mercier, a senior microbiology major and night studier. "I'd rather they close the Coffee Shop down," he added.

"It's like a whole Bluewall culture is becoming extinct," said Jeff Cooperman, the Bluewall employee who started the petition.

When Cooperman started working nights again at the Bluewall this September, he was expecting to work among the same nocturnal coffee-pounding crowd he enjoyed serving last year. Instead, he and his co-workers must shut down at 9 p.m. sharp.

"It just starts to get crowded around 9 o'clock, and we have to start kicking people out," he explained.

According to Cooperman, he started the petition (which had about 700 signatures at press time) so that he'd have a "tool" to work with when he meets with Potter, who became Campus Center Food Service director this past summer. He said he originally wanted to let Potter know about the customer dissatisfaction and

Turn to BLUEWALL, page 10

100% BEEF 2 BURGS 2 BUCKS Great Burgs! Great Deal! QUARTER POUNDERS* OPEN YEAR ROUND 585-0241 ROUTE 9 HADLEY MA

PEKING GARDEN
A MANDARIN & SZECHUAN RESTAURANT
Open 7 Days a week
20% OFF MEALS FRI. AND SAT. EVENING WITH COMEDY SHOW with this ad
Comedy Shows Friday and Saturday at 8:30pm with dinner
Monday -Thursday Dinner Buffet $5.99 Sunday Brunch $6.99
586-1202 VISA FREE PARKING ON RT. 9 HADLEY MASTER CARD

Get A Life with Jesus Christ John 5:12
A UMass RSO since 1984 Alliance Christian Fellowship
BIBLE STUDY
DISCIPLESHIP
OUTREACH
TIMEOUT FELLOWSHIP FRIDAYS • 7 PM CAMPUS CENTER

Gain Valuable "Real World" Experience on Campus!
The Collegian Business Office is looking for ambitious, organized Sophomore SOM majors for the position of
Associate Business Manager
Direct supervision received from the Collegian business manager, as well as the assistant business manager. Applications may be obtained at:
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center (the basement)
Resumes and cover letters may be directed to:
Michael McRae, Business Manager
Application Deadline: October 17
The Collegian is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer

DAILY COLLEGIAN
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592

Durienne J. Hosley Editor-in-Chief Arthur Stapleton Jr. Managing Editor
Michael McRae Business Manager Andrew D. Davidson Production Manager Lisa Tannenbaum Advertising Manager
James P. Ganley Advertising Production Manager Jacob W. Michaels Senior Diversity Editor

Jon Lupo Arts & Living Editor Andrew Bryce, Matt Vautour Sports Editors
Chris Taylor Conner Black Affairs Editor Position vacant Women's Issues Editor
Andrew Ferguson Business Editor Marni F. Heffner Editorial Production Manager
Position vacant Developing Nations Editor John Khachadoorian Finance Manager
Tracy Monahan Editorial/Opinion Editor Jim Roode Circulation Manager
Position vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Eric Abenaim Subscriptions Manager
Jacob W. Michaels Jewish Affairs Editor Maureen Majerowski Senior Bookkeeper
Evelyn A. Delessio Multicultural Affairs Editor Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Kelly Spang News Editor Bruce Ackerson Graphics Professional
Nathan A. Martin Photography Editor Tarley Publications Printing Services

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Daring to stare at everyday life

I stare. A lot.

I stare at many things for a variety of reasons, depending upon the situation. I am a curious guy, as I tend to look at things for a prolonged period of time.

Do I stare annoyingly too much? Sometimes, but it's pretty harmless. I'm not like one of those toolboxes who stares down people to intimidate them.

It's the curiosity that leads me to stare. I stare at beautiful things, and despicable things. I stare at strange things and annoying things. Here are some examples:

I stare at women — I can't help it. If I see a woman that I am very attracted to, I tend to stare. I have a feeling that sometimes I stare too much, and feel like the woman is just looking back at me because she's wondering what the hell is my problem. Who knows? I love 'em anyway.

God bless women.

Andrew Bryce

I stare at the clocks in Machmer — I stare because I'm absolutely bewildered by the fact that not one damn clock works in the bloody building. Hell, get someone to manually move the hands of the clock if the cheap ones that operate on batteries don't do the job.

I stare at the brown crap on a plate at the DC — And, I think of...brown crap.

I stare at the people in the arcade — And wonder just what the fixation of playing a video game really is. It's not half as bad as the kid's next door to me, who have their Sega hooked up to the stereo. I just see no need.

I stare at the walls of the office here at the Collegian — And wish there were windows. But then again, since we are located in the Basement, we'd have a nice view of dirt. I guess it would be a start.

I stare at my friend's dog when it tries to take a dump — My friend tells me not to, since the dog refuses to go if someone is staring at him. I can understand that, because I sure as hell wouldn't be able to go if someone had their eyes plastered on me.

I stare at those people who accidently stumble or trip — I like to stare immediately after I witness some clumsy person in his act. Some may look away, pitying the stumbling person, but I like to keep my eyes on them to see the reaction. One of small pain gives me a laugh, one of trying–to–be–cool is interesting, as well. I've been there, and it's frustrating, but I still laugh at the poor fool.

I stare at Lenny Kravitz' drummer in the "Are You Gonna' Go My Way" video — She's very sexy.

I stare at my dirty laundry — And just hope that it'll wash itself.

I stare at my money — When I have it, I stare at it. I ain't staring at anything right now.

I stare at the kid falling asleep in front of me during class– time — I love seeing the person dozing off, head rocking, bobbing and swaying, trying to stay awake. Drool is an added bonus, as is a snore here or there.

I stare at myself in the mirror — Though not too long ... just enough time for a couple of flexes and a few funny faces.

I stare at people outside my peephole — Oh, how I love the peephole. I've seen the drunk, one with her face pressed up against the peephole as I unknowingly watched. I've seen someone stick a piece of gum on the hole, only to have it look like a big brain in the distorted view.

Obviously, on some occasions, I have a lot of time on my hands.

I stare at my Lionel Richie picture in the room — A great man, that Lionel. In the horizontal picture, he has on the old–school Nikes, the ones we all wore with our corduroys back in grade school. I also stare at the listings of the new releases at the record stores, hoping that Lionel will come out with yet another hit album.

I stare at those multi–colored, wacky pictures that you're supposed to see something — And I see nothing but a bunch of colors.

I stare at the Dick's Hot Dogs truck — When I was walking to the Textbook Annex the other day, I saw the Dick's Hot Dogs truck near the front, and couldn't help but stare. Granted they are probably very tasty hot dogs, I can't get myself to eat a hot dog made by a guy named Dick.

I stare at the screen when I don't have much else to say — Like now.

Andrew Bryce is a Collegian columnist.

Notes from the Campus Center Basement

Welcome back, everybody. God, it's good to be back in the Happy Valley, isn't it? It's certainly good to be back in the Basement.

Tracy Monahan

Jumping right in, for some reason the urge to target various campus food sellers is far too overwhelming. It must be dealt with at once.

The Hatch has suddenly become the campus' biggest enigma. No one is ever exactly sure whether or not it will be open or whether there will be food available if it is open. "Wok on the Wild Side" is seemingly closed down for good. I guess the "Wild Side" just got too tame.

In the same vein, whatever happened to the Taco Bell stand that used to be right inside the Hatch? One day at the beginning of last semester it suddenly appeared; then, suddenly over the summer it disappeared.

Ahh, just another failed experiment at our fine University. Really, though, if they were going to bring in outside competition, why Taco Bell? Everyone knows what happens after you eat the food; why would you want to eat it between classes? Cross the border, baby.

Burger King would've fared much better as outside competition. We can always hope.

Now, the Bluewall is another matter. This 9 p.m. closing time is not very cool. Who decided this and why was no one asked for input? Did they really think students wouldn't notice or care? Please. A petition with more than 400 names is still being signed. C'mon food services, listen to the students. People actually studied there, and met for class projects. I know what the argument is, and I have an answer for it: the Coffee Shop is not nearly as big as the Bluewall, and not nearly as many people can meet there.

My one beef with The Bluewall is the coffee prices. I know there is a coffee shortage, but a dollar for a cup of coffee that isn't even filled to the top?

I drink my coffee black and don't need room for cream, so if I'm paying a dollar, fill my coffee to the top.

The Coffee Shop being open until 11 p.m. is really cool, but I fear they've sacrificed the quality of the french fries in order to service students all day. The past couple of days, the french fries were more grease than fries. When you can wring out your french fries, there's a slight problem.

****

In front of the Coffee Shop, there is a really cool ad for the People's Market with women with flowing hair and lots of ivy. The problem, however, is that it says to come visit the People's Market on the first floor of the Student Union. Last time I checked, the People's Market address was 328 Student Union Building. Yes, that would be the third floor. Guys, check your address before you start inviting people in.

Okay, so it's an easy mistake to make. To clear up confusion, the Hatch is on the second floor of the Student Union, the Mini Store and People's Market on the third, and SGA and various RSO offices are on the fourth. The question is, where is the first floor of the Student Union? Try as I may, I just can't seem to find it. Maybe it's a big campus secret, or maybe it's a special hangout for Chancellor David K. Scott and friends.

Speaking of the Chancellor, he was out at the great campus pond cleanup. It seems that every semester I've been here the pond has been cleaned up, left only to smell hideous by the end of the semester again. What's the problem? Is it the spring concertgoers, or is it the fact that water is pumped in and we are trying desperately to create an ecosystem on campus?

But kudos go out to Kathleen Scott, the wife of the chancellor, for trying to brighten up the campus. It is very sad to gaze out the library windows at a brown pond. It's also very refreshing to see the Chancellor support his wife in her charitable endeavors. Go Dave, slinging the shovel.

****

Factions on campus are now interested in banning smoking in the Newman Center, despite the fact that it is not a campus building.

The last bastion of smokers is about to be crushed by clean air advocates. Winter is going to be long for smokers, bringing cold hands and chapped lips. Break out the mittens and gloves.

****

Mysteriously, all the Coca Cola vending machines on campus have been replaced with Pepsi machines. I went to get a Sprite the other day and was confronted with choices I was not familiar with. It was my choice, the choice of a new generation. I ended up with Schweppe's dry grape ginger– ale. I guess our contract with Coke ran out.

By the way, the power outage — sorry, I'll try not to kick out the plug again.

Tracy Monahan is a Collegian staff member.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

IT WAS GINNY MAYHEW'S TURN
MR. DOYLE, WE OWN AN APPLIANCE STORE. IF YOU COME IN HERE, WE'RE DEAD MEAT.
WELL, AGAIN, IT MAY BE THAT YOU JUST NEED A CHANCE! YOU COULD CARRY KNICK-KNACKS, FOR INSTANCE.
KNICK-KNACKS?
HEAR THAT, MOM? WE DON'T HAVE TO SELL DISHWASHERS ANYMORE! WE CAN SWITCH TO KNICK-KNACKS!
KNICK-KNACKS! IT'S LIKE A DREAM COME TRUE! IF ONLY YOUR FATHER WERE ALIVE!
9-29
YOU KNOW, FOR RUSTICS, YOU FOLKS SURE ARE GIVEN TO SARCASM.
SO WE WATCH LETTERMAN SUE US.

Opinion/Editorial

A cross-country trucking tale

Erin Barnes

Six weeks ago, I made a most interesting, albeit educational, journey. No, I did not travel to Europe or any other foreign country, nor did I explore terrifying caves or excavate ancient ruins. Rather, I spent three days driving from Denver, Colo., to Amherst in a small truck with my parents at my side.

Did I mention that this same truck did not have air conditioning? Well, given these conditions, you would think that we would have killed one another by the time we hit northern Colorado. On the contrary, I saw some beautiful scenery (read: green, healthy corn) and learned a great deal about my parents and myself in the process.

It is a tradition in my family to honk our horn when we cross a state line. Pretty wild, huh? Alas, this rebellious act raised more than just eyebrows in Nebraska. Once these circa–1950 farmers spotted our license plate, they immediately assumed that we were die–hard CU Buffalo fans and viewed up with deep hatred and contempt.

Little did these people know that I only visit Boulder to buy drugs (for my friends) and to check–out the latest sundress/combat–boot styles. My family supports the Buffs, but not to anywhere near the extreme Cornhusker fans nurture their school. Besides, everyone knows that the "N" on the Nebraska football helmet stands for knowledge. In short, they hate us and we hate them. Needless to say, we were careful not to cut–off anyone and we avoided eye–contact whenever possible.

I'll admit that it was hard to distinguish between Nebraska and Iowa as the rolling hills of corn and farms varied little from state to state. My eyes frantically searched for Kevin Costner and his "field of dreams" with each passing mile of I–70. Instead, I saw water towers with happy faces and corner shops displaying signs supporting their local high school.

My "city folk" mentality questioned whether the people we saw in restaurants were returning from a KKK rally, or merely enjoying a hot, brown meal with friends at Stuckey's. Never did I once consider that they might enjoy their simple way of life. God only knows what they thought of my family and I as we complained about the water being served to us without lemon slices, or eating off place mats that doubled as coloring books. Yes, they did appear trapped in time, but happy nonetheless.

Ohio and Illinois passed in much the same way. Indiana and Pennsylvania were rather tranquil, save the dead body that was found near our hotel in Lake Erie. Whoever it was probably ate at the same Denny's we dined at the previous night.

Entering New York was rather exciting because I realized that in a few short hours I would be in my Amherst home. Besides, the New Yorkers we encountered were extremely friendly; a fact attributed only to their distance away from the city.

Once we finally reached our destination, we hurriedly unpacked the truck so that my parents could start their return drive home. The University of Massachusetts was now my home for the next two years, or until I graduate, whichever comes first. Saying goodbye was sad as we realized that a lot needed to be said.

Despite the early morning wake–up calls, the unbearable heat in the truck at high noon, and my father's unending snoring, the trip was a great deal more fun than I had anticipated. I concluded that truck–stop food is pretty tasty, my parents' choice of music is not that bad, and that there still places that exist in America that epitomize Norman Rockwell paintings — untouched by chaos and free from the petty annoyances with which so many of us waste our time.

This three–day excursion gave me a truly American education that a classroom could never provide. I would not be able to list my experiences on my resume, nor did I get college credit for my trip or a tan in the process. Ultimately, the reflections I gathered were worth the few pitfalls, even the heat. Did I mention that we didn't have air conditioning?

Erin Barnes is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

GSS vice-president resigns

To the editor:

With much regret, I hereby resign my position as vice president of the Graduate Student Senate, effective immediately. This is not a decision that comes easily for me, nor is it a decision I take lightly. My resignation comes as a direct result of not having received funding for projects I proposed to the Executive Committee at the end of June.

As they are aware, I requested funding for one month of the summer to complete two projects: 1.) A handbook for graduate students consisting of University policy and procedures for handling complaints of harassment; and 2.) To coordinate a TA orientation around issues of harassment in the classroom.

My request for funding was justifiable on two counts. First, the GSS constitution indicates that if the vice president or executive officer do significant work during the summer, they should be duly compensated. Second, in the summer of 1993, the former vice president was funded for completing similar kinds of projects. Both Ruth Mathis and Colin Cavell agreed to fund the projects. Prasad Venugopal, president of GSS, did not agree.

When these projects were not funded, it became clear to me that the issues I had been working on and my work in general were not valued. At this point, I began to actively solicit funding from other sources. Recently I was offered another assistanship which I accepted.

I appreciate the many people who showed confidence in Prasad, Ruth, Colin and me by electing us to serve their interests — they reminded me of the power of collective collaborative action. I sincerely regret that I will not be able to complete the work we started as an Executive Committee.

Julia R. Johnson
Graduate Student Senate Vice president

Bridging Worlds program

To the editor:

As president of the Black Student Union, it gives me great pleasure to strongly endorse the Bridging Worlds Program. The Bridging Worlds Program is beginning its third year of service to the University and the greater Massachusetts community. In its four–year of service, it has provided a mentoring program between college students who grew up in urban environments and present day high school students from similar environments.

The Bridging Worlds program has proven to be of great value to the University and the state. By providing positive role models, particularly in communities which lack such role models, these mentors serve as ambassadors of good will, teachers by example, and a means to inspire these youths to go on to higher levels of education.

Furthermore, the high school students are not the only individuals who gain from this experience. College students who participate in the program are given a real opportunity to give something back to their community. In light of the troubled condition of our inner cities, who better to teach our young how to navigate the pitfalls of their environment than those who were able to navigate the very same pitfalls.

By "bridging" these two groups of students, this program taps into the wealth of information available in present day college students. Given the troubling condition of today's youth and taking note of the good that the Bridging Worlds program has provided and can continue to provide, I strongly support a continued investment in the program.

Shomwa M. Shamapande
Black Student Union President

Coverage of speech commended

To the editor:

I want to commend The Collegian and staffwoman Kristin St. John for the article titled "Students told to search for truth" (Sept. 23, 1994), a reportage of the talk by Native American activist John Trudell. I was excited to see it on the front page and to read a comprehensive, concise and sensitive write–up of Mr. Trudell's speech.

It is always refreshing when I hear a non–majority culture perspective of aspects of the "majority culture." For example, Mr. Trudell's analysis of the state of mind of the first European immigrants as "all messed up," "diseased" due to "the battle for forced religion (which) had been happening for 400 years" (in Europe) and his exploration of what was going on in Europe (the Inquisition) at the time, provide a necessary perspective on systemic and institutional societal problems in this country.

Likewise, the idea that in Europe, with the creation of a male "dominant" god, "it was considered all right to attack the land and each other." In my opinion, as a rationale used by successive U.S. governments, this single idea has done more to destroy the planet than any other.

Anne Nwokoye
Everywoman's Center Office Manager

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
ARTS & LIVING
Thursday September 29, 1994
Weekend Edition • Volume CIV Issue 13

The 1970s are back with a nostalgic vengeance. At this rate, can the 1980s be too far behind?

By Mike MacLean
Collegian Staff

It seems like just a few months after the wonderful "I love disco, and I hear it's making a comeback" collections arrived from the 1970s preservation society, who reared their ugly heads into our lives. Well someone must have seen them and figured that the 80s have lay dormant long enough. Now we have the collections of ultimate party hits from the eighties being hawked on MTV, and 80s songsmaking resurgences via album soundtracks.

All of this has to kind of make one wonder, why? After all, the 80s were only four years ago, do we really miss them already? The decade certainly gave us a varied amount of things to get nostalgic about, and a few things we'd surely love to leave in the bin with bell bottoms, disco and the Pinto. So let's go on a journey, to the decade that perhaps spent most of its time recovering from the 70s.

While music has been the main focus of this recent 80s interest movement, let's take a serious look at what we had back then. The early part of the decade saw the demise of The Police, which perhaps triggered a dark age in music for a while. After that we had such illustrious artists as Falco, of "Rock Me Amadeus" fame, Kenny Loggins: the king of movie soundtrack cheese and Dexie's Midnight Runners ("Come on Eileen"). Of course, no retrospective would be complete without mentioning such staples of American pop culture as Nena ("99 Red Balloons") and Men Without Hats and "The Safety Dance."

On the other side of the coin however, there were good bands putting out decent music all throughout the 80s. R.E.M., The Smiths and The Cure were just a few, building up momentum that would carry them over into the next decade — it was just difficult to find them if you were sifting through all of the hair bands of the mid to late 80s. It hurts just to mention such names as Bon Jovi, Poison, Cinderella, Motley Crue (so what if they had lots of tattoos) and Winger, so stopping now would be safer for everyone's glam–rock tolerance levels.

Music aside, there were many other things that we can look back upon with embarrassment from the decade. Fashion, for one, was an aspect of life in the 80s that just seemed to come one great idea after another.

Putting actual clothes aside for one second, remember all the accessories that we wore? Starting with the wrist, we had gummi bracelets, friendship bracelets and the greatest idea of them all, those sailor's knot bracelets that you weren't supposed to take off until it shrunk so tight around your wrist that your circulation was suffering in the name of fashion. But those friendship bracelets were the coolest, weren't they? If someone gave you one, hey, they must be a friend.

"Wow! You gave me a braided bracelet made of colored string, now I know I can trust you not to hit on my boyfriend when I'm not around."

Oh, but the fun only is just beginning, because now we have entered the realm of actual 80s clothing. And a good place to start would be acid wash jeans. Who's brilliant idea was this? What would you do today with a pair of jeans that you spilled bleach all over? Probably throw them out or wear them for yard-work or something. For some unknown reason, in the mid eighties we seemed to think it was cool to have white blotches all over out pants. Acid wash is just one of many things that made the 80s second only to the 70s for dumb concepts.

A strong case could be made for the fake Rugby shirts that we wore, but when you take into account skinny ties, florescent leg warmers, mismatched pairs of legwarmers or shoes, and big, puffy bangs, they're only a dim light in the darkness.

The eighties was also the decade that Velcro broke as a major fashion statement (Velcro? Fashion? I'm feeling queasy) and one of the trailblazers was (hold on to your seats) Kangaroos. Yes the fabulous sneaker with no laces, just Velcro, and, as an added bonus, you can pay a little extra and get the nifty Velcro pouch on the side that can hold as much as two quarters. I guess this was a good idea, since my financial concerns at the time consisted of not losing my milk money.

Where did all these spiffy ideas come from? Well, influences on fashion usually come from music, and the next category, movies. Every decade has great movies, but the true benchmark of how things were are the movies that were considered to be teen movies. Pretty in Pink, Sixteen Candles and basically anything else Molly Ringwald did seem to be remembered, as well as the fact that Tom Cruise broke big with Top Gun.

To talk about the teen movie of the 80s could really come down to two movies. The first is The Breakfast Club (featuring Molly and the brat pack) and Ferris Bueller's Day Off.

Even though both movies had different settings and chains of events, all the elements of a great teen movie was there: the teens, the oppressive school official, etc. Then the teens go through a periods of fun and learn important lessons along the way and teach the person in the position of authority that they are just like everyone else.

Finally, let's take a look at probably the one thing about the eighties that has probably just as many good points as bad: TV. Cheese was abundant on the tube in the 80s shows that pop up right away include "Knight Rider" (Turbo Boost, KITT!) featuring David (he's a huge music star in Germany) Hasslehoff, and them "Dukes of Hazzard." My favorite character name is a toss up between Enos and Cooter but oh how I love to say Rosco P. Coltrain!! The Emmy quality stuff doesn't end there as many other shows reigned supreme. Most of them had some sort of gimmick to them. "Hardcastle and McCormick" (cool car), "Riptide" (robot) and "Greatest American Hero" (geeky

Turn to EIGHTIES, page 9

Fabulous Fall brings new TV line-up

By Tracy Gavel
Collegian Correspondent

We're about two weeks into the new television season, and I must say that I can already sense the general apathy that is starting to grip the nation regarding the new network shows.

I mean, I haven't watched them all yet, but judging from what I've seen so far I get the feeling that "Frasier," "Picket Fences," "The Simpsons" and a select few other shows will have to satisfy my media–hungry eye — at least for the time being.

Speaking of "Frasier," I couldn't help being disappointed when the program took a ratings tuesedive in its new time slot against "Home Improvement." To tell the truth, I never really understood the grunting charisma of comedian Tim Allen, and I am proud to say that I'm one of the mavericks who started watching "Seinfeld" way back when it was left for dead, running against the ABC megahit on Wednesday nights.

Of course, it's really no surprise that "Home Improvement" is still sitcom king — considering that last summer (according to the Boston Herald) the show beat out one of the most amazing television events of the last twenty– years: the live O.J. Simpson pursuit and capture in that now famous white Bronco. Allen's show got the most viewers that week; O.J. was second. Now that's audience loyalty if I ever heard of any.

Now to discuss some new shows. My pick that everybody should try out at least once is NBC's "The John Larroquette Show." Yeah, I know, "Larroquette" technically is not a new show — but it should be pretty new to most people considering that it spent last season quietly languishing opposite ABC's "Roseanne."

Now it's set up against ABC's equally powerful "Grace Under Fire." Cancellation looms in the future unless the public takes a chance on this mellow adult comedy. I guess I just can't help rooting for the underdogs.

My distastes for the worst show I've encountered so far this season is reserved for NBC's "The Martin Short Show."

If you count yourself among the countless millions who periodically yearn for that mad–cap characters and impersonations of this Canadian comedian, take it from me. You'd be much better off checking out Comedy Central's old "Saturday Night Live" reruns than subjecting yourself to his dreck. It's really bad, and not an entertaining kind of bad like "Fantasy Island" — it's just bad. It's like a collage of "SNL" skits that were left out at the last minute for being too stupid to air. And if you watched "SNL" last season, you know that I must be talking about

Turn to TELEVISION, page 9

THE 80s: WHAT A SHORT, STRANGE TRIP IT'S BEEN

SHORT CUTS

Edited by Tara MK Connelly

Best of weekend events

Thursday

Jakes's Jeans is a tapestry of theater, dance, music, mime, storytelling and sign language carefully woven with threads of love, lust and loneliness. Show starts at 8 p.m. Tickets are $10, $8 for students & seniors. For more info, call 586- 7282.

Barney Griffin, Black Sheep Cafe, New York Songwriter with no accent! 8 p.m. Tickets $3.

Friday

The Queen's Garden, Bowker Auditorium, 8 p.m.

Tickets: $6 Students/seniors $3.50

Amherst International Folkdancing, Bangs Community Center, Amherst. You don't even need a partner!

20th Annual Multiband Pops, Spectacular showcase of 500 performers at the Mullins Center. All seats are reserved. Tickets are $12 general public, $9 elders, children 16 & under and students, $8 groups of 15 or more, $3 UMass students.

Cordelia's Dad, Black Sheep Cafe, 8 p.m., $6.

Loose Caboose with Uproot, a dub-wise jam down with New Englands finest reggae band. 7 p.m. $10.

Saturday

Nataraj Dance Company, Williams College Museum of Art, Interpretive dance taken from nine Indian miniature paintings. Show begins at 8:30 p.m., tickets are $3.

Tales of the Pacific Rim, Bowker Auditorium, 2 p.m., Tickets $6, students & seniors $2.

Ellen Cogen Duo, Coolidge Park Cafe, 8 p.m., FREE!

Quote of Note

"Don't get into a couple of schools and already, you know, they're suggesting I get a name tag and a hair net."

–THE REAL WORLD'S RACHAEL on her mother's proposal that she get a job at McDonald's.

People and Pop Culture in the News

Who said the British aristocracy has nothing to do? In case you were wondering what happened to charming Prince Edward after Fergie ditched him for a rich Texan oil king how about turning on the telly? Prince Edward traveled to South Africa to interview President Nelson Mandela for a local British show.

Speaking of ex's, the Piano Man is flying solo after his divorce to Cover Girl model Christie Brinkley came through. When asked if Brinkley would do it all over again, she said yes. Why? "Because I was following my heart." How nice.

Meryl Streep recently got her own star on that famous Hollywood boulevard. After being chased hither and neither on The River Wild, her next project involves being the voice of Bart Simpson's new girlfriend. This once again confirms that there is nothing this woman won't do... I mean can't do.

Anne Rice has had a change of heart after viewing Interview With the Vampire the other week. She takes back every little nasty about Tom Cruise playing the litero vampire lover, Lestat. In fact, the movie succeeds her wildest dreams.

Can anyone tell me where Courtney Love is? Rumor has it that she was last seen exiting a tres chic plastique surgeon who did a major overhaul on Love. This is a far cry from the Buddist temple she told friends she was visiting to properly mourn the late Kurt Cobain. Well, people can mourn in different ways...

William Shatner doesn't seem to be getting any breaks soon. He's being sued by a playhouse owner in Allentown, Pa. Apparently he didn't show up to an opening show that was based on one of his own books (gee, maybe he read it and couldn't face the embarassment - just a thought). This little gaffe might cost the ex-Captain $150,000.

Also taking a another stab at writing is Henry Rollins who is set to release a book and spoken word album detailing his "tour of duty" with Black Flag. "Get in the Van: On the road with Black Flag" will highlight Rollins' adventure with overzealous fans, evil policemen, poverty (?), and all night-drives. Hey, that sounds like fun — being stuck in a van for hours listening to Rollins' preaching.

Material in this column is provided by wire services & other publications.

Editors' Cuts

Music — Sonic Youth

In the seemingly increasing tradition of re-releasing rock icon's past albums, Geffen Records is digging deep into the post-punk archives to reissue noise-pioneers Sonic Youth's entire back catalog.

The New York quartet virtually led the "no-wave" movement in the mid-eighties, influencing hordes of current alternative bands to pick up their guitars and wreck sonic havoc.

Now that Geffen has decided to reissue, as well as remaster the group's landmark albums, the band may finally be getting the "musical pioneer" status that they so deserve.

Complete with extensive new liner notes and a few unreleased tracks, the reissues are must-haves for die-hard fans, and make a great introduction for neophytes.

The slow, pain-staking process of putting the albums out again began last November with the re-release of the band's long out-of-print Daydream Nation. Their two infamous SST Records releases EVOL and Sister will be out on October 11. Keep your eyes peeled.

—Matt Audette

Video — The Snapper

From the talented, versatile British director Stephen Frears (My Beautiful Launderette, Dangerous Liaisons) comes one of 1993's funniest, most clever and warm-hearted movies.

Sort-of a sequel to 1991's The Commitments (the same family, but the names have changed), The Snapper (written by Roddy Doyle) features "Star Trek" vet Colm Meany as a working-class Irish father with a big family and a big problem. His daughter is "up the pole" and she's not saying who the dad is.

When rumors begin to spread that the snapper's (slang for baby) is the boorish, middle-aged next-door neighbor, suddenly the daughter has a story: a little too much to drink, a Spanish sailor...

Filled with rich characterizations (especially from Meany) and some truly hilarious punchlines, The Snapper is an exuberant sleeper that not only matches Four Weddings and a Funeral wit for wit but reaffirms Frears as the Howard Hawks of our generation.

Those who enjoy(ed) The Snapper - take heart, Frears will be directing the sequel, The Van.

—Jon Lupo

Sale — J. Crew at Mullins

Very few things in this world can be defined as classy. A vase from Waterford, a painting by Renoir, a bottle of champagne (the kind that doesn't cost $5 and includes your own designer set of authentic plastic Dino mugs) comes to mind. But what about style? What about the flair that the late Jackie O reeked of, or the timeless taste Audrey Hepburn forever possessed.

It's something designers like Oldham, Klien, Sanders and Lauren are always trying to duplicate every season. It lives in stores like J. Crew, Gap, and Eddie Bauer's. Unfortunately, these things often come with exurbanite prices that make the ordinary college student cringe and smile sardonically at the salesperson when they suggest a small loan be made before you even consider anything in the store. Even ordering from their catalogues requires a major increase in the old charge card.

Weep and gnash your teeth no longer! J Crew, clothing for the sassy and ever chic, is having a "warehouse" sale at the Mullins Center, Oct. 3–6, 9 a.m.– 9 p.m. So sacrifice those highly orders from D.P. Dough and come on down.

—Tara MK Connelly

IF ONLY THEY CAME WITH INSTRUCTIONS.

American Red Cross

AMERICAN RED CROSS CAMPAIGN NEWSPAPER AD NO. ARC-89-1012-1 COL.

We Deliver to UMass

Kai Chi

Chinese - American Cuisine
Restaurant & Bar

LATE NIGHT DINNER SPECIAL!
UP TO 30% OFF!

Friday, Saturday & Sunday • 9pm - Closing
No other promos apply / Not available for Take Out
Entrees Starting at $4.50

Kai Chi Restaurant

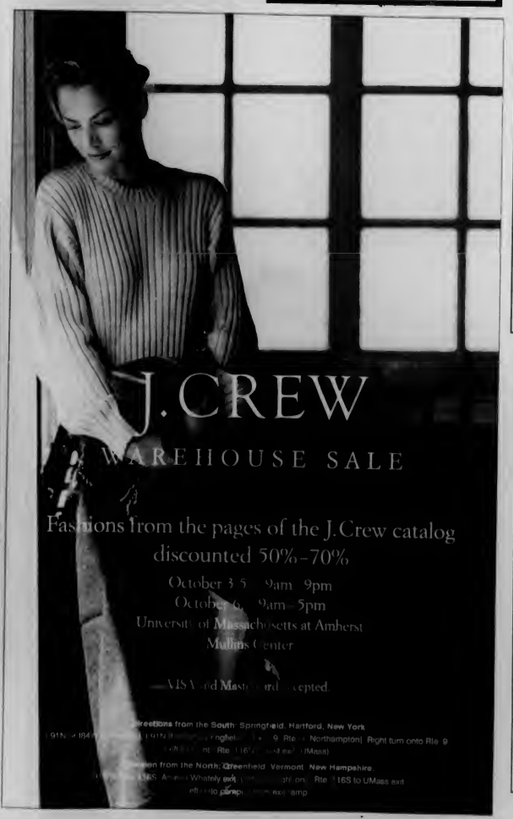
MT. FARMS MALL • RT 9 • HADLEY • 586-2774
Open Sun. - Thurs. 11:30am - 11:00pm
Fri. - Sat. 11:30am - midnight

Hadley Coin-Op Laundromat

206 Russell St./Rt.9
Open 7 Days 6am-11pm
Top Loaders: $1.00 • Dbl Loaders: $1.50

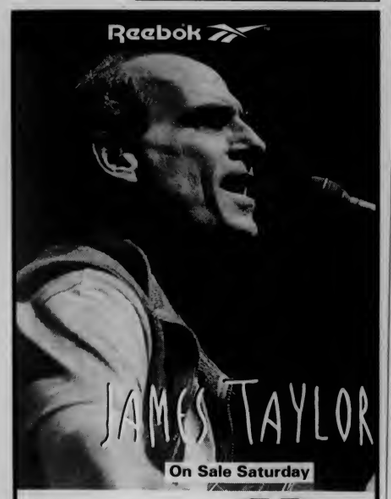
"Yes, it's always a fine day for a barbeque. Ahh nothing like the hot coals to cause a man to break down in a fit of hysterical crying. "WHY DIDN'T I LISTEN TO MY MOTHER AND BECOME A DOG GROOMER!!!!" COLLEGIAN NEVER TOO LATE TO CHANGE

NRA BASIC PISTOL COURSE
NORTHAMPTON REVOLVER CLUB
CALL 268-3596 FOR DETAILS



J.CREW
WAREHOUSE SALE
Fashions from the pages of the J.Crew catalog discounted 50%–70%
October 3-5 9am-9pm
October 6 9am-5pm
University of Massachusetts at Amherst
Mullins Center
VISA and MasterCard accepted.
Directions from the South: Springfield, Hartford, New York
Directions from the North: Greenfield, Vermont, New Hampshire,

Reebok



On Sale Saturday

NOVEMBER 16
7:30pm $20* Includes 50¢ parking
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst

Tickets available at the Mullins Center Box Office and all Ticketmaster locations. *An additional service charge will be pa-d to and retained by ticket company on all purchases at outlets or by telephone. Presented by Tea Party® Concerts

CALL FOR TICKETS TICKETMASTER (413) 733-2500

"Yesterday I was lounging around with my friends trying decide how to start off this year's Homecoming Weekend when I heard from the boy next door hat The Mass Daily Collegian was having their Fall Open House on Friday! Needless to say I immediately grabbed my daily planner and penciled them in from 12 - 4. The thought of being able to see first-hand how he largest college daily operates was breathtaking! I also hoped that I would run into some of the cool people who write the cool stuff for my favorite paper. My friens and I sat in delight at the prospect of our Friday afternoon. What a glorious day it would be I would have to tell my other friends about it because they would be jealous if I went and they didn't. And just think - it was all because of the boy next door."

Dear Diary,
Last night when I was up in my favorite tree stargazing I began to ponder my life. I realized that some of my favorite things were no longer part of the new pop culture, and that many of my best loved activities were out of style. I enjoyed Pac Man and now there is Mortal Combat II. My one Barbie was fine for all seasons, but now there is a Barbie for every month and special event. I used to think rollerblading around my neighborhood in my neon, shiny jacket with my name on the sleeve was fun, but now everybody has rollerblades and they can go much faster. I used to enjoy trips to the grocery store with my mom until she told me it was wrong to eat candy from he big bins. The more I sit and thought about how my interests were different than most others I remembered that I had read The Daily Collegian that morning, and I knew that it was the hip thing to do because everybody was reading it. Wow! The Daily Collegian saved me from an identity crisis! I climbed happily down from the tree.

Don't view Princess Caraboo

By Jon Lupo
Collegian Staff

PRINCESS CARABOO
Directed by Michael Austin with Phoebe Cates, Kevin Kline

Remember those Shelly Duvall–produced "Fairy Tale Theatre" specials on cable? You know, the re-telling of classic tall–tales with sort–of big stars and a sort–of low budget? For those who couldn't get enough of those sort–of cheesy bedtime stories comes Princess Caraboo, a mildly entertaining but so–what? adaptation of a supposedly true story. There's nothing terribly bad about this period tale of true lies, however, there's nothing terribly remarkable about it either.

In late 19th century England, a mysterious woman (Phoebe Cates) is discovered by two footmen. Delivering her to the stately home of Mrs. Warren (Wendy Hughes), this woman doesn't speak or understand English and wears an exotic– looking turban. She identifies herself only as one Princess Caraboo. The trusting Mrs. Warren rescues her from vagrant prison and ushers her into middle–brow society.

At first, Mrs. Warren is the only one who believes in Princess Caraboo. The Greek butler (Kevin Kline) is suspicious — until he gets a look at Caraboo's mysterious tattoo — as is an investigative reporter (Stephen Rea) who finds himself at once doubtful and smitten with the Princess.

The film hinges, of course, on the "is she or isn't she" angle of the plot, as one by one, people are converted into believing in the wonder of Princess Caraboo. From John Lithgow's black–toothed academic to another prince, they all fall over themselves to bask in her seemingly simple radiance.

Director Michael Austin is going for a sanitized romantic comedy, I guess, but the film's rhythm is so politely mute, there's no room for romance or hilarity. Rea's reporter gets all hot and bothered over the Princess, but it seems less like true love than a script–demanded coupling. By the end, when a luke–warm moral message is added to the mix, you'd be hard–pressed to find anybody who cares.

As the mysterious Princess Caraboo, Phoebe Cates revives a career that really never was. Never really fulfilling the promise of her early roles in Fast Times at Ridgemont High and Gremlins, Cates has ended up in dogs like Drop Dead Fred. Cates is good as the enigmatic Caraboo; there's something warm about her, though it's a measure of her prowess that she can't raise the film above it's sleepy–eyed intentions. Hardly

Turn to PRINCESS, page 3

COURTESY LIAM LONGMAN/TRI-STAR PICTURES

Caraboo (Phoebe Cates), a mysterious young woman who speaks an unknown language, is given refuge in a wealthy family's home, where she is met with suspicion by the butler (Kevin Kline) in Princess Caraboo.

Arcadia players bring the Baroque to life

By Jorma Kansanen
Collegian Staff

When it comes to discussing the time period in classical music called the Baroque period, few, if any, distinct composers come to mind. To the unenlightened, they are wondering what the hell I am talking about. To the big fan — personas like Johann Sebastian Bach, and Handel's masterpiece Messiah, are the first that come to mind.

This weekend, the Arcadia Players Baroque Orchestra and Chamber Ensemble will be performing a series of "Octoberfest" concerts around the area, in a piece by German composer Georg Philipp Telemann.

This celebration of his work, Tafelmusik begins Friday night at the First Unitarian Universalist Church in Springfield, then moves to the Grace Episcopal Church in downtown Amherst Saturday night, and culminates in a special Sunday afternoon show at the Pearl Street Club in Northampton.

Telemann (1681–1767) wrote this piece in 1733, and it goes in rhythm with the stylings of that time. Unifying the French and Italian modes of composition that was inherent to the period, Telemann was able to write a piece that added his own openness to diverse musical experimentation and also kept in pace with Baroque principle. Tafelmusik opens with the standard French overture, is mingled with solo compositions for flute, violin, and cello in the center, and finishes with the full orchestra in accompaniment.

The Arcadia Players, led by Director Margaret Irwin– Brandon, was founded in 1989 for the purpose of performing the works of the 17th and 18th Century, and bringing it to places that would not usually be apt to these style of performances. A musician centering on early keyboard instrumcnts, a soloist at the International Organ Festival in Nuremburg and other prominent events, and a former faculty member of both Mount Holyoke and Oberlin colleges, Brandon has compiled an orchestra that keeps a local flavor and has its membership primarily originate from the Greater Pioneer Valley.

Led by flutist Jesse Lepkoff, violinist Dana Maiben, and cellist Alice Robbins, all established recording and performing artists, the Arcadia Players will take on this piece that tackles a whole spectrum of musical influences in one single composition. This weekend the spirit of the Baroque, and its infinite conversation between the instruments through the concerto and sonata, will be in the "house." The concert house, that is.

This Friday night's show is at the First Unitarian Universalist Church, 245 Porter Lake Drive, Springfield, and begins at 8:00 p.m. Saturday's show will be at the Grace Episcopal Church on Bolwood Avenue, on the Green, Amherst and will also begin at 8:00pm. The Sunday afternoon show at Pearl Street, 10 Pearl Street, Northampton will start at 2:00 p.m., and the audience will be seated informally at tables. Tickets for the whole weekend package start at $70 (premier seating), $50 (reserved), and $40 (general). Individual tickets start at $25 (premier), $18 (reserved), and $15 (general). They are available at the Northampton Box Office by calling 1–800–THE–TICK, or 413–586–8686 and at the door of the venue a half hour prior to the performance. For further info contact Margaret Irwin– Brandon at 413–584–8882.

BE A HERO
Be A Teacher

To find out how to become a teacher, call 1-800-45-TEACH

Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Inc.

RETURNING TO THE UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS THIS FALL.
THE MOST SUCCESSFUL NATIONAL BARTENDING SCHOOL PRESENTS

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING™

FREE INFO SESSION
Mon., Oct. 3 @ 7:00pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn

Shop around and compare!
Call
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
for more information.
Act now! Space is limited!!

BIG GUY LIQUORS
BIG ON FRIENDLY SERVICE
549-3555 RTE 63

AYA WHITE ZIN 2 FOR $5.00	BUD DRY BAR BOTTLES $11.99 + Dep
16 oz Budweiser Bottles $14.99 + Dep	LIONS HEAD 12 OZ. BOTTLES $8.79 case + Dep.

IF YOU WANT TO MAKE IT IN THE REAL WORLD, SPEND A SEMESTER IN OURS.

Walt Disney World Co. representatives will be on campus to present an informative session for Undergraduate Students on the WALT DISNEY WORLD Spring '95 College Program.

WHEN: THURSDAY, OCT. 6 AT 7:00PM
WHERE: MARSTON 152

Attendance at this presentation is required to interview for the Spring '95 College Program.

Interviews will be Friday, October 7. Aquasweetheart majors are encouraged to attend. All majors welcome.

For more information contact Field Experience Office Phoenix 545-6265

Walt Disney World Co.
Where students spend a semester getting ready for the rest of their lives.

© The Walt Disney Co. An equal opportunity employer

Pearl Street

• Wednesday •
GAY NIGHT
Music By Spin, Inc.

• Thursday-WHMP •
18+ Dance Party
Hosted by WHMP's Nick Danger
The Area's Biggest Dance Party.
Music by Spin, Inc.

Downstairs - /18+/
Underground at Pearl Street,
INSOMNIA
Alternative Dance Music
w/ DJ's J. Wilson & J. Schwartz

• Friday •
RETRO NIGHT
Dance Music From the Late-70's & Early-80's with DJ Dennis
9:00 pm - 1:00 am
$3.00 Admission With This Ad
Duran Duran, Wham!, Missing Persons, Rick Springfield, Human League, Pandabear

• Saturday •
Saturday Night Dance Party
with DJ Lance
Playing Club Top-40 Dance Music

• Sunday - Oct. 9th •
Under 21 Dance Party
8:00 pm - 11:30 pm

Live Music

Fri., Sept. 30 - 8:30 pm /18+/
CHUCKLEHEAD
Knuckle Sandwich

Sat., Oct. 1 - 9:00 pm
U2 Tribute
ZOO STATION

Mon., Oct. 3 - 8:00 pm/18+/
SKA Festival
THE SPECIALS
Let's go Bowling / SMA

Tues., Oct. 4 - 7:30 pm
/All Ages/
OVERKILL
Doom Nation / Sick

Thurs., Oct. 6 - 9:00 pm /18+/
Club Insomnia Presents.
MAGGIE ESTEP

Sat., Oct. 8 - 8:30 pm
J. GEILS BLUES TIME
with Magic Dick

Sun., Oct. 9 - 7:30 pm
/All Ages/
SAVATAGE
Slow Poke / Visionary

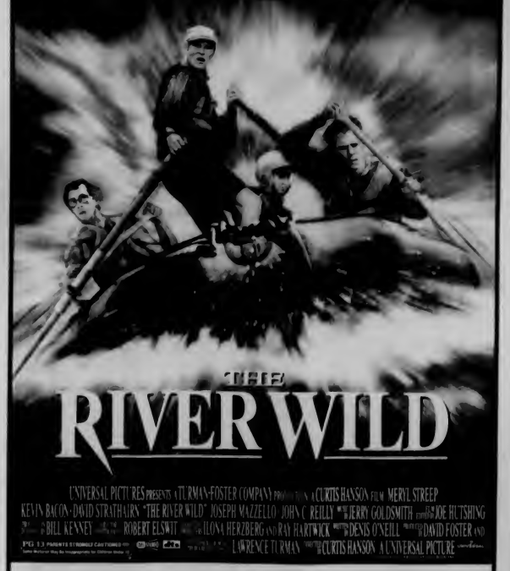
Tues., Oct. 11 - 8:00 pm /18+/
DAVE MATTHEWS BAND

Thurs., Oct. 13 - 7:00 pm /18+/
LUCIOUS JACKSON

Sun., Oct. 18 - 8:00 pm /18+/
THE RADIATORS
Synesthesia

Coming

FROM THE DIRECTOR OF "THE HAND THAT ROCKS THE CRADLE"
MERYL STREEP · KEVIN BACON · DAVID STRATHAIRN
The vacation is over.



THE RIVER WILD

UNIVERSAL PICTURES presents A TURMAN-FOSTER COMPANY production A CURTIS HANSON film MERYL STREEP
KEVIN BACON · DAVID STRATHAIRN "THE RIVER WILD" JOSEPH MAZZELLO JOHN C. REILLY JERRY GOLDSMITH BRIDE HUTSHING
BILL KENNEY ROBERT ELSWIT ILONA HERZBERG RAN HARTWICK DENNIS O'NEILL DAVID FOSTER
LAWRENCE TURMAN CURTIS HANSON A UNIVERSAL PICTURE

OPENS FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 30TH AT A THEATRE NEAR YOU.

STARTS OCT. 3
10-Week Adult Evening Dance Programs
AMHERST BALLET CENTRE
29 Strong St., Amherst
549-1555
•Beg. Ballet (Mon - Wed)
•Intermediate Ballet (Tues - Thurs)
•Martha Graham Modern Technique (Mon)

STAIRMASTER
AEROBICS
Low Impact
Step
Hi/Low
Nautilus
Free Weights
Cybex
Lifecycles
Biocycles
Treadmill
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
256-0080

Multiband POPS
Friday, September 30
8 p.m. at the
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst

TICKETS:
$12 General Public
$ 9 Senior Citizens
Children 16 & Under
& Students
$ 8 Groups of 15 or more
$ 3 UMass Students

20th Annual Spectacular Showcase of 500 Performers

Minuteman Marching Band • Jazz Ensembles
• Wind Ensembles • Dances & More

Co-Sponsored By:
Advocate
CNN WTTT 1420
DAILY HAMPSHIRE GAZETTE
WHCN

Tickets available at the Mullins Center Box Office and, for an additional cost at all Ticketmaster Locations and by the phone. (413) 733-2500

The Queen's Garden blends together cultures of theatre

By Amy Paradysz
Collegian Correspondent

Brenda Wong Aoki will draw you into another world; the "third world of the United States," filled with gypsy cabs, Chinese laudramats and Korean liquor stores. In her intense lyrical solo performance, The Queen's Garden, Aoki blends dance, music and theater from Western and Japanese traditions.

Although technically a love story, Aoki says, "the play is about why all those people went crazy in South Central" during the Rodney King incident. It's also about "institutionalized craziness in urban tribe" and "systematic ignorance."

"There is a racism that is getting stronger, but if you look deeper it is really a class thing," described Aoki.

By systematic ignorance, Aoki was referring to the way we're tracked.

"People with accents are put into 'dumb' classes and are stuck in them," said Aoki. "We are categorized by the color of our skin, the way we relate culturally, very much the like in Brave New World by Aldous Huxley."

Aoki has won several theater awards including a National Endowment of the Arts Solo Theater Fellowship. She studies Japanese classical theater and modern dance. Aoki, who is Japanese, Chinese, Spanish and Scotch, says she drew a lot of her material from her experiences growing up "all mixed up like chopped suey." In fact, the single character in The Queen's Garden shares Aoki's name and ethnic background. The author/actress spent a lot of time in L.A.'s urban tribes and Southern California's Pacific street gangs, and that contributed to the play considerably.

The Queen's Garden is showing at Bowker Auditorium, 8 p.m., $3.50 for students and senior citizens, $6 for the general public.

COURTESY SALLY FETCHAM

Chucklehead

Chucklehead to funkify Pearl Street stage

By Josh Boyd
Collegian Staff

Chucklehead rocks. Okay, not quite. Chucklehead, a Boston funk-hip-hop group, is arriving Friday night at Pearl Street with its raucous show consisting of weird costumes, a four piece horn section, and raps based on old playground chants, among other antics. Most likely many other antics.

Winners of the 1993 Boston Phoenix/WFNX Best Local R&B/Soul band in the hub, the eight-man band definitely has its credentials to provide good music as well as wild fun(k).

Their inspirations for music and their lifestyles would probably be as long as Santa's list when you include all their twisted perceptions of gospel call-and-response singing, the sounds a guitar makes when it is being burnt, porno comic books, and Sesame Street. They also worship that funk deity that brightened up the Fine Arts Center this past spring, George Clinton.

These Beantown Boys, part graduates of Wesleyan College and part smarty-pant graduates of Yale, are no strangers to the Happy Valley. Last semester they played the Van Meter basketball courts, and they have also played Pearl Street about once a semester. Some students talking about Chucklehead will say they probably put on the best funk/rap/soul show that they have seen. Fun is the word most usually used in these descriptions. With names like Eb- Tide (vocalist and guitarist) and Brainy B (keyboardist and vocalist), one probably wouldn't expect dull, unimaginative people.

Wacky local heroes Knuckle Sandwich will open the show.

Chucklehead funkify Pearl Street Nightclub in Northampton this Friday night. The show is 18+. Doors will open at 8:30 P.M.

■ Princess

continued from page 7

any of that "simple radiance" the characters keep emoting about ever leaps off the screen.

Kevin Kline (Cates' husband) seems like he's doing her a favor. Usually quite adept at accents and physical comedy, Kline sleepwalks through a role that any actor could've mined for much-needed laughs.

Eating Disorder Programs • 1994/95
Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Treatment Program
For Individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. Mondays or Wednesdays - Confidentiality Assured. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.

Friends and Family Group
Single session for those concerned about somebody with an eating disorder. Call 549-2671, Clinic 4.

Peer Support Group
For those struggling with anorexia, bulimia, or compulsive overeating. Call for more information 549-2671, Ext. 233.

Peer Health Connections
A confidential phoneline for help around eating disorders - yourself, or someone you know. 549-2671, ext. 168.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC NORTHAMPTON Opera House 584-8435
This Film Must End. Oct. 6th
CURTAIN DAILY AT 7:00 & 9:15
"Has the best porno-culinary sequences since BABETTE'S FEAST!" -David Denby - New York
"The most delectable food-related hit this side of 'LIKE WATER FOR CHOCOLATE!'"
"SUPERB, WONDERFUL AND COMPELLING! Deserving of an Oscar nomination."
THE ACCLAIMED SEQUEL TO THE WEDDING BANQUET
EAT DRINK MAN WOMAN
A comedy to arouse your appetite.
THE LAST WEEKEND TO SEE IT!!
AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE

VALLEY MOTORSPORTS
Rt. 5 Northampton, MA 01060
413/584-7303 • 800/649-9965
HONDA Kawasaki YAMAHA DUCATI
WINTER STORAGE AVAILABLE
Scooters • Generators
Snow Blowers • Jetmate
Motorcycles • ATV's
Lawn Mowers • Jet Skis
Snowmobiles

THE SPOKE
The Spoke Amherst, Mass
A DRINKERY TO MEET, RELAX AND ENJOY
Beer of the Month
16 OZ BUD BOTTLES
$2.00
Drink of the Month
JIM BEAM & COKE
$1.75
35 E. PLEASANT STREET

Hunan Garden Restaurant 家酒園南湖
The Best Chinese Buffet
MANDARIN/SZECHUAN CUISINE
WE DELIVER IN AMHERST 5-9:30 EVERYDAY
Free Delivery for orders $15 and over; $2 charge for orders under $15
NEW BUFFET & SUNDAY BRUNCH
Buffet Every Night 5-8 p.m.
Sunday Brunch 11 a.m.-3 p.m.
ALL YOU CAN EAT $5.99
Children under 10 - $3.50
Luncheon Specials served 11:30-3 p.m. - $3.25
All luncheon specials come with rice & your choice of 2 Chicken Fingers, 2 Chicken Wings, or Hot & Sour Soup
TAKE OUT SERVICE - FULL COCKTAIL MENU
10 Belchertown Rd. at Rt. 9, Amherst 256-0252

GODFLESH
SOCIAL DISTORTION
NOW SERVING:
TOAD THE WET SPROCKET
DULCINEA Sample the unique flavor of "Dulcinea"
SPIN DOCTORS
TURN IT UPSIDE DOWN
G. LOVE AND SPECIAL SAUCE
JEFF BUCKLEY
GRACE
VELVET CRUSH
TEENAGE SYMPHONIES TO GOD
STABBING WESTWARD
UNGOD
MOTHER TONGUE
MOTHER TONGUE
SPONGE
ROTTING PINATA
For The Record • 256-6134
$2 off each title, CD or Cassette through October 1st
Ask for your free cassette sampler while supplies last

Strike!

COURTESY LAURA STAR

Ska maniac's Let's Go Bowling will be skanking away at Pearl Street Nightclub in Northampton tomorrow night. The funky fellows will be opening for The Specials.

■ Eighties

continued from page 5

guy gets super power suit).

The 80s was the decade in which the "building a gizmo from ordinary stuff" motif was honed to perfection. The catalysts of this gem of an idea were "The A-Team," who would turn their van into an armored car with a couple of wrenches, a blowtorch and scrap metal, and "MacGyver," the man who could build a nuclear device using a pen cap, a gum wrapper and a can of Metamucil.

The best thing about TV in the eighties — hands-down — was NBC's Thursday night lineup. "The Cosby Show," "Family Ties," "Cheers," "Night Court" and "L.A. Law" kept many in front of the TV on Thursday nights, and not until recently when "Seinfeld," "Frasier" and "Wings" all landed on the same night (curiously, Thursdays) has any network even come close to capturing its audience for more than an hour at a time.

So in a decade like the 90s, in which we seem to be pushing things to a more stripped-down and basic approach (from clothes to music) why do we keep looking back to other decades? It could be because we don't want to make the same mistakes again (butterfly collars) or it could just be because our attention spans are too short even to pay attention to the decade we're living in.

So what's next? The 80s themselves actually had a retro movement when you take into account the Back to The Future films and the election of Reagan. Now we have six years to go in the 90s and we have already started the 80s movement. The retro movements are moving through the decades faster than we can complete the current one. At this rate, we will be having a "weren't the early 90s keen" movement before the end of 1998.

I'll be sure not to pack away my flannel.

Mike MacLean is a Collegian Arts & Living Associate Editor.

■ television

continued from page 5

he absolute dregs of comedy.

Perhaps a word about "Saturday Night Live," which celebrates its twentieth anniversary this year. I think we all recognize that this show needs a major face-lift, and fast. I have a couple of suggestions for it's producer, Lorne Michaels, should he happen to be reading along.

Lorne, you've got to make changes. You've got to make everybody in the current cast reaudition for their spots, if you haven't already. You've got to hold open auditions so that you can determine what talent is out there that is fresh. You've got to be very critical in your evaluations. No more letting older cast members slack off. These are tough times for the show, and you've got to employ only those actors and writers who can produce some laughs.

There are two directions the program could take. One option would be to make "SNL" into an all male comedy troupe. This way, you could do some transvestite themes and maybe put a subversive, androgynous, "Kids in the Hall"-ish twist to things.

The second option would be to concentrate on getting two or three really strong women performers into he cast. This is vitally important if you want "SNL" to succeed as a co-ed show. You need women who can rival what Gilda Radner and Jane Curtain were in the 70s, and what Victoria Jackson and Jan Hooks were in the 80s.

No more using women for background scenery — everybody's gotta be able to pull their own weight, or else suffer another solemn season like the last.

Now that I've finally gotten that off my chest, maybe I can get through the rest of the new programs that I've seen. Unfortunately, it's a pretty lackluster countdown. There's the new NBC courtroom drama "Sweet Justice" starring Cicily Tyson and the whinning Melissa Gilbert. Gilbert plays a southern belle attorney who giggles openly in court when she wins cases, and seems to run home to lunch with her rich daddy between every cross-examination.

Skip this one and go for NBC's much sharper "Law and Order," where Sam Waterston replaces Michael Mority after the latter voluntarily joined former "NYPD BLUE" star David Caruso, on the actor's unemployment line. Needless to say, I'm not holding my breath for either of their features film debuts.

Elsewhere, NBC's "Friends" is a pale imitation of "Seinfeld" (minus the laughs), but the peacock network's "Madman of the People" looks like it might get along on Dabney coleman's acerbic charms. It's Thursday night time slot after the big "S" shouldn't hurt either.

Fox's "Party of Five" features precocious orphans, and considering that the show has at least three adolescents without a parental figure, I'm surprised that the party is relatively underpopulated.

I couldn't decide which of the two new medical dramas to watch, so I skipped them both. I was just too overwhelmed. And I continued to have high hopes for ABC's relatively new comedy "Ellen," even through I still think that the entire supporting cast could be overhauled. Ellen DeGeneris herself, though, is a funny and strong lead.

So, that's at least part of the fabulous fall lineup, from where I stand. It's somewhat disappointing, as I said, but there's still enough to live on. No season can be a total success, and as long as there remains to be a few diamonds in the rough, television will keep me coming back.

The Collegian
We're here for you!
Send Editorial columns and letters for the Editor to
113 Campus Center
545-3500

My eyes teared as I hacked my desert dry cough at the road dust that swirled up from behind the passing semi. Yes, I was lost... a long way from the rotting New York cul-de-sac I had called my home. Why HAD I eaten that moldy bread. Why DID I let that circus bear break my heart.

Mass. Daily Collegian
Wherever you go, There you are!

T.G.I'ts FRIDAY
Every Friday:
$2.00 per game (or)
$1.75 per game with a ticket stub from a recent sporting event
LIVE D.J.
Mike Perkins
584-4830
Bring this ad and get 75¢ off of a shoe rental
Northampton Bowl
525 Pleasant St. • Northampton

PAWSS
THE FIVE COLLEGE PROGRAM IN PEACE & WORLD SECURITY STUDIES
Presents:
"SEXUAL POLITICS AT THE END OF THE COLD WAR"
A lecture by:
CYNTHIA ENLOE
Clark University
Thursday, September 29th
7:30 PM
Converse Hall
Amherst College
This program is free, open to the public and wheelchair accessible. For more information call PAWSS at 582-5519.

Scott's LIQUORS
FOR SUPER SAVINGS AND FRIENDLY SERVICE, SHOP SCOTTS!!
MILLER GENUINE DRAFT & G.D. LIGHT 24-12 oz. cans $10.99 + dep.
STROHS & STROHS LIGHT $5.99 15 pk. Cans + dep. STROH'S
BUD & BUD LIGHT ½ KEGS $39.99
ZHENKA VODKA 1.75 LTR. SALE PRICE $8.99 MAIL-IN REBATE $2.00 FINAL COST $6.99
LABATTS BLUE, ICE, 50 ALE 12 pk. Bottles $7.99 + dep.
BUD DRY 24-12 oz. Bottles $10.99 + dep.
SOUTHERN COMFORT 750 ML $6.99
GALLO RESERVE WHITE ZINFANDEL 1.5 LTR. $5.99
Tele-check for your personal check
We now have all Mass lottery games!
WE WANT TO BE YOUR FAVORITE LIQUOR STORE!
6 University Drive at Newmarket Center, Amherst • 549-2692
Located Next to Victory Super Market

RUSH
ALPHA CHI OMEGA
Thursday
September 29,1994
6 - 8 p.m.

4 Meal Deals
NO COUPON REQUIRED
1. 12" Long B.M.T./Med Soda/Chips $4.99
2. 6" Subway Club/Med Soda/Chips $3.99
3. 12" Cold Cut Combo Med Soda/Chips $4.39
4. Seafood & Crab Salad Med Soda $3.79
SUBWAY
Subway sandwich shops may be all over the country but we're certainly at home in Amherst. We buy our vegetables locally from Atkins Farms as well as our salami & pepperoni from Carando. And of course our bread is baked fresh daily, in our own ovens.
Sun. - Thurs. 10-12 Fri. & Sat. 10-2
4 MAIN STREET, AMHERST
256-1919

NEW IN AMHERST
CHINA DYNASTY
RESTAURANT AND LOUNGE
Traditional Chinese Cuisine
Relax and enjoy yourself at our beautiful newly remodeled facility including our Sunny Greenhouse.
"Largest Chinese Restaurant in Hampshire County"
PLENTY OF FREE PARKING
OPEN 7 DAYS A WEEK • 11:30 AM - 10 PM
FRIDAYS & SATURDAYS TILL 11 PM
351 Northampton Rd. • Rte. 9 • Amherst
Corner of Rte. 9 & University Drive • 256-8800

Mike's Westview
WELCOME BACK ALUMNI!
Come Join Us for an All You Can Eat Buffet.
Menu includes:
Eggs, Bacon, Sausage, Muffins, Pancakes, French Toast, Home Fries and 2 Hot Entrees.
Starts at 10:00 for $5.95

Getting by with a little help from a friend

Blind student urges others to allow guide dog to stick to his work

By Heather Redfern
Collegian Staff

The reaction is almost immediate when seeing a friendly dog - give the pooch a pat.

For University of Massachusetts student, Ellis Clough, and his guide dog, Quali, even the slightest pat received by the seven-year-old German Shepherd is a distraction to the bond the two share.

A junior at the University majoring in Wildlife/History biology, Clough, who is legally blind, depends on his dog to lead him each day, on and off campus.

"People have to understand what a guide dog is," said Clough. "She is not suppose to be patted." Clough said that any animal with a harness on is a working animal and the attention of the animal must be given only to its master.

"As appealing as she is, she is not to have people petting her," said Clough. He also said he spends most of his days asking people not to pet Quali.

Clough said Quali is an extremely affectionate animal who responds easily to direct attention given to her by passerbys. A passerby should not be offended when asked not to give Quali attention, according to Clough.

"She is working for me, it's not that I'm being mean," said Clough. According to Clough, using a dog helps to fine tune his mobility, instead of using a cane which he considers a cumbersome aid.

"I tell Quali to find the inside of a building and she will find it for me," said Clough.

In addition to personal attention, unleashed dogs on campus present a problem to Clough and Quali's bond. He said several students are not abiding to the Massachusetts leash law. According to Clough, he must repeatedly struggle with students' dogs who distract Quali.

Recently, while walking down a set of stairs on campus, Quali was attacked by an unleashed dog, leaving for his master the difficult task of separating the two dogs while unable to see.

As a transfer student from Greenfield Community College, Clough said he is still absorbing the campus. Permanent additions such as braille on the vending machines and elevators would help to make areas of the campus more accessible to those with disabilities, according to Clough.

Having brailled the elevators himself in the Campus Center, Clough said he thinks the fixtures were intentially pulled off by students, possibly unaware of their purpose.

Clough said he would also like to encourage the enlargement of printed informational articles concerning campus activities.

GEO to vote on amendment to save jobs

By Justin Doyle
Collegian Staff

The Graduate Employees Organization (GEO) held its first general meeting last night and began voting to amend its contract with the University of Massachusetts.

GEO is attempting to amend its second contract in order to save graduate student jobs from being cut by the University, even though the University received an increase in state funding for this year.

GEO has received information from the University that there will be at least 55 jobs cut this year, according to a press release. Last night's GEO meeting began with voting that will attempt to save almost half of these jobs.

The GEO contract will give state-funded graduate employees an increase of $660 in their stipends, according to Janine Yodanis, co-speaker of GEO.

The amendment GEO is trying to pass would initiate a tentative agreement reached with the UMass administration late in the summer to provide only a $500 raise, a pay cut of $160, in order to save 20 full-time graduate employee jobs.

The cut in the stipend raises will reinstate 27.5 percent of the jobs cut this year, according to the press release

The reason UMass is cutting jobs is due to the University being in deficit, according to GEO co-speaker Karen Adkins.

Last year, the state budget did not come out until October and the UMass had already started spending assuming that they would receive a certain amount of funding, said Adkins.

When the budget came out, UMass received less funding than what was expected, according to Adkins.

"The University was deficit funded, so any increase UMass would receive would only bring them back to being level funded," Adkins said.

The UMass system received a $15 million increase in state funding in the budget. According to Adkins, it was still not enough.

GEO's contract states that 10 percent of the increase in state appropriations for this year will go for raises for state funded graduate employees, according to Adkins.

"Because the UMass has to give the graduate students a portion of the funding received, the University will still be deficit funded and be forced to cut jobs," Adkins said.

Adkins says that most of the jobs UMass will cut will be graduate students.

"The administration has an easier time cutting teaching assistants because graduate students have only a one year teaching job," Adkins said.

Because the UMass campuses did get $15 million in state funding, there will not be as many cuts as at first expected, said Adkins.

The voting for the GEO amendment is being held over until next Wednesday, October 5. Graduate students can vote by secret ballot in the GEO office.

Attention all Collegian Op/Ed Columnists

Columnist photos will be taken today at 5:30 p.m. If you have any questions, please call 545–1491.

A Tree With a View

REBECCA PETERSON / COLLEGIAN

Despite this week's sometimes dreary, rainy conditions, this student found a sunny moment to spend studying by the campus pond.

■ Bluewall

continued from page 3

dwindling of the "Bluewall culture" he witnesses firsthand at work, but thought his words would mean more if they were backed up by a petition. So before speaking to her about the problem, he sought the signatures.

"I thought they would have approached us first before feeling the need for a petition," Potter said when asked about the petition, "but we weren't approached. The first thing we know, a petition was on the bar."

Potter is attempting to shift the focus from the Bluewall and the Hatch, which both traditionally close at 11 p.m. every night, to the Coffee Shop. Potter cites the shift to be a necessary experiment in cutting costs.

It takes only two employees to run the Coffee Shop, Potter said, while it takes a minimum of seven to run the Hatch. As for the late-night Bluewall studiers, Potter said that sales records show that they don't buy enough after 9 p.m. to justify keeping it open later.

Potter said she strives to find a solution that everyone would be happy with. She said if she had the means, she would look into installing a lowering gate that secures the counter and equipment so that the room could remain open for students to study late.

Potter recently told Cooperman to keep his petition going as long as possible. When the number of signatures collected daily tapers off, she told him to bring her the petition and she will attempt to keep the Bluewall open later on a trial basis, as soon as she can hire the proper staff, according to Cooperman.

Potter also plans to put together a survey group which will research the customers' expectations of Campus Center Food Services. The group would consist of representatives from all over campus.

Anthony's

AMBER LYNN
Sept. 26 - Oct. 1

Don't miss the 2 most requested STARS !!

TORI WELLS
Oct. 3 - 8

Special Seating for 18+ Over ! Positive ID Required

Now Hiring New Entertainers "Join the best team around for BIG $$$"

MON - WED: 4pm-2am
THURS - SAT: 12pm-2am
CLOSED SUNDAYS

500 New Ludlow Rd., South Hadley
Exit 5 MA Pike to 33 North. Take right at Jiffy Lube, 1/2 mile on left.
413 536-0502

Why spend your life looking forward to living abroad when you can be looking back on it?

Why sit in a stateside classroom dreaming about Stonehenge or the Parthenon when you could see them for yourself? Don't wait until after you graduate to catch the travel bug. Instead, why not spend a semester or a year making memories that will last a lifetime? And, of course, you'll learn a thing or two as well. Ask your study abroad advisor about Beaver College programs. Call for a free catalog today.

Study Abroad with Beaver College.
1.800.755.5607

■ Students

continued from page 1

didn't support the students."

Robinson reflected on a similar incident that took place while she was in the seventh grade at the junior high. Towards the end of the school year, a friend of hers who has already graduated from Amherst High, Hanif Abdul Akim, was called names and attacked by a "couple of hicks" from the high school, she said.

"They told him all he was good for was shining shoes and called him a nigger. They beat him up and told him to go back to Africa or New York, or wherever he came from," Robinson said.

This is just the most drastic thing that's been exposed to the public eye recently, but it's always been a problem, according to Robinson. It has gotten worse over the years. There is overcrowding in both buildings, and that may add to it, she said.

"The thing that pissed me off the most was that nothing was brought to the news until later. Once the allegations on the girl were made, they got all this coverage," Robinson said. "Amherst publicized it more after the tables turned on them, and it became the student's fault, not theirs."

■ women

continued from page 1

Auditorium.

A documentary film on her life titled, "Yuri Kochiyama: A Passion for Justice," will be shown at 4 p.m. in room 163 in the Campus Center.

The 57–minute documentary chronicles the unrecorded history of Kochiyama's contributions for social change. Interviews with Kochiyama's friends and fellow activists as well as film footage of marches and demonstrations in which the female activist took part in are presented.

A reception for students and panel speakers will be held from 5 p.m.-7 p.m. at the Campus Center Auditorium.

The New World Theater will perform The Queen's Garden in Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m.

The play follows the urban lives of two young lovers whose paths diverge. One youth turns to the life of a drug dealer while the other individual leads a career as a teacher and community organizer.

